When the elders of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin were together, at the late District Meeting, held at Mount Morris, it was decided that, by the consent of the Chicago church, Brethren Paul Mohler, B. F. Heckman and J. Homer Bright should be ordained to the eldership, and Bro. I. B. Trout and your Office Editor were appointed the committee on ordination. We met with the church last Sunday afternoon, the meeting being held in the Bethany Bible school building, 3435 West Van Buren Street. With one hundred members voting, the decision was unanimous in favor of setting the brethren named apart to the eldership. This was done by fasting, prayer and the laying on of hands. They, with their wives, were then received by the entire membership in attendance, there being considerably more than two hundred brethren and sisters present. This service had been preceded by a special missionary address on Saturday evening by Bro. Galen B. Royer, and a very spiritual sermon on Sunday morning by Bro. E. B. Hoff. This was an important day with the people of Bethany Bible School. The fall session had just opened with an enrollment of 170 students; nearly a dozen missionaries occupied front seats, and the entire assembly was stirred by the uplifting addresses, earnest prayers and inspiring songs, and scores went from the meeting impressed with the thought of doing more for Christ and his cause. Brethren Heckman and Bright, accompanied by their wives and three children, are now on their way to China, and will sail from Seattle, Wash., the coming Monday. They will be accompanied by Sisters Anna Hutchison and Winnie Cripe, who were also present at the services. Bro. Mohler and his wife are to enter upon their work in France later.

Unkind Treatment.

A correspondent whose husband is probably not as thoughtful as he should be, is wondering why husbands can not be as pleasant to their wives in the absence of company as they usually are in the presence of visitors. But this is not a one-sided question. There are husbands who wonder how their wives can manage to be so agreeable when company is around, and then be just the reverse when alone with the family. Of course, everybody who reads the Messenger knows that these conditions actually do exist in more families than is suspected by the general public. But why should the husband and the wife make a greater effort to appear agreeable in the presence of company than when left alone? Why should they indulge in unkind words when no one is present to hear what is said, and then seem so very kind to each other when some one happens to drop in?

Has it ever occurred to them that Jesus is a silent listener to all that passes between the husband and the wife? He hears all the harsh words and sees every scornful look. Do his people have any regard for his presence in their midst? If they do, we can not account for the letters we sometimes receive on this subject. Possibly both sides are to blame. The husband can make himself more agreeable than he does, and so can the wife, and if they do not return to their first love, and treat each other kindly in the presence of the invisible Jesus, they have no one but themselves to blame, should the Master decline to continue longer as a silent guest in their home. It is more than likely that the unkind conduct of husband and wife towards each other has driven Jesus from the homes of some members whose names are retained on the church roll.

Immodest Apparel.

The soundness of the apostolic teaching, as to how women professing godliness should dress and adorn themselves (1 Tim. 2: 9-10; 1 Peter 3: 3-5), is recognized by right-thinking people everywhere. Even those who do not follow the scriptural teaching, as to dress, recognize the beauty and the compelling respect of simple attire. In these days, when fashion's follies are being carried to the extremes of silliness, not to say immodesty, men and women of good judgment and common sense are raising their voices against the evil. An editorial, in a recent issue of the Ladies' Home Journal, ably treats the question from its social side in a way that must appeal, very strongly, to every sensible woman who reads it. It is given to our readers, for there may be some among us who need medicine of this kind:

"Take the prevailing fashions in women's clothes, say, for the last two years, and I ask any woman frankly: Have they been such as to inspire men's respect for women? The jocularity with which the 'hobble skirt' and the 'harem skirt' have been met, may seem to be harmless, but has it ever occurred to women that this very jocularity, oft repeated, has an insidious effect that in time results in anything but a favorable outlook upon womanhood in general? A woman with one of the modern, silly, huge hats, comes into a crowded car, and the men squeeze together uncomfortably. They say nothing. But does that add to their respect for women? Recently a hatpin was jabbed into a man's eye, and it cost him his life from blood-poisoning. Do you imagine, for one moment that the three grown sons of that man have a higher respect for women? You would not if you could hear them talk. Do you think that when that incident was read of by men in their newspapers, it increased their respect for women? Does any sane woman believe that the recent, senseless craze for 'rats' and puffs of false hair has heightened men's respect for women? Is the present revival of the fashion for women to powder, rouge and paint their faces, calculated to increase men's deference toward women? A good many women will answer to this: 'Oh but you are judging us by a few silly women!' Come now, ladies, be honest. Have the inordinate use of the hatpin, the vulgarity of powder, rouge and paint and the wearing of false hair been confined to a 'few silly women'? If so, then the observations in this office, from a more advantageous view point than is to be found, perhaps, in any other editorial office, are grievously in error.

"That men's position of deference toward women is changing, admits of no question. It is noticeable on every hand. But let women quietly ponder and ask, 'Why is it?' And they will find that the insidious loss of respect is based on the little things that men have always associated with them, and that women are losing sight of,—the feminine foolishnesses that are sadly growing on modern girls and women. Small in themselves, yes, but now it is one small thing and then it is another, and after awhile the whole mess of small things becomes a formidable mass, and gradually the estimation that has received a succession of constant little jars is found to have become weakened. Believe it or not, as women may, that is where the two sexes stand today in America, and it is a position neither pleasant nor desirable. Women are pulling themselves down slowly, but none the less surely, in the eyes of men by their growing tendency to place the emphasis on the things that are not worth while. The women who represent the best of American womanhood recognize this condition, and deplore it just as much as do the men, and it is a grievous pity that the sensible portion of American women have not more influence on that larger majority of the sex who are today playing with their greatest source of protection,—the respect of men."

The editor might have gone much farther and called attention to the immodesty of the latest fashions in half revealing, half disclosing woman's form. The conventional, low cut evening dress, in a modified form, is now worn on the streets of our towns and cities. It would seem that Madame Fashion has cast all shame to the winds and is trying to ascertain how far women will go in shameless and immodest dressing. There can be but one result of this immodesty,—the raising of lustful desire in the hearts of impure men, and the loss of respect for women who allow themselves to be led by the goddess of fashion. And then the sin of it all! It is a direct violation of the Holy Scriptures, the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ, who died to save us from all sin. D. L. M.

The Rebaptism Question.

The only case of baptizing persons the second time, recorded in the New Testament, is the baptism of the twelve by Paul (Acts 19: 1-7). Does this case throw light on the question of rebaptism, as it stands before the Conference at present? Let us see.

Let us study the subject from the standpoint of these four questions: (1) Who first baptized the twelve? (2) How were they baptized? (3) For what were they baptized? (4) Why were they baptized again?

1. It is not positively known who first baptized the twelve, but it is almost certain that it was Apollos. This is the united opinion of nearly all scholars and critics. The evidence is circumstantial. It is this: Between Paul's two visits to Ephesus, recorded in the eighteenth and the nineteenth chapters of Acts, Apollos visited Ephesus and preached and labored there. He knew only the baptism of John; and the twelve were baptized unto John's baptism. He had not been thoroughly instructed in the ways of the Lord. His need in this respect was so great that when Aquila and Priscilla heard him speak freely in the synagogues, they took him unto themselves, and expounded unto him the way of the Lord more perfectly. The twelve had not been properly instructed in the ways of the Lord; for they, like their teacher, knew only the baptism of John. Their need in this respect was so great that Paul, on seeing it, gave them the necessary instruction, and then baptized them. So it may be regarded as morally certain that Apollos first baptized the twelve.

2. How were they baptized? By trine immersion. They were baptized into John's baptism, and that was trine immersion. John was the beginning of the Gospel of Christ. See Mark 1: 14. His preaching and baptism belong to the Gospel age; the beginning of it. His baptism was Christian baptism; it was so accepted. Those whom he baptized were received by Jesus without rebaptism. As John's baptism with its doctrines, was the foundation, or the beginning, of the baptism that Jesus taught, with its doctrines, it was the same baptism that Jesus taught. How could it be the beginning, if it were not the same? Or, in other words, how could John's baptism be the beginning of trine immersion, if it were not trine immersion? How can you begin trine immersion with single immersion? The beginning of a thing is the same as the thing itself. Do you see? Don't overlook the fact that John's baptism was the beginning of Jesus' baptism. Now, since we know that Jesus taught trine immersion, we know that John's baptism was trine immersion. And since the twelve were baptized according to John's baptism, they were baptized by trine immersion.

3. For what were they baptized? For the remission of sins. This was the great doctrine of baptism. "John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins." This passage states clearly the design of John's baptism. It was the baptism of repentance, that is, it belonged to repentance, and followed after it; and it was for, or in order to, the remission of sins. Again, it is to be observed that this is the beginning of the teaching of Jesus on the design of baptism. See the Commission by Matthew, Mark and Luke. As the twelve were baptized unto John's baptism, and as his baptism was for the remission of sins, they were baptized for the remission of sins.

4. Why were they baptized again? Because they had not been properly taught. Apollos was not a sufficient teacher. Since they were without the right teaching and understanding, they could not have the necessary faith in order to baptism. It is clearly a case in which right teaching and faith are wanting. There is no fault in the baptism, in mode or design.

When Paul asked the twelve whether they had received the Holy Ghost since they believed, they said, "Nay, we did not so much as hear whether the Holy Ghost was given" (R. V.). For want of right teaching they did not know that the Holy Ghost was given already; nor had they been taught to look beyond John and his baptism, and believe on Jesus. They were confined to John and his baptism. This was their situation. And when Paul said unto them, "John baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people, that they should believe on him which should come after him, that is, on Jesus," they believed at once. "And when they heard this, they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." It is to be observed that baptism requires right previous teaching and faith. The absence of these invalidates the baptism, as this case shows.

The case summed up, shows the following facts: These twelve men were baptized, supposedly, by Apollos; they were baptized by trine immersion; they were baptized for the remission of sins; they were rebaptized by Paul because they lacked the proper previous teaching and faith; they were not rebaptized for the purpose of changing church relation.

Now then, if the church in the days of the apostles rebaptized those who had been baptized without the proper previous teaching and faith, though the form and design of the baptism was scriptural, as the case before us shows, will not the Church of the Brethren hold the same practice? And the twelve were rebaptized, not to change church relation,—no such thought in mind,—it was to get right with Gospel requirements. Observe, too, that the first baptism was not by an alien administrator. He, and the twelve and Paul all belonged to the same body. To receive those from other churches into the fellowship of the Church of the Brethren without rebaptism, is squarely against the teaching of the rebaptism of the twelve.

As We Change With Time.

It was Paul who said that what he once hated he learned to love, and what he loved he learned to hate. Such a change comes to all of us; for our opinions change with time and circumstances. As we grow older we see things with different eyes. What at one time seemed absolutely necessary if failure was to be avoided, now seems to be of little consequence: it is not a vital matter at all. It was only our ignorance, our narrow outlook, that made us believe as we did.

And yet we can not say that all our changes are for the better. True wisdom does not always go with years, and the changes made by the mature man are not infrequently for the worse. But that is because men do not seek the truth with their whole heart. The earnest seeker after right things is sure to find. We have the Master's word for that. When, however, a man grows wise in his own conceits he is ready to take the step which starts him away from the right, if he has not already taken it.

Take men individually or collectively, and it is not difficult to see changes in them. We are no exception to this rule. Read some of the decisions of our fathers in the years long gone. In some important respects we do not see as they did; and we are confident that we are nearer the truth than they were. If they could have lived to-day, at present time they might believe as we do. And there are more changes to come. Our children, no matter how carefully we teach them, are sure to have ideas different from ours. We could not have it otherwise if we would, and we would not if we could. God has given them active minds, and they must use them and give account to him. Our part is to teach to the best of our ability as God gives us light; and our living is the most important part of our teaching. Our responsibility ends when we have done this.

But we do not all change alike; if we did, there would be no differences of opinion; there would not now be such an endless number of sects. These differences began almost at the very beginning, and they will doubtless continue until the end. Just why this is so we do not know; we are not likely to know while we are in life. It does not matter that we do not. We are only to a certain extent responsible for the changes that others make in their lives and opinions; and to the same extent they are responsible for us.

Because we do not change in the same manner or to the same extent, some of us think the body is going wrong, while others of us think we are all right. And this difference, too, will be always with us. What we need is to look more carefully after ourselves, so as to be sure that our changes are for the better and not for the worse. And as we grow older we ought to grow wiser, ought to see more clearly where the path of duty lies, and ought to be more willing to walk therein. That will be the case if we surrender ourselves entirely to God.

We need not worry so much about our brother, so long as he is not, in letter or spirit, breaking any of the Lord's commandments. We are not to be indifferent to his welfare or to the general good, not by any means; and we are not to cease to strive for what we believe to be for the best. But when we have done and lived our best, we are innocent from the blood of all men. We must let the matter rest there, remembering that we are not infallible and that to others it may seem that we are the ones who are departing from the truth. In order to be sure that we are changing in the right direction we must increase in love one for another, we must be willing to be taught as well as to teach; and we must have confidence enough in God to believe that in the end his purpose will be accomplished in the world.

That Bitter Feeling.

We hear of an elder who has a very bitter feeling toward some elders in his State District. He not only says unkind things about them, but he writes some unbrotherly letters about them. Now, this elder may be very zealous in the Lord's work; he may be well informed and sound in the faith, but he is not treating his colaborers right. He may even think he is better than they are, but he is not conducting himself toward them as the Lord intended an elder should. For an elder to tolerate a bitter feeling toward another comes amazingly near placing him with the class mentioned in Matthew 5: 22. He is certainly in danger of the judgment. If his colaborers in the eldership are not doing as they should, let him proceed properly in having them called to account. If he sees no way of doing this, let him at least quit talking and writing about them. Let him be sure that he sets for them a good example, and in this way he may succeed in improving the eldership in his District. But if they do not live up to their high privilege, and he continues to lower his own standard by persisting in thinking and talking the way he does, he has no one but himself to blame for his loss of influence among the more devout members. What we are here saying may apply to other Districts besides the one we have in mind.

Prying into the Lord's Private Affairs.

It is reported that the followers of the late Dr. Alexander Dowie are predicting the coming of Christ in 1912, saying that he is to make his first appearance at Zion City. These are not the first people to have set the time for the second coming of Christ, only to learn later that of the day and hour, for the coming of the Lord, knoweth no man. While we might concede the possibility of guessing the year or the century, still all such guesses have so far failed. The Master, who purposely left his disciples under the impression that he would sometime return to the earth, gave them distinctly to understand that the time of his reappearance is carefully concealed even from the angels of heaven. Men who undertake to pry into the private affairs of God himself, are just a bit too presumptuous to be trusted with the more important secrets of the kingdom. The Lord certainly would not trust man with a secret that must, for good reasons, be withheld from the angels.

Ezekiel on Sprinkling.

We are asked to say whether Ezekiel has reference to baptism, where he represents the Lord as saying: "Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean" (Ezek. 36: 25). By "clean water," in this instance, is meant water taken from a running stream, mixed with the ashes of a heifer, and sprinkled with hyssop on the unclean (Num. 19: 9-18). So far as it relates to the New Testament, it represents the sprinkled blood of Christ, shed for the sins of many, and has no reference whatever to the rite of baptism. The whole thing is summed up in Heb. 10: 22, after this manner: "Having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water." Washing with pure water refers to baptism, while sprinkling relates to the applied blood that cleanseth from all sins. When Jesus commanded his disciples to baptize those accepting him as the Christ, he employed a Greek word, baptizo, which means to dip or immerse. He did not employ the words used by Ezekiel. In fact, he never commanded his disciples to sprinkle anything. The application of the cleansing blood, sometimes designated as the "sprinkling of the blood of Jesus Christ" (1 Peter 1: 2), is the Lord's part, while washing with pure water is man's part. Our attention is also called to Isa. 52: 15, where mention is made of "sprinkling many nations." The word "sprinkle," in this instance, should be rendered "startle," and it is so given in the margin of the American Revised Version. The passage does not, in the least, figure in the baptismal controversy.

Disposing of Jewelry.

The Gospel Trumpet says that a number of its readers are sending their jewelry to be sold, that the money may be used to advance the cause of Christ. "Since the New Testament plainly teaches against the wearing of gold," says the Gospel Trumpet, "to dispose of it is much better than to have it lying around." This might serve as a hint to some of our people, for in some localities a few of them do wear at least a little jewelry. Gold breastpins, gold rings and gold watches, worn for mere display, should be classed with the gold clearly forbidden in 1 Tim. 2:9. Christians who wish to obey this Scripture will not refuse to give up their jewelry, and they can do no better thing, in this particular, than to sell it and turn the money received over to some good cause. Or, if they feel so disposed, they can drop it into the collection basket. When one is thoroughly convinced that a thing is wrong, he is not going to have much trouble about getting rid of it.

His Work at Long Beach.

Bro. A. L. B. Martin, formerly of Harrisburg, Pa., but now of Long Beach, Cal., writes us a long letter about his sojourn and work in Southern California, saying that he is delighted with the climate, scenery and general outlook. Even the summer weather is all that could be desired. Not only so, but he finds his part of the Pacific Slope much more than a land advertisement. It is a land of marvelous possibilities and should be fully won for the Lord. But while all this is true, he is most concerned about the saving of souls, and the building up of churches. The Brethren have a fine start in Southern California, but there is much still to be done. He finds his work at Long Beach congenial, the congregations good, the Sunday-school work encouraging, and yet the transient conditions on account of the place being a noted summer resort, to which vast multitudes come for mere pleasure, even on the Lord's Day, makes his task as pastor a difficult one.

A Fine Example.

We are told of an earnest and intelligent young woman of another persuasion, who decided to unite with the Church of the Brethren, and set the day when she would quietly sever her connection with her former people. This she did with becoming courtesy, and then received trine immersion at the hands of one of our ministers. Her employer, for whom she had been working for quite a while, on learning of her purpose to unite with the Brethren, purchased some good material for a dress and bonnet and told her to have the same made up at his expense. One who does this much in the interest of Christian simplicity is certainly to be commended. His course should put to shame the conduct of not a few, even in the church, who are throwing their influence wholly on the side of doing away with our method of maintaining New Testament plainness.

MISSIONARY DEPARTMENT

GENERAL MISSION BOARD OF THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN.

D. L. Miller, Chairman, ... Mt. Morris, Ill.
H. G. Early, Vice-Chairman, ... Penn Dairel, Va.
Galen B. Royer, Sec. and Treas. ..... Elgin, Ill.
L. W. Teeter, ... Hagerstown, Ind.
Chas. D. Bonsack, ... Union Bridge, Md.
J. J. Yoder, ... McPherson, Kansas.
Address,
General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

LAWRENCE, KANSAS.

We met in quarterly council Aug. 26. Our elder, H. L. Brammell, was with us, and gave us helpful advice. All business was transacted in the Spirit of Christ. Three letters of membership were read. The day following two were baptized, so the good work is going on and we feel encouraged as to the outlook at this place. The work on the new church had to be discontinued on account of a lack of funds, but the General Mission Board has given us the liberty to go outside of our own Church to solicit for funds. They have also asked us to canvass our own District again, giving us the hint to do more "Home Mission work."

We pray that all who are asked to give will feel the importance and possibilities of the work at this place. Young brethren and sisters come here to the State University, and we want to give them a church home,—something we have been unable to do heretofore. We hope to be able to purchase the work on the neighbor-house soon, and to push it to completion. We expect a worthy brother to take up the work here this fall, and are anxious to have the house ready by the time he begins his labors among us. The Home Mission Board has promised us substantial aid in the work. Should any one feel like giving us financial help to complete the house, it will be thankfully received. May the Lord teach us how to give!

1333 Conn Street, Aug. 31. J. C. Eberhart.

TREVILIANS CHURCH, VIRGINIA.

Our church met in council Aug. 21, with Bro. I. A. Miller, our elder, presiding. Much business came before the meeting. We expect to hold a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 16. Our love feast will be held at the close of these meetings. Bro. B. F. Glick was chosen delegate to District Meeting, to be held at Nokesville, Va. Sept. 7 Bro. B. F. Glick was elected to the ministry; Bro. A. A. Garber, to the office of deacon. They, with their wives, were duly installed. The little band of members here feel much encouraged by the recent ingathering at this place. Since our last report seven have been received by letter and nine by baptism. One has been removed by death. Last Sunday seven were baptized, and the scene was witnessed by a large number of interested people. Many of these were present at our ordinance performed before. In one family three generations were baptized. While we rejoiced at the awakening at this place, we are made sad to know that our pastor, Bro. W. A. Myers, with his family, will leave us shortly to accept the presidency of Hebron Seminary, Nokesville, Va. It is with regret that not only the members give him up, but many outside of the church, with whom he has had pleasant associations, are loath to see him go. We pray that some one may come shortly and take up the work here, for surely the field is large, and the harvest has, seemingly, already begun.

Trevilians, Va., Aug. 26. Emma Whisler Glick.

A VISIT TO NEVADA, MISSOURI.

It was recently my good fortune to spend a Sabbath in worship with Eld. Smith, and with the congregation in Nevada, Mo. They have a good church building on the corner of Central and Lynn Streets, and seemingly a devoted band of members are occupying it.

I was impressed with the interest manifested, and the excellent management of the Sunday-school. Sister Wine is the superintendent, and she certainly has the tact to holding the interest, and concentrating the attention of the scholars upon the subject in hand. She also presided at the song and reverence meeting held in the room before the regular services began. It was a meeting of interest much to be enjoyed. Eld. Smith is evidently the man for the place. Under his management the church at Nevada is growing in numbers and interest.

It is indeed a satisfaction to note the beauty and order of the church. His discourses, both morning and evening, were interesting and meaty,—full of good, sound and wholesome doctrine. In my judgment no more could gainsay; such as every lover of Gospel truth must approve.

A night and day enjoyably spent with him and his kind family shall ever be remembered as one of the most pleasant visits of my life-time.

Their love feast is announced for Sept. 23. A feast of fellowship, and earnest, spiritual devotion will no doubt be enjoyed by all those who can be so fortunate as to accept the cordial invitation to partake with them. It will do you good to worship with the Nevada Brethren.

Carterville, Mo., Aug. 30. J. L. Switzer.

LONG LAKE, MICHIGAN.

Our church met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. J. E. Ulery, presided. Only a small amount of business came before the meeting. Our dear brother and pastor, D. E. Sower, was advanced to the eldership. We trust that the support and the prayers of the entire congregation will go with him and Sister Sower in the work and responsibility they have taken upon themselves. While some of the members were absent, the spirit was present throughout the meeting, and inspired us in the work we have to do. Some visiting brethren were present, and their prayers and inspiring words helped us very much.

A party of our brethren and sisters drove to the District Meeting at Harlan, and enjoyed a long visit with the Brethren at that place. They returned the last of the week, and reported a very pleasant sojourn,—well worth the time spent there. We decided to have our love feast Sept. 16, at 2 P. M. Our Sunday-school is doing quite well. The attendance is about forty-five or fifty. No one can tell what a blessing it is to work for the Lord until he goes into it with all his heart.

Fresno, Mich., Aug. 28. William Bittel.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

The Following Notes, Crowded Out of Last Issue, Are Given Space on This Page.

CALIFORNIA.

Lindsay.—Eld. J. J. Brower, of Reedley, Cal., came to this place on the 27th, and gave us one of his helpful sermons. We are always glad to hear the Word spoken. He left an appointment to be filled next month. Bro. Brower is a welcome visitor in the Christian church. Our Sunday-school is on the increase. The brethren are trying to push things in this country and are very favorably impressed. May the way be opened for the Brethren to establish a strong church here. Pray for the work and the workers at this place.—Sadie Pinch, Lindsay, Cal., Aug. 29.

INDIANA.

Camden.—We held our council Aug. 19, which was well attended. Our elder, Bro. D. M. Byerly, presided. One letter of membership was received. We have a total membership sixty-six at present. We elected two delegates for District Meeting,—Sister Iris Arnold for Sunday-school Meeting, and Bro. John Taylor for District Meeting. We expect Bro. Grover Miller, of North Manchester, Ind., to assist us in a Missionary and Sunday-school Meeting, to be held Sept. 24. Our love feast will be held Sept. 23. We have had a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. H. L. Padley, of Middletown, Ind. He has arranged for Bro. D. L. Mohler, of Leeton, Mo., to hold a series of meetings, which will commence Oct. 21. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. We are using the new song book, "Kingdom Songs No. 2." Address, R. D. 1, Portland, Ind., Aug. 22.

Goshen.—Bro. D. M. Miller was with us from Aug. 6 to 15, inclusive. His lectures were much appreciated. He spoke to a crowded house every night, and sometimes many could not enter. Our Sunday-school Meeting was held at this place Aug. 22. We had a fine day, well attended and, seemingly, was the best we ever held. Much enthusiasm was manifested. The Sunday-schools of Northern Indiana will support two missionaries in the field. Sister Iris Arnold will be one therefore. The Bible Institute, of three days, followed this meeting, with Bro. C. F. Sawyer, of Hartford City, Ind., and Bro. S. S. Blough, of North Manchester, and Sister Ella Miller Brubaker in charge. Sister Brubaker lectured at 10 A. M. each forenoon

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA

Butte Valley church met in council today. Our elder, Bro. H. F. Masat, had charge of the meeting. Brethren H. F. Masat and S. G. Hollinger were elected delegates to District Meeting. They will also represent our Sunday-school at the Sunday-school Meeting. Bro. H. H. Shaw was elected secretary-treasurer, to fill a vacancy for the remainder of this year. We decided to have Bro. J. Harman Stover, one of our home ministers, to conduct our series of meetings this fall. The writer was appointed agent for the Brethren Publishing House; also Messenger correspondent.—S. G. Hollinger, Macdoel, Cal., Sept. 2.

Notice.—The District Meeting of the Northern District of California will be held at the Empire church. Meeting will begin Oct. 6, with a Ministerial Meeting. It will be held the day previous, and the Sunday-school Meeting, the day following the District Meeting. The Eldership will preside.—Committee on Ar., at 10 A. M.—J. W. Deardorff, Modesto, Cal., Sept. 6.

Notice to the Churches of the Southern District of California.—All parties who wish to attend the Ministerial and District Meetings, held at Empire, Oct. 6 and 7, 1911, will please note the following: Coming from the north, over the Southern Pacific, change cars at Stockton and take Santa Fe R. R. to Empire. Those from the South, over Southern Pacific, change cars at Fresno or Merced, and take Santa Fe to Empire. Application has been made for rates, and all churches will be notified as soon as we get a definite reply from railroad company. Meet at Santa Fe depot.—Committee: M. Bechtel, Empire, Cal., Sept. 5.

Fairview church met in council Aug. 29. Our elder, Bro. J. E. Deardorff, presided. Bro. W. P. Haynes was chosen as delegate to District Meeting, and Bro. J. E. Deardorff elected to the Sunday-school Meeting. The annual church visit found all in love and willing to work for the Master. We ask the aid of all to be ready and willing to come to the help of the Master when he is engaged. Bro. Jesse Overholtzer to be with us in a series of meetings, beginning after our Love Feast, Aug. 29 or 30.—Ella A. Temperance, reporting, assisted by the Temperance Committee of Northern California. Many good lessons were given. A collection was taken this winter.—Nellie Staubaugh, Arriba, Colo., Sept. 3.

IDAHO.

Boise Valley church met in council Sept. 2. Four letters of membership were granted. Our deacons made their annual report of the year's visit. Bro. H. E. Crosswhite was elected president of our Christian Workers' Meeting for the next six months. Steps were taken to organize the Sunday-school congregations to secure the services of an evangelist. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 2 P. M. We expect to organize a teaching class at our mid-week prayer meeting this week. Our Home Mission Board is supplying a minister at a mission point twenty miles from here. A letter of love was received by letter and one by baptism, since our last report. A pleasant place of prayer-meeting was given us from the church. A Sunday-school was organized at this place Sept. 3.—Francis S. Brower, Boise, Idaho, Sept. 6.

Lost River Valley.—Today we were favored with a sermon by our brother Thomas, of the Boise Valley. We recently came among us, to stay for a few weeks. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, with good interest and attendance.—Ora Young, Leslie, Idaho, Sept. 4.

Payette Valley church met in council Aug. 31, with our elder, Bro. Jesse Calvert, in charge. Two letters of membership were granted. We raised $47.37 for District missionary purposes. Which cancels our indebtedness. Our Christian Fruitland Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. J. C. Hinder as superintendent, and Bro. Ira Hoover as secretary-treasurer. Sister Edna Schubert was chosen president of the Christian Workers' Meeting, and Sister Ida Hoover, secretary-treasurer. Aug. 27 Bro. Jacob Betts was with us, and preached two good sermons.—S. J. Kenepp, Payette, Idaho, Sept. 4.

ILLINOIS.

Astoria church met in council at the South Fulton house, Sept. 5. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, of Liberty, Ill., presided. Three letters were received, and one granted. Brethren C. Hummert, Henry Gehrett and Jos. Etter are our delegates to District Meeting. The president of the prayer meeting was appointed. Bro. Chas. Oberlin to be our minister. After closing the business of the day, we had the happy privilege of going to the waterside, where four dear young souls were received by baptism. They came forward during the revival meeting now being held by Brethren Jesse Ober and Eberly.—Fay A. Rohrbaugh, R. D. 2, Box 13, Browning, Ill., Sept. 7.

Okaw church met in council Aug. 26. Bro. Geo. W. Miller presided. Brethren L. F. Turner and A. R. Eikenberry were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. We decided to hold a special meeting Sept. 1 for the election of a minister and a deacon, at this meeting Bro. Lester Berry was chosen as minister and Brethren Noah Buckingham and Elmer Wagoner as deacons. Bro. Noah Miller was elected to the 3d ministerial degree of the ministry. Bro. J. G. Royer was with us Aug. 29, and gave us an excellent discourse on "Training Our Children and Parents." He has been engaged to hold a series of meetings for us at the Centennial church about Dec. 1.—Bro. Lester Barton, of Mulkeytown, will conduct our meetings at this place.—Elizabeth Eikenberry, Lovington, Ill., Sept. 2.

Sterling.—Sept. 4 we met in special council. Bro. Etta Story presented us assisted by Bro. Jesse Calvert, and Bro. Wm. Buckley was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. He and his wife were duly installed. Seven letters of membership were received and two granted. Our love feast will be held Nov. 26, at 6:30 P. M. Our pastor is attending the fall term at Bethany Bible School. We expect to have a special Bible term during Thanksgiving week.—Lillie A. Frantz, Sterling, Ill., Sept. 8.

Waddams Grove.—We held our council Sept. 2. Eld. P. B. Whitmer presided. Our aged sister, Mrs. Mary Bowers, was buried just a few days previous. We missed him at this meeting, as he was always present. Bro. Whitmer preached and took an active part in the work of the church. We appointed our love feast for Dec. 2, at 2 P. M. Eld. J. E. Young will commence preaching at the Louisa church Sept. 16, and continue until Sept. 13.—Albert Myers, Waddams Grove, Ill., Sept. 6.

Yellow Creek.—We met in council Aug. 31. Our elder, Bro. P. B. Kehr, presided. We expect Bro. Kehrer to hold some meetings for us in the near future.—Mary A. Kuhleman, Pearl City, Ill., Sept. 2.

INDIANA.

Bango.—Our council meeting was held Aug. 19, when the annual visit was reported. Brethren Harvey Bowers and David Homes are to represent us at the District Meeting. Last Saturday we had a very good Harvest Meeting. At the forenoon Bro. Otho Yeringer made us realize that we ought to praise God more, and in the afternoon his missionary sermon taught us to be more active in saving souls. The collection amounted to $44.35.—Christian Metzler, Wakarusa, Ind., Sept. 6.

Bethany.—We have recently been blessed with a very successful series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Arthur Phippis, of Holton, Ind., assisted in the song service by Sister Effie Scott, of Huntington, Ind. The interest and the attendance were good throughout. Five were added to our little flock. Sister Emma Miller, our Sunday-school secretary, is also a singer. She has a splendid tale. Aug. 13 Bro. G. L. Wine and wife conducted our Harvest Meeting service. A collection of $9.13 was taken for the Old Folks' Home in Indiana.—Gertie Harrison, R. D. 1, Lebanon, Ind., Sept. 6.

Leyngsburg church was organized Aug. 12, and long to be remembered by those present. Eld. Frank Fisher, of Nashville, Ill., assisted in installing Bro. Yeringer as our well-filled house in the morning. A collection of $9.13 was taken, after which communion was regarded with due solemnity. About 100 persons surrounded the tables. A short missionary and temperance program was rendered in the Sunday-school room in the afternoon, immediately followed by an inspiring missionary sermon by Bro. Fisher. Our Sunday-school is reorganized, and is progressing better than Sunday. We feel encouraged with the work at this place.—Lydia A. Yeringer, Leyngsburg, Ind., Sept. 6.

Maple Grove.—Our love feast, Sept. 2, was well attended, and was a spiritual feast for the soul. The visiting ministers present were Bro. Jesse Ober, Bro. Ross, Bro. Bowser, Bro. Arthur H. Miller, Irvin Weaver, Otho Winger and S. J. Burger, who officiated. Bro. Burger just closed a series of meetings at this place, which were enjoyed very earnestly. Three were added to the fold, and the members greatly encouraged.—Lena B. Brower, Nappanee, Ind., Sept. 6.

New Salem met in council Aug. 19. Our elder, Bro. John Kinsel, presided. Bro. Fred Bowman, of the Yellow Creek church, Bro. Fred Byerly was elected to the deacon's office, and Bro. Fred Bowman was elected to the second degree of the ministry. We decided to combine our Harvest Meeting with the usual annual meeting, Thursday, Aug. 31. Bro. Ross, of Lincoln James Neff, Amsey Clem and Milo Geyer, of the Solomon's Creek congregation.—Mrs. Maude Jones, R. D. 5, Nappanee, Ind., Sept. 6.

North Manchester.—We met for Harvest Meeting at the West church, Aug. 26. Bro. Smith Miller, assisted by his wife, her Bertha Neher, of Milford, Ind., talked to the children on the subject of "Temperance." Bro. Dowell, of Mexico, of the Ogans Creek congregation, addressed the older people. Bro. Joseph Eberly, of Mexico, had charge of the music. Bro. Dowell had charge of the preaching service, and gave us an instructive sermon. At the close of the afternoon service a collection of $9.13 was taken for Home Missions. In the forenoon a program was rendered by the two Sunday-schools. Bro. Raymond Cottrell, of Peru, Ind., Route 7, and Miss Nellie Staats, were also favored us with talks. A large and attentive audience was present.—Ida Smith Miller, Milford, Ind., Sept. 6.—Reporter, Ind., Sept. 4.

M.—William Weaver, Foreman, Wawaka, Ind., Sept. 4.

Poplar Grove spiritual feasts have been enjoyed by our church during the month of August. Aug. 31 Bro. J. O. Beer, of Bethany Bible School, was with us, and gave us an inspiring sermon. Aug. 14 and 16 the Sunday-school and ministerial meetings were held. Bro. Beer's presence has lent an inspiration to us all to do more and better work for the Master.—Ida M. Beer, Poplar Grove, Ind., Sept. 6.—Reporter, Ind., came to assist us in a series of meetings. The Word is being preached with much power, and much good seed is being sown. We are striving to walk more closely in the footsteps of their Master, and were received into the church by baptism. Others are under conviction. Three meetings are well attended and are still continuing. Sept. 3 we held a child-dedicatory service by Bro. Reed.—Ida Hoover, Ind., Sept. 6.

Rock Run church met in council Sept. 2, at the Lancaster Sunday-school house. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Hoover, presided. One membership was received and one was granted. Brethren D. W. Paul and Lawrence Shultz are our delegates to District Meeting. Sister Lydia Hoover was elected delegate to Sister Millie Wike, from the Lancaster Sunday-school, and Sister Nora Wike, from the Rock Run Sunday-school. We decided to send our missionary offering of $39.12 to the Old Folks' Home in Indiana. Bro. Jacob Betts, of Lake Side, Ind., was appointed for Oct. 28, beginning at 5 P. M., at the Lancaster house.—Millie Wike, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind., Sept. 4.

Simpson Mill.—Our elder, Bro. Jesse Hook, came to us Aug. 19, to conduct a series of meetings. We had seven services.

Three letters were granted and one member was restored to fellowship. Our Sunday-school was reorganized Aug. 27, with a large attendance. Our love feast was held Aug. 26. On the same day Bro. Hook preached his farewell. The Lord's side, Two are awaiting baptism. We feel greatly built up. Bro. Hook will be with us the first of later Sept.—I. V. Ross, R. D. 2, Shoals, Ind., Sept. 4.

MARYLAND.

Longmeadow.—We held our council Aug. 12, with our elder, Eld. Levi Trout, presiding. Bro. A. Rowland was elected delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. H. R. Rowland, alternate. Our series of meetings, conducted by Eld. John Rowland, closed on Sunday evening, Sept. 3. During the greater part of the meeting the weather was very inclement, yet we had a good, spiritual meeting. Two were born into the kingdom, and others are counting the cost.—C. Mac Rowland, R. D. 6, Hagerstown, Md., Sept. 6.

Pipe Creek.—Our series of meetings began Aug. 20, conducted by Eld. Wm. Stover, of Mexico, Ind. During the first week we were blessed with more rain than we had for quite a long time, which was needed. The second week we had rain and floods day after day, so that we were obliged to leave the meeting by which we were sure, as we think much good could have been done. One was baptized today, Sept. 2 we held our council. Eld. C. D. Bonnard presided. Elders Uriah Bixler and J. J. John were present. Bro. W. C. Englar and wife were ordained to the eldership. Bro. Englar has lately returned from the hospital, where he had been operated on for appendicitis. He is now recovering nicely.—Elmia J. Englar, New Windsor, Md., Sept. 6.

MICHIGAN.

Black River.—Our church met in council Sept. 2, with our elder, Bro. M. Smith, presiding. Bro. Smith preached for us Sunday morning and evening. Our love feast was appointed for Oct. 7 at 10 A. M. Subject, the Spirit of the Comforter.—Mrs. Hirlan, Mich., to conduct our series of meetings in January. Since our last report two letters have been granted. We have just finished repairing our church, much improving its appearance.—Nellie Fisher, 3, Box 24, Sterling, Mich., Sept. 6.

Marion.—We have been enjoying a feast of spiritual things since our last report. The Ministerial, Sunday-school and District Meetings, held at Harlan, were very interesting. I am glad to say that each year, at our District Meeting, the brethren and sisters are more filled with the Spirit, and the meeting has aroused much interest in the community. Four have been added to the district since our last report, one being held at Homestead every two weeks, on Saturday evening and Sunday evening. They also have a flourishing Sunday school and Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday. We also have Sunday-school morning and evening each Sunday, and at the Harlan house each Sunday. Our Sunday-school secretary reported encouraging attendance.—Mrs. Rosa Weller, Copemish, Mich., Sept. 6.

MINNESOTA.

Lewiston.—All those attending the District Meeting of Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota are requested to bring their "Songs of Songs" as we are going to use a book at the coming District Meeting, which convenes Oct. 4, at 2 P. M.—Edith Wolmer, R. D. 1, Lewiston, Minn., Sept. 6.

Worthington church met in quarterly council Sept. 2, with Bro. J. Scheffler, presiding. We had one letter granted. Bro. Frank Williams was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Our love feast will be held Oct. 28, beginning at 1 o'clock. We decided to have a "quarterly program" on Thanksgiving evening. We have an enrollment of twenty-three of the "good fight." We decided to send out our missionary money to Winona, this quarter. Sister Alma Schulz was money missionary solicitor.—Minnie Scheffler, Worthington, Minn., Sept. 6.

MISSOURI.

Aurora.—There are hundreds of men and women, here in Southwestern Missouri, who need the Gospel just as much as anywhere else. By my recent visit to Aurora, the place where I lived in years gone by, I found men and women that had not been to church for five years. There is a good united church of eight members, and held two love feasts there, but all the members have died or moved away except one sister, three of their children have expressed a desire to hear the Brethren preach again. Now, who will come and settle in this grand section to people this church and mission, duly intend to move back to Oklahoma this fall. We have about seventy acres of land. This is a high healthful section, well watered, and with lots of wood. Corn crops are fine. It is a splendid fruit district. Peaches are a heavy crop. Who will come and help us?—J. Fortner, Aurora, Mo., Sept. 3.

Mount Hermon.—Bro. Chas. M. Yearout came to us Aug. 15, and began revival meetings, which closed Sept. 3. He preached 18 times. Three were received into the church. Yearout surely put the people to thinking. Sept. 2 twenty-eight members met around the Lord's table. Bro. Yearout is home-looking-on, had never seen the administration of these ordinances before. Only five members in the church failed to be present.—Grace Valley, Mo., Sept. 4.

Shelby County.—Bro. Chas. Walter was at our place over Sunday, and preached three interesting sermons. He was elected on Sunday morning was, "God's Gift to Us and Our Gift to God." Bro. Walter preached with earnestness and much power.—Ethel Bryan, Clarence, Box 1, Shelby, Mo., Sept. 7.

Shoal Creek church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder not being present, Bro. J. Kirkbright presided. Bro. Delp began a series of meetings Oct. 21. We will have our love feast at his place the following Sunday. Bro. Kirkbright was to represent us at the District Meeting. Bro. Jos. Gray will be our delegate to the Sunday-school Convention.—Mary Kirkbright, Fairview, Mo., Sept. 4.

Smith Fork church met in council Sept. 2, with Eld. J. S. Kline presiding. Several letters were granted. Brethren John Sturgis, D. D. Sell, and E. L. Shoemaker were selected on a committee to look after the ministers at time of meetings. A call was made for the District Meeting next year. Bro. Barnhart was elected delegate. Sister was delegates to District Meeting; Brethren Frank Shirk and Ezra Mohler, delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting. Bro. Kline named are also to act as delegates to Christian Workers' Meeting.—Emma Williams, Plattsburg, Mo., Sept. 5.

NEBRASKA.

Bethel church met in council Aug. 15. Brethren Edgar Rothrock and P. D. Beck were chosen delegates to District Meeting, which is to be held near Arapahoe. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14. We held a Harvest Meeting Aug. 31, which was well attended. An address by Bro. Jacob Beery, of Waterloo, Iowa, was much enjoyed. Bro. Lichty commenced a series of meetings at Bethel church Sept. 3. His sermons were inspiring. On Tuesday evening, Sept. 5, Bro. D. P. Hoover, of Waterloo, Iowa, came. He preached an excellent sermon.—Anna Lichty, Carleton, Nebr., Sept. 6.

Lincoln church met in council Aug. 25, to make preparations for our love feast. One letter was received. We retain our minister, Bro. R. Thompson, indefinitely. We will hold our love feast. We had a very good meeting. Fifty-two members communed. On Sunday morning we held our Sunday-school Convention. In the afternoon we held our Christian Workers' Meeting. Four churches of Eastern Nebraska have joined together to hold these meetings every three months, and that brings the meeting once a year to each place. There was but one minister present at all these meetings except our home workers.—Mrs. Caroline Brown, Lincoln, Nebr., Sept. 6.

Notice to the Members of the District of Nebraska.—All persons desiring to attend the Sunday-school Meeting of District Meeting, to be held at Octavia, beginning Sept. 30, and desiring to be met at Schuyler, Nebr., will please notify the Secretary of the Lodging Committee by mail, or by time of their arrival.—S. G. Mishler, Secretary of the Lodging Committee, Octavia, Nebr., Sept. 5.

Red Cloud.—Our love feast will be held Nov. 25, to be followed immediately by the Annual Meeting, held by Bro. Aaron Soltenberger, of Beatrice.—J. E. Jarboe, Red Cloud, Nebr., Sept. 5.

Silver Lake church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, P. T. Grabill, presided. New officers were elected for the coming year. Bro. P. T. Grabill was chosen as our elder; also as delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. Sam Grabill as alternate. Bro. Jas. Wagoner will be with us after District Meeting, to hold a series of meetings. Our love feast will be Oct. 14. Collection.—Mrs. Elizabeth Eller, R. D. 2, Box 37, Roseland, Nebr., Sept. 4.

OHIO.

Bear Creek church met in council Sept. 6. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Doughley, presided. One letter was received. We decided to have our next series of meetings to begin the first of August; also to have Bro. Joseph Studebaker conduct a singing school for us. Some new song books, "Songs of Songs," are adopted. Bro. John Keons and wife and Bro. Albert Teeter were duly instituted into the office of deacon. Bro. Henry Eby was duly elected to the office of minister. Sister Sylvia Fibrun and wife were advanced to the second degree of the ministry.—Mrs. Elizabeth Hoffman, R. F. D. 44, Canal Dover, Box 38 Smith, R. D. 14, Dayton, Ohio, Sept. 7.

Bethel church met in council. Many of our Sunday-school rendered a program, consisting of recitations and songs, after which Bro. G. A. Snider, of Lima, Ohio, preached for us. This was the beginning of a three-weeks' series of meetings. There was no conversions, but we think the fruits of these meetings will be manifested in the future. Aug. 30 Bro. J. T. Kaylor was elected to the ministry. He and his wife were duly installed. Brother and Sister Kaylor are the parents who will sail for the India Mission field this fall. We met in council Sept. 2, Bro. Kaylor in the chair. Bro. Snider, our orator. Two letters were received and one granted. We decided to have our next series of meetings to begin the first of October, with Bro. Guthrie, Ada, Ohio, Sept. 7.

Covington.—Last Sunday our church services were well attended, the Sunday-school and preaching. Bro. Wolfe, in the afternoon we baptized three. On Tuesday evening we had a missionary meeting of more than usual interest. Our pastor referred to some things which, in his judgment, should be done. Among them was the suggestion that we pray for the future good of the cause here.—Elizabeth D. Rosenberger, Covington, Ohio, Sept. 6.

Dayton Circle.—The members of the Summerford, Madison County, church met in council Aug. 20, at 2 P. M., Bro. L. R. Speitz presiding. We had one letter granted. Love feast, Sept. 2 P. M.—Elsie Wingert, R. D. 1, Box 175, Springfield, Ohio, Sept. 6.

Hickory Grove.—Sept. 2 our church met in council at the Dutch Creek church. Eld. Isaac Hoover presided and then it was decided to provide some Sunday-school rooms for the Church of Hickory Grove. Bro. Jacob Coppock was elected and J. E. Earnhart, who ordained Brethren A. S. Neher and J. B. Gump to the eldership. Bro. Jacob Coppock was chosen as our housekeeper and Bro. Jacob Coppock, delegate to Nancone City, Ohio, Sept. 6.

Lordstown church met in council Aug. 30, with our elder, Bro. H. H. Christian, presiding. Four letters of membership were granted and one letter granted. Sister Ida Hoffman started the new song book, "Kingdom Songs." We will hold a singing class in our church, Bro. Joseph Studebaker, of Lima, Bro. Studebaker, of Indiana. July 16 Sister Hettie Stauffer gave us two very interesting talks, both morning and evening, on "Our Heavenly Home Land. Our Harvest Meeting was held Aug 9, Bro. S. S. Smith, of Sidney, Ohio, delivered the address. We had a splendid meeting. Aug. 27 we had Brethren C. C. Ellis and J. A. Crowell, of Huntingdon, Pa. Bro. Ellis gave us a splendid sermon. Bro. Crowell will be with us again Sept. 3, to preach for us.—Marta Miller, Bradford, Ohio, Sept. 6.

Portage.—We have decided to recall our love feast for this fall. It will be in the spring.—Mrs. Josephine Bowser, Mrs. Mary Myers, Mr. Myrtle Dauterman, Portage, Ohio, Sept. 4.

Salem.—Bro. J. Homer Bright and wife were with us over Sunday. We commenced a class in the Sunday-school hour to talk to the school, which was much appreciated by all, after which Bro. Bright preached to a large and attentive audience of earnest listeners. In the evening we had an informal meeting at the home of Bro. Bright's parents, including Brother and Sister Bright. It was a very solemn meeting. Brother and Sister Bright have been greatly experienced before. Our future prospects are bright. Bro. J. Homer Bright and wife left Sunday morning for Indiana, where they will spend the week at Bethany, before starting to China.—John H. Rinehart, Union, Ohio, Sept. 7.

Sugar Grove.—Bro. J. H. Brubaker, of Union, Ohio, recently closed a two-weeks' series of meetings at this church. The interest was good throughout. Bro. Brubaker is a good and an immediate result seven turned their faces Zionward. Our council was held Aug. 26. Church officers were elected. A report of the annual visit was given. The clerk's yearly report showed a net gain of seven by reception, two restored by baptism, nine by letter, and three letters were granted. Two members were reclaimed and there were two deaths. At present we have a membership of 370.—J. W. Byerly, Lima, Ohio, Sept. 4.

Upper Stillwater.—It was our pleasure to have with us Bro. N. E. McKimmey, our former pastor, who resigned a year ago on account of ill health. We were glad to welcome him at a time when we can have him with us again. Sept. 3 Bro. McKimmey preached for us in the morning. Sunday-school and evening along nicely, with good attendance and interest.—Fay Kaser, 402 Howard St., Piqua, Ohio, Sept. 4.

Trotwood.—Sept. 3 Bro. B. F. Heckman began a series of meetings at this place. He preached twenty-seven good sermons. Aug. 27 Bro. Heckman preached a sermon for men only, in which he explained the wickedness of Chicago and other cities. Twenty-eight were received into membership. Five of the converts are heads of families, the others are young people. Bro. Heckman will return soon.—Ira C. Conover, Trotwood, Ohio, Sept. 5.

Upper Stillwater.—We met in council Sept. 2, at 10 A. M. Our elder, Bro. D. D. Wise, presided. One letter was received and three were granted. We have decided to secure a brother to conduct a singing school in the near future. We have also arranged for a series of meetings to commence Oct. 1.—Ella Cable, Lock Box 79, Bradford, Ohio, Sept. 6.

OREGON.

Williams Creek.—Our church was organized last spring, and since then has had a very successful existence. We are now about completed and all paid for. The dedication services will be held, and a love feast Sept. 30. We have preaching every Sunday (except the fifth Sunday); also Sunday-school every Sunday evening. We have the prospects to build up a good church. Grants Pass, twenty miles distant, is our nearest railroad station, but we have a daily stage and mail.—Jacob P. Moonaw, Williams, Oregon, Sept. 4.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Carson Valley.—We met in council Aug. 26. Four letters of membership were granted, and the regular business was transacted. We decided to elect a deacon in the near future. Bro. L. B. Benner was appointed as our elder for the next two years.—Elsie Hoover, R. D. 3, Duncansville, Pa., Sept. 6.

Chambersburg.—Our church is still growing in interest. Bro. D. Hoover preached excellent sermons for us on Sunday morning, Aug. 27, and gave a very interesting lecture on "Temperance." Bro. Hershberger, of Gettysburg, Pa., (Concluded on Page 592.)

The Lost Brothers of the Alleghanies

By Eld. Jas. A. Sell

On the evening of April 24, 1856, Joseph and George Cox, aged respectively 7 and 5 years, wandered from their home in the mountains of Western Pennsylvania.

Thousands of men, women and children searched for the lost boys in the fourteenth day their whereabouts was made known through the dream of Lewis Dibert.

Eld. Sell, who conducted Memorial services on the Fiftieth Anniversary of the occasion, tells the story in all its details. The illustrations consist of five portraits: Mr. and Mrs. Cox, Jacob Dibert, Harrison Wysong and the Author was with us on Sunday evening, Aug. 27, and preached a soul-reviving sermon. Our series of meetings will commence Nov. 4, to continue two weeks, and closing with a love feast, Nov. 19.—Blaine Bear, Center St., Chambersburg, Pa., Sept. 6.

A sad but true story of life in the mountains. Intensely interesting and instructive.

Falling Spring—Our church met in council Aug. 26, at 10 A. M. Our elder, Bro. Wm. C. Koontz (who has not missed a council meeting nor a love feast in the Unity-season since that he has resided in this congregation), was absent, owing to the illness of Sister Koontz. A letter of greeting and instruction was read by the writer. Bro. Jacob Hoover was chosen secretary, to take the place of Eld. W. A. Anthony (deceased). Sister J. E. Shrader was moderator of the meeting. Arrangements were made to hold our love feast Sept. 30. After partaking of our luncheon, we all assembled at 1 P. M. and listened to a harvest sermon by Bro. J. E. Shrader and others. An offering for Home Missions was also taken.—J. H. Brindle, Kaufman, Pa., Sept. 5.

Lower Cumberland—Our congregation met in council at the Bermudian house Aug. 26. Eld. R. Cook presided. Two solicitudes were granted and one received. Our clerk, Bro. John Speck, is moving to York, and Bro. H. E. Hoke was elected to aid in his stead. A local Sunday-school Teachers' Institute will convene at the Bermudian house Sept. 15, at 7:30 P. M. Bro. Adam Hollinger, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., will be with us in a series of meetings at the Bermudian house, beginning Sept. 28. Our next council will be at the Wolgamuth house, Dec. 30. Our love feast will be held Sept. 9, and Oct. 1, at 10 A. M.—G. W. Harnicher, Dover, Pa., Sept. 5.

Middle Creek—We were glad to have Eld. Tobias Myers in our midst. He is visiting his old associations in this State. Last Sunday he preached an interesting sermon in the Kimmel church. Eld. Myers, who is 82 years old, is hale and well preserved, physically and mentally. We are always glad to see him among us.—D. H. Baker, Salisbury, Pa., Sept. 4.

Midway—Our church met in council Aug. 28. Eld. John Herr presided. Considerable business was disposed of. Brethren N. F. Miller, William Perry and Frank Brubaker were appointed to receive donations for the Brethren's Home. Non-participating visitors will be received and taken care of until donation day. Bro. Gibble will have charge of the visitors there to the Home. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 10 and 11.—S. S. Brubaker, R. D. 6, Lebanon, Pa., Sept. 5.

Norristown—Bro. J. Kurtz Miller, of Brooklyn, N. Y., began a series of meetings at the Jacoby house, Aug. 27, and continued until Sunday evening, Aug. 27. Bro. Miller preached eighteen life-giving sermons. Aug. 16 Sister Elizabeth Klein, of Ellersbetown, Pa., came to our aid, to conduct a most soul-stirring singing, in connection with the meetings. The house was well filled each evening. Four souls for Christ in baptism and an aged brother was reclaimed. Others are near the Kingdom.—Hattie M. Nedrow, Norristown, Pa., Sept. 4.

Perry—Our love feast will be held Oct. 7 and 8, at 2:30 P. M., on the Perry Springs church, followed by a series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Wm. H. Miller, of Jacobs Mills, Pa.—D. Book, Blain, Pa., Sept. 5.

Philadelphia (Bethany Mission, 3255 Kensington Avenue)—In the absence of the pastor, Bro. Paul H. Bowman, who is on his vacation for a few weeks, Bro. Thomas Sangrey, of Union Deposit, Md., preached Aug. 29, to a full house. His sermons were very much appreciated. Bro. Sangrey had regained once more (a father) was baptized into the fold of Christ. Sister B. S. Scott has improved so much that she was able to visit her mother in Ohio. She stood the trip right well, and the change seems to have done her much good. Sister Scott's address: All who wish to communicate with her will please address her at West Alexander, Miami Co., Ohio.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren, Dauphin Street mouth of August for his vacation, and in his absence Bro. W. I. Book, of the University of Pennsylvania, will be the pulpit the first Sunday, and Eld. T. T. Myers, of Juniata College, the second Sunday of the month. Both of these men were greatly enjoyed by all present. Soon we expect to see all back from their vacations and the work in full swing. We hold our rally day services Sept. 24, and our love feast will be held Nov. 4, at 7:30 P. M.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Ave., Philadelphia, Pa., Sept. 4.

Quemahoning church met in council at the Maple Spring house Sept. 2, at 1 P. M. Eld. F. P. Rummel presided. Two letters were received and two granted. The report of the visiting brethren showed love and peace existing in the membership. We elected a mission board of three brethren to look up mission points in the congregation. Our conference committee was also chosen.—Wm. D. Rummel, Holsopple, Pa., Sept. 5.

Rockton—The meetings held at Greenville by Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., closed Sept. 3, with a love feast. Forty-six members communed. Seven backsliders were reclaimed. Our elder, Bro. Abram Pyock, was at our council Sept. 2, and attended the love feast at Greenville. Bro. Clapper is now at Five Points, holding forth the Word. Our delegates returned from the Sunday-school Convention, held at Scalp Level, Pa., filled with a desire to have our Sunday-school a front-line school next year. We have organized a teacher-training class. We expect Bro. J. M. Blough and wife to give us a talk on India.—Libbie Hollopeter, Rockton, Pa., Sept. 7.

West Johnstown—The date of our love feast has been changed to Oct. 8, at 6 P. M. The examination services are to be preached in each house of worship on Sunday morning. The official meeting of the congregation will be held Oct. 1, at 2:1 6 P. M., at the Roaring Run house, and Conference will meet Oct. 8, at 7:30 P. M. We held the graduating exercises of the teacher-training class on Sunday evening. Dr. A. H. Haines, of Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., delivered the graduating addresses. His subject was intensely practical and much attention by a large audience. Eld. J. F. Dietz presented the diplomas to the graduates, which numbered eighteen. The pastor was the teacher of the class. Another class is being organized this week. Bro. W. B. Miller is to deliver a course of Bible lectures on the Sunday-school Institute. We are arranging to hold a Bible and Sunday-school Institute at the Woodvale district of Pennsylvania, at the parsonage house, Dec. 4 to 9.—J. H. Cassady, Fourth and Bell Streets, Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 4.

TENNESSEE.

Pleasant View.—Aug. 21 Bro. I. N. H. Beahm was with us in two services. We had one council meeting in the church at this time. On Sunday he met with the Brethren at their place of worship in Nashville, and also delivered a splendid sermon. Our house was filled. In the evening he gave us a lecture on his travels in India. Bro. Hilton Speer baptized one on confession, just at that time, many were unable to get out to hear him. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings at this place, which Eld. A. M. Hylton is conducting for us. The outlook is promising.—U. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 5.

VIRGINIA.

Antioch church met in council Sept. 2, with Bro. S. P. Beahm presiding. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14, at 2 P. M. Brethren J. A. Dove, D. C. Naff and J. H. Garst were with us, and rendered valuable assistance at this church. Bro. J. A. Dove gave us an able sermon on Sunday, at 11 A. M. We hope to have some more to help us in a series of meetings this fall.—Jennie Rooch, Huddleston, Va., Sept. 5.

Bridgewater.—We held our Sunday-school Aug. 8. Eld. D. C. Flory gave us a very appropriate sermon. Our council was held Aug. 12. Eld. H. G. Miller presided. Two letters of membership were received and six granted, since our last report. We raised $13 to help bear the expense of Eld. S. N. McCann's treatment at the hospital. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 2 P. M. Our series of meetings began Aug. 6, with the assistance of Eld. D. C. Flory, of Mount Sidney, Middle River congregation, Va., did the preaching. Eight were baptized. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Garber, is failing in health. His wife was baptized during the meetings. All of them are Sunday-school scholars.—Ida Trissel, Bridgewater, Va., Sept. 29.

Copper Hill—Our church met in council Aug. 26, with Eld. C. E. Arnold presiding. Other elders and visiting members were also with us. The deacons reported seven members as being in love and union, and willing to work with the church. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30, at 4 P. M. One letter was granted. All three of our ministering brethren, Daniel E. Shriver, Jacob Hylton and Eld. C. E. Arnold were ordained to the eldership. The ordination services were conducted by Eld. J. M. Neff. Eld. C. E. Arnold, Eld. J. M. Neff of Naffs, Va., and Eld. Samuel Crumpacker, of Botetourt County, Va.—T. W. Scaggy, Copper Hill, Va., Sept. 1.

Sangerville.—Eld. A. S. Thomas began a series of meetings at the Branch house in the Sangerville congregation, Va., Aug. 11, and continued over each Sunday until Aug. 27. The interest and attendance were good. Ten were made willing to join in with the faith. We had baptism at 4 P. M. Sunday, Aug. 20. We met in council at the Sangerville house Aug. 26, with Eld. H. E. Wine presiding. Eld. A. S. Thomas was present. Two letters of membership were granted.—Annie M. Miller, R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va., Aug. 30.

Snow Creek—Our new church was dedicated Aug. 20. Bro. D. A. Naff ably conducted the services, assisted by Bro. H. J. Woodin, who has conducted a number of meetings, preaching right able and inspiring sermons. Three were added to the church Aug. 21 by W. J. Kinzie, who was elected to the ministry, and Bro. S. T. Crawford as deacon.—Rogers Boyers, Va., Sept. 4.

Valley Bethel—The time set for our love feast is Oct. 7. We expect our series of meetings to begin in a few days. A series of meetings is now in progress at Mount Zion church, in this congregation, conducted by Bro. Geo. Phillips. The interest and attention are good.—Vina S. Bussard, Bolan, Va., Sept. 4.

WASHINGTON.

East Wenatchee church met in council Aug. 26, with Eld. A. E. Peters presiding. Two letters were received and three granted. Bro. Peters decided to move to Yakima. Bro. Warren Slabaugh, previous to his return to Bethany, gave us two very helpful sermons on Aug. 27.—Vinnie A. Sellers, Wenatchee, Wash., Sept. 2.

Olympia.—Aug. 29 we convened in council meeting, with Bro. Scott presiding. Two letters were granted. Reports were presented. Brethren C. A. Wagner and W. C. Lehman will organize a Sunday-school at Tumwater. Bro. Lehman is to preach for singing school, conducted by Bro. Lehman. Bro. Scott is conducting a series of Bible class on Thursday evening of each week, at the Brethren church. Bro. Scott is living in the western part of town.—Caddie Wagner, Olympia, Wash., Sept. 4.

Spokane.—In order to arrange for the District Meeting, this church met in council Aug. 26, with Eld. Hilton Speer, our elder, H. C. Longanecker, Bro. D. M. Click and Sister Lena Kantor. The arrangement of work was taken up at this time. Bro. Geo. L. Dunning was elected to preach at the District Meeting, as the writer alternate. Bro. W. C. Winder Denver Colored Mission. He secured $6 in cash and $5 in pledges for the Home. Bro. Winder is to preach, and Sister Millie is to be with us Oct. 5 and 6. Tekoa church met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. H. C. Longanecker, presided. Two letters were granted and three received. Bro. Longanecker remains in charge of the church. We will also hold a series of meet gs in the near future. We have no resident minister at the present. Who will be the president of our Christian Workers' Meeting?—Mrs. A. Bro. Ada Hoffman, who is soon leaving Ora Hale and Anna Huffman, two of our most influential Sunday-school workers, have left us for Bethany Bible School, Chicago, Ill.—Mrs. Ida Click, Wash., Sept. 7.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Maple Spring—Our church met in council Sept. 2, with Elders Jonas Rummel and D. S. Rummel as moderators. Considerable business came before the meeting. One letter of membership was received and one granted. Brethren Ezra and L. Pike were appointed as delegates to District Meeting. Ezra Pike was elected as correspondent.—Mrs. Ella Pike, Glenville, Elton, W. Va.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Des Moines.—At our members' meeting, last evening, Sister Edna Crow was elected delegate to District Meeting. One letter of membership was read. Bro. Walter M. Royer was elected church clerk for a term of three years.—Virgil C. Pinkerton, 1643 Lyon Street, Des Moines, Iowa, Sept. 5.

Notice to the Churches of the Southern District of Illinois.—The District Meeting will be held Oct. 4, in the Girard house of the Pleasant Hill church. Ten cents will be charged for the meals.—Vinna Harshbarger, Girard, Ill., Sept. 8.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER
AND
OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

For $1.85 we will send you the Messenger for one year and a copy of Our Saturday Night. This is only 35c for the book which contains 192 pages.

The Gospel Messenger

is a religious paper of superior merit. Our Saturday Night is a book that will interest and help you. The Messenger, being the official organ of the Church of the Brethren, is of special value to members of this church, and many not identified with our Brotherhood read it with interest and appreciation. The things of most vital interest to the church are communicated through the columns of this paper only. Its work is being appreciated more and more, as the increase of the list of subscribers indicates. The Messenger is indispensable as a religious educator and spiritual counselor. One brother says: "It has been a forerunner to conversion and church unity in city and rural districts."

Our Saturday Night

is a collection of the ripe fruit of a master mind. Following are a few phrases from those who have read the book: "Interesting and instructive." "Food for various moods." "Good reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am charmed with it." "Overflows with warnings, citations, examples and good counsel." What more need be said? You must read it to learn its real merits. Get it now. It is going rapidly.

But Do Not Forget

it is not for sale. A subscription to the Gospel Messenger is the only means of obtaining this charming little volume.

The Messenger one year, $1.50; the book, 35 cents; both, $1.85.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are quite flashlights thrown upon things which are worth revealing. The author in his preface says:

"Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and emotions of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to a Boy
The Boy Mixer
The Boy Who Made Life Miserable
The Father's Obligation
The Gullible Investor
The Professor's Advice
Single and Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages. Bound in cloth.

AROUND THE WORLD

A Statue of Peace.

The women of the Pacific Coast, under the lead of Mrs. Caroline M. Severance, have started a movement for the erection of a colossal statue of "Peace," to be placed at the entrance of the Panama Canal. The figure is to be that of a representative American woman, typifying all that is best in our civilization, with the allegorical representation of the Biblical lion and lamb resting at her feet, bearing the olive branch and other peace emblems. One might well wish that the ladies had succeeded in getting in ahead of the fortifications. The statue of "Peace" would be much more effective if there were not to be the background of towering fortifications with their threatening cannons.

Moroccan Crisis Near Its End.

Under date of Sept. 16 it is declared in official circles that the French reply to the most recent German counter-proposals in the Moroccan affair, promises to be entirely satisfactory. Germany's answer will likely be ready in a few days. Most of the points in question have already been agreed upon, and ere long the vexed question will probably be settled. Already all troops have been withdrawn from the frontiers of the respective countries, and the outlook for European peace seems more fully assured at the present writing, than for some time past. A recent writer aptly observes that selfishness is at the root of most international difficulties,—an ever-present incentive to war and bloodshed.

A Commendable Movement.

The publishers of farm journals, at a recent meeting in Chicago, decided that hereafter no misleading or overdrawn land advertisements will be inserted in their columns, and there are to be no more patent medicine, whisky and beer advertisements. It is proposed, by these publishers, to rid their advertising columns of anything that might, in any way, work against the best interests of the home, recognizing the great responsibility they sustain to their thousands of readers. It might be well if other publishers had the same sense of responsibility to their patrons. As it is, it remains for each parent to scrutinize most carefully the literature that enters the home. We can not be too careful in this work of discrimination. "Prove all things; hold fast to that which is good," may well apply to the journals that seek to enter our homes.

In the Grip of Cholera.

At present the entire Ottoman Empire is suffering from a most malignant visitation of cholera, and the deaths run far up into the thousands, although the proverbial failure of Orientals, to keep official records, makes an absolutely accurate estimate impossible. Scarcely a town or village, from Baghdad to Scutari, has escaped. In Northern Asia Minor whole villages have succumbed, and in some districts the ever-vigilant tax gatherer fails to find a single one of the villagers,—all that withstood the epidemic having fled to other parts. Any one, conversant with the ever-present filth of the average Turkish village, will readily believe that an epidemic like cholera finds a fertile breeding place amid surroundings so favorable. This fact, also, places all Bible Land travel, at the present time, entirely out of the question. To venture into the country in the face of such imminent danger would serve no good purpose, and might prove a decidedly dangerous experiment.

The Present Crisis in China.

Some light is thrown on the present disturbances in China and the uprising against the Government, by the authoritative statements of William J. Calhoun, United States minister to China. Important changes and reforms are being planned and worked out by the Imperial Chinese Government, which, when completed, will awaken the dormant forces and resources of the country. Not all sections of the land, however, are in hearty accord with the contemplated improvements, chief of which is the province of Szechwan,—the center of the present troubles. This district has a population of 70,000,000, but is so largely isolated from other parts of the Empire,—owing to insufficient transportation facilities,—that there is little or no identity with other sections, or sympathy with the general policy of national affairs. The burning question seems to be whether the Chinese administration is to proceed along lines of development as outlined, or whether the discontented reactionaries shall be allowed to block the all-important progress of the Empire. It is a most interesting as well as important problem,—one which the entire world is anxiously watching. As already stated, the uprising in the province referred to does not, so far, affect other portions of China, and is, in no way, threatening the province in which our Brethren missionaries are located.

"Every Moslem Merchant a Missionary."

It is the proud boast of Mohammedans that the zeal of their members knows no limits, and that the large host of Mohammedan traders, throughout the world, are virtually so many missionaries. It is a fact, well known to all who are conversant with conditions in Mohammedan countries, that the main propagandists of Islam are the thousands upon thousands of her zealous members, rather than their religious leaders, that have so wonderfully extended the rule of the false prophet. We wonder what would happen in the Christian world of today if the same zeal could be truthfully credited to each professing Christian that is shown by the zealous Mohammedans, mistaken, though, they be. Wonderful results would soon be seen everywhere!

Uncertainty in Maine.

Unless, by an official canvass of the votes, the latest figures are changed, the prohibition section of the Maine constitution will remain. It is to be expected, however, that but a few hundred majority, at best, were scored by the temperance forces. For some reason public sentiment has largely changed since 1884, when the original enactment was adopted. At that time 70,000 votes were cast for it, and only 23,000 against it. This year the vote favoring it was only 60,000. While it is true that the liquor dealers' millions, freely expended, were doubtlessly responsible for much of the change in sentiment, there are likely other and graver causes that brought about the deplorable falling off in votes for temperance. It is charged that in the larger cities prohibition was not enforced as it should have been, which cast reproach upon the measure and its further retention in the State constitution was at stake. Strict enforcement of any prohibitive enactment is the best possible reason for its continued existence.

Prosperity in Palestine.

Dr. Harry Friedenwald, of Baltimore, honorary president of the Federation of American Zionists, returned recently from Palestine, after a thorough tour of the entire country. He visited forty flourishing Jewish colonies and is impressed by the favorable prospects attending the Zionist movement. He is hopeful that the Turkish Parliament will continue to favor the work of colonization, and is sure that the eventual gain to the Turkish Government, financially, will be an important factor in the maintenance of these relations. The recent hostility of the Arabs, in the region east of the Jordan, is not likely to prove a serious drawback to a further settlement of the country, as order has been once more restored, and is to be maintaiged at all hazards by the Turkish officials. The former prejudice against Jewish settlers,—as unreasoning as it was bitter,—has given way to a tolerance which is fair to become a most decided assurance to all who, by settling in Palestine, increase the Turkish revenues. Already 100,000 out of 600,000 total population, are Jews, which, in view of past persecutions, is a showing of considerable significance.

Mt. Etna's Destructive Eruption.

Under date of Sept. 15 Sicily's great volcano is reported as continuing its destructive eruptions. Great masses of lava, cinders and ashes are hurled from the craters and a hundred new fissures. The great river of lava, flowing to the north, has separated into four streams, the largest of which is moving towards Alcantara, being, at the time above referred to, but two miles from Francaville. Already the property loss has reached great proportions, a conservative estimate placing it at $20,000,000. Many who, in spite of the evident insecurity of living near the dreaded volcano, invested their entire possessions in a little farm or vineyard, are today bemoaning their misfortune. While scientists have endeavored to solve the mysteries connected with the periodical eruptions of earth's volcanoes, the wisest among them has not yet succeeded in a complete mastery of the subject. One thing is sure,—there are mighty forces penned up within the bowels of the earth that some day may readily bring about the crisis referred to in 2 Peter 3: 10-13, when "the earth and the works that are therein shall be burned up." The mighty catastrophes of nature, occasionally brought to our notice, may well impress upon us the necessity of a holier and a more consecrated life.

Wisconsin Will Educate Her Convicts.

By a recent enactment, the State of Wisconsin proposes to provide ample educational privileges for all her convicts. Each prisoner in the State penitentiary is to be given the opportunity to take a correspondence course along whatever line he may prefer, and the State will foot the bill. Prison experts have reached the conclusion that the gross ignorance and lack of mental training,—characteristic of most convicts,—is an undoubted factor in their degeneracy, and it is upon this fact that the Wisconsin officials are basing their present reformatory movement. While, no doubt, there is much merit in the proposed plan, no real moral reform can be attained by the mere education of the mind, in and of itself. There must needs be an outflowing of the gentler graces within the heart, to show that "the old man of sin has been put away," and that "the new man" has been put on that is "being renewed unto knowledge."

Loss of Life in India.

The old Bible text, referring to the creation of man, declares that by divine edict he is to have "dominion over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." Looking at recent statistics, concerning the loss of life in India, because of wild beasts and snakes, one can not help but conclude that "dominion" in that country has not yet reached the divine ideal. Last year 2,400 persons lost their lives by the depredations of wild beasts, in comparison with 2,000 in the preceding year. Snake-bite is said to have caused the death of 22,478 persons, an increase of 1,114 over the previous statistics. The natural dislike of the Hindu to take life is largely accountable for this heavy death roll. And while we may be disposed to criticise the people of India for this apparent neglect to destroy these foes of humanity, let us not forget that within our own borders we are harboring agencies of destruction more deadly than the serpents of India,—the poisonous liquor which "at the last biteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder."

Growth of Temperance in Germany.

Rather than to promote the interests of the brewers at the forthcoming Congress in Chicago, our State Department might well import the "Anti-Alcohol Exhibit," which is a part of the Health Exposition now being held at Dresden, Germany. With characteristic thoroughness the temperance promoters of the Fatherland have collected any and every fact, in any way bearing upon the evil of intemperance, impressing the same by graphic methods. Here are statistics that, by irrefutable figures, show the inevitable degeneracy resulting from the use of alcohol. Wax models of portions of the human frame are shown in the normal condition and also when saturated with drink. A list of diseases is given, induced by drink, together with wax models of persons affected by them. Pictures of men and women, suffering from delirium tremens, are shown in the shocking reality of actual experiences. Tables are exhibited, showing the effect of drink on offspring, and its power in producing degeneracies, idiots and criminals. That such an exhibition should be shown in a leading city of Germany, and arouse unwonted and intense interest, is a most encouraging indication of increasing temperance sentiment.

An Ancient Church Letter.

Some important things have recently been found in the ruins of the ancient city of Oxyrhynchus, 160 miles south of Cairo, by the Egyptian Exploration Fund Society. One of the ancient documents discovered, and translated by Dr. Arthur S. Hunt, is the letter of dismissal given to a Christian by his pastor. By this certificate the departing member was commended to the love and care of the flock within whose bounds he proposed to reside. Here is the letter of the faithful pastor: "Leon, the presbyter, to the presbyters and deacons, who aid in the local ministry, warm greeting. When our brother Demetrius reaches you, welcome him in peace; through whom I and those that are with me gladly salute you and those that are with you in the Lord. I wish you farewell in the Lord God. Emmanuel is witness. Amen." The pastor, judging by a subsequent note, was not a scholarly man; his penmanship was poor, his spelling incorrect, and his papyrus disfigured by a blot and several corrections, but notwithstanding all that, he was a devoted pastor and undoubtedly wide-awake to the church's best interests. That the soul of the brother might not be jeopardized amid strange surroundings, the pastor took the best possible plan to bring him into active fellowship with the congregation where he was going,—a plan that might well be followed more faithfully by the churches of today.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Alone With God.

Alone with God! day's craven cares
Have crowded onward unawares;
The soul is left to breathe her prayers.

Alone with God! no human eye
Is here with eager look to pry
Into the meaning of each sigh.

Alone with God! he only knows
If sorrow's ocean overflows
The silent spring from whence it rose.

Alone with God! he mercy lends—
Life's fainting hope, life's meager ends
Life's dwarfing pain, he comprehends.

Alone with God! O, sweet to me
This covert to whose shade I flee,
To breathe repose in thee—in thee.

Laity Inspire Your Ministers.

BY E. F. SHERFY.

IN a former article the writer discussed the inspiration of a minister from the minister's standpoint. Now let us view it from the laity standpoint.

I believe it is the minister's duty and privilege to be so inspired,—so aflame with holy zeal,—that he will make the hearts of his hearers to respond and glow with the warmth of a spiritual fire burning within. In this day of lukewarm Christianity, if the pew is cold, the pulpit should be so aflame that the pew would catch fire therefrom.

That is easier said, though, than done, perhaps. Ministers are but human. There are some things that have to do with the inspiration of a minister, of which we would all do well to think. There are things which contribute to a minister's inspiration, and other things which contribute to his discouragement, which, generally speaking, are not under his control. I should like to open my heart to my own congregation first and then I wish I might unburden my heart,—if such a thing could be,—to every reader of the MESSENGER, —the laity especially. Do you know, dear layman, that your minister (or ministers),—your pastor,—is very largely what you make him? Do you know that the sermons to which you listen are very largely what you make them? Did you ever stop to think that the sermon, last Sunday, so helpful and uplifting, was largely due to your faithfulness? Do you realize you are largely responsible for that poor preaching about which you grumble (to yourself, of course)?

Oh, how hard it is to meet with a lack of appreciation! The minister begins the week on Monday morning by praying that God would lead him to the right line of thought for next Sunday's message. He prays, again and again, as the week advances, that God would give him a live message, suited to the needs of his congregation. He not only prays, but works. He is busy in the field, perhaps, during the day and in his study room at night. When he comes to church on Sunday morning, tired in his limbs, perhaps, but every inch of him tingling with the desire to give a live message to his flock, too often, after all the consecrated preparation, he finds, as the hour-hand creeps up toward eleven, that the benches compose the larger part of his audience!

I tell you, none but those who have experienced that sort of a thing can know how completely a cold, wet blanket has been thrown on that heart which has, an hour before, beat high with the inspiration that has come from the "closet" and the study chamber. And why? Simply because you were not present to receive the message which God, through his minister, had prepared for you! Because, when the minister got up that Sunday morning at four o'clock, to be alone with God and his Bible, you remained in bed until seven o'clock and were "too late with the chores to get to church in time."

On the other hand, only those who have experienced it, know how the minister's heart beats stronger as he sees family after family, man after man, come trooping in at the church door. There is no music quite so sweet to him as the squeak, squeak of the old church door upon its hinges, when he knows that every squeak (behind his back, perhaps) means that another has come to listen to God speaking through his servant.

A lawyer sat in his easy chair and protested against his little girl going to Sunday-school through the rain. But the girl went. When she and her classmate entered a little late, they found their teacher crying. She had worked so hard and prayed so earnestly that God would give her a message of love for that Sunday that, finding no class until the two came, she broke down in tears. The child told her father about her teacher's concern for the class. That father made a resolve which he never broke. Being a public speaker himself, he said he would never again be responsible for an empty pew, and thereby cause his pastor to feel like that teacher felt.

Dear laity, you do not realize what an inspiration your presence at church every Sunday is to your minister!

Another thing I should like to mention, but I am not sure where to lay the blame, in some cases. Some people eye the preacher "from start to finish," a very few never look up at all, and some respond with their eyes only when things get so warm and interesting that they seem to forget themselves.

Perhaps we, as ministers, ought always to be so intensely interesting that all would be so spell-bound as to eye us like a hawk all the time. But who can do it? At least the majority of preachers fail to do it.

At the time when we are trying to get our thoughts and words in shape to make our point most forcible, we greatly need the encouragement of an appreciative audience, right then we, as a rule, do not have it.

There is no outside influence which means more for the thorough inspiration of a minister than an appreciative audience! Not to pay attention to a minister of God, though we do listen, in a way, is, it seems to me, most disrespectful to the message-giver (God) as well as the message-bearer.

And there is another thing: When an evangelist comes and preaches his pet sermons,—his very best, perhaps about all he has at his command,—we applaud him. We send him away, perhaps $75 or $100 better off, with many a "God bless you; we surely appreciated every sermon." That is all right; but what about your poor resident minister who, when he puts forth his best efforts week after week to produce new sermons every Sunday, seldom gets a compliment, and still more seldom has a dollar bill slipped into his hand after the sermon, or needful provisions placed into his scanty larder?

I speak from experience when I say that a little thoughtfulness along these lines, on the part of the laity, is a mighty inspiration to the discouraged minister.

And now I want to mention something else by which you can help your minister in the greatest possible way. Paul, in Eph. 6:19, 20 unburdens his heart to the Ephesian brethren when he asks them to pray for him, that utterance might be given him that he might open his mouth boldly in proclaiming the Gospel of God. Remember, he was in prison when he wrote that. It is significant that he did not ask them to pray for his deliverance from Roman chains. A much greater desire burdened his heart,—the burning desire to proclaim, to a lost world, the glad tidings of salvation, willing to remain an "ambassador in chains," if thereby he could best glorify God.

Brother, you do not know how your minister yearns for your prayers. You do not know how much they help him. Pray for him,—not that he may be delivered from the "chains" of debt (your paying will help that as much as your praying), but that he may be able to more acceptably and forcibly deliver the gospel message.

I do not want to leave the impression with the minister, who reads this, that he must depend upon his congregation for the inspiration in his work, or that their coldness excuses his deficiency in zeal. It is the minister's business to work, regardless of the inappreciation and coldness of our hearers. We must not forget that the first and primary source of inspiration for our work is dependence upon God, Christ and the Holy Spirit, in the delivery of the gospel message, as already discussed in my recent article, "Ministers, Be Inspired!"

May God help the laity to be an inspiration to their ministers, and may the ministers, in turn, as God's prophets, inspire the laity to better knowing and larger service.

God Everywhere.

BY ELEANOR J. BRUMBAUGH.

So many beautiful references in the Psalms lead us to see God all around us, that they are most helpful to us. As we look about us, we learn to see God in these things, and to praise him as we look upon them. Our lesson in prayer meeting, last week, was, "Living Near to Nature," and we studied the eighth Psalm, with other scriptures, referring to nature.

It is interesting to find how many times the hills and mountains are referred to. They are a symbol of strength and magnitude; also protection. "As the mountains are round about Jerusalem, so the Lord is round about his people." While the mountains are a silent, or inanimate, protection, our God is a living, real, everywhere-present Protection, for in him we live, and move and have our being.

When we fully comprehend this ever-present Protector and Helper, we will enjoy life more, and not be worrying about our work, or about what may come to us. The trees and growing grass direct our thoughts to the Maker of all, and cause us to praise him for all these things.

While parts of the earth have been very dry, and gardens are a pitiful sight, we can but give thanks that in other places there has been abundance of rain, and crops are good. God is providing for us far beyond what we deserve. His presence may seem to be hidden, at times, but this is not really so. We fail to recognize the presence. The sun shines every day. We are sure of this, although we may not see it for many days. Just so surely is God's blessed presence ever ours.

In our daily tasks, that sometimes tire us so much, we may find rest in the thought of God's nearness to us. When we do our work as unto him, and yield ourselves to him, remembering that we are workers together with him, our tasks grow lighter, and our skies are brighter. Looking at the moon and stars that he made, we take up the expressions of the Psalmist, "O Lord, our Lord, how excellent is thy name in all the earth!" "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me, bless his holy name!" "Be glad in the Lord." "Delight thyself in him." "Rejoice in the Lord." "O, praise the Lord!"

As we meet, and come in touch with people, we should find yet more reason to be grateful, for earth's millions are God's image and likeness. However marred the image, we may, by love and kindness, bring out the image, the likeness of God. If we meet people unkindly, frown on them, we are likely to be met with frowns. If we smile, we meet smiles, and help people to remember that our Loving Father is with us.

Another comforting scripture is the twenty-third Psalm: "I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Let us not, in prayer plead with God to be with us, because we know he is with us. Let us, rather, ask that our eyes be opened to see him, and that we may keep in mind the thought of his presence, and thus honor him in our lives.

Huntingdon, Pa.

Christ's Resurrection.

Was Christ's resurrection of the body, or from the body? This is the question that was ably discussed in the World's Crisis by Clarence M. Seamans, of Springfield, Mass. We give the article in full:

THE doctrine of the resurrection has been a source of annoyance to unbelievers of every shade, ever since the humble Galileans went forth to the world with the glad message, "Christ is risen from the dead."

When our Savior made his advent into our world, the belief in the immortality of the soul prevailed to such an extent that there was little room for the doctrine of the resurrection of the dead. As the pagan world did not believe that man ever died, it was certainly consistent, to say the least, for them to deny in toto, or severely question, the teaching of the resurrection. For the Christian church, however, with an open Bible before her, there can be but one consistent course, and that is to accept and pass on the glad tidings which stirred the hearts of the stricken disciples of the Crucified One on that bright Easter morning of long ago, "He is risen, as he said."

The resurrection of the dead is plainly a Bible doctrine. It is so apparent that only the boldest of skeptics will deny it. There are those, however, who do not wish to deny it, yet finding it impossible to reconcile it in its plain Bible teaching with their views of man in death, they distort and explain it away until it becomes a meaningless and empty form of belief to them.

Now it is admitted by Christendom in general, that our hope of future life is dependent upon Jesus Christ, and that, as he is the first fruits to eternal life by a resurrection, so the resurrection of all believers will be like his. Thus the controversy concerning the resurrection is waged around the record of the resurrection of our Lord.

Now it is not putting it any too strong to say that death and the resurrection are so confounded and blended together that neither of them have any meaning in the theology of current belief. This fact is so notorious that when Easter Sunday calls for the annual discourses on the subject of the Lord's resurrection, we find all kinds of apologies for it, with a variety of explanations, and very few instances where the plain Bible record is accepted without question.

By some the teaching is advanced that there was no resurrection of the body of the Lord, but rather a resurrection from that body—a sort of spiritual emanation from the old body, though incomprehensible, intangible and inexplicable. Around this teaching is gathered a multitude of flowery words, meaningless phrases and unscriptural assertions, confusing the mind and clouding the faith.

These teachers are having as hard a time trying to dispose of the question of the presence of the body of our Lord in the resurrection, as did the Jews to dispose of the question of its absence.

Now an examination of New Testament teaching will satisfy the honest inquirer after truth, that the resurrection of Christ was a resurrection of the body. This appears from the following:

1. From the testimony of the Lord himself. When the Jews asked of Jesus what sign he would give them of his Messiahship, he replied, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up" (John 2:19). Then, after noting the objection of the Jews, the inspired gospel writer states in verses 21 and 22: "But he spake of the temple of his body. When therefore, he was risen from the dead, his disciples remembered that he had said this unto them; and they believed the scripture and the word which Jesus had said." Thus Jesus declared that his body was to be raised up and the disciples believed the Word which he had said. Not only did they believe it, but they preached it.

2. The testimony of all four of the gospel writers concerning the resurrection of Jesus, is plainly that of a resurrection of the body. Take the account of Matthew. Here we read that the angel seeing the women who had come to the sepulchre, said: "Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay."

Here is no attempt to deceive, or to explain away the great fact of the resurrection. It was just a plain, simple way of telling those women that the very body which had been nailed to the cross and which had been laid in the tomb, had been raised to life and lay no longer still in death, where three days before loving hands had laid it. Said the angel, "Come, see the place where the Lord lay;" and when you have seen the empty tomb, when you have satisfied yourself by the absence of his body that he is truly risen, then you "go quickly and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead."

In Mark, the testimony is substantially the same: "He is risen; he is not here: behold the place where they laid him" (Mark 16:6).

Luke tells us that the women entered the tomb, "but found not the body of the Lord Jesus" (Luke 24:3). Again, in verse 23, it is said: "They found not his body."

The testimony of John is also that of an empty tomb. If the resurrection of Jesus was not a bodily resurrection, why, then, is the absence of his body from the tomb so frequently and emphatically affirmed as testimony to his resurrection? The body plays such an important part in this wonderful record that we can not evade the conclusion, that the Lord's resurrection was of the body. Again, it seems to have been the Lord's earnest desire that his disciples should understand that his resurrection was of the body—the same body which they had seen nailed to the cross, and with aching hearts had laid away in the tomb.

Luke records that on a certain occasion the Lord appeared to his disciples and they were "terrified and affrighted, and supposed that they had seen a spirit. And he said unto them, Why are you troubled? and why do thoughts arise in your hearts? Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself: handle me and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see me have. And when he had thus spoken, he showed them his hands and his feet." When Thomas doubted, Jesus presented his body which had been pierced and torn, as evidence that he had risen from the dead and the doubter was satisfied. It may be said that Jesus assumed all this but it seems very strange that Jesus would present an assumed body to prove a resurrection of a body which was never raised. And, further, if this argument was carried to its logical conclusion, it would put the miracles, the crucifixion and indeed the whole life and works of our Lord, in the realm of illusion. It is far safer to believe than to speculate in this great fundamental doctrine of Christian ity.

3. The resurrection of the body of Jesus was not only believed by the disciples, but was ever their affirmation to an unbelieving, backslidden church and an idolatrous, pagan world. On the day of Pentecost, at the very first opportunity to declare the Lord's resurrection to the people, Peter pressed home this great truth: "This Jesus hath God raised up, whereof we are witnesses" (Acts 2:32). That Peter taught a bodily resurrection is plain from the uses he made of Psalm 16, where David prophesied of the death and resurrection of Christ as the basis of his hope. The apostle, explaining this scripture said, "He seeing this before, spake of the resurrection of Christ, that his soul was not left in hell neither his flesh did see corruption." The only possible reason why our Lord did not see corruption was because his body was raised and came out of the tomb, clothed with immortality.

From the Day of Pentecost onward, the disciples went everywhere preaching the good tidings of salvation. Their great theme was redemption and their text was "Christ is risen from the dead."

When Saul of Tarsus was converted, he, too, began his ministry with the same text. To the Corinthian church he wrote, "For I delivered unto you first of all that which I also received, how that Christ died for our sins according to the Scriptures; and that he was buried, and that he rose again the third day according to the Scriptures." This doctrine met with opposition from both Jews and pagans alike. The Jews, while they held, theoretically at least, the doctrine of the resurrection, yet they would not listen to the story that he, whom they had so hatefully crucified, was God's Son, their promised Messiah, and that God had raised him from the dead. The pagans rejected the doctrine of Christ's resurrection because they did not see any reason for a resurrection of the body.

The Athenians listened to Paul until he told them of Christ's resurrection, and then they mocked him. If Paul's idea of the resurrection was like that of some twentieth century theologians, it is safe to say that his preaching would not have attracted extraordinary attention, or aroused much opposition among the listeners on Mars' Hill. Their belief in the immortality of the soul was so much like the teaching today, concerning the resurrection, that if Paul had not taught something more than a spiritual emanation from the body, they would not have derided him as they did. This makes it plain that Paul's preaching was radically opposed to the doctrine of the Athenians, and that his teaching differed from theirs in the one great fact of the resurrection of the body.

If Paul had brought to them a message of Christ as a great teacher, they would probably have accepted it. It may be that they would have also listened to the account of his crucifixion. Then, if Paul had said that the soul of this Jesus still lived, and that at the moment he died he had a spiritual resurrection from the body, they would have accepted it all and not have mocked him as they did; for this would have been substantially just what they already believed as to man in death.

These facts seem to make it impossible for us to credit the Scriptures, and not believe in the resurrection of the body of our Lord. It is far better to believe what has abundant Scripture to substantiate it, even if it is beyond our grasp in comprehension, than to believe what is equally inexplicable to us, and unsupportable by even a vestige of Scripture.

Let the Scripture speak for itself, and then, without questioning the "how," let us take up the message of a risen Christ, who is the surety for the resurrection of all his sleeping ones unto eternal life.

Ministerial Meeting of Western Pennsylvania.

BY H. S. REPLOGLE, SECRETARY.

AUG. 22 and 23 the fourteenth annual Ministerial Meeting of Western Pennsylvania convened in the Shade Creek congregation, Scalp Level house. There were about 1,500 people in attendance. The Brethren cared for the meeting splendidly. A good representation of our ministers was present. Our officers are chosen one year ahead. They constitute the program committee, hence they can thus carry out their own program. Our Moderator, Bro. W. M. Howe, knows how to make an interesting meeting.

One of the splendid things done at this meeting was the arranging for a Bible Institute, to be held the first week in December. There were four interesting and helpful sessions,—one missionary, one temperance, and two most helpful ones, emphasizing the influence of the Holy Spirit in Christian work.

Among other things it was said that the need of the church today is more spirituality and less formality. The Spirit-filled Christian and minister goes forth to win souls confidently, enthusiastically,—even in tears, knowing that Christ alone can save the world, but realizing that Christ can not save it alone. Every missionary begins work at home. The source of spiritual strength must come by much praying,—not saying prayers,—in public, in homes and in secret. The family altar is all-important. Parents should pray with and for their children. The home must set the standard for the church and state. No song service becomes worship unless the Spirit directs it.

"The Minister in Business" provoked an interesting discussion. A successful minister in business must have well-defined principles of right. Both supported and self-supporting ministers are needed in the Brethren church.

That a Christian may be a light to the world,—that he may be a consecrated life of service, sacrifice, honesty and virtue,—he must be kind at all times, prompted by a new life within,—born from above. Rites and forms, as given in the teachings of Christ, must be observed as symbols of cleansing, service, and food. Faith, hope and love must be the mainspring of every Christian life.

Surely, these days were mountain-top experiences. We believe that each minister,—in fact, every Christian worker was made the stronger for the valley experiences that must come. Bro. D. H. Walker was elected moderator for 1912. The song service, led by Bro. A. G. Foust, was inspiring. Several male quartets were enjoyed by all.

"Wine Is a Mocker" (Prov. 20: 1).

BY CARRIE E. MININGER.

"Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath contentions? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without a cause? Who hath redness of eyes? They that tarry long at the wine; they that go to seek mixed wine" (Prov. 23: 29, 30).

In a small town, not far from my home, there lived a certain family, to whom the cup of ruin had come with all its blight. The awful destroyer of the soul, mind and body, fastened its clutches upon the head of the family. A wife and two sons are left to mourn the departure of their father. He gave his life, and perhaps his soul, to the great destroyer.

The father worked in a mine, and was stricken by a disease called "miner's asthma." He could find nothing to help him, and gradually grew worse. At last he was compelled to give up work in the mines altogether. One day a friend told him of a remedy that he believed would cure him. He promised to get it for him, if he would like to give it a trial. The sufferer expressed a desire to try it, and the medicine was sent for. When it came the directions said, "The patient positively dare not use any intoxicating drink." His friend would not give it to him unless he promised to abide by the directions, which he promised to do. After taking of the medicine for a week, his health was greatly improved,—more so than he had expected, and because of his unexpected improvement he began to think that "a little whiskey would help too," forgetting his promise. He "tried it" to his sorrow, for almost immediately he grew worse, and continued to decline from day to day until finally his doom was sealed, and he was ushered into eternity.

There are people today, who say, "Whiskey is good for medicine." See how it turned traitor to this man, and sent him to an untimely grave! What it did to him it has done, and is still doing, to thousands of others every day. Such a destroying monster, that has been the cause of poverty, woe and misery in the home, can never become a health restorer. Do you not know that the delusion of liquor is one of the adversary's best devices to further his dreadful plans? He knows that once he can get people to believe that liquor is of benefit in case of sickness, there will not be so much voting and working against it.

There are those now that say they will not vote for it, neither will they vote against it. Let me tell you, "If you do not vote against the liquor traffic, you are counted for it."

Surely, strong drink always brings destruction,—not at the beginning, but "at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder" (Prov. 23: 32).

> 'Tis time to work, oh, heed the call
> Of the brethren who fight King Alcohol.
> Help! Help! Your children are being slain,
> Oh! end the monster's awful reign!

How sad it is to think that some people would give their soul to gain the world, but how awful it is for the drunkard who gives both life and soul for liquor! He does not even obtain the riches and pleasures of this world, but is deprived of all the necessary comforts of life, and in death he has no hope of heaven, for Paul says, "A drunkard shall not inherit the kingdom of heaven" (1 Cor. 6: 10).

Woe is pronounced upon the tempter as well as upon the drunkard. Hab. 2: 15 says, "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken."

I verily believe that the majority of men that have become drunkards got their first drink from one that carried a bottle and offered them a drink.

Where do you stand, you who have brought about some innocent one's destruction by your example or influence? Prov. 28: 10 says, "Whoso causeth the righteous to go astray in an evil way, he shall fall himself into his own pit."

Just take a look at the home of a drunkard. See the poverty and misery they must endure. Notice how his family is neglected! The children must plead and cry for almost everything they get. If they ask for a few cents to buy a little candy, they are thrust aside with an almost inhuman rudeness, but when it comes to satisfying the craving for liquor, down goes a five-dollar bill for drink for himself and others, forgetting all about the poor children that only ask for a few cents.

> Ho! soldiers of God, awake from sleep!
> Press on your solemn vows to keep.
> With the Sword of the Spirit go forth and fight
> For the temperance cause with all your might.
> Help free our land from this foul curse,
> That every day grows worse and worse.

A Few Events.

BY JOHN W. LENTZ.

The Annual Meeting of 1912, the Lord willing, will be held at York, York Co., Pa., in May, and will be the thirty-seventh known to have been held in Pennsylvania since 1779. Among other States where the meetings have been held are Maryland and Ohio,—thirteen in each of these two. In 1779, at Pipe Creek, Md., our first Conference was held, so far as the records show. Since then six have been held at Pipe Creek. As early as 1822 the Conference was held as far west as Canton, Ohio. Virginia and Indiana go hand in hand,—each one has had ten meetings. It was not until 1852 that the Conference was held in Indiana,—at Turkey Creek, Elkhart County. Four years later the Conference took another step towards the West,—into Illinois. Eld. John Kline, of sacred memory, makes mention of the following, in his diary: "Monday, May 5, 1856.—This day I start to the Annual Meeting which is appointed to meet about fourteen miles from Freeport, in Stephenson County, on the extreme north border of Illinois." He also mentions this: "Sunday, May 11.—An immense assembly today." Eld. Henry Kurtz was clerk at this meeting. Six more Conferences have been held in Illinois since then.

We now come to the first one west of the Mississippi River, which was held in Black Hawk County, at Waterloo, Iowa, in 1870. Two more Conferences were held in this State,—at Cedar Rapids in 1892, and at Des Moines in 1908.

Missouri had three: Pertle Springs, 1890; Carthage, 1904; St. Joseph, 1911.

Kansas had three: Bismarck Grove in 1883, and Ottawa in 1887 and 1896.

Besides those mentioned west of the Mississippi River, I shall name Lincoln, Nebraska, 1901, and Los Angeles, Cal., 1902, making eleven west of the Mississippi and 102 east.

Up to and including 1877, our Conferences have been held in large meetinghouses, barns, and private dwellings. Since then they have been held in large tabernacles especially erected for the purpose, or in permanent buildings used for large assemblies.

The Annual Meeting at Harrisonburg, Va., in 1889, was the first one to have delegate representation from the Pacific Coast.

Preparation for the Ministry.

BY JAS. H. MORRIS.

Still a few,—but, we are glad to know, a very few,—men and women oppose education now. Most are aware that Moses and Paul were well educated men,—university men. Moses was learned in all the wisdom of the Egyptians, and Paul was the strongest intellect of his time. When God had rearranged their thoughts, there was a work for them to do. It took Moses forty years, and Paul three years. Not James, nor Peter, nor even John, but Paul was sent into the Roman cities. Each had his work, but Paul went where the greatest thinker was needed.

I hear some one say that God will give a person what he should say, and that, to get information from a worldly source, is contrary to Christ's teaching. If you have read Matt. 10: 19; Mark 13: 11; Luke 12: 11; 21: 14 to apply to you in the pulpit as a preacher, read it once more and see whether you are justified in your conclusion.

Some wait for the inspiration afforded by the spur of the moment, but so many minutes have no spur. Every great extemporaneous speech can be traced back to some time when those thoughts were collected. The Holy Spirit never gives thoughts to a lazy preacher. Careless neglect will ruin a good preacher and will never make a poor one successful. God has promised to supply where our strength fails, but he will never do what we can do for ourselves. "Man's extremity is God's opportunity."

The question, then, comes, What kind and how much preparation is necessary for a minister? One sentence will answer: "He must be made a thinker." If secular work needs thinkers, the church much more. The minister needs the best because "he wrestles against principalities, powers, the rulers of the darkness of this world, and spiritual wickedness in high places." The thinker presents his thoughts in a forceful manner, hence commands the attention of his audience.

When a minister becomes a parrot of other men's thoughts and sermons, he ceases to treat himself right; to be interesting to his audience; and to be pleasing to his Heavenly Father. Use your two talents and they will increase. Open your window and let in God's free light; give God a chance to show what he can make of you.

> "Think for thyself; one good thought,
> But known to be thine own,
> Is better than a thousand,
> Gleaned from fields by others sown."

There seem to be two requirements in developing a thinker. First, the powers of mind must be developed. There are subjects in every school curriculum for that purpose. The mental discipline subjects are: Higher Mathematics, Greek, Logic, Latin, etc.

A preacher must sometimes argue, hence he needs to know the laws which govern such a discourse, but, more than that, he must have a mind that is fully disciplined in going through those intricacies. What will better fit him for such work, than one of those long solutions in trigonometry, geometry, or a long sentence in Latin or Greek? Sometimes he will have to speak extemporaneously and if he has not a disciplined mind, it will not respond.

Sometimes the minister has to meet the intellectual giant, and he can not do it with an undeveloped mind. Every great thinker has gone through some rigid mental discipline. Not all have been through a college or a university but all have had much mental training in some other line.

My advice, of course, would be to take a course in some good Christian College. If that is impossible, train your mind, and subject it to severe tests. No mind develops unless it is used, and the more rigidly it is used (within bounds) the more rapid strides it will make. Remember that the mind is almost unlimited in its power, if properly trained, but if misused, in a moment it may be ruined.

The next question is, What to study? The facts of history are important to know. History helps to interpret the present situation for the minister. What have been the trials of the "Old Book"? How did it come out from them? Are there any writings contemporary with the Bible? These answers from history strengthen the minister's confidence in it. Many of the facts can better be interpreted when he knows history. Study Bible and secular history, and the facts of science. A preacher ought to be a scientific man.

You say, "What, study science?" Yes, don't be afraid of science, but be careful of the quack scientist. You ought to have some Christian man as your teacher,—one who is capable of seeing its relation to God's Word, and who can see that scientific laws are God's laws and cannot conflict with God's Word. Some of the preacher's richest stores of illustrations are from science.

The facts of human nature. A preacher is handicapped if he does not know humanity. He must constantly deal with them as human beings. He may gain knowledge from books, as psychology and sociology, or from studying human nature at first hand, as he finds it. A person is always interested in another person, hence he can readily get material for illustration among people. The Southerner says: "Get acquainted with folks."

The works of nature. It is next to impossible to preach while you are ignorant of nature. Many of Christ's parables and illustrations are taken from nature. One of the strong proofs of God is found in nature. We do not want any one to go off into Pantheism by his study of nature, but God is there and every preacher should recognize that, and be able to make use of it, both in strengthening his brethren and meeting the infidel.

The most important book is the Bible. The preacher must know that. A man with a college education only, can not preach as God would have him preach. A man with only an intellectual knowledge of God, can not preach effectively. He must have a heart knowledge too. Christ is not only an historical Christ but a saving Christ. The preacher must know him as a Savior of men,—himself as an example. No preacher can give to his people what he does not have.

Brother minister, you must know the Book. It is your weapon against your enemy; your comfort for your friend; your spur for the careless, your consolation for the diligent; your treasure for the young; your companion for the aged. A minister ought to know the number and location of the books; when written; as much of the surroundings as possible; something of the author, as to his ability. He should know the Bible as a history of redemption; as a traveler's map; as a pilgrim's staff; as a pilot's compass; as a soldier's sword; as a true history; as an inspired record; as a light to guide the feet; as food for the support of the hungry; as a comfort for the troubled ones.

Do you know the Book? Nothing can take the place of a knowledge of it. How much time do you spend in its study? If you have five hours each day, use four of them in studying the Bible, and one with the other books. It's your store; know it.

One more phase of the preparation,—how to express your thoughts. Two things, yet in one,—your appearance and language. It is very unnatural to appear before an audience, hence a man must learn that, too. Do you spoil your message by your appearance? Can you appear at home in the pulpit? Do you have to look at the floor, ceiling, or in a corner when you talk? All these must be overcome so that the audience forget the speaker in listening to the message.

Now as to his language. A preacher has no license to maltreat the English language and give it to his audience in such bits as: "I seen my duty and done it." "I had saw you settin' there, doing nothin', so I 'lowed you might go." There is no piety in crippled English, nor pride in pure English. If you are a good thinker, you deserve a hearing and the audience asks that you present it acceptably. They have a perfect right to expect it, too. God's teachings deserve the best presentation possible. A preacher should not make them so that they could be understood, but so that they could not be misunderstood. Dr. Hawes says: "Have something to say that you are convinced is true, then learn to say it skilfully."

In short; get something to say and then say it in the most effective way. The best education is none too good for you. "Study as though all depended upon you, and pray as though all depended upon God."

Speaking Disrespectfully of the Church.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

I KNOW whereof I speak when I say that there are a great many young people who refuse to unite with the church because of the light in which it is held up before them by their parents. The uncomplimentary remarks made concerning the church by some fathers and mothers, even though they claim membership, have created, to a certain extent, within the minds of their children, an antipathy to a Christian profession. Evidently, some parents little think how destructive it is to the spiritual welfare of their children to parade the faults of the preacher or of certain members of the laity before their minds while in the formative period of life.

If any of our brethren have made mistakes, it should be taken as a matter of course that "to err is human," and that mistakes are nothing more than we can reasonably expect. While we should not try to cover up sins, or apologize for them, neither should we talk about the faults of our brethren in such a way as will create, within the minds of our children, a distaste for the church and her interests. There is a way of talking about the faults of others (if it be necessary to talk about them) which will have the effect of winning either sympathy or pity for them.

The experienced evangelist frequently hears the cry, "Hypocrites in the church." This cry or assertion seldom comes from the lips of young people because they have personally discovered hypocrisy within the pales of the Christian church, but because of information given them by their parents. Possibly it is a logical deduction with them, drawn from what father and mother have said concerning some brother or sister.

Again; parents sometimes discuss too freely the unpleasant, and possibly unchristian features of some council, they should, under no conditions, be made vested or unchristian remarks were made in any church council, they should, under no conditions be made subjects for discussion in the home, or in society. There are, I fear, many who err in this respect. Such errors should be scrupulously avoided, as there is possibly nothing more effective, in incensing the sinner, either young or old, against the church as a body of people than to hear that one member has abused or maltreated another. Malevolence, on the part of any Christian professor, is repugnant both in the sight of God and man.

May God help us to exemplify the Christ-life in all we do! If a brother or sister commits a wrong, let us not advertise it, but deal with them as the Lord directs us in his Word.

Scalp Level, Pa.

This brings us to the consideration of the easy yoke and light burden of Jesus Christ. What is our estimate of it? Is the yoke easy or is it hard? Christ says it is easy, and he should know. He does know, and yet there are those among us who think it is hard. Either such Christians make a hard yoke out of an easy one, or they are made to bear yokes that he has not meant for them to bear. Both of these conditions are possible. There are those who are inclined to chafe and scringe under the very easy yoke of Christ. Then there are those who say that they willingly and gladly bear the yoke that Christ imposes, but they seem to think that there are yokes imposed which are not ordained of Christ, and this, in their estimation, makes them doubly heavy.

Of these two conditions we should be quite sure where the trouble is before we do any grumbling. The yoke of Christ, we know, is easy because he says so. We ought to feel it an honor to be yoked with him in his service. We are not asked to take the yoke to bear heavy burdens, but to take it at his side, to do some part in his loving service. If we are at one end of the yoke, and do not feel and realize that Christ is at the other end, helping to draw the load, there is something wrong and, of course, the yoke will be hard and galling. To every Christian yoke there must be two, side by side, and these two must work and pull together to make a good team and a light burden. We are to be true yoke-fellows with Jesus Christ. Then, indeed, is the yoke easy and the burden light.

On the other hand, the church of Christ has no burdens to impose, and no yoke to offer. Therefore, anything that the church has to offer or suggest must not be presented as a yoke and burden, but as a help to prepare the child of God to be a true yoke-fellow with Jesus Christ.

Jesus Christ came not into the world as a burden-maker, but a burden-bearer. "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden," —tired and burdened down, ready to faint and sink down under a burden too heavy to bear. Why does he ask such to come to him? So that they may be unburdened. "And I will give you rest." As an additional encouragement to sin-burdened souls, he says: You have been bearing Satan's yoke and drawing his burdens. His yoke is galling and his burden is too heavy for you. Come to me; take my yoke upon you. I will make it easy for you, and the load to be drawn I will make light. So Jesus says, and what he says is right and true.

Then let us get away from the idea of the church imposing yokes upon its members, and making heavy burdens to bear and pull. This is not the mission of the church of Jesus Christ. The church was organized and is perpetuated as a fold, as a home into which God's children enter as they are born into the new life. It is a home of peace, love and mutual good will. It is a place where the children are nourished and built up, that they may be able to do good and loving service for the Master.

EVERGREEN CHURCH, VIRGINIA.

The Evergreen church has just enjoyed a feast of good things. Bro. W. H. Sanger, our District Sunday-school Secretary, assisted by his father, Eld. S. A. Sanger, held a three-days' Sunday-school Institute, beginning on the evening of Aug. 16, and closing Aug. 19.

The meeting was indeed an inspiration to the Sunday-school workers at this place. This being the first meeting of the kind ever held in the Mount Carmel congregation, every one seemed to take great interest. Not only our members, but the people of the community took part. A number expressed themselves that the institute was the most helpful meeting they had ever attended.

The meetings grew in attendance each day until Saturday, when the house was filled to overflowing. An offering of $5.72 was taken in behalf of the District Sunday-school Board. Bro. Sanger visited several of the Sunday-schools in this congregation before going home.

Bro. W. H. Zigler, of Bridgewater, Va., began preaching at the same place Aug. 14, and was with us during the Sunday-school Institute. He labored earnestly and faithfully until Aug. 27. Bro. Zigler is young in the cause, but full of zeal and of the Spirit. His discourses were broad and deep, and largely along the line of building up the church of Christ. There were no immediate additions to the church, but the members have been greatly encouraged and strengthened.

Bro. Zigler made many friends during his stay among us, both in the church and outside of the church, especially among our young people. We trust that the good seed sown will produce a bountiful harvest.

Bro. Zigler was with us in a few meetings in the Mountain Grove Chapel, where Bro. S. H. Flory, of Nokesville, Va., began preaching Aug. 21. Bro. Flory is a man of power, and not afraid to declare the whole Gospel. Thirteen precious souls have already come out on the Lord's side, and many are near the kingdom. The meetings will continue through the week.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEETING OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

Tuesday, Aug. 22, the Sunday-schools of Northern Indiana convened at the Goshen City church in their annual District Convention. The large audience which gathered was typical, in a number of ways, of the field and institution it represented. Workers were present from nearly all of the schools, thirty-seven of the fifty-one schools, composing the District being represented by appointed delegates, who responded to roll call with "The Best Thing in the Sunday-school." This proved to be a feature of the program lending much inspiration; also rich food for thought. Many and varied were the things mentioned as being best in the various schools, yet through all ran the thought that everywhere there are those of the quiet, loyal, zealous workers, doing their work as unto the Lord.

We had the privilege of having with us Sister Winnie Cripe, who this month goes to the field in China as a missionary from this District. Many a heart was made to well up with a desire for a more complete consecration to the Lord, as our sister spoke so earnestly and with so great a vision on the subject, "The Sunday-school a World Power," of which power her life testifies, and stands as an example. The schools of the District have heretofore been supporting one missionary on the foreign field, and when the question, "Shall we not support two workers?" was presented to the Convention, the vote was unanimous in favor of doing so.

One thing especially deserving of mention,—and one which never fails to attract attention,—is the large statistical chart which our District Secretary annually places before the workers assembled. On this chart are placed the statistics of all our churches and schools within the District, together with the following statistics from each: Number of teacher-training classes, amount given for missions, total offering, number of teachers and officers, number on cradle roll, number in home department, enrollment in Sunday-school, number of pupils converted, and amount given to special fund for the support of missionary on foreign field.

This gives us an idea as to our size as a District, our relative standing in schools, an idea of the work we are doing, and the improvements made, as told in actual figures.

THE ROUND TABLE

Against Infant Baptism.

A WRITER in a late issue of the Christian Standard gives ten reasons against infant baptism, as follows:

1. Infant baptism is without the authority of God, Christ or the Holy Spirit.

2. Having no divine authority, to do it "in the name of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit" is to take God's name in vain.

3. It is a faithless act. "Whatsoever is not of faith is sin."

4. It establishes a false standard of membership for the churches, and brings into them a large number of unregenerated persons, and, to that extent, defeats the real work of the church.

5. It is deceptive, leading those baptized in infancy to believe their sins were washed away—thus teaching a water salvation.

6. It helps to perpetuate the divisions in the church, and thus makes impossible the salvation of the world.

7. In its actual practice it hinders many from obeying their Lord in baptism.

8. Nothing in state or church, of any value whatever, rests upon it.

9. It is of no temporal or spiritual value to the child.

10. The great scholars of the churches practicing it do not claim for it Scriptural authority.

"Since baptism marked the entrance into communion with Christ, it resulted from the nature of the rite that a confession of faith in Jesus as the Redeemer would be made by the person to be baptized . . . As baptism was closely united with a conscious entrance on Christian communion, faith and baptism were always connected with one another; and thus it is in the highest degree probable that baptism was performed only in the instances where both could meet together, and that the practice of infant baptism was unknown at this period. . . . That not till so late a period as (at least certainly not earlier than) Irenæus, a trace of infant baptism appears."—A. Neander.

Bible Study.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

THERE are three ways of Bible study:

1. That of looking up texts,—comparing them with similar texts. This way brings a little information from the Book, and gives power to entertain, to some extent.

2. A general reading of the Book, which enables one to say a great deal and to talk fluently about the Bible. This method, mixed with a good deal of world-information and world-living, makes a man seem very great.

3. The study of the "Book" by books and chapters, and a close observation of the predictions of God, as well as the promises, and a willingness to see the warnings as well as the comforts, will make the student a full man, a man who fears God, fears to break the simplest rule of the church, fears to disobey one item of grace, loves all men, warns against admixtures of good and evil, even when the evil seems very good to others.

It is not the open and glaring evils that captivate many members, but the insidious admixtures, the half-religious "hurrah" methods, which make people praise themselves upon what they denominate "great progress" and world-wide salvation.

Another great advantage of the third method of study is, that you avoid being fashioned by the fragments given out by certain self-organized bodies,—little pieces here and there, disconnected from their true relations. How easily we are led when we ought to be teachers! Will we ever be true reformers and get back to ALL the Book,—get back to the Holy Ghost system and arrangement? And when will we get back to the apostolic method of NOT rushing headlong into questionable methods of money-getting, and think more and better thoughts of making a life in Christ? Study the Book by true methods, by books, chapters and exegesis. Compare scripture with scripture, as did Paul.

Christian Giving.

BY SISTER I. F. BETTS.

So much is being written upon this subject, in this age, that many readers believe the theme has been almost exhausted. When a mere glance at the headlines suggests a loosening of purse-strings, many people instinctively pass by all such articles, or close the book.

But there is another phase of the question, outside of dollars and cents. Did you ever think of giving your religion? It has been wisely said that "religion is the only commodity, of which the more we give away, the more we have left."

Perhaps you are filled with the love of God, and feel that the Holy Spirit dwells within you, but does it find expression in your life?

Perhaps you have faith in the promises of God for an eternal inheritance, but is this faith enshrined within your heart, and cherished selfishly as a possession all your own, or are you letting its radiance shine out to others?

Perhaps you believe there is a blessing in giving "even a cup of cold water in the name of a disciple," but does your neighbor know you believe it?

Perhaps you believe that Christ died to save sinners, and that, by obedience to his Word, you may have a right to the tree of Life, but do those around you see some sweet joy expressed in your life? Do they see a living faith, and a hope beyond?

Let us, by our lives, give expression to our Christian faith, proclaiming it to others even "as bread cast upon the waters," that we may with joy look forward to the time when Christ shall say, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

Jottings From My Diary.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

FROM various sources I gleaned the following:

It is allowable for us to differ in our opinions,—this was frequent in the life and struggle of the apostles,—but in faith we must be united,—be one! It is our faith to which Paul alludes when he says: "I beseech you brethren, . . . that ye all speak the same thing, and that there be no divisions among you; but that ye be perfectly joined together in the same mind and in the same judgment." Of faith, there is but one.

"What we give away we keep, and what we keep we lose," is a paradox, a seeming absurdity, yet it is true. This saying is true in literature. A young man goes to school, works hard and completes his education. He decides that he is going to keep his education. He selfishly refuses to give it away. He bids others to go and work as he has done, and they, too, will have an education as he has. The inevitable result will be that he will lose his education; but if, on the other hand, he is liberal with his education, in giving it away, he will keep it; for what we give away in literature we keep, and what we keep we lose.

The same fact is true of our religion. "What we give away we keep, and what we keep we lose." The brother that has not given away any love, patience or good will, for six months or a year, I fear, has none of these Christian graces left, but the brother that has been giving away freely the graces of love, patience and good will, is richly provided with these graces; for "what we give away we keep, and what we keep we lose."

Why Live so Fast?

We are living too fast in this age. We try to make Methuselahs in a month and we often kill them in the making. We are living in an electric age—much of our health rides off in electric cars, motorcycles and automobiles. We get so worried and eat so fast we ruin our stomachs. Sit down now and take your breath, promise God that you will not live more than seven days in the week and no more than twenty-four hours to the day. Let the world run away as fast and as far as it will, you quiet down and it will come back to see what you are doing. It only makes the circle anyhow and it will get back where you are, by and by. God save us from this American disease of feverish, fretful haste and strenuousity!—Rain's Horn.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

A Worth-While Man.

1 Tim. 2: 8; Heb. 10: 22-24.

For Sunday Evening, October 1, 1911.

After crossing the Red Sea, the Israelites soon came near the border of Canaan. Moses called a halt and appointed a committee of twelve to go up and spy out the land. Our lesson text has to do with their report and Caleb's proposition to "go up at once." Then Caleb is presented in contrast.

I. Caleb's Character.—"My [God's] servant" (v. 24). (1) Caleb knew God; consented to his claims, and obeyed his commands. (2) Angels are such. Jesus became such. All good men are such.

II. Caleb's Spirit.—"Another spirit" (v. 24). Different from the other spies. (1) Theirs was cowardly—his courageous. (2) Theirs, distrustful—his believing. (3) Theirs, selfish—his self-denying. Caleb's faithfulness was the outgrowth of the spirit he had with him. It is so now.

III. His Course.—"He followed . . . fully" (v. 24). (1) He lived in God's sight. (2) He did all to the glory of God. (3) He advanced—"followed"—went on—progressed. (4) He "followed . . . fully"—undivided heart. (5) He did so to the end—until death.

IV. His Reward.—(1) God publicly honored him. "But my servant" (v. 24). (2) Insured him possession. "Him will I bring into the land." (3) Blesses his children for his sake. "His seed shall possess it."

Note.—(1) In all ages religion has been personal. Hearty devotedness also tells on our children. (2) Caleb rose up as an example—lofty, pure, steady, constant. (3) Pray for loyal obedience in each Worker, saying, "Nevertheless, not my will, but thine be done."

PRAYER MEETING

The Supreme Test.

John 21: 15-17; 1 Cor. 13: 1-13.

For Week Beginning October 1, 1911.

1. Love the Highest Test of Discipleship.—We want to know if we are Christians. Here, then, is the real test, "Lovest thou me?" Everything is included in this question. It goes to the core of Christian experience. It implies a relation intensely personal,—a personal love of a personal Savior, "Lovest thou me?" We are to infer that there is something in Christ which, when known, will attract and hold the human heart to himself. Not only is Christ's character one of ideal excellence,—lovely and lovable,—but in his ideal goodness he is the supreme Benefactor of the race. He is the world's Redeemer. In all that lies between Bethlehem and Calvary we see the reason why the world's love should be his (2 Cor. 5: 14, 15; Philip. 1: 9-11).

2. Christ Demands Supreme Love.—"Dost thou love me more than these?"—asks Christ, implying, "Dost thou love me more than thy fellow-disciples love me?" Having been forgiven much, dost thou love much? It is not enough to love Jesus,—we must love him better than all else. It must be the master passion,—the dominant power in our lives. Is it? Is Jesus the lover of our souls, the chief thought of our minds? Do we love him supremely? Is he "all the world" to us (1 John 5: 1, 5, 10, 11, 20).

3. Love Is the Highest Qualification for Service.—When Jesus was assured of Peter's love, he entrusted him with the feeding of his flock, for he had now something with which to nourish them. He had the first qualification for an under-shepherd,—love! Love is more than learning, more than eloquence, more than aught else. It is the one indispensable thing in our Christ-directed service to humanity. "If thou lovest me," says Jesus, "then go to work and feed my sheep and lambs." Let supreme love lead to supreme service (Eph. 4: 31, 32).

HOME AND FAMILY

Perfect Through Suffering.

SELECTED BY MARY A. GIGAX.

God never would send you the darkness,
If he felt you could bear the light.
But you would not cling to his guiding hand
If the way were always bright;
And you would not care to walk by faith,
Could you always walk by sight.

'Tis true, he has many an anguish,
Your sorrowful heart to bear,
And many a cruel thorn crown
For your tired head to wear,
He knows how few would reach heaven at all,
If pain did not guide them there.

So he sends you the blinding darkness,
And the furnace of seven-fold heat;
'Tis the only way, believe me,
To keep close unto his feet.
For 'tis always so easy to wander,
When our lives are glad and sweet,

Then nestle your hand in your Father's,
And sing if you can, as you go;
Your song may cheer some one behind you,
Whose courage is sinking low.
And, well, if your lips do quiver,
God will love you the better so.

Those Two Boys.

BY J. G. ROYER.

Two boys from equally good homes start out in life. One is of the free-and-easy sort. He is easily turned about by the influence of his friends, or by the circumstances that come in contact with his life. The other, while not ignoring the opinions of others, thinks for himself, and, once having formed a decision, keeps it ever before him. This boy enjoys independence of thought and action, while the other is led in whatever direction his associates may be going.

Now, if those, with whom the free-and-easy-going boy is associating, were always in the right, and striving for the best, there would be no great danger in this. But experience teaches that evil influences are ever creeping in; and wrong impulses are making their force felt. It is because of these that a course like this is sure to lead toward failure and regret.

The other boy firmly stands for what his conscience tells him is right and true and wise. He is not hampered by the want of judgment or by the bad intentions of others. He decides for himself, and directs his own actions. It is true he may, at times, err in judgment. He does sometimes err in judgment, but this is an error that may be corrected and so be remedied. At the worst, there will be fewer mistakes in the life of the boy who has before him the intention and the determination to be right and do the right, than where the boy depends upon the whims of his fickle-minded associates. The boy who relies upon others for his opinions and judgments, is the victim not only of his own mistakes in judgment, but also of the mistakes of those he looks to for guidance; while the one who depends upon himself has only the consequences of his own errors to fear. The one is independent; the other has, so to speak, no will, no course of action, no accomplishments, save as the privilege to secure them comes to him through others.

All boys should be thoroughly awake to the following facts: First, that it is easy to drift with the current; and second, that safety demands that there be some independence in character and action. There must be striving against opposition and wrong influences. Strength comes from effort; and often the greatest power and strength result from striving against odds. All boys should know this and should act accordingly. The one who starts with the determination to go straight ahead, no matter whether the drift of popular opinion is with him or in the opposite direction, is pretty certain of success; because such a course is sure to develop a character of strength and usefulness. And the building of such a character is the business,—the most important business of a boy's life.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

Save the Homeless Waif for Christ and the Church.

BY ETHEL KINNEY.

"Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me" (Matt. 25: 40).

BUT are we doing as much for the least of these as we should? Think of the little waifs in all of our cities that we could save if we would get awake and open our hearts and purses a little wider, and be a little more willing to help in this great cause! Look at our little ones, with their happy, smiling faces and well-cared for bodies, and then think of the little waifs cast out on life's stormy sea, roaming the streets from morning till night, ragged and dirty, eating from the refuse of the garbage cans, thrown in contact with every form of vice and sin! They never know what a good meal is nor are they favored with a decent bed. Their little forms are wasted to a mere skeleton from starvation.

Is it any wonder, that, when raised up in this way, they become the vilest, most degraded men and women? Is it any wonder that our prisons and insane asylums are full to overflowing? They will remain thus as long as we are indifferent, and turn deaf ears to the cry of the homeless child. We must awake to a sense of our duty, and strive harder to save them and place them into good Christian homes, where they will come in touch with religious influences. We can not expect to better the condition that now exists without sacrifice. As long as we sit complacently by, while the collection box is being passed, and only throw in a few pennies, or perhaps a dollar or so, and think we have done our share of the work, just that long will there be hundreds of little ones lost to all that is pure, noble and uplifting, each day.

Let us, then, strive harder to save them for the Master's vineyard, even if we have to go without some longed-for luxury. Think what one of these little ones is worth, and see if you can estimate its worth in dollars and cents. Remember, one precious little soul is worth more than all the wealth of this world! Immortal souls are lost every day because we have been so selfish, and have done so little to help save them! We are so self-centered,—only mindful of our own comforts. We shrink from sacrificing in the least. But if we are to save these little ones for Christ and the church, we must sacrifice. We must throw our whole heart and soul into the work and do without some of the comforts of this life, for the benefit of these poor, unfortunate little lambs.

Think of the money spent each day for useless things! There are those who never know a wish ungratified,—who live in luxury all their lives,—and, when told of the pitiful condition existing in the slums of our cities, fail to comprehend what a lamentable condition exists there. They do not take any thought of the little lambs going astray farther and farther into vice and sin each day. But there will come a time when we will be called to account for the lost we could have saved. It will be too late then to rectify our neglect and indifference. Let us be up and about our Father's business, and do all things to his name's honor and glory!

The Bible.

This Book contains the mind of God, the state of man, the way of salvation, the doom of sinners and the happiness of believers. Its doctrines are holy, its precepts are binding, its histories are true, and its decisions are immutable. Read it to be wise, believe it to be safe, and practice it to be holy. It contains light to direct you, food to support you and comfort to cheer you. It is the traveler's map, the pilgrim's staff, the pilot's compass, the soldier's sword, and the Christian's charter. Here Paradise is restored, heaven opened, and the gates of hell disclosed. Christ is its grand object, our good its design, and the glory of God its end. It should fill the memory, rule the heart and guide the feet. Read it slowly, frequently and prayerfully. It is a mine of wealth, a Paradise of glory and a river of pleasure. It is given you in life, will be opened in the judgment, and will be remembered forever. It involves the highest responsibility, will reward the greatest labor and will condemn all who trifle with its sacred contents.

Paste in your Bible, and commit to memory.

Silent Years.

GIRLS," John Robertson looked at his sisters almost sternly, "do you know that you have got used to mother's deafness?"

"Used to it? What do you mean, John?"

"I mean that you have grown so accustomed to her being out of nearly all conversation that you forget what a deprivation it is to her. Why, when I was talking with her about all these six years that I've been abroad, I found out that she didn't know a lot of family gossip that I—away across the ocean—had got from letters. Mother, who used to be at very head and beginning of everything in the house, has grown into an outsider almost—an onlooker, at any rate. That patient, absent smile of hers takes most all the joy out of my home-coming."

"We do try to tell her things, but she so often misunderstands and gets facts confused that I suppose we have grown a little negligent perhaps about relating the small, unimportant matters. You know, John, it's awfully wearing having to scream trifles at the top of one's voice." Marian smiled rather apologetically, but her brother still looked severe.

"Why haven't you tried to get something that would help her to hear?" he asked.

"She did have an ear-trumpet, but it seemed to make her nervous and uncomfortable," answered Jessie.

"So you never tried anything else? You know there are a number of inventions for aiding the deaf. We'll have her test every one of them until she gets some help."

Somehow, although none of the first contrivances that John brought to his mother proved efficacious, a brighter look came into her face. Perhaps it was the constant, cheery society of her big, broad-shouldered son that brought back some of the old sparkle to her eyes and made her smiles less wan and more happy.

At last a little electrical device was discovered which, pinned on her blouse and connected with her ear, made it quite possible to converse with her in an ordinary speaking voice, and John, elated at his success, proudly led his mother to the piano.

"You haven't made any music for me since I came home," he said. "Give us that good old song you used to play for us youngsters!"

"I haven't touched the piano for five years, John. It was no use when I couldn't hear."

"But maybe you can now, mother."

She sat down at the instrument and with rather uncertain fingers played the first few bars of the old song. Then she stopped, and looking at John with wonder and surprise, exclaimed:

"I heard every note, every note, my son, and it's been so long, so long!"

She leaned against the piano and burst into tears—such unrestrained weeping as her daughters had never seen before.

John sat down on the piano bench beside her, and gently raised her head until it rested on his shoulder. His sisters looked at each other with misty eyes.

"We never understood," murmured Jessie brokenly.

LABORERS of Christ—lift up your heads. Be not dismayed or disheartened. . . . God is for us: who can be against us? The mountain is full of horses and chariots of fire and we must not trust the carnal vision to which spiritual forces are invisible and unreal. The only way to do any work for the unseen God is to work as well as walk by faith and not by sight—to believe that beyond the range our short vision and finite observation stretch limitless realms of truth and fact. Behind all work for God stands God himself, its inspiration and its assurance, its warrant and its reward. Let us believe that his command constitutes authority and his promise security, and in that faith to the end dare to do our duty.—A. T. Pierson.

IT has been decided to organize a second congregation in Kansas City, Kans.

BRO. D. F. LANDIS, of North Dakota, wishes us to announce that his address has been changed from Williston to Minot.

BRO. GALEN B. ROYER is engaged in a series of meetings in the Prairie City church, Iowa, expecting to continue a few weeks.

BRO. E. J. SMITH has been selected to represent Oklahoma, Panhandle of Texas and New Mexico, on the Standing Committee.

As the fruits of a series of meetings at the Fairview church, Md., conducted by Bro. Emra T. Fike, seven were baptized Sept. 9.

AT the late District Meeting of Northern Missouri Bro. G. W. Ellenberger was chosen a member of the Standing Committee for 1912.

BRO. GEO. MANON, of Gypsum City, Kans., is engaged for a series of meetings, the latter part of October, in Sabetha, his State.

THE members composing the Danville congregation, Ohio, are arranging to dedicate their church about the first Sunday in November.

THE church at Williams Creek, Oregon, is to be dedicated next Sunday morning. The feast, to have been held the 30th, is deferred to Oct. 7.

BRO. JOHN W. MILLER is doing some effectual work at the Midway church, Va. He reports seventeen baptized and ten awaiting the rite.

BRO. HARVEY M. BAREDOLL and wife, of Naperville, Ill., started to Glendora, Cal., last week, where they are planning to remain at least two winters.

DURING a series of meetings in the Poplar Grove church, Ohio, conducted by Bro. J. D. Mishler, sixteen were born into the kingdom, and one is yet to be baptized.

THE District Meeting of Southern Indiana, to be held in the Ladoga church, is announced for Oct. 19. The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meeting convene Oct. 17 and 18.

The Inglenook for Sept. 19 comes out in a new dress—a decided improvement over the past. The make-up and tone of the journal show progress. We commend these upward steps.

As the immediate fruits of some meetings held by Bro. F. D. Anthony, six were added to the Antietam congregation, Pa. Two others entered the fold before these meetings began.

BRETHREN D. Warren Shock, of Minot, N. Dak., and D. H. Keller, of Winona, Minn., were with us over last Lord's Day, the former preaching in the morning and the latter in the evening. Their addresses were well received. On Monday they visited the Publishing House and saw the plant in full operation. Bro. Keller was accompanied by his wife.

BRO. D. M. ADAMS is in the midst of a revival meeting in the Maple Spring congregation, Pa. His next meeting will be in the Summit Mills church, same State.

BAPTISM was recently administered to six young people, who applied for membership during a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Geo. Mishler, at the Libertyville church, Ind.

THE elders of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado are instructed to meet Oct. 4 at the residence of Bro. J. H. Kinzie, one-fourth mile west of the Belleville church, Kans.

FOR the want of space the love feasts announced last week will not be found in this issue. All of the new announcements, however, are given on page 608. Next week we shall publish the list in full.

AN excellent revival at Mountain Grove Chapel, Va., conducted by Bro. S. H. Flory, closed with thirty-nine putting on Christ in baptism. One was restored to the fold, and three await the initiatory rite.

CONCERNING Bro. Moses Deardorff, who is now at Lenox, Iowa, in a series of meetings, we are asked to say that his time is fully arranged for until the end of the year. In spite of his age, he is still doing a splendid work among the churches.

WE shall soon publish the program for the Ministerial, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado, to be held at Belleville, Kans., Oct. 5 and 7. The District Meeting will convene on the 6th.

YOUR office editor had the pleasure of worshiping with the members at Naperville, this State, last Sunday morning. We found them cheerful and thoroughly interested in the work of the church. Bro. I. C. Snavely is the pastor in charge, and is doing good work.

WE have a good report from Manchester College,—crowded out of this issue, but will appear next week,—stating that the school opened with an enrollment of 138 the first week, being the largest number of students for the fall term known in the history of the institution.

BRO. PETER FORNEY, now almost eighty-three years old, writes us from his home in Glendale, Ariz., saying that he is favored with better health than he has enjoyed for fifty years. He is still able to preach twice a day and gets as much out of life as most people of half his years.

SEVERAL well-prepared doctrinal addresses were recently delivered by Bro. D. R. McFadden, in the Wooster church, Ohio. Seven applied for membership. Addresses, like those given on the occasion, always put a lot of people to thinking along right lines, and are certain to result in good.

FOR the benefit of correspondents, who seem to have forgotten or overlooked what we said some time ago, we again state, that we do not publish programs for joint Sunday-school or Christian Workers' Meetings. This privilege is limited to programs in which a State, or a State District is represented.

AT the ordination service in Chicago, one week ago, we witnessed conditions that are unusual for the Brethren church. Among those who cast their vote in favor of ordaining the three missionaries were two colored members and several Chinamen. It did our Chinese brethren good to think that they were helping to prepare missionaries for efficient work in their native land. It will be many a day before they forget this special service.

THE large congregation at North Manchester, Ind., has been divided. The west part of the territory is to be known as the North Manchester church, and the city part as the Manchester church. Bro. A. L. Wright having resigned, Bro. Otho Winger was chosen as elder in charge of the former, and Bro. S. S. Blough as elder in charge of the latter. The city church, or more properly, Manchester church, contains over 300 members. We are not advised as to the number in the other congregation.

UNDER date of Sept. 13 Bro. D. L. Miller writes us from Wenatchee, Wash., saying that he is having a splendid time among the Brethren in the Northwest. After visiting Seattle and a few other points, he will return home, reaching Mount Morris about the first of October. And, by the way, he will round out the seventieth year of his pilgrimage Oct. 5. He will then know how it feels to be seventy years old.

BRO. D. F. HOOVER, of Middletown, Ind., president of the Mission Board of Southern Indiana, gave the House a call on his way home from a trip in the West. He spent a month visiting among friends in Ray County, Mo.; Bethel, Kans., South English, Iowa, and other points; and also did some preaching while on the trip. This was his first visit to the House since we located in Elgin. We were glad for his call.

BRO. I. S. LONG and wife are expected to arrive in New York soon after the middle of October. Friends wishing to address them on arrival, can do so as follows: Care of Cunard Steamship Company, Incoming S. S. Pannonia, Oct. 19, New York City. Bro. Long will probably visit all the churches in the Virginias before his return to India, and possibly may be able to reach a few congregations outside of the State.

BRO. WALTER J. BARNHART, 1210 Twenty-fifth Avenue North, Minneapolis, Minn., is arranging to close his labors as pastor with the church in that city at the end of October. Under the direction of the District Mission Board he has spent over four years with the Mission, and would have retired some time ago, but the way was not open for so doing. He is planning to enter the evangelistic field, and those desiring his service should address him as above, until further notice.

CORRESPONDENTS who ask us to announce dates for meetings should use the utmost care in naming such dates. We often find conflicts that require considerable time and labor to adjust. A correspondent may say that the District, Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings, for a stated District, will be held on certain specified dates. For these meetings three days may be named, but no definite day is named for the District Meeting. So we are left to decide what date should be entered among the standing announcements. While we are fairly good at guessing, in matters of this sort, still we are not past making mistakes. The better way is for writers to be sure of their dates before sending them for publication.

THE Secretary for the York Chamber of Commerce, Eugene F. Weiser, York, Pa., sends us a neat little booklet, setting forth facts relating to the history, growth, population, etc., of the city in which the Annual Meeting for 1912 is to be held. We are sure that the booklet, which may be had by asking, would interest some of those who are planning to attend the York Conference. Mr. Weiser writes us that the Chamber of Commerce solicits the coöperation of our people in working out the details necessary for the event. He also says that the business people of York extend a most hearty welcome to those who will attend the meeting. The city has a population of 45,000, and we are assured that ample provisions will be made to take care of our people during the Conference week.

BRO. J. W. LEAR, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., who is naturally a fine critic, and reads the MESSENGER with unusual care, has this to say: "The MESSENGER grows better. The standard of the paper is high. I have examined a number of religious periodicals, and count the MESSENGER, for tone and richness, above them all." "But," he goes on to say: "there is room for improvement, not so much in the construction of the paper as in the grade of the material found in the productions." While he thinks this is no fault of the editors, he adds this true statement: "No paper can be stronger than its contributors." We are glad for this criticism, though it was not intended as such. It may prompt all of those, who help to make the MESSENGER, to strive for a higher grade in their work. However well our work may be done, there is always room for improvement.

Those who visited the Northwest fifteen or twenty years ago, and now travel that way again, are filled with wonder and surprise at the marvelous development that has taken place in a few short years. Villages have grown into large, prosperous towns, and the latter into busy cities. Large, modern farmhouses have taken the place of the shack, dugout and sod-house, and the virgin prairie is yielding generous crops of wheat, oats, barley and flax. What was once thought to be a frozen, blizzard-swept wasthetic territory, has become noted as a grain-producing empire.

Our first stop was at the Twin City of Minneapolis, where the Brethren have established a Mission, now in charge of Bro. Walter J. Barnhart, assisted by Sister Bertha Brunskill. We met with the members twice on the Lord's Day, and had a spiritual feast together. The membership is small in numbers, but seems to be a body of earnest men and women. Here, as in other cities, it requires hard work to carry forward, successfully, the Mission. Brother and Sister Barnhart with their helper, are doing good work, and our prayer is that God may bless their efforts, and give them the desire of their hearts,—the success of the Mission.

A week was spent at Cando and Surrey, N. Dak. At the former place lives my youngest brother, Eld. Geo. K. Miller. Both he and his good wife were for some years members of our family in Illinois, and it was a real pleasure to spend a few days in their home. Cando is in the Zion church, where a very successful series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Paul Mohler, had just closed. The church was rejoicing that twenty-four precious souls had been baptized into the fold of Christ. At Cando Sister Miller prolonged her visit while I came on west. With the Surrey brethren and sisters two meetings were held and we enjoyed seeing old acquaintances and making new ones. Bro. D. T. Dierdorff is bishop in charge of the Surrey church, and they have before them bright prospects for future success. We spent a short time in the home of Brother J. M. and Sister Myers (nee Ida Royer), and had a delightful time living over again the years that have gone.

The crops, in the parts of North Dakota we passed through, are fairly good. Wheat was injured by the black rust and, it was thought, would make about ten bushels to the acre. The late oats, barley, and flax, will yield well. At Surrey I heard of seventy bushels of oats to the acre. The early oats was injured by the drought. Flax promised a full crop and at the price, $2.50 per bushel in the markets, will be profitable to the farmers.

At Spokane, our next stop, we spent a day and night. Here we had a meeting in the little church-house owned by the Brethren. Here the mistake was made that has so often been made by our people in their city work,—the house is too far away from the center of population of the city. If we hope to get people to attend our church services, we must go where the people live. The membership at Spokane is small and there are some discouraging features about the work.

At this writing we are at Wenatchee, Wash., one among the finest fruit-producing valleys in the West. Here we have two large and prosperous churches. The Brethren and their friends have transformed the sage brush desert of Sunny Slope and East Wenatchee into great orchards bending under their burden of fruit. Nine years ago the writer drove over these deserts, covered with sage brush, and the transformation is one of the surprises of his life. One can not realize what it means, unless he is able to make the contrast. Within these few years land in orchards of the best varieties of apples has advanced from two hundred to two thousand dollars an acre.

We enjoyed a love feast with the members of the Sunny Slope church, followed with meetings for a week. Bro. Andrew Hutchison and George Hilton and wife and son, our Chinese missionaries, were with us. The large house was full to overflowing on the Lord's Day, and the meetings during the week were well attended.

On Wednesday, Sept. 13, our Chinese missionaries passed through Wenatchee, en route for Seattle, from whence they sail in five days for the other side of the world. A number of the members were at the railway station to meet and greet the missionaries. They brought with them fruit and flowers in abundance, and our travelers had more than they could carry. Bro. Amos Peters gathered up the extra boxes of peaches, pears, plums, grapes and apples, and expressed them to Seattle, and some of the fruit will doubtless reach China. The party was well and happy. Bro. Hilton and family joined them here, making the total number,—men, women and children bound for China,—thirteen. Bro. Hutchison also went with them to Seattle. The meetings continue here for two evenings more, and then, in company with Bro. Peters, we continue our journey, the Lord willing, to the Coast. We anticipate the pleasure of attending a Sunday-school Meeting at Seattle, and the District Meeting of Washington at North Yakima, Sept. 21 and 22. Then, after a few days at Sunnyside, we hope to start for home. Health is fairly good, and we have much to be thankful for to him who doeth all things well.

The Easy Yoke, the Light Burden.

In Bible times the ox was the common beast used in plowing and cultivating the land, in hauling all kinds of produce, building material, and also in traveling, so that the yoke used on the neck of the oxen was a most common thing, known and understood by all the people, because the ox team was seen everywhere, in the country as well as in the towns and cities. A team of oxen, meant two oxen yoked together with a yoke, so as to draw the greatest load with the greatest ease, and the least possible wear and chafing to the neck of the oxen on which it was placed.

Our Savior in his teaching not only used the most simple form of language, but, to make his truth so evident and plain that the most ordinary and common mind could comprehend, he used the common—the familiar—things around him, to illustrate and make plain his meaning. Hence, in that most blessed of all his invitations to sin-burdened souls, he makes use of the yoke as the most familiar illustration: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light." The "easy" and the "light" are the two thoughts that we wish to impress upon our hearts. We also wish to emphasize the "my" before we close our thoughts on this subject.

All yokes are not easy and all burdens not light; therefore the Master, as a stroke of encouragement, speaks of his "easy yoke" and "light burdens," in comparison with the well-known hard yokes and heavy burdens. How many of us have seen the chafed, bruised, sore, and bleeding necks of oxen, because of the hard and ill-fitting yoke placed upon them by their cruel masters! And then, how often have we seen them unmercifully lashed in trying to make them draw a load that was too heavy for their strength? Our hearts have been made to bleed in viewing most pitiable sights of this kind. Our hearts were touched and our sympathy awakened, and we were made to remember the precious words of the Sympathizing One as he said: "My yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Then, too, we often made to see some very odd and strange yoking. During our travels through foreign and Bible Lands we saw a large ox and a small cow, or an ox and a very shabby and poor horse. In passing through Belgium and Holland we saw a number of yoke-teams on their way to market, two abreast, one a large dog, the other a woman. In one case it was a woman and a heifer. It seemed to us that, for the poor woman, the dog and the heifer, the yoke was hard and the burden heavy,—and hardest and heaviest of all for these poor women. Here was an unequal yoking that we are advised against.

But for men and women, these dogs, cows and oxen are not the most unequal yoke-fellows. All who are living in sin,—all who have not been born again,—and have not become fellow-workers with Jesus Christ, are yoke-fellows with Satan,—a yoking that is most odd, unequal and galling. This yoking is odd because it seems an unnatural thing to do. It is most unreasonable. Why should men and women join with and be yoked to the most deceptive, the hardest and most cruel taskmaster in the world? His promises are as the apples of Sodom. They burst at the grasping; and, worst of all, the dust and the smoke that comes from them blinds the eyes. So it seems to be with those who try to feed on the apples of sin and Satan. "They that sow to the flesh shall of the flesh reap corruption." They are not only deceived and disappointed, but they are blinded so fully that they, seemingly, do not know how to get loose from their hard master.

Yoking with Satan is most unreasonable, because sane men and women know that Satan, as a yoke-fellow, has nothing to give to his deluded partners but death. They know that, in the end, the only wages he has to give is corruption and death. And who will serve for such wages?

It is a galling service. The yoke is hard and the mating is most uneven. Did you ever notice the service the spider renders to the fly as it drops into the meshes of its web? It permits it to struggle, to get loose, knowing that the more it struggles the more tight and fast it gets. Dear sinner, if you are yet in the coils of the devil, go and watch the deluded and thoughtless fly as it drops into the spider's web, and you will see a most fitting picture of your own fate, unless you speedily forsake your dangerous and sinful course. You will then flee to the Savior's arms by accepting his glorious invitation and putting on his yoke, for it is an easy one indeed.

The Rebaptism Question Again.

In the case of the twelve at Ephesus (Acts 19: 1-5), the Scriptures furnish an example of rebaptism. The twelve had been baptized by trine immersion, for John's baptism was the beginning of Christian baptism (Mark 1: 1), and Christian baptism is trine immersion; they had been baptized for the remission of sins, for John's baptism was for the remission of sins (Mark 1: 4); they had been baptized by a member of the church, most likely Apollos (Acts 18: 24, 25; 19: 3), not by one not a member of the church; they were baptized the second time because they did not have the proper teaching and faith previous to their first baptism. The right teaching and faith on the part of those to be baptized are essential to their baptism. So here is a case of baptism complete in all the New Testament essentials, except one, it being of trine immersion, for the remission of sins, and by a proper administrator, a member of the body whose right it was to administer baptism, but the candidates lacked the proper previous teaching and faith, and for this reason they were rebaptized (Acts 19: 5).

Baptism according to New Testament teaching and example, is complete and valid, when it has all its parts, which are a proper subject, the proper mode or form, for the proper purpose or design, and a proper administrator. The proper subject is a penitent believer in Christ; the proper mode or form is trine immersion; the proper purpose or design is for the remission of sins; and the proper administrator is a member of the body chosen and authorized to preach the Word and administer its ordinances. The absence of any one of these conditions may very properly raise doubt. The only way absolutely free from question and doubt is the Scriptural way.

The question of rebaptism, in its present form, is the outgrowth of a condition utterly unwarranted by the Word of God. Christendom so-called is divided into fragments. The Word teaches unity; it stands for nothing else. Not a syllable, from first to last, justifies the present divided state. Under the condition of the unity of the church, as taught by Jesus and the apostles, the question, as it is before the Conference today, is utterly irrelevant; it is no question. And why should we compromise the New Testament way of the church baptizing her own members into fellowship, to meet the present divided, ungodly condition in the world?

To receive as members, into the Church of the Brethren, without rebaptism, those whom others have baptized by trine immersion, is a step, a long step, toward the federation of the churches without the essential ground federation. Certainly, there could be no greater blessing than the uniting of all the churches into one great body, if the essential ground for it existed. Its only ground is union in the Word. All other bonds of union are false and disappointing. And when the churches reach oneness of faith in the teachings of the Blessed Book, the act of formally uniting will be an easy and small matter. Any pretense of union, when there is no union, belies fundamental conditions. The only consistent thing, then, is for the Church of the Brethren to baptize her own members.

If baptism can be received at the hands of ministers of other churches, where is the line to be drawn at which they shall cease to minister for the Church of the Brethren? Or shall there be no line? If they may baptize for us, what may they not do? There is no work more sacred, to be done with more care. May they preach for us? Anoint our sick? Administer the love feast? Where shall the line be drawn, and on what principle? If they are in position to baptize persons into the church for us, which is at the foundation of all ministerial work, and upon which the church depends for growth, I am unable to know why they are not in position to do any and all ministerial service for us.

Again, what shall be done in the case of expelled ministers who go out and baptize persons? It is this condition that raises the question at present more than anything else. Reference is made to the sad experience of over a quarter of a century ago, when the leaders of the Progressives and the Old Order Brethren were expelled. Should the church that expelled them receive their work? Is it consistent to recognize their expulsion, holding that it is proper, and then recognize their work? Is it not a contradiction? If their expulsion is proper, then it is logical that their work can not be recognized; if their work is entitled to recognition, then it is logical that their expulsion can not be held as proper. The only fair and logical thing to do, if the work of these expelled men is to be recognized, is to go back and declare their expulsion illegal, and declare them members of the church, if they will it so. Then, according to this rule, the church is left without protection and helpless in the case of any of her expelled ministers who may feel to go out and baptize persons for her. Pitiable! The church may declare that some men are not fit for membership in her ranks, but they are fit, according to this rule, to perform the most holy functions of the ministry for her.

Again, if those baptized by trine immersion are entitled to membership without rebaptism, then it follows that all such are entitled to all the privileges of membership, whether or not they secure membership. The logic of the case is, if one has already complied with the terms of membership he is entitled to membership, whether or not he claims it; and if so, he is entitled to all the rights and privileges of membership. This establishes unrestricted communion among those who have been baptized by trine immersion for the remission of sins. The church is without reason to urge against the practice, except that all should formally secure membership as guaranteeing the privilege of communion; and that is without weight in the case, for it is already conceded that the parties have complied with the terms of membership. It is folly to concede to one that he is entitled to membership, but not to the privileges of membership.

The baptism of Alexander Mack, at the hands of an unbaptized person, is urged as an argument in favor of doing away with our present practice. His case is not relevant to the issue. There is no such case in the world, at present that I know of; and if there were, we would be glad to receive them without rebaptism. Certainly. Why not? Mack and his associates labored and prayed until they felt they had found the New Testament way. They could not find it in the churches about them. So the only thing left them, was to organize and start anew. This they did. They covenanted together as the church of Jesus Christ, and decided that one of their number should baptize Mack, then he should baptize the rest. It was all done by the action and authority of the church then and there assembled. Their baptism was not by an outside party who believed and practiced only a part of the Gospel. And who can say, Nay?

Testing the Report.

We observe that at a number of the members' meetings the decision of the late Conference on the dress question has been read and emphasized. In every instance, so far as heard from, members have been urged to study the restatement of our teachings on the matter of Christian attire, and endeavor to adjust their lives accordingly. The idea is a good one, for in most congregations there are those who need to be encouraged to make greater efforts in the interest of plainness. While there is much in the report, as framed by the committee to whom the task was assigned, it will be well not to attempt to read into it things not contemplated, but take it at its face value, test it thoroughly in good faith and watch the results before criticising it. If properly lived up to, the report should answer every necessary purpose, so far as New Testament simplicity in dress is concerned. In the interest of plainness it contains a great deal more than was deemed necessary by our people 150 years ago. Those who were first in the reformatory movement, that gave rise to the Church of the Brethren, thought the New Testament contained all they needed to maintain the nonconformity for which the church stood. And, in fact, it did, and it would still answer the same purpose for us if we were all as willing to be governed by the Word of God as they were. To make it still plainer, if all of our people would, from the heart, endeavor to carry out what the New Testament says about the Christian attire, we would never need any Annual Meeting decisions on the dress question. But with the devil, the great clothing trusts, and the rank and file of popular Christianity working in the interests of that which fosters pride, it is needful that the plain churches like the Brethren, give the matter much more than an ocasional passing notice. It is a question on which we should give no uncertain sound in our preaching, teaching and writing.

God's Interest.

Whatever is God's interest should be our interest, and we should also see to it that our interest is the Lord's interest. Whatever we do should be undertaken with the thought uppermost of pleasing the Lord, and when it is once fully settled that we are constantly working to this end, it will pay the Lord to prosper us. But, surely, we ought not to ask him to prosper us in our undertakings when we lose sight of his interest. In fact, why should the Lord prosper one who fails to plan and work for the interests of his kingdom? The world—and possibly the church, too,—is full of people who plan solely for their own selfish interests. The property they accumulate is for self and not for the Lord. All the money they get is placed to their credit, and the Lord's interest is wholly overlooked. They may be successful in business, live in luxury and die rich, but, so far as the Lord's interest is concerned, they have lived to no purpose. The kind Master, out of the goodness of his soul, may save some of these people, but he will look upon them as being not only unprofitable, but ungrateful servants. Unprofitable, because, with all their prosperity, they were of no real value to his cause on earth. Ungrateful, for the reason that, however much he may have done to prosper them, they did not make even a thanksgiving offering.

Entering Her Protest.

At a late members' meeting in Elgin the church entered her protest against Mr. James Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture and member of the President's Cabinet, acting as honorary president of the International Brewers' Congress, to be held in Chicago, Oct. 12 to 22. She also recorded her disapproval of the action of Secretary P. C. Knox, in the issuing of an official letter to the consular officers of the United States in foreign countries, instructing them to encourage foreign governments to represent at the Congress by delegates. With a member of the President's Cabinet sitting in the Congress as honorary president, and the Secretary of State, another Cabinet member, working up foreign representation, our administration comes astonishingly near making this government a party in advancing the brewers' interest. The church here, along with hundreds of other churches, is protesting against the Government throwing her influence on the side of the brewers' business. If the brewers must have an International Congress, let them have it, but, on the other hand, let the Government officials, as such, stand aloof, and not become a party to the business that is regarded as a crime against humanity by fully one-half of the thinking men and women of the nation.

Work for the Federation.

In the United States there are thirty-one denominations that are federated for the purpose of carrying on works of reform that could not otherwise be carried forward with success. We presume the temperance interest is one of the works referred to, and the overthrow of the white slave traffic, another. We know not the plans of the Federation, but since reform work is to be taken up, why might not the war question receive undivided attention? The denominations interested represent about seventeen million members, and with all these enlisted in the interest of peace between all nations, wonders, indeed, might be accomplished. Often the tobacco habit should come in for a share of attention, and, while the good work is going on, something ought to be done to counteract the influence of the great clothing trusts, that are making slaves of the women of the land, both in the churches and out of them, by having them fall in with the demands of "Madame Fashion," regardless of the cost in the way of health, time and money. Just at this time the Federation is to take no account of the faith and practices of the different denominations, and yet, as the movement gets older and gathers strength, this will be one of the tendencies to be reckoned with.

Do Not Want to Disband.

A sister writes us saying that it has been decided to disorganize the small congregation where she lives, but that a few of the members do not want to submit to being disorganized. This reminds us of the sick man, who, the doctor said, must die, but he made up his mind that he was not going to die, and he lived to pay his doctor bill and went on about his business. We glory in the pluck of members who will not consent for their little church to be disbanded. An organization, containing a few members of this sort, deserves to live, and can be made a success. Let these few members get their heads together, raise some money, and secure a real live preacher to come and hold a series of meetings. These meetings should revive the spirit of all the members and be the means of converting others. Members having life enough to protest against being disorganized, ought to have zeal enough to build up a strong congregation in any locality in the land. Such a body of members, however small, should have the sympathy of all the preachers in their District, and especially the sympathy and support of the District Mission Board.

The Pastor at the Summer Resort.

The pastor who is looking after the Lord's flock at a noted summer resort, says that it is a task to keep up the interest as it should be kept up. If left to themselves the members of his own congregation might be prompt enough about attending the services, but they are influenced by members from other churches, who come to the resort on the Lord's Day solely to have a good time. They leave their home service, come to the resort by trolley line, automobile or otherwise, repair to the places of special interest, and there while away the entire day just like the unconverted, without ever thinking of the services conducted by the Brethren not many blocks away. These members not only set a very bad light before the world, but they endanger their own souls, as well as the souls of others. There ought to be some way of getting them to see the error of their way, for their course can not help bringing about serious results.

Address,
General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

DENVER MISSION, COLORADO.

The work is moving along nicely, with good interest and attendance, better than it ever has been, for this time of the year. This is the time of the year when so many leave for summer vacation and outing.

The Christian Workers' Society is doing a good work. A temperance program was rendered on Sunday evening, Aug. 27, to a full house, which was enjoyed by all present. This is truly a grand auxiliary to the church, in developing the talent of our young people.

Sister Ermine Coffey, who has been very ill for the past three weeks, called for the elders Aug. 20, and was anointed. She is convalescing rapidly. Let us not forget the commands of the Blessed Lord, for if we do, we lose the blessings promised, and also fail to manifest the power of God unto the salvation of the soul.

We were made happy to have Brother and Sister Frederick Weidman with us in our services last Lord's Day morning. They have been very feeble the past four months and their race is nearly run.

If there are any members of the Brethren church who are looking for a place to work in the vineyard of the Lord, turn your eyes toward Denver. Here is a field ripe unto harvest, where workers are badly needed, and where the principles of the Church of the Brethren are respected by the members and also by the outsiders.

On account of failing health I am compelled to give up the pastorate of the church at Denver, Oct. 1, which we very much regret. We have learned to love the people here, and they have become very dear unto us, during our short stay among them. We pray the good Lord to bless them all for their kindness and help they have given us.

We want to thank our dear brethren and sisters, as well as our many friends, that we have learned to know and love, as one of friends and life. For their many prayers in behalf of our recovery, and for the good letters we have received. It has done us untold good. It has strengthened us soul and body.

We are made to rejoice because the good Lord hears and answers the prayers of the faithful. May we all so live in this life as to meet in those mansions that Christ has gone to prepare for all those that love and serve him, never to part again, but to enjoy eternal rest with Christ.

SOME WORK IN OREGON.

By some oversight there has been no report of our last District Meeting of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, held July 12-14 at Myrtle Point, Ore. The first District Meeting of the new District of Oregon was held the day following. Eld. Henry Brubaker, of Newberg, Eld. Thos. Barklow, of Myrtle Point, and Bro. Lininger, of Ashland, constitute the Mission Board for Oregon. It is their purpose to take up the work in this wide field as rapidly as funds are made available.

Aug. 4 Eld. S. P. Van Dyke and wife returned to their home in Newberg, after an absence of just a year and a half. Aug. 9 Eld. S. P. Van Dyke and wife moved into the Portland parsonage to hold an election, which resulted in the call of Bro. Wilford Arnold to the deacon's office and Bro. Walter G. Carl (eldest son of Eld. Geo C. Carl, for sixteen years a missionary in Oregon and Washington) to the ministry. Bro. Arnold being from home, the installation was deferred. Sunday, Aug. 20, Bro. Conrad Fitz, of Seattle, preached in the Portland church in the morning. At two o'clock the newly-elected minister, W. G. Carl, and Sister Jessie May Hillcher were married at the bride's home, and at the evening service the writer preached a sermon on "The Ministry," and conducted the installation of our dear young brother and his bride. The happy pair were afterwards conducted to the Southern Pacific depot where they took the train for Chicago, via Los Angeles. This young brother, besides being a master mechanic and architect, has graduated with honors from the Portland Academy, class of 1910. He expects to take the regular course at Bethany Bible School and equip himself fully for a life work for the church. Our prayer is that more such workers may be called in their youth, so that the church of the future may have men fully qualified for aggressive work in this broad field.

We are in need of consecrated ministers to locate in the Mohawk Valley church, a wild mountain valley, twenty miles from Eugene, where the Brethren have a good house. Bro. Pullen is moving from here to California. There is also a good opening for a consecrated minister, who can "endure hardship as a good soldier," at Lebanon church on the Santiam. The Brethren have had only occasional services here, for the last ten years. This is the oldest church in Oregon. The Mennonites have been using the house for several years. Here is an opportunity for the right man.

Sunday, Aug. 27, a special temperance program was rendered by our Christian Workers' Society, and at 4 o'clock the writer preached in union services at the Friends' church on "The Great Salvation" (Heb. 2: 3).

Notes from Our Correspondents.

The Following Notes, Crowded Out of Last Issue, Are Given Space on This Page.

ARKANSAS.

Austin.—Bro. Lee Woodruff of Palestine, Ark., came here and commenced preaching Aug. 5, continuing for one week. The attendance and interest were uncommonly good throughout the meetings.—Rett. Woodiel, Austin, Ark., Sept. 5.

CALIFORNIA.

Covina church met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. D. A. Norcross, presided. The report of the visiting brethren was encouraging. Christian Workers' officers were chosen for six months. Young ministers' work to prepare by means of our literature was considered, and some admonitions were given. Aug. 27 Bro. Snowberger gave us a very spiritual and practical examination sermon, that we might, on the following Saturday evening, be better prepared to partake of the communion. After the sermon an invitation was given. One dear soul made the good confession, and was received by baptism at 3 P. M. On the evening of the same day a meeting in honor of our aged brethren was held. Many came from Glendora and Lordsburg. Another meeting was conducted in the new Dunkard worshiped forty or fifty years ago. Old familiar hymns were lined out and sung with much fervor. Short talks by our elders present took part and gave us much spiritual food. Sept. 2 Bro. Snowberger gave us a very spiritual and practical sermon. Bro. N. J. Brubaker gave us two helpful sermons on Sunday. Bro. Snowberger and wife will soon leave us for work in the Imperial Valley. Their labors with us have been much appreciated.—Eulalie Overholtzer, Covina, Cal., Sept. 4.

DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

Washington City.—The church was much surprised, at our recent council, to learn that Bro. W. D. Keller would be unable to remain with us as pastor, as he expected to do the present year, in November next. Our parsonage fund is still increasing, due to a large measure to the untiring work of Bro. Keller among the churches of the District. We hope to be able to raise the amount called for this time before it is transferred. During the summer we have been favored with visits from the following ministers: Dennis Hamilton, of Leatherwood, Va.; Bro. Pitwaster, W. M. Wine, and L. B. Fluhr, Bro. Frantz's meetings begin Sept. 17.—Mrs. D. E. Miller, 806 C. Street, S. E., Washington, D. C., Sept. 7.

INDIANA.

Bachelor Run.—Our church held a council in the country house Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. Hoover, presided over the business committee, and gave an admonition on the same. He also plead for more liberality in the payment of our Annual Meeting in regard to the cup and loaf. Brethren Jacob Culp, Glen Fox, and J. H. Peyton were administered to elders, were present. The church decided, by a large majority, to divide our congregation into two parts. A committee was appointed to consider the work. Our elder, Bro. A. G. Crosswhite, tendered his resignation, but the church refused to accept it.—Mary Ellen Fox, Peru, Ind., Sept. 5.

Beech Grove.—We met in council Sept. 2, with Bro. Joseph Shepherd presiding. One letter was received and letter granted. Bro. E. G. Norris was elected delegate to District Meeting. Bro. Ira Harris, of Indianapolis, Ind., is to be with us Sept. 16, and continue meetings till our love feast, Oct. 14. This was the regular time for the election of officers, but our elder was not with us, it was postponed until our next council, Oct. 11.—Hattie Shull, R. D. 38, Ingalls, Ind., Sept. 8.

Clear Creek.—Eld. M. Flory, of Girard, Ill., began a series of meetings at this place on Sept. 3, and closed on the 17th. Eld. I. H. Wike was with us. He presided at our council, Sunday-school Superintendent elected for 6 months, Bro. J. A. Miller as superintendent. Bro. J. H. Christian was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Bro. Flory preached both forenoon and in the afternoon. Sister G. D. Garrett led the song service. Our new house was dedicated the first day of the same day. Sept. 3 Sister Garrett gave us an appreciated lecture on "Our Duty." Sept. 9 Bro. Flory preached to us until Sept. 6.—John H. Neff, Huntington, Ind., Sept. 8.

Kewanna.—Bro. R. E. Keslar commenced Kewanna church Aug. 22, and remained for two weeks in a series of meetings. At his preached the Gospel in a plain and forceful manner. As a result of the meetings seven were out on the Lord's side. The attendance was good. The members of the Kewanna church are in a good condition. Our council meeting will be held Sept. 17. The writer having charge of the work at the above-mentioned place, will be with the church during the fall, as the members only every two weeks. Bro. Kesler has left a good impression with the Kewanna people, and we are sorry outsiders. On Thursday the Kewanna church lost one of their good members—a sister thirty-one years old. She was then the superintendent of the Sunday-school. She was the daughter of Brother and Sister Geo. Hilleker.—I. B. Wike, 867 Jefferson Street, Huntington, Ind., Sept. 8.

Wabash.—We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 26. Bro. A. Brubaker had charge of the meeting. Bro. Yeiter was also with us at night. In the afternoon a program was rendered by the children. An offering of $16.79 was taken. Aug. 27 we met in council with Bro. Brubaker presiding. Two letters were granted. Bro. Yeiter was chosen our delegate to the District Council Sunday-school Meetings. Our love feast will be held Oct. 21 at 4 P. M.—Lulu Cummins, Wabash, Ind., Sept. 4.

Yellow Creek.—We met in council Aug. 26. Our elder, Bro. Hiram Rosen, presided. Eld. H. M. Schwaim was present. Two letters of membership were granted. The annual visit was favorably reported. Our annual Harvest Meeting was held Aug. 31. Bro. Schwaim preached both for us in the forenoon, and Sister Ella Brumbaugh gave us an address in the afternoon.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 5, Goshen, Ind., Sept. 8.

IOWA.

Libertyville.—Our love feast held Sept. 1 was well attended. Thirty-two sisters and twenty-six brethren communed at the Lord's tables. Several visiting brethren were present, namely, Brethren S. M. Gaughnour and W. E. West, of Askeyville; Brethren S. M. Gaughnour and W. E. West, of Askeyville; Brethren S. M. Gaughnour and W. E. West, of Askeyville;

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far land.

CALIFORNIA.

Live Oak.—We have had preaching and Sunday-school each Lord's Day with a good attendance. Bro. Samuel E. Yoder and wife were with us over Sunday. Bro. Yoder preached for us at 11 A. M. Our first council will be held Sept. 21.—P. S. Hartman, Live Oak, Cal., Sept. 16.

Notice to the Brethren in the Northern District of California.—For the coming District Meeting to be held at Empire, Cal., convention rates have been authorized on both the S. P. and Santa Fe railroads, at one and one-third fare for the round trip, certificate plan. Rates from Oct. 1 to Oct. 3.—Jesse M. Bonsack, Secy., Empire, Cal., Sept. 8.

Oak Grove church met in council Sept. 4. Eld. D. R. Hoff, singer and assistant moderator for one year. Other church officers were elected, and the general church work was attended to. We have a Sunday-school in the meeting-house. Its interest is good in our people's meetings.—Linnie Coffman, Linton, Cal., Sept. 11.

South Los Angeles.—Aug. 6, at 11 A. M., our pastor preached on the subject, "Why I Love the Brethren Church." In the afternoon a meeting for women and girls was addressed by Mrs. C. H. Fitzgerald, State Superintendent of the Mission Work. Both meetings were greatly appreciated. Aug. 13, at 11 A. M., we were favored with an address by Bro. F. W. Lewis, Superintendent of the Children's Home Society, of California. He explained the nature and scope of the work, and an offering of $12.95 was given. Aug. 20, at 7 P. M., the Christian Workers, of East Los Angeles, Pasadena, Inglewood, Lincoln Park and South Los Angeles, met in our church for their quarterly union meeting. The program was well rendered, and an address from Bro. Brumbaugh, who is soon to be in India was given, and an offering of $21 was taken for the work. Sunday afternoon, Aug. 27, our Primary department was organized and enjoyed an outing at South Park. About seventy-five children were present, besides a number of mothers, together with the teachers of the school. The afternoon was well spent.—Clara B. Custer, 1236 East Forty-sixth St., Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 6.

CANADA.

Fairview church met in council Sept. 9 at 2 P. M., with our elder, Bro. Jesse A. Bensberger, presiding. Bro. Bensberger, of Greenville, Ohio, and Bro. F. L. Baker, of Three Springs, Mo., were visiting brethren with us. Bro. Baker is engaged in temperance work instead of a regular temperance lesson. Bro. Hollinger had charge of the services in the afternoon.—Jennie L. Hackman, Murrin, Sask., Can., Sept. 12.

COLORADO.

Good Hope church decided to hold a series of meetings, beginning on Saturday evening, Sept. 16, with Bro. Jesse Wayne, Colo., conducting the services. Our council will be held Sept. 21, and we love feast on the following day, Sept. 22. We should be very glad to have some visiting brethren with us. Those who are thinking of changing location this fall, should visit our country before making a change. Our country is good. Our church is much in need of more earnest workers in the Lord's vineyard.—Mrs. Sadie Stutsman Beck, —Maude C. Kinsie, Haxtun, Colo., Sept. 11.

Sterling church met in council Sept. 9, with our elder, Bro. D. B. Miller, presiding. Recently we organized a home department in a radio rail, which is doing a good line of work. We also organized a wide-awake Sisters' Aid Society. Sec. Ella Mitchell is corresponding. Our Sunday-school meeting is well attended.—Stella G. Turner, Iliff, Colo., Sept. 11.

IDAHO

Nampa.—Bro. A. L. Gorham, of Payette, Idaho, was called to Nampa, Aug. 15, to preach the funeral of Sister Ida Hall, who died of tuberculosis. Our brother and wife remained with us over Sunday, and Bro. Gorham preached two excellent sermons. On Sunday evening he spoke on the subject of "Temperance." Our church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. J. C. Ikenberry, presided. Two visiting elders were invited to decide to have a love feast this fall; also a series of meetings.—Rose E. Bradley, Nampa, Idaho, Sept. 9.

ILLINOIS.

Big Creek.—Bro. West is to begin a series of meetings Oct. 22. No time is set for the close of the meeting. We are indebted of tuberculosis. Our brother and wife remained with us over Sunday, and Bro. Gorham preached two excellent sermons. On Sunday evening he spoke on the subject of "Temperance." Our church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. J. C. Ikenberry, presided. Two visiting elders were invited to decide to have a love feast this fall; also a series of meetings.—Rose E. Bradley, Nampa, Idaho, Sept. 9.

ILLINOIS.

Big Creek.—Bro. West is to begin a series of meetings Oct. 22. No time is set for the close of the meeting. We are indebted to be in love and union. The treasurer's report was also given, and preparations were made for our love feast. Our elder, Bro. Wolfe, is over-seven years old, and by the advice of his charge, as he is sorely afflicted with rheumatism. He has labored in the ministerial worship for forty-seven years, at times in charge of as many as four churches. As he intends to visit the different churches, and calls for a minister when he is able to do so, the church has decided to appoint a committee to correspond with a brother to take his place, and also his method of making our wants known. We should like for some good brother to come to our assistance as elder, and the church in council has agreed to give a reasonable support for his services. Those desiring further information, can write to my self as committee.—Eld. Jacob Hoff, Box 1, Big Creek, Silte Richard, Committee, Canton, Ill., Sept. 11.

Dixon.—Our church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. O. F. Shaw, presided. One letter was granted. Bro. Samuel Whitmer was elected secretary of the Sunday-school and Meeting. We will hold our love feast Nov. 6, at 7 P. M. Our series of meetings began Aug. 13, and closed Aug. 27. Bro. Shaw, who had previously decided for Christ, was baptized. Bro. John A. Robinson was with us over Sunday, Aug. 27. We had good attendance and interest. We received much spiritual benefit. Two were baptized.—Emma Boyd, 168 Harrison Ave., Dixon, Ill., Sept. 11.

Franklin Grove.—We met in council Sept. 9, with our elder, Bro. C. H. Spicher, presiding. Bro. Jesse Ellis was elected as secretary of our Christian Worker Band. We received the resignation of our Sunday-school secretary, and one sister was reclaimed. Our love feast will be held Oct. 28, at 4 P. M.—Anna Stutsman Beck, Franklin Grove, Ill., Sept. 11.

INDIANA.

Arcadia.—Our church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. Nathaniel Cripe, presided. Bro. James Hill was chosen as delegate to District Meeting; Bro. Leslie Mosbaugh, to Sunday-school Meeting. Our love feast will be held Oct. 28, at 4 P. M. After the love feast Bro. Isaac Bowman will begin a series of meetings, to continue indefinitely. One letter has been granted since our last report.—Mary Martin, R. D. 17, Atlanta, Ind., Sept. 11.

Beaver Creek.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. Since it was impossible for our elder, Bro. Charles Ebey, to be here, Eld. Sadie Stutsman led the song service. The missionary collection amounted to $44.19.—Etta Elson, Wawaka, Ind., Sept. 13.

Summit church met in council Sept. 9, at 7:30 P. M. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Barick, had charge of the meeting, assisted by Bro. David Miller. Sister Dessie Ribelin was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Sept. 2 Brethren Barick and Isaac Brannon anointed a dear sister. Aug. 13 we held our annual Harvest Meeting. Bro. Herbert Studebaker preached for us morning and evening. A program was given by the Sunday-school in the afternoon.—Grace Hiatt, Summitville, Ind., Sept. 11.

Union church met in council on Saturday afternoon, Sept. 9, with Bro. Jesse Bensberger presiding. He was displeased of in a Christian-like way. As our temperance committee we appointed Brethren Wm. Garl, Ray Welborn and Andrew Shroff. Bro. Daniel Miller, of Ohio, was chosen District Meeting. Oct. 5. We have secured the promise of Bro. Reuben Shroyer, of Ohio, to be with us and preach over Sunday, Dec. 3. Bro. Henry Markley, from the Walnut congregation, is holding an evening meeting at our church on the following Sunday forenoon. His subject was, "The Christian's Responsibility." Bro. Markley's sermon was very interesting, and was greatly appreciated by all. Recently our Sunday-school was reorganized. Bro. Bensberger is the present Superintendent of Sunday-schools. Mr. E. O. Ellis, of Bremen. In his remarks he paid a beautiful tribute to the school by saying that we are the model school.—the one that is keeping its standard high. Our "home department" is an interesting feature of the school. We have had some fine congregations remember our love feast, on Saturday, Oct. 14.—A. Lizzie Appleman, Plymouth, Ind., Sept. 19.

White church met in council Sept. 6. Bro. Crosswhite presided. One letter of membership was granted. Bro. Sunday-school Convention, Ministerial and District Meeting will be held at Pleasant Valley, Sept. 29 and 30. Eld. D. R. Hoff, Bro. Ira Fisher was elected delegate to Sunday-school and District Meeting. The meetings will last three days. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7. Bro. Crosswhite is with us regularly on the last Sunday of each month. Bro. Joseph Studebaker preached for us Aug. 27. Our Sunday-school is starting a singing school.—Lelah Walk, R. D. 30, Clarksehill, Ind. Sept. 11.

IOWA.

Alta.—Last Sunday evening a Jewish lady and child worshiping with us. Our Sunday-school is well and a wedding, but her soul and heart were with us. Oct. 8 we expect to attend the Mt. Morris Fair. We had not permitted to hear a sermon for a long time. Bro. Robert preached a sermon full of the Spirit of the Lord, and he went away to better spirits than when he came. I received a letter from him a few days ago, never met, saking me about our church work. I hope to meet her some time. If we can awaken the people who once professed Christ, but are now living in sin, we will have a live church.—Mrs. G. W. Martin, 39 Tenth Ave., Alta, Iowa, Sept. 11.

Coon River.—Aug. 9 and 10 we had a meeting of an unusual one. On account of there being a series of meetings in progress at the Methodist Church, by the different other churches, there were no visiting ministers present. The home ministry decided to commence, and took hold of the work in earnest. Though the oldest one was chosen to officiate, each of the younger ones did his part acceptably. The latter stayed constantly with the meeting, and the services of the meeting. The sisters, for the first time, broke the break in the meeting. Bro. Ira Fisher, one of our nearest neighbors, under the hand of sore affliction, desire the prayers of the faithful.—Mrs. Ira Fisher, R. D. 2, Dallas, Iowa.

Curlew.—We met in council Sept. 2, with Bro. G. H. Brallier presiding. Bro. Ira Long was elected to the District Meeting, with Sister Addie Mason as alternate. One letter was granted. Our Sunday-school is doing nicely. We have teachers' meeting every Sunday at 9:30 A. M. Sister Eva M. Miller is instructor.—Grace Prentice, Curlew, Iowa, Sept. 11.

Monroe County.—We met in council Sept. 9. The church granted the little band in Albia (a part of the Monroe County church) the privilege of meeting for a time in the church house in Albia. Brethren J. B. Brower and the writer were chosen to make the arrangements. Bro. Brower is building committee.—Samuel Miller, 39 Tenth Ave., Albia, Iowa, Sept. 11.

Notice.—At this time we expect to attend the District Meeting in Iowa, Sept. 29 and 30, at Pleasant Valley, Iowa. Dec. 4 to 6, will please observe: Elders' Meeting, Oct. 4, 1:30 P. M. at the home of Bro. Ira Fisher, one-quarter of a mile east of the church. Those coming from the west over the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. R., will be met at Webster Oct. 4, at 11:32 A. M. Trains later than this will make you wait for the Sunday-school at 2 o'clock. Those from the west, over the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific R. R., will be met at Albia, Oct. 4 at 11 A. M. and 5:15 P. M. Please notify the undersigned, so that suitable means of transportation can be arranged for. Trains from the east at Harper, Webster, or Hayesville, Oct. 4 at 11 A. M.—Samuel Miller, Secretary.—H. Brower, Chairman, South English, Iowa, Sept. 14.

Notice of Annual Meeting of the Northern Minnesota and South Dakota.—We hope that all the churches in our district will be represented. We should send in with their delegates to the District Meeting. The field is large and the calls are many. The Board is in need of more means to carry on the work.—Samuel Pike, Waterloo, Iowa, Sept. 14.

South Ottumwa.—We closed our two weeks' series of meetings Aug. 27, with seven additions by baptism, five adults. Bro. C. S. Garber, of St. Joseph, Mo., held the meetings for us. We enjoyed his labors very much, and he was a fine preacher. From present indications there will be much suffering among the poor this winter. We have given much out of work, and as winter comes on, work will be more scarce. We could use, to good advantage, a good clothing.—Geo. W. Burgin, 107 S. Moore St., Ottumwa, Iowa, Sept. 11.

KANSAS.

Kansas City.—Last evening we held our love feast in the central church, corner Tracy Ave. and 27th St., a well-filled house, with ninety-six members surrounding the Lord's table. Bro. Jesse Wayne, of the Mound City church, Linn City, Mo., were with us. The latter led the services. At our council, previous to the love feast, we elected a report of the annual visit, which showed the members to be in the faith and willing to labor and pray for the prosperity of the work. Bro. D. F. Strole and Sister Crist are our delegates to the Mid Meetings; Sister Ella McCune and Bro. E. H. Harman, delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting. We have decided to give the members on the south side the privilege of organizing the Second church of the Brethren in Kansas City, Kans. We are in the second week of a refreshing series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. H. Wolfe, of Bethany, Okla. The interest in the meetings is growing. We are still in need of clothing for the poor. Please, dear brethren and sisters of our District remember us? We found one mother with six children, none of them having a change of clothing. They are glad, even for dry goods.—Mrs. L. H. Crist, 30 North Pierce St., Kansas City, Kans., Sept. 11.

McPherson.—Our elder is with us again, and is spending some time on his farm. He is giving us some excellent sermons. The Junior Band, under the supervision of Sister Pearl Dreher, has its regular Sunday gospel meetings. During the week the little girls meet to sew for the poor. Yesterday we attended the funeral of a little girl. We have held several business meetings since our last report. Many new members are moving into our midst. We have an active spiritual church. Christian Workers' Meetings are well attended. The college opens Sept. 20, what promises to be the largest enrollment for several years. Bro. J. C. Clement gave a most excellent opening address. Several strong men have been added to the faculty. The outlook for the school is encouraging.—Sarah Wampler Blough, Hollsopple, Kans., Sept. 12.

Notice for the District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado.—This District Meeting will be held in the Brethren church five miles southwest of Belleville, Kans. The dates for the meetings are Oct. 5, 6, 7 and 8. Elders' Meeting will be held Oct. 4, at the home of Bro. J. H. Kinsie, one-fourth mile west of the church. Those coming by rail will be met at Scandia. The passenger train from the north arrives at 11:50 A. M., and from the north, at 12:35 P. M. The Rock Island train, No. 28, is due at Rydal, 9:25 A. M., and No. 27 from Jersey and Scandia, at 7:40 P. M., both from the west. No. 27 is due at Rydal at 7:22 P. M. Those coming by automobile will come to Rydal on Rock Island, from the west, will be met at Belleville. No. 8 arrives at 11:04 A. M.; No. 8, at 8:25 P. M.; No. 40, at 2:25 A. M. From the east, No. 8 arrives at 8:55 P. M.; No. 39, at 12:22 A. M.; No. 89, at 6 A. M. The Union Pacific mixed train, from Concordia, arrives at 1:30 P. M. The passenger train at 7:15 P. M. Those coming will please notify the writer, that some may be at the train to meet them and take them.—Bruce Elliott, R. D. 5, Belleville, Kans., Sept. 11.

Notice to All Concerned in the Elders' Meeting of Northeastern Kansas.—Please advise our transportation committee by Sept. 25, as to the following: Those coming to Lawrence, notify J. M. Flory, Lone Star, Kans. Those coming to Overbrook, notify H. A. Turner, Overbrook, Kans. Those coming to Topeka, notify the writer by the day, Sept. 30, to 6 P. M. Because of the distance from the railroad we must have the information requested.—J. W. Beahm, Lone Star, Kans., Sept. 11.

Blanks.—Have been blessed by visiting ministers. Sept. 3 Bro. J. P. Harshbarger, of McPherson, Kans., gave us interesting Bible reading and preaching service. Sept. 10 J. F. Mishler, also of McPherson, Kans., labored for us most acceptably.—Josephine McDonald, Nickerson, Kans., Sept. 11.

MARYLAND.

Long Green Valley church met in council Aug. 13, with Eld. A. P. Snader presiding. It was decided to incorporate the church at this place. Brethren Moses Myers, Jacob Price, Wm. Stouffer and John Breidenbaugh, with the elder, are the duly-elected list of trustees. Bro. W. E. Roop was given the oversight of this church for one year. We decided to hold services on the day before Thanksgiving for the Sunday-School children's Day services Aug. 27. Brethren Jacob Hollinger, of Washington, D. C., and D. B. Ergood, of Virginia, will favor them giving interesting talks to the children. Bro. T. S. Fike has agreed to give us a two weeks' series of meetings. One was held there recently at the Bel Air Station.—Mrs. Jennie Hauser, Ellingg, Md., Sept. 11.

Midway.—Here we had children's services, and in the evening a local Sunday-school meeting. We enjoyed to have Sister Lizzie Hutchings with us in the meeting. Visiting churches were well represented. An offering of $18 was taken for mission work.—Hannah Kitz, Rinard, Ill., Sept. 11.

Sams Creek.—We met in council Sept. 2 at the country church. Our elder, Bro. Chas. A. F. Snader, was with us and visit was expected. Brethren T. J. Kolb and S. H. Utz were present to assist in electing a minister, which resulted in Bro. Wm. Reichard being called. He not being present at the time. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16, in the country church.—Minerva Hauser, Hauserville, Md., Sept. 11.

West Point.—Our church met in council Sept. 10, at 2 P. M. Bro. Allen Hutchings presided, with us in the absence of our elder, Bro. T. S. Fike. Bro. Walter Englar was also with us. Bro. W. E. Roop was chosen as one of our delegates to next year's. One member was received by letter. It was decided to hold our love feast Sept. 23, at 7 P. M.—John Pullman, Reisterstown, Md., Sept. 11.

MICHIGAN

Bronson.—Sept. 30 is the day set for our love feast. Aug. 17 Eld. Jacob Long closed a series of meetings at our place. One was baptized.—M. Hardman, Bronson, Mich., Sept. 11.

MISSOURI.

Bethany church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Mason, presided. Two letters were received and one was granted. Brethren J. B. Moyer and E. W. Mason were chosen as delegates to the District Meeting. Bro. Moyer declined, and the writer were chosen delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting. Our love feast will be held Sept. 16, at 2 P. M.—Nora Temple, Stet, Mo., Sept. 11.

Brookwater church met in council Sept. 9. Eld. H. O. Lilly presided. Our love feast will be held Oct. 21. Bro. J. W. Boyd and Sister Edna Swinger were elected delegates to District Meeting.—J. M. Swinger, Frisco, Mo., Sept. 11.

Carthage.—Our church is progressing nicely. We have regular preaching services morning and evening each Lord's Day, and Sunday-school at 10 A. M. We have arranged to hold a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 24, and continue for after our love feast, to be held Nov. 18, at 3 P. M. Bro. Nicholas Wolfe, of Canton, Ill., will conduct the series of meetings.—N. Oren, Carthage, Mo., Sept. 12.

Fair View.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. The reports of the brethren was very encouraging. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. J. B. Hylton was chosen delegate to the District Meeting, to be held Oct. 5. Bro. J. B. Keith as delegate to represent the church at District Meeting. A series of meetings to be held by Eld. J. H. Brubaker, beginning Sept. 23.—J. M. Swinger, Frisco, Mo., Sept. 11.

Carthage.—Our church is progressing nicely. We have regular preaching services morning and evening each Lord's Day, and Sunday-school at 10 A. M. We have arranged to hold a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 24, and continue for after our love feast, to be held Nov. 18, at 3 P. M. Bro. Nicholas Wolfe, of Canton, Ill., will conduct the series of meetings.—N. Oren, Carthage, Mo., Sept. 12.

Fair View.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. The report of the brethren was very encouraging. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. J. B. Hylton was chosen delegate to the District Meeting, to be held Oct. 5. Bro. J. B. Keith as delegate to represent the church at District Meeting. A series of meetings to be held by Eld. J. H. Brubaker, beginning Sept. 23. Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Lincoln, Nebr., A series of lectures will be delivered by Bro. S. E. Thompson, of Lincoln, Nebr., A. C. Macomb, Mo., Sept. 11.

Log Creek church met in called council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. J. G. Harbinger, presided. We made arrangements for the District Meeting. Our Sunday-school was reorganized, with Bro. D. A. Bolin as superintendent. Our love feast was held. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14.—Bernice Stahl, Polo, Mo., Sept. 11.

Mineral Creek.—Bro. L. T. Holsinger came on Saturday evening and began a series of meetings. We are having extremely hot weather, but a good attendance. Two were baptized Sunday morning. One reclaimed. Our love feast is Nov. 5, at 4 P. M.—Zilpha Campbell, Leeton, Mo., Sept. 12.

Prairie View.—Bro. Yeagout is to begin a series of meetings here Sept. 30. Our love feast is to be held on the evening of the 29th.—Geneva Shepp, Versailles, Mo., Sept. 11.

Rich Hill.—Bro. Thomas Simmons began a series of meetings here Aug. 13, and held a two weeks' series of inspiring meetings. He gave us some missionary talks. Our offering of $10.36 was taken for Home Missions.—J. S. Merkey, R. D. 5, Rich Hill, Mo., Sept. 11.

MONTANA.

Glasston.—Our members met in their first council Sept. 2. A plan was formulated to raise money to defray the expenses of the church. We had a letter from two of our deacon brethren, who live fifty miles north of us, stating that they are having Sunday-school each Sunday and would like to have some preaching. Eld. Joseph Amick, of Elgin, Ill., preached a good sermon for us Sept. 3, which was much enjoyed. Bro. N. O. Troyer has been giving us some good Bible lessons on the ordinances. Our services continue with good interest.—M. Alva Long, Big Timber, Mont., Sept. 11.

Sumatra.—Wife and I have been located here about eighteen months, and, as far as climate and temporal conditions are concerned, like this locality very much. We are pleased that we need more members here. We are located on the west side of Flathead Lake, in the heart of the Flathead Indian district of Northwestern Montana. Any members of the Brethren church, especially ministers, who are thinking of changing location, would do well to investigate this country, while the land is yet comparatively cheap.—M. L. Moats, Somers, Mont., Sept. 11.

NEBRASKA.

Arcadia.—July 22 a young man came to us from the north end of our congregation, about thirty-five miling distant, desiring baptism. The next morning, as we were making the arrangements to baptize, he thought it best that his wife and sister might come also, so he made an appointment in their neighborhood. Aug. 1, when we went to baptize the two, there was another young man ready to be baptized with them. So we baptized the three. Another young lady was almost persuaded in her own mind, but, owing to shame and timid, she did not at this time unite with us. Sept. 2 we met in council, with the following result. There was more than the ordinary business to transact, as we are just starting a new congregation. We chose Bro. J. H. Miller church officers for the ensuing year are Sister Pearl Stern, clerk; Bro. A. P. Musselman, treasurer; Bro. D. Musselman, solicitor; Bro. A. P. Musselman, Messenger agent; the writer, church correspondent. We also chose Bro. Miller and Sister Dietrich Meeting; Bro. A. P. Musselman, alternate. Several recent talks on missionary work from Brethren Workman's Messages are greatly appreciated. Oct. 7 we expect to begin a series of meetings, to close with a love feast. We send one paper to District Meeting.—Mrs. Della Arcadia, Nebr., Sept. 11.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Brunmmetts Creek.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. Eld. H. M. Barnhart presided. Two letters were granted the church to be in good working order. Bro. Hiram Bailey, of Pountain City, Tenn., and Eld. Joel Hensley, of the Bethel church, Hignden, Ky., were with us Sept. 2 and preached for us. Brethren Chas. Griffith were elected to the ministry; Brethren J. D. Bradshaw and Jas. Bailey to the deaconship. The deacons will be installed. Our love feast will be held at this place Oct. 7. Two letters were granted for the church to be in good working order to the Beaver Creek church, Tenn.—Essie Whitson, Brunmmetts N. C., Sept. 19.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Berthold.—Bro. A. Hutchison, of McPherson, Kans., closed a series of meetings Aug. 29, with the writer. Sept. 3 we held a farewell to the outgoing missionaries to China. He delivered a very interesting and able sermon.—Lydia Ann Hutchison, N. Dak., Sept. 11.

Surrey.—Last Sunday evening Bro. Geo. W. Hilton preached his farewell sermon. We bade farewell to him and his family, last Thursday, for their long journey to China. Bro. D. L. Miller preached for us Sept. 9 on Sunday and Tuesday evenings. Two weeks ago, today, Bro. E. S. Foust, of Fredric, Iowa, preached his farewell sermon, preaching, at Surrey.—Mangrva Lambert, Surrey, N. Dak., Sept. 19.

OHIO.

Akron (First Church of the Brethren).—Our church was held Sept. 2. Brethren Claude Murray and A. F. Shriver were elected delegates to District Meeting, with Sisters Martin Myers and Hannah Shriver, alternates. Three letters of membership were received. We decided to purchase 100 Brethren Hymnals. Bro. D. L. Miller, of Surrey, N. Dak., Virginia, to assist us in the dedicatory services Dec. 3, and to hold a series of meetings. Eld. C. J. Weybright, of Ohio. Our church building can be completed by that time. Last Sunday evening Bro. Miller, of Surrey, N. Dak., preached a sermon who gave an excellent discourse on "Love."—Mrs. Jennie Shriver, Akron, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Baker.—Sept. 10, at our regular morning appointment, our elder, Bro. G. A. Snider, preached the first sermon of the series of meetings to be conducted by Bro. J. H. Brubaker. We may receive the blessings that may be theirs through his efforts. Our love feast will be held Sept. 23, at 2 P. M. Some of the meetings will probably close.—Blanche Lentz, Lafayette, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Danville.—We met in council Sept. 7, at the North Bend church. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Brubaker, presided. Two letters were received, and two granted. The decision of the last Conference on the dress question was read and explained. Brethren Jacob Wolfe and Wm. Eshelman, of Ohio, were read, and good admonitions were given. We are preparing to dedicate our meeting-house, Eld. C. J. Weybright, of Ohio, expected to represent this church at District Meeting.—Elizabeth Wolfe, Danville, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Lima.—On the evening of Sept. 6 our church enjoyed a talk by Sister Anna Hutchison, returned missionary from Africa. Sept. 8 Eld. G. A. Snider presided over our council meeting. Five letters were granted. The writer was chosen delegate. Bro. Shroyer will hold a series of meetings here in November.—Della Lehman, Lima, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Mexico.—Sept. 3 Eld. A. R. Coover, of Peebles, Ohio, gave us a good temperance sermon yesterday. Sept. 9 a young sister was received by baptism. Our elder, Bro. Ira Hoke, will place sent an offering of $1.50 to our Sunday-school Board. Our Sunday-school is doing nicely, and our elder, Bro. Hoke, expect to begin a protracted meeting soon.—Senith R. Setty, Mexico, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Swan Creek.—The members of this church met in council at the West house Sept. 2. Our annual meeting will be held at the West house Oct. 7, and until the Holidays. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 21, at 2 P. M., at the West house.—Clara Wolfe, R. D. 1, Box 1, Ottawa, Ohio, Sept. 11.

White Oak.—Eld. Jesse O. Garst, of Dayton, Ohio, came to this place Aug. 26, and began a series of meetings that took place sent an offering of $1.50 to our Sunday-school Board. Our Sunday-school is doing nicely, and our elder, Bro. Hoke, expect to begin a protracted meeting soon.—Senith R. Setty, Mexico, Ohio, Sept. 11.

White Oak.—Eld. Jesse O. Garst, of Dayton, Ohio, came to this place Aug. 26, and began a series of meetings that took place sent an offering of $1.50 to our Sunday-school Board. Our Sunday-school is doing nicely, and our elder, Bro. Hoke, expect to begin a protracted meeting soon.—Senith R. Setty, Mexico, Ohio, Sept. 11.

Wooster church has just closed a two weeks' series of inspiring meetings conducted by Bro. D. B. McFadden, of the Chippewa church. Seven decided to begin a new life, four of whom have been received.—Harry Brubaker, Wolfersville, Ohio, Sept. 12.

OKLAHOMA.

Elk City.—Twenty-five of our members attended the District Meeting at Thomas, Okla. This meeting was said to be the best we have had as a district for many months. We are glad to note that hereafter there will be a temperance program at each District Meeting. Sept. 2 and 3 we decided to hold a love feast Dec. 2.—A. B. Coover, Elk City, Okla., Sept. 11.

Thomas.—We feel that our recent Christian Workers' Meeting created a stronger sentiment in this church for missionary work than ever before. We have 18 members in the Home Missions. The District Meeting, which convened recently at Thomas, Okla., was the best attended and most enthusiastic meeting. Three were recently baptized. Bro. C. H. Brown is now with us in a series of meetings which are well attended meetings.—Elsie K. Sanger, Thomas, Okla., Sept. 11.

OREGON.

Newberg.—Bro. J. Z. Gilbert, of Los Angeles, Cal., was with us recently. In the evening he preached an acceptable sermon for us. Sept. 4 six of our young people left us for Lordsburg College. We regret their leaving us, yet we realize that they are preparing themselves for greater usefulness. One of them is one of our young ministers. Their absence will be felt in many ways, as their vacancies had to be filled in others. Sept. 9 we had a communion service, with the fellowship of Eld. H. H. Keim, assisted by Eld. Henry Brubaker. Their services were appreciated.—Mrs. Elizabeth Van Dyke, Newberg, Oregon, Sept. 6.

Portland (First Church).—Our church met in council on Tuesday evening, with Eld. G. C. Carl presiding. Four letters were granted. Bro. Wilfred Arnold and wife were installed into the deacon's office. We expect to have Bro. Andrew Hutchison hold some meetings for us while on his way to the West. Sister Nellie Carl was appointed church agent and correspondent. Several of our workers will attend school this year, and some go to other fields of labor. This will leave this church in need of workers. Those contemplating a change of location will receive a hearty welcome in this church. Here are three other merits found: there would be an inducement to you. The writer has been working in the ministerial force for five years, and will return for home in the east this month. After Sept. 25 all my correspondents should address me at 1015 Center Point, Ind. The past three years have given me many rich experiences.—Sarah Lucy Myers Mitchell, 1198 Mississippi Ave., Portland, Oregon, Sept. 11.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Albright church met in special council Sept. 9. Elders David Sell and Frederick Hoover were with us. Bro. Henry Rasher was elected to the ministry. Brethren Josiah Frosse, Michael Albright and Jacob Hollinger were set apart as deacon's office. They were all installed except one deacon.—Scott E. Albright, Hollsopple, Pa., Sept. 11.

Antietam.—Aug. 31 two were added to our fold by baptism. Sept. 3 a most excellent sermon by Bro. Hoover was on the subject of a series of meetings, held in the Mount Vernon schoolhouse, one mile south of Waynesboro. The meetings were conducted by one of our home ministers, Bro. F. D. Anthony. Since last report two have been baptized in our congregation.—Sadie M. Wingert, 203 S. Brown St., Waynesboro, Pa., Sept. 12.

Conestoga.—We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 12, which was well attended. Brethren Cyrus Gibble and Harry Yoder preached. Sept. 2 was communion, preceded by the Ordinance Hour. An out council meeting, Sept. 7. Bro. Hershey Urich preached for us Sept. 10. We are to have our fall love feast at the Bird-in-Hand house, beginning at 9:30 A. M. We united in the Children's Day services at the Millville Sunday-school Sept. 24.—Sallie Pfautz, R. D. 1, Bareville, Pa., Sept. 11.

Harrisburg.—Our church met in council Sept. 8. Our elder, Bro. G. N. Falkenstein, presided. The organization of a new Sunday-school was decided on next council meeting plans are to be presented. We decided to hold a series of meetings, to begin the second Sunday of December, and close the date to be announced later. The church will retain Sister Hertzler's membership, as she expects to return in another month. The date of our love feast and Children's Meeting is Oct. 28. Brethren Hoover are to assist us. Sept. 3 at A. M. the love feast, at 2 P. M.—Elton Peterson, 402 Crescent St., Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 11.

Huntingdon.—We held our monthly church meeting Sept. 8. The time was employed in giving talks on the simple life, and exhortations to faithfulness. Eld. J. H. Brubaker, of the church. Everything that was said breathed the spirit of love, and we had a good meeting. Bro. Hoover's series of meetings will be on ungathering of students and brethren and sisters concerning the Bible, and the need of a more thorough missional strength of the church. We hope all who come will be faithful with the Bible and in prayer. The Mount Union Sunday-school Convention, recently held here, was greatly enjoyed by the people.—J. B. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., Sept. 11.

Indian Creek church just closed a series of inspiring meetings by Eld. David Metzler, of Reading, Pa. The meetings opened Aug. 26, and closed Sept. 10. Our brother also conducted the Children's Meeting at our church. The work during at the Indian Creek house was divided equally between Bro. Orphanage and the Indian Creek. Bro. Metzler preached at Morristown, Pa. Three were received into the church by baptism on Sunday morning.—Mary Yoder, Yoderville, Pa., Sept. 11.

Licking Creek church will hold a love feast at the Pleasant Hill house, Sept. 30 and 31, at 2 P. M.—Irvin W. Garland, Brott, Pa., Sept. 8.

Mason—Brother and Sister J. M. Blough, returned missionaries from India, were with us over Sunday, September 3rd, 9, and gave two well-received addresses on the evenings of Sept. 3rd and 9th, on the work in the Bulsar and Dahanu India Mission. Then they came to the Penn Run house and talked on the same subject. They represented the conditions in the people in India, and on the 9th they spoke about religious work here at the home of the nations. Both talks were very much appreciated. An offering of $19.33 was taken for the India Mission work. Sept. 10 Bro. Blough preached at Penn Run house. About eighty communicants surrounded the Lord's tables. Visiting ministers present were Bro. J. M. Blough and Bro. Jacob Holsinger.—Helen Myers, Mason, Brother and Sister R. D. Berkey, Bro. Blough officiated.—J. M. Myers, R. D. 1, Box 1, Ortner, Pa., Sept. 11.

Midway.—We had our Children's Meeting at Midway Sept. 3. Elders Jacob Hollinger and J. H. Brubaker respectively addressed the school. The attendance was large and the meeting full of interest. Bro. Brubaker began a series of meetings at the Mount Zion house, Sept. 4. Bro. Jas. H. Shisler, of Harleysville, and Bro. Jos. Herr visited us over Sunday. Bro. Shisler also preached for us both Saturday evening and Sunday. Bro. Herr preached for us in Lebanon, in the morning of the 10th, and Bro. Wm. Hershey, in the evening. Sept. 10 Bro. G. N. Falkenstein preached in Lebanon in the evening. Bro. Hiram Brubaker has commenced a series of meetings for us at Mt. Midway, beginning Dec. 23.—A. H. Brubacher, R. D. 7, Lebanon, Pa., Sept. 11.

Mingo.—We met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. Jesse Ebersole, presided. Our series of meetings at the Meeting-house, will begin Sept. 30, and close with a love feast Oct. 14. We also expect a series of meetings at the Mingo house, commencing Nov. 25.—Elizabeth B. Hunsberger, R. D. 1, Royersford, Pa., Sept. 11.

Reading.—On Saturday, Sept. 9, our fall love feast will be held at the Reading meetinghouse, on Church Street, between Greenwich and Penn Sts. Services are to commence at 3 P. M., as near as possible.—H. H. Moyer, Reading, Pa., Sept. 11.

Summit Mills.—Bro. D. M. Adams, of Scalp Level, Pa., is to begin a series of meetings here Sept. 23. Our love feast will be held at the close of the meetings, Oct. 15. Bro. M. J. Brougher, of Kingwood, Pa., will be engaged in the ministry at the Pleasant Valley church, beginning Sept. 21 and closing Sept. 26. Sept. 3 Bro. S. J. Miller, of Sunnyside, Huntingdon Co., Pa., was with us and preached.—Ella Baylor, Meyersdale, Pa., Sept. 8.

Woodbury.—Bro. D. L. Miller, our District Sunday-school Secretary, was with us on Wednesday evening, Sept. 6, and gave us a very interesting talk on the subject of adult Bible class. We expect to hold a series of meetings at the Claysburg house, beginning Oct. 14; at the Curryville house, Oct. 28, and at the Woodbury house after the close of the meetings at Curryville. Eld. J. J. Shaffer, of Pa., is expected to do the preaching. Our last report was not published.—J. O. Stayer, R. D. 1, Woodbury, Pa., Sept. 8.

TENNESSEE.

Cedar Grove church held her much-appreciated love feast Sept. 10. The visiting ministers were Brethren Correll and Gauby, of Greene County, Tenn., and Bro. H. C. Miller, of Snowlake, Tenn.—Sarah C. Mallory, Rogersville, Tenn., Sept. 11.

Pleasant View.—We had our love feast on the 9th. Bro. P. D. Reed, of Limestone, Tenn., led in the services. The tables were filled by the members of the Pleasant View church. The Sunday-school congregation, Tenn., gave us very good admonition. Our meetings in the town of Jonesboro closed last night. Bro. A. M. Hendricks kindly gave the people watch

SPECIAL TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS

THE Gospel Messenger has long been considered one of the best religious papers published. Each week it contains sixteen large pages. It is published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren and is the only church organ published by the authority of Conference. Price $1.50 per annum.

The worth of this paper deserves a much larger circulation and in order to secure a larger circulation we are making three special offers.

1st. If you are not acquainted with the merits and wish to subscribe for it for a few months we will send you the paper from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1912 for only 25c.

2d. If the paper goes into a home where it has not been going we will send it from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1913 for only $1.50.

3d. In connection with the second proposition we will send you a copy of "Our Saturday Night" by J. H. Moore for only 35c extra. This is a book of 192 pages, containing fifty-four chapters on as many different subjects. It will make a valuable addition to any library and should be read by every one. It cannot be gotten except in connection with the Gospel Messenger.

Below you will find coupons, which we will kindly ask you to fill out and mail to us at once. Now. The sooner you send the more you get for your money. The longer you wait the less papers you get. Send today.

SPECIAL TO OLD SUBSCRIBERS

We want you to assist us in getting new subscriptions. Speak to friends about the special offer. Show them the coupons. Get their signature. Possibly you have a few friends to whom you want to donate the paper. All we ask is that the paper goes into homes where it is not now being received, for no name will be accepted at these prices that is already on our books.

To every one sending us two coupons at the 25c rate, or one at either the $1.50 or $1.85 rate, we will send postpaid a beautiful art picture, size 16 x 20 inches, of the "Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments." Any one sending his own subscription is not entitled to this premium.

BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL.

In accordance with your offer to accept this coupon and twenty-five cents as pay for the Gospel Messenger from now to Jan. 1, 1912, I send herewith 25 cents, and I hereby certify that I am not now a subscriber to the Gospel Messenger, and that this subscription is not intended to take the place of any subscription now on your list.

to think about, in the eight sermons he gave us. The attendance and attention were very good.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 11.

TEXAS.

Notice.—For the benefit of those that have written me for a copy of the Dr. Kesler debate, to be held at Miami, Texas, and others who may still order, I will say that we have not yet secured a stenographer, though we hope to and can serve for the first five days. I have written Bro. Kesler, and if we publish the debate, you will all surely get a copy.—N. A. Gray, Miami, Texas, Sept. 9.

VIRGINIA.

Elk Run.—Bro. Minor Cline began a series of meetings Aug. 19. He delivered fifteen excellent sermons. Three Sunday-school pupils were baptized. We held our Harvest Meeting Aug. 31, 2 P. M. A collection was taken for the Old Folks at the Staunton church. We met in council Sept. 9, with Bro. D. C. Eigler presiding. The visiting brethren gave a good report. Two letters were received, and one was given. Two members were reclaimed. We are to hold our Fall meeting Sept. 113. Our love feast, at the Bell's Valley house, will be held Oct. 14, at 3 P. M.—Sarah C. Zigler, R. D. 1, Churchville, Va., Sept. 14.

Germantown.—Our church met in council at the Brick church Sept. 9. Bro. J. B. Petry was elected to the ministry. Bro. J. W. Barnhart was ordained to the eldership. The annual call for the deacons' meeting was read, and certificates of membership were granted. A series of meetings will be held at this house, November by Bro. J. B. Petry. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 7.—Mas Barnhart, Wirtz, Va., Sept. 11.

Groftons.—I am now in the second week of my revival meetings at the Midway church, Va., not far from Charlottesville. Four people are taking great interest in the services. Twenty-seven have applied for membership. Seventeen were baptized last Sunday, and ten will be next. The outlook is very bright for many more.—John W. Miller, Grottoes, Va., Sept. 11.

Mountain Grove.—Bro. S. H. Flory closed his meetings at this place Aug. 3, with excellent results. Seven persons were baptized, one restored, and three others await the rite. When the work was begun in 1908 there were but four members, now our number has reached almost 100. Our Sunday-school has kept up through the severe warm weather with an average attendance of nearly 100, and our collection for the benefit of those baptized were Sunday-school boys. A number of them were gray-headed fathers and mothers. We feel, more and more, the need of a permanently-located minister at this place. The harvest is ripe, and who will take care of it? Eld. S. A. Sanger will begin a series of meetings Sept. 17, in the Honeytown house, the Sunday-school point that Sister Lillian Wampler has had in charge during the summer.—Nelle Wampler, Dyke, Va., Sept. 11.

Mount Hermon.—We held our council Sept. 2. Eld. M. G. Early presided. Brethren B. B. Switzer and J. W. Good are our delegates to District Meeting. Brethren J. H. Hendrix-gardner and I. D. Byrd, alternates. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30, at 2 P. M., at the Mount Hermon house. Our series of meetings, at the Midland church, commenced Aug. 29, and closed Sept. 6. We had good meetings, conducted by Eld. I. M. Neff, of Oakton, Va. Four united with the church. A series of meetings will begin Sept. 17, at the Mount Hermon house, to be conducted by Bro. Geo. Chambers, of Rhodesville, Va.—Bya E. Hinegardner, R. D. 1, Midland, Va., Sept. 11.

Red Oak Grove.—We had our love feast Sept. 2. Ministers present from other congregations were Brethren Jno. Elgin, John Wimmer, Noah Wimmer and Daniel Shaver. Eld. Wm. Elgin officiated. On Sunday, at 11 A. M., Bro. John Wimmer preached for us. In the evening at 7:30 P. M. he preached at Stonewall. We certainly enjoyed his visit.—Mrs. Lucy Redman, R. D. 5, Box 44, Floyd, Va., Sept. 8.

Woodstock.—On account of having our love feast at the close of our series of meetings, the Brethren have decided to change the time of the love feast from Oct. 7 to Oct. 14, at the Valley Pike house.—M. M. Copp, Maurertown, Va., Sept. 11.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Harman.—Eld. Jonas Pike began a series of meetings here Sept. 1, which continued throughout the week. Sept. 7 we met in council. We had our well-attended love feast Sept. 9. Sept. 10 two funeral sermons were preached,—one in the forenoon, and the other in the afternoon,—for our sister, Nettie Harman, Harman, W. Va., Sept. 11.

Lower Cove River.—Aug. 30 Bro. D. D. Long, of Mount Jackson, Va., began holding a most interesting series of meetings for us, continuing for ten days. Seven were baptized, and two reclaimed. Two more expect to unite with the church soon. All, except two, were baptized there. Our love feast will be Sept. 16.—L. H. Miller, Lost River, W. Va., Sept. 11.

Notice.—The Mission Board of the First District of West Virginia will meet at the schoolhouse near the church, in the Knobley congregation, on Friday, Oct. 29, at 9 A. M., sharp. All business to be considered by the Board should be placed in their hands before that time. The Elders' Meeting convenes at 1 P. M., the same day and at the same place.—Peter Arnold, Burlington, W. Va., Sept. 11.

Organ Cave.—Sept. 5 Bro. A. F. Pursley, of Buchanan, Va., came to us and delivered eight interesting sermons. May more such meetings be held in this community!—William Meisler, Organ Cave, W. a., Sept. 11.

Spruce Run.—We met in council Sept. 9, with Bro. Nathan Garst presiding. The visiting brethren reported the church to be in peace and union. We will hold our love feast Oct. 14 and 15. Bro. Garst gave us two Spirit-filled sermons,—one at Spruce Run and one at Green Valley.—Lena B. Fleshman, Lindside, W. Va., Sept. 11.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Richland.—Our Harvest Meeting, held Sept. 10, was well attended. Bro. Wm. Dewberry, of Ashland, Ohio, conducted a most interesting meeting. Dinner was served at the church, and in the afternoon we had another interesting time. Bro. Dessenberg. The offering amounted to $18.25. Children's exercises in the evening. Interesting and profitable services. We expect Bro. D. G. Berkebile to begin a series of meetings for us Sept. 18.—Ira E. Long, Mansfield, Ohio, Sept. 12.

Saginaw church met in council Aug. 26, at 2 P. M. As our elder, Bro. Daniel Chambers, could not be present, Bro. Levi Kiplinger took charge. Our deacons reported 24 members in love and union. Our love feast is to be held Oct. 28 and 29, to begin at 2 P. M. A series of meetings will begin Oct. 1, by W. J. Kiillian, of Beaverton, Mich. Those thinking of changing location, and in need of a church, will find here a good churchhouse, good schools and good water. Some farms are offered for sale.—Mrs. Rachel Lewis-J. K. Shaffer, Saginaw, Mich., Sept. 12.

Johnstown.—We will hold our love feast Oct. 1, at 5:30 P. M. Our pastor, Bro. Wm. Howe, will conduct one week's series of meetings prior to our feast. We expect to have Bro. D. S. Cripe, from Ohio, to be with us at our love feast. Following the love feast he expects to hold a series of meetings in the Walnut Grove house.—Ada M. Beachy, 714 Thomas Ave., Johnstown, Pa., Sept. 11.

Bridgewater.—Our council met Sept. 8. The visiting brethren gave an encouraging report. Bro. P. S. Miller, who has served us as elder for eighteen years, presided. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14, at 4 P. M. Sept. 13 Bro. E. C. Crumpacker, of Bonsacks, Va., preached a soul-stirring sermon. Bro. J. H. Murray, of Roanoke, Va., preached for us at night. Our Sunday-school, with Bro. Allen Hoover as superintendent, is prospering.—Mrs. B. S. Greenway, Bridgewater, Va., Sept. 13.

Boyer.—Bro. John Glick came to our place Aug. 6 and preached seven convicting sermons. The members were much built up. One was applied for membership, but has not yet been baptized. Aug. 23 Bro. J. T. Glick, of Bridgewater, Bro. D. M. Wine, of Valley View, and Bro. J. W. Detwiler, Va., attended our love feast. Thirty-four members communed. It was the best meeting of the kind held at this place.—Allen Calhoun, Boyer, W. Va., Sept. 14.

Girdling The Globe

By D. L. Miller.

Prompted by an inborn desire to know, the author of this book made a tour of the world; and feeling himself under obligations to the many whose conditions in life prevent their going to see for themselves, he gives to the world, in this work, a record of things seen, of thrilling and interesting experiences and of lessons learned. This book is of interest to those who have been over the ground covered in it, by way of comparison with their own experiences; to those who may have under contemplation such a journey; as a guide book; to such as are denied the privilege of so doing; as a means of obtaining a fund of knowledge not otherwise obtainable. It is a continued story. The author speaks of the tour as a "homeward journey" from the very moment he and his wife started from home. The style is easy and intelligible, so that all who read can understand. The book contains 602 pages, profusely illustrated, substantially bound.

WAR VERSUS PEACE

By Jacob Funk

The subject treated in this book is one which, more than any other, vitally concerns the civilized nations of the world, and the interest in it is growing. It is important that the people be intelligent on this subject. All need to know just the things that are herein given. The following subjects are taken up:

The Causes of War, The Evils of War, The Cost of War, A Brief History of the Peace Movement, and Ways of Advancing Peace.

The information concerning each of the above subjects is given in brief form and in a style which makes it interesting reading. It contains the cream of facts gleaned from many historical works, reports of conventions, published articles, etc.

The reading of the book gives one a clear vision of the horrors of war, the enormous cost in money and human life of it, and is sure to inspire greater zeal in the hearts of the people in the peace movement. It deserves a wide circulation.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Cry for Bread.

It is sad, indeed, to think that any one should be deprived of the merest necessities of life, and it is distressing that the food riots in France, referred to a few weeks ago, are now succeeded by Austria's equally deplorable clamor for bread. When the people are threatened by dire want, reason and good judgment do not always prevail, and it takes wise heads to keep control of affairs. The present condition of things in Austria, and especially in Vienna, is indicative of a serious social delinquency. If it is true, as is alleged, that the laboring classes are oppressed, in order that the rich may live in luxury, the remedy should be sought and promptly applied. Holy Writ solemnly arraigns all those who, in any way, oppress the poor, and withhold what is justly due them.

Compulsory Education for India.

A recent bill before the Legislature of India makes the education of all her people compulsory, and, being free to all, will be available to even the poorest. Under the provisions of this enactment, boys will attend school from the age of six to twelve, and girls from six to ten. This bill, if passed and practically applied throughout the country, will mean a most momentous mental uplift for the swarming millions of India. It will pave the way for more effectual missionary labors among the young, and there will be a great and unprecedented opportunity for gospel workers. Consecrated efforts will be needed more than ever before, however, lest the army of young people, trained intellectually in the proposed schools, be barren spiritually, and relapse into hopeless agnosticism.

Quite Appropriate.

The greatly-discussed Brewers' Congress, to be held next month in Chicago, is to close its sessions Oct. 22, and now it is announced that the Illinois State Conference of Charities is to open at about the time when the brewers are through deliberating on the best ways and means of extending their traffic. We have here a most remarkable instance of the eternal fitness of things,—a logical succession of events that is most impressive. Where the brewer is most active, there the need of the beneficences of charity is most imperative. As a fruitful source of poverty and abject misery, the saloon has no equal, and the State Conference of Charities may well put forth its strongest efforts, after the brewers shall have worked so assidnously for a substantial enlargement of their business.

The "Men and Religion Forward" Movement.

Sept. '18 this noted campaign for the dissemination of Christian principles was opened in New York. Thirty specially-trained men are to direct the onslaught against the hosts of wickedness, and to win thousands of men and boys to a better life. From New York the work is to spread to other American cities, and it is planned to make this the most effective propaganda for Christianity ever undertaken in the United States. Many prominent business men, among them the noted J. P. Morgan, have pledged not only their active support, but also unlimited amounts of money for the successful completion of the undertaking. While, undoubtedly, much will be accomplished in helpful Christian effort, one cannot but wish that the whole Gospel, in all its effectiveness, might be proclaimed in this great campaign, as it was "once delivered to the saints."

Antichristian Influence of Modern Novels.

The enemy of righteousness, in a vain quest of effective means to check the advancing hosts of Christianity, seems at last to have found a subtle yet powerful weapon. He has turned to modern fiction—some men of reputation assure us,—"to ignore all the old landmarks of morality, to brush the accepted ethics of two thousand years' evolution aside with a sneer." One of the leading religious journals frankly says, "One would not know that there was such a thing as Christianity in existence from reading these novels." A prominent New York judge recently observed that a large majority of divorce cases are the outgrowth of the pernicious ideas advanced in the modern novel. By the false standard of conjugal morality, evolved from the novelist's brain, divorce, adultery, and crimes against the social order, are too often glossed over, and even held up as the true way of life. It would seem to be high time that the pulpit, the Sunday-school and, most of all, the parents, sound a cry of warning against the enticements of pernicious fiction.

All Missionaries Safe.

In harmony with Christ's command, "If they persecute you in one city, flee to another," all missionaries in the Sze-Chuan province have escaped to the nearest places of refuge, and it is now reported that the resources of the Chinese government are pledged for their safety. This, certainly, is encouraging. It is a factor of no mean significance that the attitude of the Chinese authorities is distinctly favorable to all legitimate missionary effort, and especially do they favor workers from the United States. In securing instructors for their various institutions of learning, special preference has been given to Americans. We have, as a nation, given fair treatment to China, and are now reaping as we have sown.

Christian Science Healers.

According to the recent decision of a New York court Christian Science healers are not allowed to charge for whatever alleged treatment they may doctor to give to possible sufferers. In the specific case, brought before the court in question, the healer held his hand to the face of a patient who suffered from palpitation of the heart, charging $2 for each so-called treatment. The judge decided that religious belief is no excuse for an unlawful act, —that no one has the right to charge a fixed price for whatever benefit may result from his so-called acts of healing. From this legal decision it seems quite clear that, while no objection is raised to the healing itself, in no case must a fee be charged for the benefit claimed to be conferred.

Will There Be Drafting?

With the great difficulty now being experienced in securing enough volunteers for the United States Army and Navy, our military authorities are working on various plans to overcome the serious shortage resulting them. General Evans' plan, supported by leading military authorities, provides that every community be required to furnish a certain number of soldiers at all times, increasing the ratio in times of war, as needed. The young men for this service are to be chosen just as they are now drawn for jury service. We are inclined to think that the majority of the American people are too well blessed with good sense to give such an extremely objectionable military government a place on the statute books of the nation. They are lovers of peace rather than war.

No Polygamists for South Africa.

Hindu settlers in South Africa, while heartily welcomed as industrial factors in the development of the country, are not allowed to transplant their polygamous practices into the land of their adoption. A Hindu who, after some years' residence, sought to bring in a second wife, was refused permission to do so, though he proved that she was his legal wife in India. The land in which he is now living claims to be a Christian nation, and as such recognizes the baleful effects of polygamy. While welcoming foreigners to their land, they see no reason why they should be allowed to bring along any vileness they may happen to cling to. Hundreds of customs, peculiar to the people of India, and allowed in their own land, can not possibly be allowed entrance by civilized nations. So, also, in the church of the Living God. We welcome the prodigal to the best there is in the Father's house, but he must leave behind him all that belongs to the "far country," and must be willing to comply with all the laws that pertain to the kingdom of grace.

Spanish Revolt Under Control.

The menacing strike which the General Labor Union of Spain centered upon Barcelona, is declared to be a demonstration against the Government, rather than an effort to obtain higher wages or shorter hours. It appears, however, that the Spanish Premier, with unexpected vigilance, dealt a severe blow to the revolutionary and anarchistic element with but a minimum of disturbance, thereby materially strengthening the position of his Government at home, as well as enhancing the prestige of his country abroad. Spain, like Italy, Portugal and France, has turbulent elements within her borders that greatly threaten the stability of organized government. It is fortunate, however, that the King as well as the Premier of Spain are able to cope with the exigencies of the situation, and by a firm attitude are likely to avert a serious crisis. Much depends upon wise leadership in the affairs of state, but it is equally important in the spiritual realm. Unfaithful and men-pleasing shepherds proved the undoing of ancient Israel, and the same unfortunate condition is destroying the influence and power of the church today. Too often principles of right are sacrificed for the sake of popularity.

Increasing Man's Longevity.

There are more than 1,300,000 deaths in the United States each year. Deducting cases of unavoidable accidents and those that are due to old age, there are still many others that are clearly traceable to preventable causes,—certainly one-half of the whole. The loss incurred by this reduction of the world's earning power is reckoned at three billion dollars annually. "The Committee of One Hundred on National Health" has recently organized the American Health League, for the special purpose of disseminating health information and securing health legislation. That there is a wide field for such an endeavor, is not to be doubted. Prof. Metchnikoff insists that at present man does not live out half his days, and that, with better health conditions and surroundings, the average of human life might be greatly lengthened. Still more important, however, than length of days is a "life hid with Christ in God," fully answering the purpose of the Great Creator.

Unfortunate Conditions in Russia.

The ill-advised attack upon Premier Stolypin by a half-crazed, anarchistically-inclined Jew, has assumed a still graver aspect by the resultant death of the noted Russian official Sept. 18. While the assassin's co-religionists are in no way responsible for the lawless act, naturally there are grave apprehensions among the Jews, lest the wrath of the Government be visited upon them by making severely than at times when no occasion was given for such severity. Already twelve thousand Jews have left Kieff, and the exodus still continues. Preliminary investigations have shown the Russian administrative circles to be honeycombed by most deplorable corruption, and that the assassination was only a legitimate result of existing conditions, secretly connived at by officials in high standing. However well-meaning the Czar may be, his best-laid plans are sure to fail because of the unreliability of his officials. Solomon most forcibly impresses the value of efficient and competent leadership in saying, "When the righteous are in authority, the people rejoice."

Religious Principles.

It is well to have religious principles, but better yet to stick to them under all circumstances. Bernard Dell, the Princeton athlete, during his recent trip in Germany, happened to be at St. Moritz, while Prince Adalbert, son of Emperor William, was at the same place. When Mr. Dell was asked to play a game of tennis with the prince on Sunday, the American promptly and frankly replied, "I never play games on Sunday; it is against my religious principles." May it not be true that increasing crime and lawlessness, so evident everywhere, are largely due to a serious loosening of the moral fiber of humanity in general, and especially so as regards Sunday observance? Daniel Webster declared that the four pillars of America are the family, the school, the church, and the Lord's Day, and he instantly contended that the republic would not survive the loss of Sunday one century. To the shame of our country it must be confessed that too often the question of Sunday observance is settled upon the basis of commercial success, instead of deciding it upon the rock of Christ's teaching, that will stand immutable through all ages.

Agriculture in the Jordan Valley.

Much surprise has been expressed by many that more extended use has not been made of the rich lands of the Jordan Valley, by means of irrigation systems, to utilize the millions of gallons of water now emptying into the Dead Sea. Consul-General Stanley, the American representative in Palestine, suggests that the plan is perfectly feasible, and he also reports that a syndicate has already acquired a large portion of the Jordan Valley, with the view of having it supplied with an efficient irrigation system. As all these lands belong to the Turkish crown, ten per cent of all profits will have to be paid as a lease of the portion selected, but even this will not be oppressive, as the great fruitfulness of the land, when thoroughly irrigated, will yield a handsome revenue. It is thought that Egyptian cotton will prove to be a profitable crop in the Jordan Valley. Then, too, the agricultural development of that entire section, hitherto hindered by inadequate transportation facilities, will, doubtless, be largely enhanced by the construction of a proposed trolly line to the nearest station on the Hedjaz railway, which, east of the Jordan, runs southward to Medina and Mecca. Without question, important developments will, in the near future, occur in the land once owned and controlled by God's chosen people,—events that may be of far-reaching importance in the Lord's own good time.

ESSAYS

Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Let Something Good Be Said.

When over the fair fame of friend or foe
The shadow of disgrace shall fall, instead
Of words of blame, or proof of thus and so,
Let something good be said.

Forget not that no fellow-being yet
May fall so low but love may lift his head;
Even the cheek of shame with tears is wet,
If something good be said.

No generous heart may vainly turn aside
In ways of sympathy; no soul so dead
But may awaken strong and glorified,
If something good be said.

And so I charge ye, by the thorny crown
And by the cross on which the Savior bled,
And by your own soul's hope of fair renown,
Let something good be said.

"Consider the Lilies."

BY JOHN M. STOVER.

THE admonition of Christ is to "consider the lilies," not merely admire them. Jesus might have given a learned lesson on botany from his chosen illustration, and have been within his own domain of teaching. But then we, perhaps, would not have received the wholesome instructions to Christians that are contained in this beautiful lesson.

The careful Bible student is wonderfully impressed by the aptness of Jesus' illustrations. It is like an inventor describing his own machine, because Jesus not only gives us the beautiful illustration, but he also knows all about the heaven-created lily.

It was this characteristic of our Lord,—the taking of the simple and beautiful objects of life and nature to illustrate the matchless truths of his religion, that made his teaching so powerful. In his day, as in this, philosophers theorized and the doctors of the law wrangled, but Jesus taught (Matt. 7:29).

If ever there was a time in the history of the church, that men should get down to the bed rock of Christ's teaching, along the lines of simplicity of life and purity of character, it is now. I would to God that every professing Christian man and woman in the world would make a study of the fifth, sixth and seventh chapters of the Book of Matthew, and ponder long, and study well, the illustration of the lilies.

Methinks I can see our blessed Lord as he sat on the mountain side teaching those incomparable lessons. Away from the din and pomp and hypocrisy of the city, surrounded by the beauties of nature, he is promulgating his principles of love and humility and peace, and he desires to teach the crowning lesson of faith and dependence on God. As he looks about him for an illustration, he sees at his feet a beautiful lily of the valley. Calling the attention of his hearers to the lovely little flower, he speaks the words of our thought: "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: and yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which today is, and tomorrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith" (Matt. 6:30)?

So, then, man,—the only creature, so far as we absolutely know, that is endowed with reason, and hope of immortality,—must learn from the lowly flower. As I hear the blessed Master say, "Consider the lilies," I wonder what moral lessons or truths I shall learn from my consideration of the beautiful lily.

Well, one grand thing about the Master's teaching is the fact that he never tells us to do anything without giving us, as it were, the key-note to the situation. "How they grow." "They toil not, neither do they spin." They just simply grow. And they can't help it either. "How they grow." Growth is a natural sequence. Place a plant under favorable conditions and it will grow. Well, how do they grow? Who can explain the process? Who will rise up and tell how and why it is that the leaves push up into the air and sunlight, absorbing from them the life-giving elements, necessary to growth, while the roots go down into the darkness of the soil on the same mission? I hear some one say, "Nature." Well, what is nature? "I have planted, Apollos watered, but God gave the increase" (1 Cor. 3:6). There you have it. The laws of nature are the immutable laws of God. "Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, . . . shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

How shall we apply this proposition to our lives? We must stop worrying and piling stones on our heads to make ourselves bigger. Just simply grow. Christian life is nothing but a growth. Do like the lily. Get into proper conditions and then expand under the gracious sunshine of his love, and the precious showers of his daily blessings.

Another characteristic of the lily is its steadfastness,—always filling its mission. Wife and I went to the forest, one beautiful spring day, and admired a lily so much that we dug it up and carried it home and planted it in the lawn, under what we thought were congenial conditions. As the years came, how eagerly we watched for the little tender shoot to come pushing up through the ground in the spring-time. As regularly as the coming of the spring-tide, so sure was the lily to show its smiling face.

Again, I notice, that storms do not affect it. Here stands a mighty oak,—the product of a thousand years of growth, upright and rigid, the symbol of might and strength! At his foot is a slender lily that sways and bends before the lightest breeze.

On the distant horizon there rises a storm cloud. By and by the sun is darkened and all nature puts on a somber hue. Then there is a rush and a roar, and a tornado sweeps over the land. The air is filled with flying missiles. The monster oak is stiff and unyielding, and receives the full force of the storm. There is a shriek of wind, a roar and a reverberating thud that makes the earth tremble,—and there he lies, his mighty length stretched out upon the earth.

The wind howls out its fury. The clouds have passed away, the sun is shining brightly, and there is the humble lily, as smiling and beautiful as ever.

Another attribute of the lily is its absolute conformity to type. The lily is always a lily. What would you think of a lily that would try to be a sunflower? Just imagine a lily saying, "I don't see why I must always be dressed in white. Just plain, simple white. How lovely that red rose is" (look out, lily, there are thorns under that velvet rose). "I wish I was as tall and stately as that sunflower. My environments are such that I can't be a plain, unassuming lily." Silly, isn't it? "For after all these things do the Gentiles seek: for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness, and all these things shall be added unto you."

What do you think of the professing Christian who tries to act and talk and deport himself like the world about him? Did you ever have any trouble to pick out a lily from among a bed of flowers? "Oh," says some one, "a lily can't help how it grows." Of course not. Can you? What power has man over his physical growth? "Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature?"

Again, the lily is an object lesson to Christians in contentment. Brethren, are we satisfied with our lot? Or are we whining and pining because we do not have the opportunities and blessings that some one else has? I do not mean by this that a man should get down in a deep rut and stay there. I am satisfied that, if we live up to our opportunities, we will get out of the old ruts and have our fingers full besides. And I think that every Christian's earnest prayer should be, "Help me, Lord, to be everything in my power to be."

Another beautiful lesson that the lily brings to me, is, that it is a type of the resurrection. The storms of winter destroy it. Under the autumn's blighting frosts it withers and dies, and the place that knew it shall know it no more forever. But its roots are firmly planted in the solid earth. And after the rigors of winter are over, when the warm south wind begins to blow; and the gentle rain to fall, there will come to pass a marvelous thing. Here will come a new lily, larger and stronger and more beautiful than it was before.

The Church Visit.

BY IDA WILDERGER.

HAVING just passed through the time of the annual church visit, we have been made to think, and think seriously. As we ponder on the purpose of this visit, we are satisfied in our mind that it is for the renewing of our vows, and the strengthening of our faith. Then, are we not losing a great blessing, both he that visits and the one to whom the visit is extended if its real aim is missed?

Now, as we have pondered this subject, we have been impressed with the importance of prayer in each home. Let a portion of God's Word be read (perhaps a part of Matt. 18). Then, after the usual questions have been asked, let all bow before God around the family altar, asking his blessings upon that home and especially each soul that has renewed its vow to God. Then each one may arise with a heart full of love, and be only the better prepared to meet the conflicts of life. Then, perhaps, we would be in a better frame of mind to present our admonitions and have a heart-to-heart talk. "Confess your faults one to another, and pray for one another that ye may be healed. The effectual, fervent prayer of a righteous man availeth much" (1 Peter 5:16).

Now, perhaps, some one will say, "Is the deacon brother above reproach? Is he perfect that he should be so much interested in others?" Is there a better way to become perfect than by prayer? He need not pray as did the Pharisee. Simply let him pour out his heart to God as he feels. Perhaps it would strengthen him more than any one else. It does seem as if it would give us a more consecrated, more efficient body of deacons. Who could pass through such a time of refreshing without being built up in the inner man?

Perhaps some of our good brethren will say, "We are not accustomed to praying in public." Here comes your opportunity again to develop and become better prepared soldiers of the cross. If there are any such it is time to begin, for in this age of spiritual decline we want to be ready to do anything that will lift a human soul to a higher plane of living, and God only knows how much might be accomplished in this way. There are many aged ones, and those who seldom have the privilege of attending church, who enjoy these visits more than we know. And who can estimate the power of prayer? It is a lamentable fact that there is not enough praying done. Surely no one would object to prayer in the home, and especially should those, of the same household of faith, be earnest petitioners at a Throne of Grace for their mutual edification.

The Divine Idea of Dress.

[By Frank S. Weston, Pastor of Immanuel Baptist Church, Toronto, Can. Reprinted from "Our Hope," New York City, a monthly magazine devoted to Bible Study. Selected by J. Edward Jones, Larned, Kans.]

LOOKING out upon the panoramic field of God's works, and observing all the beauty and variety to be seen in this universe, we can not but feel that God is a lover of dress. He has put robes of beauty and of glory upon all his works. Flower, field and bird are each clothed in habiliments of the most exquisite taste. No two are dressed exactly alike, for the Creator delights in variety. Of the living creatures not one is left in an unclothed condition. Many are naked when ushered into existence, but it is not long until the bird is covered with feathers and the beast with hair or wool. Man alone, of all God's creatures, is left without clothing. Man alone is compelled to have recourse to artificial clothing. Why is this?

To answer this question, it is necessary to go back to the beginning of human history, and understand something of the primitive condition of mankind.

The Creator gave to the first man and woman a wonderful nature. Not only this, but while they remained in their right relation to God, the Spirit breathed into them his power and vigor. The first pair wore no clothing, nor did they need to, for the Spirit's power not only defended their being from the inroads of death, but, at the same time, shining through the covering of flesh, shed a halo about them. So the elements of their nature were concealed within a veil of radiant glory.

The fall of Adam wrought a great change. The Spirit was overborne, the light faded and the body became naked. There are no naked creatures who have retained their natural state. The fact that mankind is in such a state, proclaims his fall.

When sin blighted Adam's nature and corrupted his character, it also took away his clothing. We are told immediately after their transgression, "And they knew they were naked" (Gen. 3:7).

No sooner did the transgressors realize that they had become unclothed, than they hastened to make clothes for themselves. "They sewed fig leaves together and made themselves aprons." This was the beginning of dress. Time has changed and improved both the material and the art of dressing; but every kind of clothing, however rich and costly, is only an artificial covering like the fig leaves.

Dr. Joseph Parker says: "They sewed fig leaves, and this we have been doing ever since. We try to replace nature by art. When we have lost the garment, sent from heaven, we try to replace it with one woven from earth. But our deformities show through the fairest robe. Clothes are the trappings of guilt." Joseph Parker is right. The dress worn by fallen humanity is unnatural. Adam appropriated a dress, never intended for man.

We are now, I think, in a position to see the divine idea of dress. It is this,—that every living object and creature should be clothed from within. This law is operative throughout the whole realm of nature. There are no creatures clothed from without. Plants, trees, beasts,—all are clothed from within. We see in this why our Lord preferred the robe of the lily to all the magnificence of Solomon. The clothing of the king was put on from without, whereas the beauty of the lily was developed from within, and therefore an expression of its life.

Sin having destroyed man's appropriate dress, God gave a substitute. "Unto Adam and to his wife did the Lord God make coats of skin and clothed them" (Gen. 3:21). Not long were Adam and Eve allowed to wear the artificial dress they had adopted. The Creator pitied them, and became a very present help in time of trouble. He took away their self-devised clothing and gave them dresses of his own providing. There were "coats of skin." Why did he not provide a more refined and beautiful dress than skin? For the reason that dress was divinely intended to be a revelation of character. When Adam sinned, he became animalized. Skins were, therefore, the most suitable dress he could wear. After the Creator had clothed the first transgressors, he left humanity to follow their own devices in the matter of dress. The result has been an endless variety and a never-ceasing change.

We, who live in civilized lands, lay the whole world under tribute to provide materials wherewithal to be clothed. India, Japan, France and Germany are sources of material for a single suit.

The changes in dress are often ridiculous. Each generation laughs at the styles of its forefathers. This fact alone shows how unnatural is our clothing. Dr. Watts wrote:

> "How proud we are, how fond to show
> Our clothes and call them rich and new,
> When some poor sheep and silkworm wore
> That very clothing long before."

Carlyle says: "The horse I ride is his own weaver and spinner,—nay his own bootmaker and milliner, while I thatch myself over with the dead fleeces of sheep, the bark of vegetables, the entrails of worms, the hides of oxen, the felt of furred beasts,—and walk about, a moving rag screen."

And yet how much sin there is in dress (Isa. 3:16-24). While the foolish worldlings follow the fashions of the day, the children of God should dress becomingly. This body is now the temple of the Holy Spirit, and as such should have a good but simple covering. This unnatural dress will one day come off. Every night, as we unclothe to go to rest, may well remind us of that solemn day to come when we shall be unrobed.

Has God's idea, then, failed? By no means. The fall was man's unclothing. Man's restoration will be his reclothing. The divine idea is to clothe man from within, therfore he must be restored to God first.

In the Divine purpose clothing is a revelation of what is within. Every creature unfallen is clothed differently and we know them by their clothing.

Will man's outer covering be a revelation of what is within? So I read. "Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. He that hath ears, let him hear" (Matt. 13:43). The righteous are to be arrayed in garments of light (Dan. 12:3; Rev. 3:5).

The resurrection body will be a radiant body. This is not a new idea. The old author, Corndale, says: "Wherefore the glorified bodies shall be clear, bright and shining bodies, even as the body of Christ was, in his transfiguration upon the mount, of whom it is specified that his face was bright as the sun and his clothes did shine as the light."

From Dan. 12:2, 3, and other passages, we learn that the visible brightness admits of degrees. As the sun and stars differ, so among the saints (1 Cor. 15:41, 42).

What will cause these differences? The sovereign will of God? It might. But we have learned that dress is, in God's idea, a revelation of character. In the resurrection, therefore, the difference will tell the person's qualities.

Dress in heaven will be the outshining of holy character. What a person is, will clothe him. The thoughts and feelings will tint and mould his apparel. (They do this in a manner now.)

Our life here is making a robe which will be visible in the eternal world. The soul now manifests its emotions through the body. Saints and martyrs have had a face that looked at times like porcelain with a light behind it (Acts 6:15).

The time will come when that within will be our dress. If this is so, it becomes us to see what is within (Col. 3:12-17).

The Prayer Covering.

BY G. E. YODER.

We have had some very good thoughts presented in some former numbers of this volume of the Messenger on this subject. There are just a few things that I should like to note in addition to what has been given. What we have to say is in the light of the American Revised Version.

There are three distinct coverings mentioned in 1 Cor. 11:1-16. First, the weather or protection covering. Second, the veil covering or "sign of authority." Third, nature's covering,—the hair.

The Man's Position.

By referring to verse four you will notice that the covering there mentioned, which the man is to remove, is not the same as that mentioned in verse five, which the woman is to put on. The one mentioned in verse four is translated "covering," while that in verse five is transfated "veil." The former, doubtless, refers to man's weather or protection covering, while the latter refers to the woman's "sign of authority" (verse 10). In verse seven, when Paul says: "For man indeed ought not to have his head veiled," he is giving reasons why the woman should veil her head, but is not speaking with reference to the covering, mentioned in verse four, which the man is to remove. The man should always, in praying or prophesying, appear before God and man with his head uncovered and unveiled.

The Woman's Position.

The woman's position is not just the opposite from the man's position, but rather just one step more. From the spirit and general thought of the text I get the idea that the only covering that the woman shall wear, in praying or prophesying, is the veil or "sign of authority." That means, literally, that she should remove the weather protection covering with the man, and, in addition to that, put on her head the "sign of authority,"—the prayer veil. In so doing she recognizes man as her decreed head, and glorifies God, her spiritual Head. For her to pray to God unveiled, is to assume equal authority with the man, which is a dishonor to her head, the man (verse 5), as well as to the One who made man her head. To pray to the man unveiled is to recognize man, in a sense, as God and to glorify him. But all glory belongs to God. Hence she should veil herself to the man, and in so doing recognize him as her decreed head, and, at the same time, veil her glory from the man and glorify the Lord as God. So, through this "sign of authority," she honors her head, the man; also God because of his decree (Gen. 3:16); and also glorifies God, according to the Scriptures.

Our Relation to God.—Psa. 139:1-16.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

1. We Are Related to God, Closer Than to Any Other Being.—Our earthly parents are our near relatives, because they have given us being and brought us into this world. We are bone of their bone and flesh of their flesh. Our souls and mental powers also partake somewhat of the nature of theirs. However, we must go farther back than to our earthly parents to find our origin. Our parents only form a link in the great chain of ancestors which reaches back to the first human pair, and there we stop and ask, "Who made these?" The answer is, "God created man in his own image. Male and female created he them," and "we are also his offspring."

God not only made man, but he first formulated the plans by which he made him. When an architect intends to build a house, he first formulates a plan with specifications, then builds it according to that plan. The very structure of the human body shows that it was formed according to a design. The location of the heart and brain at points where best protected, the ramification of the arteries and nerves to every part, the bony structure, and the adaptation of every member to every other member,—all show design and a well-formed plan, or, as the Psalmist puts it, "Thine eyes did see my unformed substance, and in thy book all my members were written, when, as yet, there was none of them."

We are related to our earthly parents as our immediate ancestors, but to God as to our very First Cause, and to the plan by which we were made. As we grow older and become more and more independent of our parents, our relation to them seems to be growing less. Not so with our Heavenly Parent, for "in him we live and move and have our being." There is no time in all our existence when this close relation ceases or grows less. We may say with the Psalmist, "Whither shall I go from thy Spirit, or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there. If I make my bed in Sheol, thou art there. If I take the wings of the morning and fly to the uttermost parts of the sea, even there shall thy hand lead me." It is impossible to get away from the Spirit of God, or sever our relation with him.

2. Our Relation to God Imposes on Us Certain Obligations.—God has created us for a purpose and has a right to expect that purpose to be filled. That purpose is to glorify him. "Glorify God in your body and spirit which are his," and also, "Whether ye eat or drink, or whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." That is our obligation and we can not get away from it. A man glorifies his Maker when he does that for which he was made, just as a machine is a glory to its maker when it works well. The grand Corliss engine is a glory to its inventor and maker. We look upon it with wonder and admiration when we see its great power, perfect action, and its adaptation to the end in view. The reaping machine is a glory to McCormick as it cuts the grain, binds it into bundles and drops them on heaps, faster than six men could do the same with cradle and rakes. The cotton gin and the sewing machine are a glory to Whitney and Howe when they answer their purpose. In the same manner man glorifies his Maker when he answers the object for which he was made. But how can we eat and drink to the glory of God? Why, by giving him thanks, and recognizing him as the "Giver of all good." We must go farther, "Whatsoever ye do, do all to the glory of God." This takes in the housewife in her daily routine of duty, caring for the family. It takes in the farmer at the plow, the carpenter with his tools, the blacksmith at the anvil and the cobbler on his bench; in short, every one in his vocation glorifies God when he does his work honestly and well, and God can look down on all the activities of man and smile his approbation, just as a superintendent smiles when he sees all hands in a great factory steadily and honestly at work. Let us not think that God is not interested in our work. He notices everything: "Not a sparrow falleth to the ground without his notice." Much more does he notice every movement of every finger of man. Therefore "let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father which is in heaven."

Not only are our actions scrutinized, but our thoughts and motives as well, as the Psalmist says: "Thou understandest my thoughts afar off." "Thus are the secrets of the heart made manifest," hence with spirit as well as body we should glorify God.

We are under a double obligation to glorify God. First, to God the Father who created us. Secondly, to Jesus Christ as our Redeemer, who purchased us with his precious blood, as the Scripture says: "Ye are not your own, for ye were bought with a price" (1 Cor. 6:19). Notice, we are bought with a price and a great price it was. When we buy something and pay a big price for it, we have a right to expect that it will serve our purpose. What a disappointment it is when we pay a big price for a horse and he becomes balky, yet how many of us are balky to Jesus Christ and will not do what he wants us to do! Some have even never begun to work for him,—have not even put on his yoke. Others, who have started to work, are balky sometimes. One of the hardest things for some people to learn is their relation to Christ and that they are not their own, but that they are servants to their Master. Peter and Jude both delight to call themselves servants of Jesus Christ and so should we.

3. Failing to Observe Our Relation to God Brings Corresponding Loss or Punishment.—"He that knoweth to do good and doeth it not to him it is sin." "The wages of sin is death." The servant who buried his Master's talent in the earth, instead of placing it with the bankers, where it might have drawn interest, was bound hands and feet and cast into outer darkness. It will avail us nothing to think that we have never made a formal profession of service to God. "The servant who knew his Lord's will and made not ready, nor did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes." There is no excuse for those who fail to serve God.

4. Faithfully Observing Our Relation to God Will Bring Its Corresponding Reward.—The intimate relation of Enoch to his Maker secured the translation of the aged saint without seeing death. It saved Noah and his family when the rest of the human race was drowned. It gave Abraham the promise that in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed. It granted Moses the privilege to speak with the Almighty face to face. "Blessed are those servants, whom the Lord when he cometh shall find watching; verily I say unto you that he shall gird himself and make them sit down to meat and shall come and serve them."

Our relation to Christ may be more intimate than was that of the patriarchs named, with God, and our reward will be accordingly great,—for he says, "Whosoever will do the will of my Father in heaven, the same is my brother and sister and mother." "As many as are led by the spirit of God, are the sons of God, and if children, then heirs of God and joint heirs of Jesus Christ."

"Nevertheless."

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

It appears to me that an ingenious preacher could build a pretty good little sermon about the word "nevertheless," as it stands in Luke 5:5. He would need to read before his audience all of the first eleven verses of the chapter to present the case fairly.

The Lord had bidden Peter to launch out his ship and let down his net, but Peter thought it wouldn't pay. He had tried and failed, and thought it was not worth while to try again. Peter was like many more of us, who think that, because past efforts in a particular line have been fruitless, future efforts will be vain. But even though, so far as Peter could see, it was useless to let the net down again, he had grace enough to say to the Lord, "Nevertheless at thy word I will."

William Carey, after many apparently fruitless years of labor in the mission field, might have said, "Lord, I have toiled all night and caught nothing." Perhaps he did, but if he did, he had grace enough to add, "Nevertheless at thy word I will keep on." And now, behold how, years after his death, his nets are breaking, and his ships are beginning to sink with the multitude of fishes!

Many church members are saying to the Lord, "Lord, nobody seems to care whether I work or not. I am never elected to places of honor, nor given important work in the church. I seem to be laid on the shelf." And right here too many fail and quit. They ought to say, "Nevertheless at thy word I will humbly and quietly do what I can." Many more seem to be saying, "Lord, you only gave me one talent. I think I ought to have had five. And since I do not seem to be qualified to do great things, I believe I'll just do nothing." On the other hand, they ought to say, "Lord, I believe you decided wisely. I think one talent is enough for me. It is a humble place you have given me, nevertheless I accept it gladly and will occupy it to the best of my ability."

This is Sunday evening. I had an appointment to preach in the village, this morning, and there was no substitute that I could secure. After the chores were done and breakfast was over I said, "Lord, I am physically indisposed. I feel like going back to bed; nevertheless at thy word I will mount the old donkey and go down and try to preach." I did so. I don't think the sermon was particularly brilliant or forceful. If anybody else thought so, he did not so express himself within the range of my hearing. But it seemed to be about the best I could do under the circumstances, and when I feel that I have done my best, I am usually pretty well satisfied. It doesn't always look as if it paid, or as if the results justified the effort, but that is probably the experience of many of us. We sometimes feel like doing less because we can't do more.

But note the result in the case of Peter. He and James and John, and they that were with them, were astonished at Peter's reward for doing what the Lord told him to do. And I believe the Lord still has in store some surprises for his faithful servants. I don't know when or how he will bring it about, but when our nets begin to break and our ships begin to sink under the weight of divine blessings, abundant beyond anything we have dared to expect, then will we be glad as perhaps never before, that even though we had toiled all night and taken nothing, we were still willing, at the Master's bidding, to let down the net.

Conditions in India.

BY WILBUR STOVER.

THE total membership of the C. M. S. in Tinnevelly, South India, is now nearly one hundred thousand. The present Bishop of Tinnevelly has himself baptized more than 11,600 persons, the number for last year being 2,850,—the result of long-continued work.

The present outlook for famine is painfully serious, and there seems to be no change in sight. Government is opening up "test-works," here and there, the results of which will improve conditions. "Test-famine-works" means road-making and reservoir digging, or, as we always call it in India, "tank-digging," at not a very inviting rate of daily wage. This, however, will show if famine conditions really prevail. If people are pressed for work or for food, they will come flocking to the famine relief works, but if not, there will be only a few.

I think I have entered into an explanation of it before,—how a famine comes on so desperately and so suddenly. There are tens of thousands of poor people, who live from hand to mouth. These are not government servants who get good, regular pay, neither are they in railway employ, nor do they have anything else similar to fall back upon, but they are the servants of farmers, all over the country, and these farmers, the moment it does not rain on time, or the moment there is talk of scarcity, withhold labor and food from these their servants, fearing for their own welfare first of all, and in a week the poor fellows are thrown into the difficulty of famine conditions. As long as it does not rain, even though there be grain in the employer's bins, when it is not available to the other man, under any circumstances, the other man is immediately in hard luck.

You ask, "What does he do?" Well, he asks the same question, "What shall we do? We have nothing to eat, and our usual employer will not give us food, for he fears there will be famine." So they drift from home in search of work, and as time thus continues, whole families drift together, ready to work, to beg, and often to steal,—somehow to get sufficient food.

But some one asks, "Why do they not sell off household goods, cattle and stove, before moving away thus recklessly?" Well, they never saw a stove, having used for cooking purposes what they call a chula, or fire-place, made of three stones, like Gypsies make them in the States. And as for furniture, if they offered their bed,—practically the one bit of furniture in many a poor man's house, who would buy the fellow's bed? Who wants it, and what would it bring? I put the question as a native would put it, indicating that even the suggestion is a hopeless one. As to cattle, they have none. If they have cattle however, they are either sold off at a low price or slain for food when the pressure comes hard enough.

Our hearts well nigh faint within us as we contemplate another famine in India! We have seen it once. We had hoped we would not be obliged to see another! It is too fearful to think of seriously, without tears and silence. We can not put feelings into words, ofttimes! This is one of the times.

It should be made perfectly clear to all of our Brethren that the famine will not probably reach the part of the country in which our India Mission is situated. It is to the north, not more than one hundred miles, however, so that, when famine proper prevails there, famine prices will prevail where we are. That means this: Those who have grain or grass to sell will get high prices for it, but those who have nothing to sell, and all to buy, will meet seriously hard times. There is this, yet, to compensate, that in districts where famine prices prevail, and not famine, work will be plentiful.

Only this week a European,—perhaps he was a Eurasian,—brought from the north of Gujerat, near the city of Ahmedabad, nearly five hundred cattle, taking them into the Raj Pipla State, to pasture them there till next June! It is now August, and the account must run till next June, when rains may come again! He told a most awful tale of woe, concerning the severity in his part of the country. He is a large farmer, and takes this way of saving his cattle. He told of a Hindoo, who, seeing the cattle all about him, —his cattle,—gradually going from bad to worse, and getting ready to die from starvation, and himself helpless to remedy the situation, went off and committed suicide! Others are selling off their stock, worth ordinarily from 40 to 70 rupees each, for as low as from 3 to 10 rupees each. But no one will risk to buy. The feed for cattle is not available. There was no rain. There is no grass, no fodder, no forage.

We hope the man exaggerated the conditions a bit, but we do not doubt his sincerity in the matter, for otherwise he would not have gone to the trouble and expense to bring his cattle this way, and to pay the railway freight rates on half, while the rest come afoot. And he reports that a number of those he sent afoot are dying on the way. If this is the experience of a well-to-do Anglo-Indian farmer, what must befall the poor man who has only a little to fall back on? Echo answers with a perfect silence.

Bombay Guardian of August 19 says this: "In Gujerat and in the Punjab the absence of rain continues to cause great anxiety. The injury to the crops is in some parts irretrievable, and the people's attention is being turned to the fodder supply and the water supply and the opening of Government famine relief works."

The Census Commissioner is now engaged in publishing the revised and final statistics for the larger provinces. The Central Provinces and Berer show a population of 16,033,310, as compared with the 1901 total of 13,602,592. Mysore State numbers 5,806,193, while the figures for Burma, including the Chin Hills, Shan States, and native-governed districts total up to 12,115,212. We anxiously await the complete Census Report for India and Burma.

In our discussion of the famine conditions above, I have referred to the first people affected by famine. In Gujerat, already, it has passed that stage, and the farmers are in desperate straits how to manage, in order to maintain their cattle now. Already the famine is pressing the small farmer hard! Especially do famine conditions prevail in Ahmadebad and Kaira Districts, and in the Khatiawar States. These are all Gujerati peoples.

Bro. Long's have just visited us. They are expecting to sail for America Sept. 15. The burning thought now before them is, "Why, if a famine is upon the land, should we go home?" But we all insist that it is better to go, as arranged, and keep in touch with things Indian, and do what you can. There will be an abundance of work to do when they get back.

And the sailing date for the home-going of the Stover tribe is most likely to be March 15, 1912. We feel much the same way with respect to going home. If famine is in the land, we ought to stay and help to save life, to be of greatest service in the greatest need. But we also recognize that we are well pulled down, and that we had better do what is thought best, all around, to do,—rather than to try to stick to it, too long, and so, perhaps, wear out prematurely. We have this consolation, too, that, when any of us go home, there are others who will do our work as well as we can. I wish to place the arranging for work, while at home, on our part, in the hands of the Secretary of the Mission Board, with the exception that we should like to spend a little while at Bethany, and have some other time for quiet.

It is now the hour to close the mail on Friday evening. The MESSENGER of July 29 has just come. In that I tell about the great floods, and the exceedingly wet weather. But that was the trouble. Nature seems to have poured herself all out then, and has not been able to get around to it properly, since. This morning I went to see the Collector of the District. He tells me that Government is doing all that is possible to help the needy. Grass for the cattle is now being bought at the rate of Rs. 25, or about $8.25 per 1,000 pounds. Sometimes it is one or two rupees more, making it about $17 per ton. And Government is advancing to all who need grass, and, if they prefer it, Government is giving them money instead, so that they may buy fodder where they can to the best possible advantage. This is very good. But, with it all, how inadequate! Today, on the train in which I returned from Broach, came the first band of wanderers, in search of better things. They came to Ankleshwer, having left their homes empty. All looked well and healthy, but this is the advance guard. Other bands will follow, as time goes on, and each month brings poorer and more starved people! This is no call for financial aid. As time and the season advance, we desire to keep you informed. If the time comes when it will be well for us to do something to help, we shall feel quite free to speak out. Meanwhile, we work on, keeping you informed.

If we do any famine work, this time, we must be wiser than heretofore. Many people have come to think that missionaries welcome a famine. Now and then even some of those who have become Christians have ventured to suggest that this is a good time to make our strongest efforts, for the people have not the strength to resist. But this is the one thought that is farthest of all from every missionary mind. He wants to help the man that is down, which is part of his missionary program, and in doing so he helps the famine sufferer, even suffering with him. If the result is that many become Christians, every Christian is glad, but it is the result certainly, not the object of famine charity. This ought to be clear to all,—but it is not. Pray for us in the trying times which seem just before us.

Ankleshwer, India, Aug. 25.

Thinking.

BY RICHARD ARNO DASSDORF.

WE are the creatures of thought. Our thoughts produce the actions that eventually form our characters.

Thought awakens very early in our lives, and after that our mind is never at rest. While we are asleep, the mind still has its forces at work, sometimes very softly and unnoticed by us; at other times we are made aware of its workings by dreams.

What do we mean by thought? It is that power of the human mind that so deeply affects man's mentality that its impressions can never be forgotten. From these impressions it takes a certain part and, by examination, ascertains that there are other things, before unthought of, that are similar, and hence must be governed by similar laws. When thought has gone this far, it may result in a discovery.

Thought is the part of man that makes man either wise or unwise. It is written: "For as he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Do you ever really reflect on what you allow your mind to dwell most? Is it wealth? If so, you are simply an idolater,—as much so as those who bow down to images of wood and stone.

Thought is the living principle of the Spirit of God, given to man on creation's morn. Man is the only one of creation's organisms that has thought to the fullest extent. Memory (one of its attributes) is seen in the lower animals in its various stages,—but no animal has a genuine inspiration of thought. Man alone is endowed with this attribute of God himself. And why? That we may be his, and live for his honor and glory.

We often hear this expression: "I forget so easily." This is not really the case. We can never forget the least impression once made in the mind. We may not be able to recall the thing we wish, just when we wish to, but it is there, and if the surrounding conditions be favorable, you will often find that these very things will come back to your mind when you are not trying to think of them. What we once have thought, can never be forgotten. Is it not worth our while to be very careful how we think, and what we think about?

What shall we think about? Our work? Yes, to a certain degree it is our duty to do so, but are you going to think about that to the exclusion of everything else? About our loved ones, friends, and neighbors? Yes, they, too, demand a portion of our thoughts.

David says: "I thought on my ways." What ways? The way he had been walking and the way he should walk. We are told: "Make your way and your doings good." We all wish to be wise and counted as such by our fellow-men. Let us, then, begin at once to consider our ways! What is the first principle of this great knowledge? Here it is: "Let us hear the conclusion of the whole matter: Fear God and keep his commandments: for this is the whole duty of man. For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good or evil."

The most important thing of man's life is to think. Without thought nothing can be brought to perfection. If this is true in our common labors how much more it can truly be said to apply to our character-building! Not one murderer or drunkard started out with a set determination to do wrong at the beginning. Such unfortunate ones were driven by the storms of temptation upon the rocks of destruction. They were not cast upon them at once, but only after the pilot,—thought,—had been led astray and finally overcome.

No living soul will calmly and deliberately condemn his own being to eternal death. Why, then, do so many millions perish in the end? If you ask a sinner concerning his soul, he will say, "Yes, I believe I ought to come and be saved. I do not mean to die out of Christ, and away from any hope." Why, then, should he perish? He thinks he has a long life before him. That is a mistake. He does not know whether he will live even to the next hour.

If our unconverted friends could be brought to see the necessity of thinking truly and deeply, good results would follow as surely as the day succeeds the night. Why not, then, be thinkers? Is it wise to drift about, on life's stormy sea, tossed hither and thither, the sport of every gale? What would you think of the owner of a vessel, were he to send it to some foreign port without a boy or man on board who knew the art of sailing over the seas? Has that vessel any chance to stand the storms it may encounter? Can it hope to escape the hidden rocks that threaten sudden destruction?

God has provided a beautiful vessel (our bodies) to carry his Spirit to the bright world beyond. To make the journey safely, he has placed on each a true pilot,—thought. But, supposing you dethrone this pilot, and place the inexperienced one (thoughtlessness) in his place, can you blame your Heavenly Father if you suffer shipwreck?

In the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, Abraham said: "Son, remember!" This shows that this power of the mind will never be taken away from us.

Look at the phonograph. The sounds once given to it are retained and may be produced centuries afterwards, as exact as on the day they were spoken. If poor mortal can do this, how much more can the Creator of the universe do still greater things?

Thought is the dictator, and memory the tablet upon which all is recorded. On the judgment day God will open this book of our memory and disclose to you the record of the past. Perhaps some of us do not wish to see it, but we must; we can not evade it.

What, then, is wisdom's way? Is it not to keep our record pure and clean?

As I pen these lines I am forcibly impressed by the thought that we can not change what is past, but that, with the Lord's help, we can try to make the remainder of our life pure, so as not to be with those who shall cry for the rocks and mountains to fall upon them, to hide them from the wrath of God.

THE ROUND TABLE

Peace and Arbitration.

BY D. HAYS.

The signing of the arbitration treaties between the Governments of the United States, Great Britain, and France, Aug. 3, 1911, was an event of great significance in the affairs of the world. It marked a period in the peace movement of no little significance, when the President of our nation, and the representatives of England and France, respectively, signed the treaty of arbitration, and it is predicted that at least Germany and Japan will ere long join the movement so happily inaugurated in Washington, D. C.

Every lover of peace may feel devoutly thankful to God that one of the most precious principles of the Christian religion, so long cherished in the hearts of the followers of the Prince of Peace, has been placed in the front rank by the creation of the Hague Court, and by this signing of arbitration treaties by the most civilized nations of the earth.

The organization of Peace Circles in city, village, school and home is encouraged in all parts of our country to create sentiment that will speak to countless thousands in favor of "peace on earth, good will to man." It may be proper to state, just in this connection, that the Church of the Brethren has always stood as a great center of the peace movement. Each local congregation has prayed for peace, and labored to disseminate the doctrine of peace, love, and good will among men.

The American Association for International Conciliation, of New York, issued, early in September, a letter of Pope Pius X., dated June 11, addressed to the Apostolic Delegate to the United States, in which he commends the work already begun in the interests of peace, and which, he says, should be approved by all good men. Is it because this nominally great ecclesiastic speaks from a conscious conviction of the truth and worth of peace to the church and the world, or is it driven to deliver himself thus favorable to peace and conciliation among the nations, because the peace movement is taking hold of the mass of the people?

Thus high officials in the church and state are stepping forward in the interests of peace, while the church, for centuries, few in number, yet rich in faith, endured the fiery trials of a bitter and unrelenting persecution to maintain the blessed principles of peace, and to hand down to us the priceless gift of God to man. Shall we change our attitude toward the world, because the kingdoms of this world are coming to the light, and are taking hold of peaceful arbitration at least in a tentative way? Shall we cease to pray, and teach, and hold on to the doctrine of peace, as given to the church by the Lord himself, when he said: "Peace I leave with you; my peace I give unto you; not as the world giveth, give I unto you" (John 14: 27).

How to Dress for Work.

BY J. G. ROYER.

(Read Romans 13: 10-12.)

That we may fulfill the law of love, we are called upon to do several things. We are to "awake out of sleep," "awake out of the sleep of sin and spiritual stupor. This awakening applies to all. "All," both the wise and the foolish virgins, "slumbered and slept." And "knowing the time" in which we live, makes the waking up all the more urgent. We live in the gospel time,—the time of light and truth. More is expected of us than was expected in the time when people "sat in darkness." This time of light is our working time,—not our sleeping time. It is the time to be busy. When we consider the shortness of the time and the greatness of the work to be done, we can readily understand why the Holy Spirit should say, "It is high time to awake." Surely, we have slept long enough.

Being waked up, we should be prompt in getting up and dressing. Here, again, we are called upon to do several things. First we are to "cast off the works of darkness,"—our night-clothes; for it is a shame to appear in them abroad. Our sinful works are our night-clothes. These must be "cast off." They seek for privacy and concealment, and hence are known as works of darkness. They are to be put away, and in their stead we are to "put on the armor of light,"—the graces of the Spirit. These graces are the only armor which it becomes the Christian to wear in the daytime, and which it is considered soldierly to keep bright. If kept bright, they are fine Christian ornaments, because they are so suitable and becoming, and, in the sight of God, "of great price." The putting on of those graces, is to "put on Christ" and his righteousness. In baptism Christ is put on by profession, and if done in truth and sincerity, he is put on also as Lord to rule over us.

Thus dressed and equipped, we are not to sit still. We are to "walk," "live,—"honestly as in the day." We are to walk as though all our actions were seen,—decently, becomingly, Christly. Men by day, in open light, live decently. Their foul and wicked deeds are done in the night, in the darkness. As Christians, we are to live as if our conduct were seen, and as though we had nothing which we wished to conceal. We are to live as "children of light" whose lives show that they have been savingly enlightened by the Word and Spirit of God. It is in this way that the Christian "may adorn the doctrine of God our Savior," and recommend the religion of Jesus in its beauty to others.

Turned Out to Die.

BY C. D. HYLTON.

I remember an old white horse that belonged to a farmer in our vicinity that had outlived his days of usefulness. The farmer did not want to kill him, and he was unable to work and pay for his board, so he was turned out on the commons to shift for himself. When the other horses were turned into the pasture fields, he was denied admittance, so he could be seen, for days and weeks at a time, feeding along the roadside. He thus kept in fairly good order.

But when the autumn winds began to blow, and the frosts killed the grass by the wayside, the poor old horse was turned into the back pasture field and the gate was closed. Here, all alone, he remained. His limbs were stiffened by being exposed to the cold rains. When he would lie down, he could scarcely get up. Weaker and weaker he grew, day by day, and finally he lay down, never to rise again, and there he died. He had been a faithful horse. He had helped to raise the family, and had paid his board for many years of retired life.

It is unkind and inhumane to treat even a horse that way, but I am wondering if there are not some faithful fathers and mothers, who,—having toiled for many long years for their children, and having spent sleepless nights, caring for the little ones,—are now turned out to die. The tidings of their death will be good news to some ungrateful child, who may be posing as a child of God.

Then I am also wondering if some faithful ministers of the Gospel, having spent their lives serving the church, are not in danger of being turned out to die by those whom they have served for many years?

Following Their Own Devices.

BY ANDREW ESKILDSEN.

The history of the Jewish people is a sad one. We are inclined to wonder at their waywardness. They would not listen to God's directions which were given them by the faithful prophets. They said: "We will follow our own devices and the stubbornness of our evil heart" (Jer. 18: 12). No wonder that God was displeased with them and scattered them among other nations.

The divided condition of modern Christendom is a sad state of affairs, and bears witness to the fact that Paul spoke the truth when he predicted that grievous wolves would enter the flock. Paul also predicted that men would arise, who would speak perverse things, to draw disciples after them. These things have come to pass and this accounts for the divisions. If all the teachers who have lived since Paul's day had been faithful, and had urged others to follow Christ, instead of drawing disciples after themselves, conditions would be different today. There is a blessing connected with obeying God's Word. Jesus said: "If ye keep my commandments, ye shall abide in my love." Those who love one another, grieve at parting, and rejoice in being together. The reason why there is so much division in our day, is found in a lack of love, and this is due to the fact that people now are like the Jewish nation,—they want to follow their own devices. Why will people follow their own devices? Has God more pleasure in them now than in former days?

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

The Secret of the Lord.

Psa. 25: 14.

For Sunday Evening, October 8, 1911.

"The secret of the Lord is with them that fear him, and he will show them his covenant."

I. To Abraham, "the friend of God," the Lord said, "Shall I hide . . . that thing which I do" (Gen. 18: 17; Jas. 2: 23)? It is friends that tell secrets to each other.

II. To Enoch, who "walked with God," was revealed the prophecy, "Behold, the Lord cometh with ten thousand of his saints" (Gen. 5: 22; Jude 14).

III. To Noah, "a just man," who also "walked with God," was revealed the approaching deluge (Gen. 6: 9, 17).

IV. Only Joseph, the young man of purity, "in whom the Spirit of God is," could tell of the coming famine (Gen. 41: 16, 25-27).

V. To "Moses alone," the man "faithful in all his house," God whispered the secrets of the tabernacle (Ex. 24: 2, 12; 25: 9; Heb. 3: 2, 5).

VI. Only Daniel, the "greatly beloved," could read the handwriting on the wall (Dan. 2: 28-30; 9: 20-23).

VII. And it was to John, leaning on his bosom, that our Lord told who should betray him (John 13: 25, 26).

From our lesson verse, as also from Prov. 3: 32, we learn that "the froward"—sinners—are abomination to the Lord. But "the secret of the Lord" is with his faithful. He admits them into secret communion with himself. He calls them not servants, but "friends" (John 15: 15; Jas. 2: 23), because all things are "made known" unto them. Hence, "If any man will do his will, he shall know" (John 7: 17). This honor have all God's saints.

PRAYER MEETING

Daily Strength for Daily Needs.

Eph. 4: 20-32; 5: 1, 2.

For Week Beginning October 8, 1911.

1. The Daily Test.—Real character is shown by our relation to the trivial duties of life. Spectacular demonstrations have no bearing on our real worth. It is the humble duties, and their acceptable discharge, so as to exemplify the religion of our Lord and Savior, that test the genuineness of our religion,—that make us realize the need of strength from above for the duties of the hour (Isa. 40: 28-31).

2. Pray God for the Grace of Truthfulness.—Deceit and lying are the bane of the age. "Little falsehoods" (so-called) are the common currency of society. Nine-tenths of the excuses we hear, and the tenth is a near relative of the family. Business lies are so common that we have ceased to be shocked. And yet,—let it never be forgotten,—best armed is he who goes forth to life's struggles in the shining armor of truth (Eph. 6: 14).

3. Pray God for the Grace of Fairness.—"Be ye angry and sin not; let not the sun go down on your wrath." True, we should be angry with sin; we should hate it, and fight it with weapons which God himself has furnished. If there were more righteous indignation on account of sin, there would be less of it in high places. But it should be an anger that has no sin in it,—a sympathy that looks upon an erring brother with a Christ-like pity, always endeavoring to bring him back to the path of rectitude (Gal. 6: 1, 2).

4. "Be Ye Followers of God."—Here we rise into an altitude free from cloud and storm, free from darkness and the lowlands of evil. We rise to a level where only the good, the pure, and the beautiful, are round about us. Nothing will irradiate and illuminate life so genuinely as to be followers of the Loving Father, in doing good to all whom we meet. As heirs of God, nothing can fit us so well for our inheritance as adorning ourselves with the graces of God (Heb. 12: 14, 15).

Of Those Who Walk Alone.

Women there are on earth,, most sweet and high,
Who lose their own, and walk bereft and lonely,
Loving that one lost heart until they die,
Loving it only.

And so they never see beside them grow
Children, whose coming is like breath of flowers;
Consoled by subtler loves the angels know
Through childless hours.

Good deeds they do: they comfort and they bless
In duties others put off till the morrow;
Their look is balm, their touch is tenderness
To all in sorrow.

Betimes the world smiles at them, as 'twere shame,
This maiden guise, long after youth's departed;
But in God's Book they bear another name—
"The faithful-hearted."

Faithful in life, and 'faithful unto death,
Such souls, in sooth, illume with luster splendid
That glimpsed, glad land wherein, the Vision saith, Earth's wrongs are ended.

—Richard Burton.

No Spare Room.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

MRS. CURTIS was calling on Barbara. During the conversation they referred to some of the changes going on around them. "I can remember our spare bedroom at home. It was the delight of my life to stand at the door and look at the green ingrain carpet, the walls whitewashed a blue white and the pillows and other things,—just as clean as soap and water could make them. I always had a certain sense of respectability when I took an itemized survey of that room. Why was it, I wonder? Our children are not impressed by anything of that kind."

"I am sure I can not explain," said Barbara smiling, "unless it was this, that the spare room meant a room in the house set apart from common life. It was not to be lightly entered. One tiptoed in and the chairs stood stiff against the wall. The feather-bed rose plump and impregnable in its recesses. And, as you say, we surveyed it from the door and thought of it as a wonderful privilege for some one to be permitted to occupy that room."

"Yes," responded Mrs. Curtis, "there was always something held back in those days. We talked of our spare dresses; they were our best, and we would have been shocked at the idea of wearing them any day but Sunday or on some worthy occasion. Come to think about it, I don't believe that people have spare rooms any more. We have none where we now live."

"We still have one," replied Barbara, "but we do not have any spare time. In those days there was leisure spare time to think about our friends, and plan delightful visits to each other. And when, after some time, one went on a visit, taking the old horse and carriage and traveling slowly, you can remember the pleasure and satisfaction we got out of such occasions?"

"Indeed I can. But what's the use in sighing? Those days are gone and they will never return. We have automobiles now. Why, I can remember when it was quite an event to cross the railroad in safety. Father used to get out and walk, so that we would not be surprised by an unexpected train."

Oh, yes, we have journeyed far since those days. But in all this whirl, my sisters, we want to hold on to our genuine, old-fashioned homes. We love them and we want our children to prize a home as an acquisition of some value. We mean a real home, where the chairs and dishes and rooms belong to the family, where a new curtain or a red geranium is of genuine importance, where even inconveniences are only problems for love and industry to solve.

The city family of ordinary means is often driven to the cheap hotel or boarding-house. It offers temporary relief from some perplexing domestic problem, such as high rents or railway fares, and the family takes possession of a few rooms in a boarding-house until something better is in sight. And that is usually the last of home life for that family. In a short time they have acquired the hotel habit, all the unselfish sacrifices so necessary in a true home have become hateful. And in their place we have a passion for ease and comfort at any cost, and a selfish disregard for anything but the daily creature comforts which a small weekly salary can assure. Quite often, no thought is given to the future of the boys and girls, growing up in a boarding-house. We grant you that life may be well lived anywhere, but it is a truth that a real home is the best soil for the cultivation of family love and of mutual helpfulness.

There are women who can make a home out of a tent cover and a cook stove. They have the gift. There are others who do not possess it. Some women get the idea into their heads that they are cut out for some greater career. They are not always sure what sort, but in any case they resent being tied down to a home which takes so much of their precious time and leaves them unable to find the career. Perhaps a woman of this kind has some talent, but it is not worth talking about, if it does not include the power to make her husband happy, her children charming and her homelife ideal. Her soul can not be very lofty if she can not rise above the level of the most slovenly peasant, and keep her home in order, and be a true helpmeet to her husband.

A woman, who was long a power at Vassar College, listened one day to the plans and aspirations of an ambitious girl. When she had finished, the teacher said, "I do not see any room in your life for a blue-checked apron." It was a quaint and gentle reminder that although housekeeping is not alone woman's province, yet every woman should cherish the spirit of the homemaker. Do not think of the blue-checked apron as a shroud for any laudable ambition,—it need not be that. Only do not be ashamed of it, wear it when occasion demands. You have all observed that the woman who can do small things at home, conquer domestic difficulties and fight shoulder to shoulder with her husband in the days of trial and adversity, can hope to do bigger and better things in the outside world. The one who laments over her hard lot and the lack of appreciation needs a new vision of what life really means.

Let the husband and children come first in the home. They used to, long ago, when we had spare rooms and other things that emphasized the family life. When one of the family has been wounded and harmed in life's battle, the home is the retreat where he can hide away and grow strong again. Home is a refuge. Some one sings of those days in the past and asks us a pertinent question as to our progress in this age.

"We had no stately buildings in those homely, early days;
The things we touched were plain and rough; we heard scant words of praise.
Say, is your heart the larger now, because of larger ways?
No royal path to knowledge ever opened to our eyes,
And yet we somehow journeyed on where God's great highway lies:
And always over us have spread the wide and friendly skies."

REPORT OF SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES' MEETING.

Held on the Conference Grounds, St. Joseph, Mo., June 5, 1911.

The third Annual Meeting of the Sisters' Aid Societies convened in the Conference Auditorium at 5:30 P. M., June 5. The Vice-president of the organization, Sister Elizabeth Howe-Brubaker, presided. The societies of the Brotherhood were well represented, and the interest was commendable. There seems to be an earnest and consecrated effort for more and better work in the furtherance of this great power of helpfulness. Sister Brubaker opened the meeting by reading a part of the last chapter of Proverbs, and a fervent prayer, for a united effort in this great work, so well begun. In the absence of the Secretary, Sister T. S. Moherman, the minutes were read by Sister Lavina Shoemaker, and adopted by the meeting.

Sister Brubaker then read a letter of greeting from the President, Sister W. D. Keller, of Washington, D. C., who could not be present at this meeting. Bro. T. S. Moherman then read a splendid report of the fees sent in during the year: 119 societies reported 2,880 members enrolled in these societies; 88 societies paid the 25 cent fee; 31 societies are delinquent as to fees; 101 of these societies reported the money earned and used by them for the Lord's work during the year. The grand total, to the credit of these 101 societies, is $5,407.08.

Sister Shoemaker then read the Treasurer's report for the year. Money paid in fees, $22. For the printing of the Booklet, report blanks, stationery and stamps, $16, was paid out, leaving a balance of $6 in the treasury.

The first topic discussed was, "The Needs of Our Societies." A splendid paper was read on this subject.

A card of greeting was read from Sister Susan Miksbang, sixty-two years old, President of the Banner Aid Society, of Ottawa, Kans. A motion carried to send greetings and the best wishes of the sisters at this meeting to our aged coworker, trusting that the Lord may grant her many blessings and much joy in his service.

The second topic, "Methods of Conducting the Society Work," was ably discussed. The third topic, "Our Field of Work," was treated by Sister Hoover, of Mt. Morris, Ill. Many subjects were all interesting, well given, and ably discussed by a number of sisters present.

After a prayer by Sister Crouse, of Alabama, the meeting adjourned to meet the next evening for organization.

Elizabeth H. Brubaker, Chairman.
Lavina Shoemaker, Sec. pro tem.

Business Meeting, June 6, 6 P. M.

The Vice-president having been called away, Sister D. L. Forney was called upon to act as Chairman. The officers elected were as follows: Sister W. D. Keller, Washington, D. C., President; Sister Emma Garver, Goshen, Ind., Vice-president; Sister T. S. Moherman, Ashland, Ohio, Secretary and Treasurer.

It was decided that hereafter, the election of officers be held the first thing after the opening of the Annual Meeting of the Sisters' Aid Societies, when the greatest number are present.

Sister D. L. Forney, Chairman.
Sister Lavina Shoemaker, Sec. pro tem.

(This report was sent in Sept. 14, by Sister T. S. Moherman, Secretary and Treasurer, who may be addressed at Ashland, Ohio.)

Of a poor native in Africa, who recently became a Christian, it is said that unconsciously he hit upon the secret of a consecrated life. He found it in earnest, allcomprehensive, and,—beyond all else,—intensely personal prayer. Thoroughly he was lead to pray, "Oh, Lord, I have given thee my heart to be thy home. Now sweep it out and make it clean. Then only last the power." The thought is an excellent one. An abiding-place for the Lord should be cleaned before it is occupied. Many professing Christians are willing to have Christ live in a part of their heart, if they can but reserve the other part for their own selfish aims. Such a duality of possession is wholly incompatible with the Divine indwelling. It is "all or none" with Christ, and until we make an entire and unconditional surrender of ourselves, and all we have and are, to the Lord's service, we have not arrived at the spiritual understanding as did the African, above referred to.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

COOKS CREEK, VA.—The Sisters' Aid Society of Garber's church was first organized Nov. 4, 1902. Since then we have been trying to aid the needy as much as possible. We meet on Wednesday before the third Sunday in each month, in regular council, with an average attendance of eight members. The receipts, since 1902, have been $589.77; expenditures, $582.24; on hand at the present time, Sister S. I. Bowman is our president; Sister Katie Bowman, vice-president; Sister Bertha Bowman, secretary-treasurer.—Bertha Bowman, Sec. R. D. 6, Harrisonburg, Va., Sept. 13.

ELGIN, ILL., 23RD.—Our Sisters' Aid Society was reorganized Sept. 7, 1911, with Sister Phoebe Teeter re-elected President; Sister Kate Rosger, Vice-president; Sister Bettie Rogers, Treasurer, and the writer, Secretary. During the year we made sixty-nine garments, quilted twenty-three quilts, knotted twelve comforts, rowed 126 pounds of carpet rags, and attended three sales. We hold twenty all-day meetings, with an average attendance of twelve. The total amount of money received during the year for work and donations was $92.45; expended $81.15; leaving a balance of $10.27 in the treasury. We sent a box of bed-clothes to the Brooklyn Mission. We also solicited and furnished $25 toward the support of a native missionary in India.—Serena B. Current, Sec. R. D. 1, Hunterstown, Pa., Sept. 19.

WARTZ, W. VA.—The Sisters of the Germantown congregation, Franklin Co., Va., met July 21, 1910, to organize a Sisters' Aid Society. The following officers were elected: Mrs. Ella Myers, President; Sister Bessie Barnhart, Secretary. Since that time fourteen meetings have been held, with an average attendance of nine. The work has mainly been that of making comforts and prayer coverings, but we have also done some work in the Orphans' Home at Mexico, Ind. Some sewing has been done for the needy ones of our own congregation. We have also donated a few garments. We sent a small donation to the St. Joseph Mission. At present we have in the treasury $10.80, and more goods on hand. Our work is not large, but we feel as if we were doing but little, but with the present interest we feel encouraged and desire to do more. Meet the Sisters for the year, beginning July 1, are: Sister J. B. Peters, President; Sister O. A. Barnhart, Secretary.—Secretary, Sister Barnhart, Wirtz, Va., Sept. 11.

KANSAS CITY, MO.—Our Aid Society meets every Thursday. We do some quilting, but spend the time mostly in making garments. Our society endeavors to do good by assisting the poor and unfortunate. With each bundle of goods we enclose some tracts, Gospel Messengers, Our Young People, Missionary Visitor, etc. As we approach the fall and winter months, the demand will be much greater for clothing. Any time is here for special activity on the part of those who desire to help clothe the poor and unfortunate in the cities. A number of Aid Societies, in the various parts of the Brotherhood, have assisted us in the past, by sending clothing and bedding. We are very thankful for this help. We have received but few goods during the past months, and are in need of new and second-hand clothing and bedding. We will acknowledge the receipt of all goods sent to us, and will appreciate the interest that may thus be shown in our work. Send all freight and bill of lading to W. W. Slifer, 6238 Hughe St., Kansas City, Mo.—Mollie L. Lentz, Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 13.

EIGHT were recently added to the Deep Water church, Mo.,—five baptized and three restored to fellowship.

THE Brethren church at Bluefield, W. Va., is to be dedicated next Sunday, Oct. 1, the services beginning at 11 A. M.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE opened with an encouraging attendance. There was an enrollment of 168 the first week.

BRO. D. K. CLAPPER, of Meyersdale, Pa., is booked for a series of meetings in the Mill Creek church, Va., beginning Oct. 7.

BRO. MICHAEL FLORY writes us that he is having some encouraging meetings in the Loon house, Salamonie congregation, Ind.

BRO. JOHN W. DEETER, of Surrey, N. Dak., may now be addressed at McPherson, Kans., where he is attending the Brethren College.

IN this issue will be found the program for the Sunday-school and Missionary Meetings of Northern California, to convene at Empire, Oct. 7.

FOLLOWING the dedication service at the Woodland church, Ill., Aug. 20, Bro. E. F. Sherfy began a series of meetings, which closed a few weeks later with six conversions.

AT this date our missionaries on their way to China are in midocean, and should reach the end of their voyage about the middle of October. They sailed from Seattle Sept. 18.

BRO. J. EDWIN JARBOE, of Red Cloud, Nebr., has been doing some successful evangelistic work at the White Rock church, Kans. Three were restored to the fold and four baptized.

THE dedication of the new church at Maxwell, Iowa, is announced for Oct. 22, Bro. Moses Deardorff delivering the address for the occasion. A series of meetings will follow this service.

DURING the late series of meetings at the Pleasant View church, W. Va., conducted by Bro. S. I. Bowman, thirty-four made the good confession and were added to the believers at that place.

THE District Meeting of Middle Indiana is expected to convene in the Huntingdon City church Oct. 12, and the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings Oct. 10 and 11. The elders should meet at 7:30 P. M., Oct. 9.

BRO. I. L. BERKEY wishes us to announce that the elders of Northern Indiana should meet at the Springfield church, near Wawaka, Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 2 P. M., and that all the elders of the District are urged to be present.

BRO. ALLEN BRICKER, of Kingston, Okla., says that, wholly in the interest of building up a good church in his locality by immigration, he would like to have it known that his is a fine country and has a splendid climate. The land is cheap and of good quality, and he feels confident that it is just the place for members to locate and secure good homes.

BRO. PAUL MOHLER, our missionary to France, writes us that all of his time is now taken, up to the date of his sailing, Nov. 18. He starts on his mission fully a month sooner than he had expected to start.

BRO. D. S. FILBRUN, of Dayton, Ohio, should be addressed at 1343 West Fifth St., instead of R. D. 14. He reports a few recent accessions to the West Dayton congregation, and further says that in his work he has much that is encouraging.

SINCE Bro. J. I. Kaylor, of the Mission Board of Northwestern Ohio, goes to India the first of November, Bro. David Byerly, Treasurer, will act as Secretary of the Board, until the vacancy is filled. He should be addressed at Lima, Ohio.

WE are publishing, on another page, the program for the Ministerial Meeting of Northern Indiana, to be held near Wawaka Oct. 3 and 4. The Educational Meeting will be held on the evening of the 4th, while the District Meeting is announced for the next day.

BRO. H. C. EARLY, Penn Laird, Va., begins a protracted meeting at Ashland, Ohio, Nov. 4, and may continue two or three weeks. He has accepted the pastorate of the church in Washington City, D. C., and is preparing to enter upon his duties sometime in January.

UNDER date of Sept. 19, the trustees of Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., announced that Bro. I. Harvey Brumbaugh, who for some years served as Acting President of the college, has been elected President, and has entered upon his duties with the opening of the college year, 1911-1912.

NEXT week we hope to publish the program for the Sunday-school, Christian Workers' Band and Ministerial Meetings of Southwestern Kansas and Southern Colorado, to be held in the Newton church, Kans., Oct. 15, 16 and 17. A Mothers' and Daughters' Meeting, on the 16th at 1 P. M., is also announced.

THE Sunday-school Teachers' Institute of Southern Ohio will be held in the School Auditorium at Bradford, Ohio, under the auspices of the Upper Stillwater congregation, Dec. 25 to 29, inclusive, Holiday week. More than 500 people can be seated. Brethren I. B. Trout and P. B. Fitzwater will be the speakers for the occasion.

ON another page Bro. W. B. Stover is telling us of the famine conditions in India, and promises to keep us posted regarding further developments. No call for funds to aid the famine-stricken people has yet been made, but those having the matter in hand are studying the situation, and will act when it becomes necessary to do so.

A CORRESPONDENT suggests that members living in cities should preserve their copies of the MESSENGER, and hand them to the Salvation Army people when they call for papers to distribute. This plan may be a good one, but why could not the members of every city constitute a Salvation Army of their own? Our members should do something themselves, and not leave everything for somebody else to do.

DR. ROBERT E. SPEER, who visited seventy large Catholic Cathedrals in South America, says that, after special inquiry, he found but one Bible, and that was a Protestant Bible. This absence of the Word of God from the costly churches, where there are plenty of priests, accounts in part for the ignorance and general superstition to be found among the people of the country. Instead of a Bible for every family there is only one Bible for seventy churches.

THE late District Meeting of North Carolina did not see proper to recommend the mildest possible discipline for members who oppose and talk against the use of the Brethren literature in the schools of the District, for it was decided that those who persist in such opposition to our Sunday-school helps should be dealt with according to Matt. 18. We predict that if our literature is properly used in all the schools of the State, under the control of our people, in due time the different congregations will rejoice over the ingathering of souls.

PROF. J. E. MILLER and wife have returned from their trip abroad, and are once more enjoying their pleasant home and friends at Mount Morris. Bro. Miller took up his duties, as president of the college, last Monday morning.

BRO. H. C. EARLY writes us that Bridgewater College, Bridgewater, Va., opened with the largest fall attendance known in the history of the institution. All the teachers,—and especially Bro. J. S. Flory, the president,—feel happy over the outlook.

TWO series of meetings were recently held in the Sangerville congregation, Va.,—one at the Sangerville house by Bro. J. Carson Miller, and the other at Lynn Rock, a mission point, by Bro. J. W. Hess. At the former there were six conversions, at the latter four.

BRO. W. B. STOVER and family, of India, are arranging to return to the United States in the spring of 1912, to remain one year. He is already considering his plans for the year, for he is too energetic a man to think of doing nothing while in this country. However, he may have reached a period in his life when at least a few months' rest will do him good.

THE Brethren church at Saginaw, Texas, was moved bodily a distance of ten miles, to Fort Worth, put in good shape, rededicated and is now serving an excellent purpose for the members living in that part of the State. The name has been changed from Saginaw to Fort Worth church, and the outlook for the congregation, though small at present, is encouraging.

WE are often requested to publish special invitations for ministers to attend certain feasts when announced. The mere fact that a feast is announced in the MESSENGER means that a general invitation is extended to all who may feel disposed to attend. A special invitation, in connection with each announcement, is not only unnecessarry, but would occupy space to no purpose.

AT the District Meeting of North Carolina a committee was appointed to frame and offer for adoption a plan for doing mission work among the colored people of the District. The committee is to report its plan to the next meeting. The idea is certainly a good one. The Southern people understand the negroes a great deal better than the Northern people do, and should know how to reach them with the Gospel. The committee should formulate a good working plan, and then it should be put into operation by the District. We suggest that the committee need not hesitate to recommend that mission work among the colored people be carried on separately from the work done among the whites. We all understand this to be the better method in the Southern States. Furthermore, we feel sure that the General Mission Board would be glad to aid any of the Districts of the South, leading out in a wisely-planned mission of this sort.

Sailing of Our Missionaries for China.

Good Meetings at Seattle, Rich in Spiritual Blessings.—A Feast of Love.—Sunday-school Conference.

A MEETING, never to be forgotten by those who had the privilege of attending it, was held in the Seattle church, Washington, Sept. 16 and 17. Saturday evening, the 16th, a spiritual feast of love was enjoyed. Our outgoing missionaries were all present. At the table sat an aged elder of seventy, at his side our young brother, John Hilton, aged seven. The brother of many years knelt down reverently, and washed the feet of one of Christ's little ones, esteeming it a blessed privilege to thus engage in this service. The Brethren at Seattle have a large house of worship, and had made every possible preparation for the meeting, but the house was much too small for the crowds who came to hear. Bro. Heckman officiated at the feast. It was a blessed season of communion with the Lord, because of the presence of the Holy Spirit. Not again shall those who attended the love feast meet again in this world, and enjoy a like feast together, but the hope is big in each devoted heart that we shall meet at the marriage feast of the Lamb.

On Lord's Day morning the Sunday-school Convention met and held a most interesting and profitable session. The cultivation of a taste for good literature, wise methods to secure regular attendance, and opening and closing exercises were among the topics ably discussed. The speeches made, showed careful thought in preparation. Washington need not feel ashamed of her Sunday-school workers. They are equal to the very best in the country.

At two o'clock in the afternoon a crowded house greeted our missionaries, who spoke words to be long remembered after they have left us, and are laboring for the conversion of the heathen. It was a season of rejoicing, mingled with sadness too, but, while tears were shed when parting words were spoken, there was joy because so many were going to China to carry the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ to the heathen.

A Chinese hymn was sung by two of the little missionaries, Johnny Hilton and Esther Bright, and then Sister Anna Hutchison spoke fifteen minutes on prayer and its importance in the work of the missionaries. She plead earnestly, and, it is believed, effectually, for the united prayers of the church in behalf of the missionaries and their labors among the heathen; also for those who have been converted and those who are to be brought to Christ in heathen lands. Sister Hilton followed, and told of the earnest problems and its perplexities, how the missionaries would rather do their own work, but the customs of the country are such that they must have helpers. She said it was the first duty of the missionary to teach his helpers and bring them to Christ.

Sisters Bright and Heckman spoke feelingly and touchingly about the little missionaries, the five little children they are taking with them. They spoke out of the fulness of mother hearts, and others were touched with deepest sympathy. Sister Winnie Cripe asked the question, "Am I my sister's keeper?" and broadened so as to include every son and daughter of Adam. She entreated all most earnestly to assume the responsibility of helping to save souls, to become soul-winners. Bro. Homer Bright said that every Christian should be a missionary. "Either go or send," was the key-note of his address and the lesson was deeply impressed.

The closing talk was made by Bro. Hilton. He told us why he was going back to China. He spoke with deep feeling of the joy he felt in returning to his work, and how he did not regard it as a sacrifice but a blessed privilege to return to the people he loved. A few words were spoken on behalf of the General Mission Board, and "Praise God from whom all blessings flow," was sung, a prayer offered and the missionary meeting was closed. It is the opinion of the writer that it was one of the best meetings of the kind he ever attended.

At 7:30 P. M. Bro. Heckman preached a stirring missionary sermon. He spoke of the whitened fields, ready for the reapers, and so few to thrust in the sickle and gather in the sheaves. He spoke of the duty of the church to send out more reapers into the harvest. He referred to China with its four hundred million souls ready to receive the Gospel. An offering was taken, and a generous response brought nearly fifty-five dollars for the Chinese mission.

The upper deck of the great ship Minnesota which is to bear our missionaries across the waves of the Pacific to far-away Cathay, was our next meeting place. At eleven o'clock, Monday morning, Sept 18, nearly a hundred brethren and sisters, among them twenty-two ministers, most of them elders, Eld. Andrew Hutchison the oldest in the assembly, met on board the vessel. A quiet place was sought out on the upper deck, near the stern of the ship, and here a farewell service was held. It was a precious season of prayer when we came into close touch with our God. After singing "Blest be the tie that binds our hearts in Christian love," earnest prayers were offered to the Great Father for the devoted and consecrated band of loved ones who go to carry the Gospel to heathen lands. The entire company of worshipers united in the Lord's prayer, and then came the last farewells. There were but few dry eyes in the large assemblage, as the last good-byes were said, and again, from every heart, went up to God a silent, but earnest prayer that he would watch over and keep our beloved missionaries, whom the church sends away to preach Christ and him crucified; that he protect them from the perils of the sea and take them safely to their desired haven. At 2 o'clock the Minnesota moved slowly out of her dock, and was soon steaming toward the land of the "Rising Sun," bearing across the deep the largest band of missionaries ever sent out at one time by the church. The prayers of all of God's people will be offered in their behalf, and many hearts will rejoice when word comes across the sea that our missionaries have reached the other side in safety. D. L. M.

Form the Habit.

We are all largely creatures of habit,—more so than any of us are aware, or would be willing to admit, or would like to believe. A great many people cherish the idea of being original,—self-made and independent of the assistance of others. In this world of sociability and of associations, this is a barely possible condition, as we are too much like fruit-flowers,—we need the pollen from other flowers to give us the necessary fertilization. Some of us are so open and susceptible to these outside forces that we largely lose our identity,—whatever we may have,—and become like the thing we happen to run up against. No, often our habits can scarcely be said to be of our own choosing. We imbibe them as we do the air we breathe, and we grow into them apparently without any volition of our own; and yet God has given us a personality which belongs to us, and to none other, and for it he holds us responsible.

Our habits are many, and varied, and some of them begin their formative period early in life. But those for which we are the more responsible, and which affect our lives most, are formed in our maturer period, when we are capable of taking an inventory of our stock in hand, in order to determine what use shall be made of it, in what direction it shall lead, and where it shall end.

At this age in life we should be able not only to recognize bad habits already formed, but also be able to get rid of them and form new and better ones. This is the time to form the habits that we want to form, and to have grow and become established in our lives. As we have said, there are many of them, but we will, at this time, only name a few of the more important ones. If these are well formed and established, other good ones will follow as a natural outgrowth.

First, we should form the habit of recognizing God's presence and helpfulness all the time, and in everything we do. We form habits by continual repetition in thought and action, so that, by our continually remembering the presence of God with us, to help and bless, we form the habit. Having this habit, it not only gives us the blessings of his presence, but it also keeps us from going to places and doing things that we know to be wrong. What we want to learn to do, is to keep God in our thoughts, that we can always say in our hearts, "Thou, God, seest me." Having God thus as our ever-present Companion, the devil can have but little influence over us, in leading us away from him, into the ways of sin.

This habit we have been trying to form in our lives for years and years, and the older we grow the easier and the sweeter it becomes to us. To have the continual inward feeling that "the earth is the Lord's and the fulness thereof," gives a new and blessed interpretation to our own lives, and the things around and about us, that we can not otherwise see and enjoy.

To add emphasis to the thought, the sacred writer continues: "The world and they that dwell therein." All, everything, belongs to God whom we love and who loves us. Our houses, our farms, our trees, the flowers, the birds, the sheep, the oxen feeding on the thousands of hills and plains,—all these and everything else which we can see, and about which we can think, belong to the Lord and are for our good if we properly use them. How much more helpful, beautiful and enjoyable all these become to us when we see and use them as gifts to us from our Heavenly Father!

Second, we should form the habit of accepting Jesus Christ as an ever-abiding member of our homes. He wants to enter in, and will, if we invite him and make him a welcome guest. To his children he says: "I will be with you always, even unto the end of the world."

So we are encouraged to form the habit of having Christ in our homes. And there is no way by which we can make his presence more real than to establish in our home the family altar. Every day we should read with the family a portion of God's Word and have prayer. This, of itself, becomes a very desirable habit and results in a world of good to the parents, children, the hired help, or the stranger that may be within the gates. It always brings home to us the thought that God is with us and in the home, ready to hear and give us the needed good. In our long home experience there is no means of grace that has become so fixed and so indispensable a habit as the observance of the altar service. Anybody who was considered worthy of the shelter of our home was expected to be with us in our devotional exercises. There are some other things that we can afford to miss. But we can not well do a day's work, or meet its trials, without the help that our Father is so willing to give for the asking.

Third, we should form the habit of asking a blessing on the meals as we eat. They are gifts from God, and it is meet that we should thank him for them. No matter if the asking should become somewhat stated or formal in words. It helps to keep God in our thoughts and gives expression to the feelings of our hearts, and God understands what we mean. He is pleased to have his children keep him in remembrance. Jesus says: If children ask their father for bread, will he give them stones? If we ask our Heavenly Father for bread will he give us stones? Nay, verily, my brethren. If we keep Jesus in our homes we will always be blessed with food for our bodies and for our souls. Whatever helps us to think of God and our Elder Brother, is helpful to us in strengthening us in our good habits. In our dining room we have had, in a conspicuous place, this motto: "Christ is the head of this house, the unseen guest at every meal, the silent listener to every conversation." A small thing it be, yet as a reminder, it has been a perpetual blessing to our home.

Fourth, form the habit of attending, when possible, all of the church services, the prayer meetings, the Sunday-school, and the monthly or quarterly church councils. They are all means of grace and are for the edifying and building up of the children of God. The apostle says: "Neglect not the assembling of yourselves together as the manner of some is." Neglect of church attendance is one of the bad habits. Keep out of such but get into all the good ones, and they will prove a great blessing to you. H. B. B.

The Price of Success.

Chance seems to have a great deal to do with the failure and success of men in the things of this world. Two men will work side by side at the same business: one of them will go forward, and the other will hold his own or go backward. And it is not always the one who goes ahead who works hardest. It is easy to see how one who works and manages well should win; but it is not so easy to see why another, who seems to work and manage just as well, should make a failure.

Some men seem to have success thrust upon them; and nowadays too many are looking for success without being willing to pay the price. That is why the Chicago Board of Trade and the New York Stock Exchange find so many victims; also it is why the national lottery of Cuba has so many drawings. Any sensible man, if he stops to think, knows that the chances are heavily against him when he undertakes margin gambling; and the same is true of the lottery —if he bought all the tickets he would be sure to lose thirty per cent of his money, and he would not need to do that often until he and his money parted company.

But so many like to take chances. They hope to win more by some lucky chance than they could earn in a lifetime of hard work. And the ethics of the question does not concern them. If the other man loses, it is because he is unlucky, and would be sure to part with his money in some way.

I knew a man once who could not have five dollars in his possession without rushing off to the gambling table; and another who always thought he could guess the market, and kept putting up his hard-earned dollars on margins; and still another who kept putting his money into new prospects in mines, but never "struck it rich." The last one does not belong with the other two: he can, or may, win without anyone else losing—he takes all the chance himself. But the desire and hope of all three is the same namely, to get more than they earn.

The present-day tendency in that respect is largely wrong. Too much stress is laid upon financial success. Money, not charity, covers a multitude of sins. An indiscretion on the part of wealth is a crime on the part of poverty. If it were only the world that set up this wrong standard it would not be so bad; but it has made its way into the church. The papers advertise quick and easy ways of making "big money." That does not harmonize with the purpose for which church papers are supposed to be published. We need to be on our guard in this, lest we follow the pernicious example of some. The main purpose of our existence is not that we may make much money, or help others to make it—to our own greater advantage.

The price paid for financial success is too high: it is too often bought with that which is of inestimably greater value. We must not, we dare not encourage men to pay such a price. We are seeking a better country, or profess so to do; and it is not for us to lay so great stress upon that which perishes with the using, and which is most often a hindrance in the divine life. And we make a very great mistake when by success we mean only, or mainly, the acquiring of money; yet in nine cases out of ten when we speak of some one as being successful we refer solely to his earthly wealth. He may be a moral and spiritual pauper, and yet be honored because he is rich.

We need to teach, and to live as if we believed, that a man's life does not consist of the abundance of the things which he possesses. It is good to have plenty, to be able to buy those things which we need to make us comfortable; that is, it is good to the carnal part of us. But if we have paid the usual price for them, we have made the mistake of our lives: for we have lost the eternal riches in order to gain the temporal. Down deep in our hearts we know we are paying too high a price for our financial success. Then why do we pay it? G. M.

The Growth of Secret Societies in the United States.

That the secret societies are growing at a rapid rate is shown by the census reports. These show that more than nine million men are members of the different secret societies in this country alone. If these were all to act in unison, they could cast more votes than were given to Wm. H. Taft when he was elected President.

It is estimated that more than a total of three hundred million dollars is spent annually by the different lodges for meeting places, plumed hats, gorgeous robes, splendid regalia, sheepskin aprons, jeweled swords, decorated belts, sumptuous feasts and banquets, traveling expenses and incidentals. Much of this immense sum is worse than wasted. It appears to be a fact that secret society men give more per capita for their lodges than Christians do for the church, and this is said with shame.

The membership of some of the larger societies is given as follows, in round numbers:

Odd Fellows,	2,000,000
Freemasons,	1,500,000
Modern Woodmen,	1,000,000
Knights of Pythias,	850,000
Woodmen of the World,	600,000
Royal Arcanum,	300,000

In addition to these there are hundreds of others, each with a considerable membership. Add to these the various labor associations, and it can be seen at a glance that if these were to unite they could easily elect a President and Congress, and control the Legislatures of the different States. Already it is impossible for a laboring man to get work unless he belongs to a labor union. In many places goods are not allowed to be sold unless they bear the mark of some society. The time is coming when God's people will be put to the test. They will not be allowed either to buy or sell unless they bear the "mark of the beast." Is the day approaching? D. L. M.

Using Churches for School Purposes.

We have a few letters, in which we are asked to give our opinion in regard to making use of a Brethren meetinghouse for school purposes, and would not say anything on the subject, did the case not furnish an occasion for a bit of history, and a principle or two, respecting the best methods of disposing of matters of this sort. In the first place, a meetinghouse belongs to the congregation in whose territory it stands, and not to the elder of the congregation, or to the trustees who hold the property in trust. If the house is desired for any other than for the church purposes, the congregation, properly assembled in council, must be consulted and its consent secured, before such permission can be granted. The wishes of the congregation, in a case of this kind, is law, both in the church and out of it. And while a meetinghouse may be built wholly for religious services, there are instances when a church may be used, temporarily, for educational purposes. Especially is this true of houses in new countries, in small towns, and in the absence of a schoolhouse. In 1874 Brethren Lewis Kimmel and Howard Miller conducted a high school in the Plum Creek meetinghouse, near Elderton, Pa. The meetinghouse at Keuka, Fla., was, as a matter of necessity, used for the district school until a schoolhouse could be built in the village. In a score of instances this may have been repeated in various parts of the Brotherhood. But these cases of emergency do not argue that a house, dedicated to the Lord, may, under ordinary circumstances, be used for secular purposes. The sense of propriety, and the needs of a growing community should have much to do in deciding a matter of this character. Then it may be well to bear in mind that, in a very large measure, education has much to do with religion. Still, the congregation interested should know what is right and proper, when it comes to settling the question for its own community.

Let the Sisters Settle It.

"When churches are voting whether the sisters will accept the privilege of breaking the bread and passing the cup," writes one of our contributors, "should the sisters alone vote on the question, or should the brethren vote also?" It is a matter which, in practice, affects the sisters alone. The decision of 1910, Art. 4, reads: "We grant the sisters the same privilege of breaking the bread and passing the cup that the brethren enjoy." So far as the brethren are concerned, there is nothing to be decided. The Conference has given the sisters the privilege of breaking the bread and passing the cup, and all that they have to do is to say that they wish to enjoy the privilege, and that settles it. For brethren to vote against the sisters enjoying the privilege, would be to vote against the decision of Annual Meeting itself. They have no right to oppose the wishes of the sisters, in this particular, by either vote or speech. It is one instance in the operation of our church machinery in which the brethren may, for a brief time, "learn in silence," while the sisters, by vote, say what they wish to do. There should, however, be no serious objections if the brethren, by way of encouragement or congratulation, vote with the sisters in accepting the privilege offered by the Conference, but, surely, no brother should think of voting against the sisters.

Good for Kansas.

A correspondent says Kansas may have done some foolish things. Then, on the other hand, the State has done things for which it deserves credit. With the latter he would class the bill passed by the last legislature, empowering county commissioners to grant pensions to those who have lost both eyes, or both hands or both feet, conditioned, however, on residence in the county and State for a specified time. The pension granted may be $20 or $25 a month, and by vote of the people a pension may be increased to $50 a month. Our correspondent says several pensions have been granted since the law went into effect, and among the number favored he mentions Bro. J. D. Norris, a deacon of Nickerson, who now, past sixty-three, has been blind since he was seventeen years old. Our blind brother is active, sells a number of books for the House, and does many other things by which he makes himself useful and helps to earn a livelihood. He also teaches a Sunday-school class and can quote more Scripture than half the preachers. His pension, however, will be appreciated, as he is not able to work like he once did. A State that makes such humane provisions for its unfortunate citizens, deserves to be praised alike for its generosity and wisdom.

Announcing Cheap Lands.

From time to time we are requested to make announcements of cheap lands for sale, in different parts of the West and South, and are urged to encourage our people to avail themselves of the splendid opportunities of procuring homes in such sections on reasonable terms. This we are asked to do in the interest of building up churches in new localities. We would be pleased to comply with the wishes of all our patrons, in this particular, but we receive so many requests of this sort that it is at times difficult to determine whether it is a case of speculation, or an honest effort to enlarge the borders of Zion. Sometimes we are asked to publish newspaper clippings, setting forth, in glowing terms, the fertility and possibilities of a body of land offered to settlers, but we have learned that one can not always depend upon what the papers say about such lands. We do not care to be misled, respecting things of this character, nor do we care to have any of our people disappointed. Besides, the Messenger is not a secular journal, and should not deal too much with matters that are wholly secular in their character.

Their Ashland Conference.

The twenty-third General Conference of the Brethren church (Progressive Brethren) was held in Ashland, Ohio, beginning Aug. 30 and closing Sept. 4. The attendance seems to have been large and the spirit good. The meeting was presided over by Wm. H. Beachler, who is said to be an excellent parliamentarian. As near as we can gather from the report given in the Brethren Evangelist, there were present sixty-eight lay delegates and sixty-two ministerial delegates, making a total of 130. The Conference consisted of about twenty sessions, dealing principally with questions relative to development, education and extension. Little was done pertaining to church government or church policy. Most of the sessions were taken up in listening to and discussing addresses, papers and reports that had been previously arranged for. The Conference seems to have been largely in the hands of the younger element, and yet there were present men of years and experience, who pleaded for conservatism and loyalty to the faith of the fathers.

A Few Suggestions.

We wish to make a few suggestions to those who use the typewriter, when preparing manuscript for the Messenger. Do not use thin paper. The medium grade is always preferable. Writing on thin paper is hard on the eyes of all those who have to handle the manuscript. This means the one whose business it is carefully to go over every word and line, and see that the manuscript is ready for the printers; the linotype operator, who puts the article in type, and the one who assists in proofreading. All of these parties must strain their eyes more, in order to have an article come out in good form, than is required of the writer himself. Furthermore, do not run the typewriter lines close together. There ought to be at least double space between the lines. This gives room to note necessary corrections and to enter anything else to which the printer's attention must be called. Paper is cheap, but time and eyes are valuable, and anything that can be done to expedite business and save the eyes of our workmen deserves consideration.

MISSION BOARD OF OKLAHOMA.

The members of the Mission Board of Oklahoma held their meeting immediately after the close of our District Meeting, at Thomas, Okla., Sept. 2. After effecting an organization with Bro. J. H. Cox as president, Bro. E. H. Miller, treasurer, and Bro. John R. Pitzer as secretary, the following business was disposed of:

The mission point at Clovis, N. Mex., was first considered, and it was thought best to continue Bro. C. H. Brown at Busby for another year.

The call from Enid received due consideration, and an effort will be made to locate some one there to take up the work with a view of making this a mission point.

Steps were also taken to put an evangelist in the Oklahoma field, to spend his entire time in holding meetings, Bible Normals, and Sunday-school work, as soon as a suitable person can be found to fill the place.

Cordell, Okla., Sept. 15. John R. Pitzer, Sec.

MINOT MISSION, NORTH DAKOTA.

This Mission was taken in charge by Eld. D. W. Shock and wife Nov. 1, 1910. The work prospered and souls were born into the kingdom, during Bro. Shock's pastorate. But his term of work was all too short, as he considered his resignation to take effect Aug. 7, 1911. He is at present at Bethany Bible School.

The writer and family began working for the Mission Sept. 1, 1911. We have found a number of loyal members and the work is growing in every nicker. We cordially desire the cooperation of the membership of this State District. We should be pleased if, when you speak of the work here, you would call it "our mission." If there are those in the city who are feeling toward the work, and you know of them, will you not kindly write us a card, giving names, street addresses, and all needed information, so that we can call to see them, and approach them in the most tactful way?

If there are those looking for a city home, where work is plenty, wages good, and where they can be of use to the Lord in helping to do work for his church, let them correspond with us. Later we may say something about the need and use of clothing among the poor.

Pray for the work and workers here. Ministering brethren are especially asked to step over Lord's Day with us, and lend enthusiasm and spirit to the services. Drop a card stating to which depot you will come, and time of arrival, and we will see that you are met and cared for. D. F. Landis.

LORDSBURG COLLEGE, CALIFORNIA.

The successful opening of Lordsburg College, Aug. 29, was an inspiration to all present. Eld. Edward Frantz's address, as to what an education really is, ought to have been listened to by every member in the District. Those of us who heard it realize, more than ever before, our responsibility to the young people of our church. There is a great work to be done, here and now, full of blessings to those who do it.

The enrollment during the first two weeks of our school was greater than at any time in the history of the institution at the same period. The ringing of the bell, the sound of the gong, the gathering of students, the sweet songs at Chapel, the march to class rooms, the click of the typewriter, the sound of music, the occasional sound of good cheer on the campus at recreation periods, —all in the Lordsburg College has a new sound. A most hearty welcome was given to the seven new students who came from Newberg, Oregon,—three brethren and four sisters. Others are coming, and still others are looking toward Lordsburg. The classes in the Bible Department are larger than ever before, and the interest shown in Bible study is to be commended.

Tuition is free in the Bible Department to all. The work is so outlined and conducted as to encourage original thinking, personal investigation and common sense interpretation. What is needed, more than anything else just now, in our District, is a united body of men and women, to stand together and use their influence for Christian education. God wants every young people educated amid environments free from the evil influences so frequently thrown into the school life. It is God's will that these Christian schools prosper and be a blessing to the world. Those who assist in the work are "workers together with God." The enemy is against all such institutions.

May God abundantly bless all our schools this year! Our hope is that the Educational Board will be able to gather such information, through their experience, that the church may be stirred to its very center, and that we may awaken to a greater interest in behalf of the education of our children under proper moral and religious influences. W. F. Englund.

SOUTHERN IOWA.

The District Mission Board met in regular meeting in Osceola, Sept. 2. All were present. The Board is making an effort to locate a minister for the Ottumwa field immediate and assist those already in operation. More especially is this true in Osceola, as the ministers are living too far out in the country, to do the work and themselves justice. Steps were taken to locate one of the ministers in the city, and have him devote most of his time to the work. Bro. S. M. Coughnour just commenced a series of meetings with them, which opened with a love feast. We also enjoyed two other services with them, besides the Sunday-school. Bro. Lee Hisey has been conducting the school, and also serving very acceptably in the ministry. The services were all well attended. It was a real pleasure to worship with the dear people. Bro. Fisher was also advanced to the second degree of the ministry at this time.

We also spent one night in Ottumwa, in the Mission there. Bro. C. S. Garber was holding a protracted effort there at the time. The meeting-house was crowded on the night of Sept. 3, with prospects for more to follow. As Bro. Garber could not remain much longer, and the interest was good, Bro. Burgin expected to continue the meetings for some time. Here, on the whole, the outlook in the District is good at present. Our ministers seem to be aroused to a sense of their duty as never before, with but the one desire, "More and better work for Jesus." The field seems ready for the harvest, but the laborers are few. May the day be not far distant when there will enter the Master's field to gather sheaves for his garner!

South English, Iowa, Sept. 14. Noah Mow.

COLORADO.

Denver.—We were well entertained and edified on the evenings of Sept. 12 and 13, by Sister Miller. She told us of the superstitions, manners and customs of the people in India, and their great need of the Gospel. Nearly $9 was raised for the missions.—Hilma E. Long, Arvada, Colo., Sept. 16.

Smith Fork.—Last Sunday a promising young lady decided to unite with the church by baptism. Bro. Chas. A. Dove administered the rite. Others are counting the cost. Eleven more were members from Quiney Grove, organized us. We will certainly welcome as many as desire to come among us. We have a fine country. Crops look very good. Corn and fruit is abundant. Our Sunday-school is progressing very nicely, under the superintendency of Sister Aldin Dove. We are anticipating grand revival meetings sometime this fall.—R. A. Saylor, Crawford, Colo., Sept. 17.

ILLINOIS.

Panther Creek church met in council Sept. 14, with our elder, Bro. J. H. Baker, as moderator. The report of the annual visit by Bro. Wm. Hays, the evangelist, was received and one granted. We decided to hold an election for two deacons in the near future. Bro. Hays was elected to the District Meeting. Bro. J. H. Baker to our delegate to District Meeting; Bro. J. W. Switzer, alternate. Bro. Harshbarger will begin a series of meetings for us Oct. 7, to continue about two weeks. Our Sunday-school will be held at 9:30 A. M.—Effie Long, beginning at 10 A. M.—Elsie M. Noftsinger, Box 46, Benson, Ill., Sept. 17.

Sugar Creek church met in council Sept. 16. Our love feast has been appointed for Nov. 4, at 6 P. M. A committee was chosen to secure ministerial help for us in place of those during the coming year. Bro. James Masterson will be our delegate to the District Meeting. Bro. Jesse Miller, alternate. Our letter of membership was presented.—Anna E. B. Shearer, Auburn, Ill., Sept. 18.

INDIANA.

Bremen.—We held our Harvest Meeting Sept. 10. Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, did very pleasing and instructive service. An offering of $13.82 was given. Sept. 16 we convened in council meeting. Our elder, Wm. Stutsman, and Bro. Warner and the writer were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Since our last report we had a interesting Sunday-school program rendered by our young people. An offering was taken for the furtherance of the temperance cause.—Monroe Martin, Bremen, Ind., Sept. 18.

Kewanna.—At our communion meeting we had a crowded house and a good meeting. Our elder, Henry Mattingly, assisted us in the Lord's tables. Bro. Aaron Moss, of Huntington, Ind., officiated. One of our deacons passed away, and Bro. Moss a week prior to the meeting.—W. Wilfert, Delong, Ind., Sept. 16.

Laporte.—Our church met in council Sept. 16, with Eld. William Glass presiding. The deacons reported the members in love and unity. Five letters were received. Sister Rachel C. Merchant is our delegate to District Meeting; Bro. John C. Miller, alternate. Our next will be held Oct. 21, at 10 A. M. William Hess will hold a series of meetings for us this fall.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, 1102 Lincoln Way, Laporte, Ind., Sept. 18.

Pine Creek church met in council Sept. 9, at the Center house. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Hoover, presided. The deacons' report of the annual visit was favorable. Brethren A. M. Rogers and Lafayette Myers were chosen delegates to District Meeting; Brethren Jacob Hildebrand and Wm. Summers, alternates. Eld. David Metzler, of Huntington, will be held Nov. 4.—Lulu E. Viney, R. D. 4, Box 41, Delphi, Ind., Sept. 18.

Syracuse church met in council Sept. 5. Our elder, Bro. Manley Deeter, presided. Bro. Amzey Cline was also with us. Bro. Deeter was elected as our elder for another year. Bro. John Neff was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Two letters were granted. We expect to have Bro. David Metzler, of Nappanee, Ind., to hold a series of meetings for us after the Holidays.—Mrs. Fannie Neff, R. D. 1, New Paris, Ind., Sept. 17.

IOWA.

Grundy County.—We had our council Sept. 13. Our elder, Bro. I. N. Brubaker, presided. Four letters were received and one granted. Brethren I. N. Brubaker and John Foutz were chosen delegates to District Meeting. We expect Bro. D. R. Beard to conduct a singing class for us during the coming Holidays, and soon after that Bro. J. F. Broderick, of Panama, Mich., expects to be with us in Bible work and a series of meetings. We desire to assist the members at Grundy Center in trying to locate a minister there. At present our ministers fill the appointments every so weeks.—Gertie C. Messer, Grundy Center, Iowa, Sept. 16.

Liberty Center.—Our Mission Board began a series of meetings in this congregation Sept. 3, and continued each evening until Sept. 17. The interest and attendance were good, and two boys united with the church. Baptism was administered Sept. 16. Bro. Miller came to us unannounced, and we feel much built up in Christ.—H. R. Johnston, R. R. 3, Batavia, Iowa, Sept. 18.

Iowa River church met in council Sept. 14. Our elder, Bro. F. M. Wheeler, presided. Sisters Nellie Nicholson and Mary Wheeler were elected delegates to District Meeting. Our writer, delegate to Sunday-school Meeting. Two letters of membership were granted. Bro. Wheeler will begin a series of meetings in the house at Marietta, Oct. 1. Bro. Roberts and Bro. Williams were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Since our last report two were born into the kingdom, which makes seventy in the District to the church within the year, since our last District Meeting.—Willis Rodabaugh, Marietta, Iowa, Sept. 14.

Osceola.—The Mission Board of Southern Iowa, consisting of Brethren Wolfe, Ward and Shock, met at Grove, met with the Osceola church Sept. 2. Bro. S. M. Coughnour also came among us the same day. In the evening Bro. I. M. Fisher was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. We enjoyed a very spiritual communion service. Bro. Coughnour officiated. Sunday-school Sunday evening, Sept. 10, and preached the Word with great earnestness. Two were baptized. Our prayer is for deeper repentance.—Eld. A. M. Bro. Coughnour delivered an interesting sermon, and at 1:30 a very creditable program was rendered, in charge of Bro. D. A. Wolfe. The different lines of church work seem to be moving on. Bro. Ward is our delegate to Annual Meeting.—Osceola church.—W. W. Folger, Osceola, Iowa, Sept. 11.

Panther.—We have just closed a fifteen-day series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. C. Ikenberry, of Covert, Indiana. He is a very forcible expounder of God's Word. We feel that good seed was sown, and we expect a rich harvest when we reap the crown this effort. One dear soul was reclaimed, and the church was greatly strengthened and encouraged. Bro. Ikenberry was ordained to the second degree of the ministry, and was ordained to the second degree of the ministry, and was ordained to the second degree of the ministry, and

CALIFORNIA.

Live Oak.—Our church met in council Sept. 16. Eld. W. R. Brubaker had charge. Bro. Brubaker was chosen as delegate to our District Meeting. Bro. Albert Crites was chosen superintendent of our Sunday-school for six months. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, at 2 P. M., in Independence Hall. We are looking forward to the time when we can have our place of worship of our own. All inquiries will be answered.—F. S. Hartman, Live Oak, Cal., Sept. 18.

Long Beach church met in council Sept. 15, at 7:30 P. M. Eld. W. E. Trostle presided. Five letters of membership were granted and three received at the close of the meeting, two since. Brethren A. L. B. Martin and Urias Shick are our delegates to District Meeting. The church decided to call a love feast Dec. 3, at 7 P. M.; examination services at 10 A. M. We elected a committee to arrange for a place of worship. We are increasing in number. Several families are locating here, and there is room for many more. We are in a healthful part of a location, where there are the best climatic conditions the year round, and every opportunity for a home, in fact there will not miss it by locating here, as there is plenty to do for all that will come. Today Bro. Martin preached a most excellent sermon on "Home Duties." Our services are well attended, and the Sunday-school is growing.—J. M. Shively, 1219 East Second St., Long Beach, Cal., Sept. 18.

Notice.—The District of Northern California has two mission points in which the Ministerial Board is interested. The parties now in charge have other fields of labor. Any brother, desiring to do mission work in either of these places, apply to Harvey Eikenberry, Chairman, Ralsh, Cal., or the writer.—S. F. Sanders, Lemoore, Cal., Sept. 18.

Santee.—Sept. 9 Bro. Bollenberger came to hold a series of meetings, in connection with our mission, under the direction of the Mission Board of Southern California and Arizona. The Board secured Eld. C. A. Homberger to direct the part of the work now in the new age, and as a result of his labors there are now about twenty-five members within a radius of twenty-five miles. Some are active in the work, and we hope for a separate organization in the near future. Our nearest organized church is at San Diego, nearly one hundred miles away, and Bro. Bollenberger preached five inspiring sermons to attentive audiences with increasing interest.—W. W. Frait, Box 52, Santee, Cal., Sept. 14.

IDAHO.

Twin Falls.—Our church met in council Sept. 15. Four letters were granted. Arrangements are being made for the District Sunday-school Convention, to be held in this place Nov. 11 and 12. On the evening of the 12th we will hold our love feast. Brethren and sisters, remember, winter is coming on to the coast this fall and winter, are cordially invited to stop over with us. As we are off the main line we do not have as many visitors as we would have if we were. We have no gas mingling here with those of like precious faith, you will see a beautiful valley, exceller fruit, and the great Sadie Miller, of India, stopped with us on the 17th. She gave us three talks on her work in India among the women. Evening a collection of $57 was taken. While Sister Miller was telling us of the women in India, I was prompted to think of some of us, in this enlightened country, are not doing half what we ought to for the Gospel and the cause of Christ. Those who know it not.—Ella Fahrney, 761 Second Avenue, N., Twin Falls, Idaho, Sept. 18.

Weiser church met in council Sept. 16. Our elder, Bro. L. H. Eby, of Payette, Idaho, presided. Four letters of membership were granted, and eight members were received by letter. As our president of the Christian Workers' Meeting, Sister Mow, and Bro. Eby, a member of one of the committees, were leaving us, we elected Sister Daisy Yant as president, and the writer as a board member of the same, and Sister Mow, correspondent. The Ladies' Aid Society will meet on Wednesday, with Sister Hartzell, to organize. It was decided to send a message of greeting, by telegram, to our missionaries that were ready to sail for China. Eld. Eby preached an excellent sermon. Our next one on Sunday, Oct. 1.—Sister Nettie and Bro. Baxter Mow leave us, as they are faithful workers, and will be greatly missed by us. Their address will be as Moscow for another term.—Malinda Russell, 414 E. Commercial St., Weiser, Idaho, Sept. 19.

ILLINOIS.

Coal Creek.—We met in council in August. Bro. Hahn was with us. Brethren Hoke is our elder, and Bro. Hahn assisting. Bro. Hahn began a series of meetings for us a week prior to our love feast. The rain prevented many from attending the services. He gave us many good sermons. Aug. 26 we had a good sermon by our home ministers.—Alice Rohrs, 896 North Main St., Canton, Ill., Sept. 18.

Martin Creek.—We are at present holding a series of meetings, conducted by Eld. W. F. Richards, of Mount Morris, which began Sept. 16 and are to continue until Oct. 1. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30, at 2 P. M. Sunday-school in Martin on Sunday.—J. J. Scrogum, Fairfield, Ill., Sept. 18.

Pleasant Hill church has just enjoyed a very spiritual and uplifting series of meetings at the Girard house. Bro. Homer Carter, of Arkansas, Pa., conducted these meetings, beginning Sept. 8 and closing Sept. 17. Bro. Homer preached the Word with power, and the church received spiritual blessings. He also gave lectures from the floor. The Christian Workers greatly enjoyed by all. Good interest and attention were manifested at all the services. There were two additions to the church. One of these has been received by baptism, the other is awaiting the time.—Vena Harbaugh, Girard, Ill., Sept. 19.

Woodland.—Sept. 9 we dedicated our new church-house, a very nice building. It cost about $3,500, and was all paid when it was dedicated. Bro. E. F. Sherfy preached the dedicatory sermon, using as a text Solomon's prayer at the dedication of the temple at Jerusalem. It was a fine day, and the house was crowded. Bro. Sherfy began a series of meetings, which began the same evening, closing Sept. 10. Saturday evening, Sept. 16, we had a basket meeting, at which Bro. Sherfy entertained the children for an hour by an illustrated talk on "The Life of Jesus," which was very pleasing to them to candy. The church was made stronger by Bro. Sherfy's inspiring sermons. The writer, also, was made to feel his lost condition. Six souls were added to the church, and others are under conviction. Our series of meetings is now in progress at the Mount Pleasant church, conducted by Reuben Shroyer, and to continue until Sept. 30, at which time we will have a love feast.—Emma B. Stambaugh, Summum, Ill., Sept. 19.

INDIANA.

Bethel Center church met in council Sept. 16. We decided to apply to District Meeting for an elder. Sept. 10 we held an all-day Harvest Meeting. Bro. Spitzer preached both in the forenoon and afternoon.—Annie Rogers, Sec., R. D. 24, Mattiewba, Ind., Sept. 24.

Harrison County.—Sept. 13 we met in a love feast, which was well attended. Marked interest and attention were shown. Our council was held prior to our love feast, at which time seven letters were received. The love feast was at the close of a ten-days' series of meetings. On Saturday evening a man of about sixty-eight years of age was baptized. He had not been in touch with the Brethren church for about forty years, but when he had an opportunity, he united with the church of his choice. Our Sunday-school is moving along very nicely.—Ida Peter Fisher, Sec., Corydon, Ind., Sept. 18. I attend our council and assist at our love feast. He also preached on the evening of closing our love feast.—Lydia Zimmerman, Dogwood, Ind., Sept. 16.

Manchester.—Sept. 19 we met to organize our Sunday-school for the winter season. Bro. I. J. Rarick was elected superintendent of the advanced department, and Bro. Edward Butterbaugh as secretary. Sister A. L. Shoemaker, who has so efficiently superintended the primary department for the past two and a half years, was reelected. We have organized our primary department numbers over 170. The teachers for both departments were elected. Bro. Rarick has appointed all the newly-elected officers. Other Sunday-school officers were also appointed. Sister Shoemaker has a class of boarders in the cradle roll department. Sisters Otho Winger and Maud Replogle have the primary charge. The children have given the new names after which they sing a song, to welcome them among us. We are always glad for the little ones. The home department is under the charge of Sister Lou Landis and Lizzie Rookery. At our last prayer meeting nineteen letters of membership were received. A committee was appointed to arrange for prayer meeting topics.—Ella M. Cottrell, 726 North Market St., Manchester, Ind., Sept. 19.

Mexico Homes.—We want to hire a man and wife or the former and two boys to work on a farm by the year. Two persons not above the age of forty-five, without children now at home, need apply. We want a man who is a good farmer, and a wife healthy and a practical housekeeper. For further information address the writer.—Frank Fisher, Mexico, Ind., Box 1.

North Manchester.—Sept. 6 we met at the West church for council. Our elder, Eld. J. H. Moore, presided. Those of the church without an elder for three months, as at the present time, are entitled to one. We are to have one of the two congregations, the same to take effect in December. Under these circumstances it was decided that we have an organization at once, instead of waiting till December. We met on the evening of the 7th to organize, with the writer as one of the church. The adjoining elders present were Brethren Samuel Leckrone, Gabriel Ulery, Geo. Swihart, Joseph Rist and Henry Kimmel, in charge of the meeting. Sister Otho Winger was chosen as our elder, to serve until Jan. 1, 1912. She ordained Bro. Jacob Wagoner, deacon. Deacons Brethren Samuel Boyer, Jacob Warner and Wm. Miller were chosen trustees, and Bro. Jacob Wagoner, treasurer, respectively. Bro. Walter Royer was elected clerk, and Bro. Jacob Miller, treasurer. Deacons and trustees were elected as committee to retain their places until the December council. Brethren Otho Winger and Jacob Wagoner were elected District Meeting; Brethren N. E. Miller and E. M. Grosnickle, alternates. Our Sunday-school superintendent, Sister Edna Cripe, was chosen delegate to the Sunday-school Board. As we start out with this new organization, we hope that much good will be done.—Ida Peter Fisher, Corydon, Indiana will hold a singing school for us, beginning Sept. 19. Our series of meetings, at the Mexico church, by Eld. Jesse Calvert, Lima, Ohio, will be held sometime in October.—Edith Miller, North Manchester, Ind., Sept. 16.

Ridge Schoolhouse.—Immediately after Sunday-school Bro. Frank Rupel preached a very instructive sermon. The attendance was very good. Sept. 10 Bro. Rupel is preaching again in four weeks.—Hattie Carbiener, Bremen, Ind., Sept. 18.

Second South Bend.—Our church is at present in the midst of a series of meetings conducted by Bro. Jesse Bame, of Dixon, Ill. Good interest is being manifested. Oct. 1, at 2 P. M., we will hold our love feast. Sister Emma Wise, of Van Buren St., South Bend, Ind., Sept. 21.

Solomon church met in council Sept. 2. Our elder, Bro. James Neff, presided. Our protracted meetings will begin Oct. 15. Bro. J. H. Mishler will be with us at that time. Bro. Jacob Hoke was officiated as deacon. Before the Harvest Meeting was held Sept. 3. A collection of fifty dollars was taken.—Mary Hoke, R. D. 1, Oronoque, Kans., Sept. 19.

Walnut.—Our church met in council Sept. 16. Our elder, Bro. John Diehl, presided. Two letters were granted and one received. Brethren Levi Fiterbaugh and Jacob Rohrer were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Fiterbaugh was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. Our love feast will be held Oct. 28, at 4 P. M. Bro. John Dickey was reelected as our elder. Bro. Dickey will be with us again to hold a series of meetings for us during the latter part of November, or the first part of December.—Emma Frost, R. D. 11, Argos, Ind., Sept. 19.

IOWA.

Prairie City.—Our love feast of Sept. 16 was a very spiritual one. About forty-five members surrounded the Lord's tables. Brethren were present from various places, and there have died. Bro. Galen B. Royer preached the examination sermon, and was officiated at by Brethren Royer. He also will many rich thoughts during the evening, which were like holy manna to the hungry ones. He is now very busy, visiting homes, and each evening telling the interesting story of the cross, of which he seems never to tire. The attendance is quite good, but there are a few more of them that we would like. Some are near the kingdom. We had prayer meeting every night last week. Bro. Fred Royer, who has been visiting Fred's wife arrived today for a short stay among us. Bro. Irvin Brubaker is also visiting among us now. Several more of our best workers will soon go to Bethany Bible School, Chicago. Bro. Galen Royer has been very busy, and is now at Bethany. He gave us several excellent sermons while here. His influence was an inspiration in our homes.—Jennie Alexander, R. D. 3, Prairie City, Iowa, Sept. 19.

KANSAS.

Bloom.—Yesterday Bro. C. D. Hylton filled the appointment at Bloom. Two applicants presented for baptism, and decided to see one dear soul decide to walk with Christ. Baptism took place at 2 P. M. Bro. Hylton will begin a series of meetings for us sometime this fall.—Mallnda Ott, Dodge City, Kans., Sept. 18.

Bloom church met in council Sept. 3. Eld. G. W. Weddle presided. One letter was received. The business of this meeting was not all finished, so we will meet again. Several new members being absent, so we met Sept. 16 to finish the work. Bro. Harry Mow, of Weiser, Idaho, was chosen delegate to Meeting; Bro. S. P. Hylton, alternate. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, 2 P. M. Bro. Hylton will begin a series of meetings at the Sunday-school for six months; Sister Pernie Hylton, secretary-treasurer.—Jennie Alexander, R. D. 3, Prairie City, Iowa, Sept. 17.—Cassie Martin, Bloom, Kans., Sept. 19.

Fredonia.—Our series of meetings at the Kelly schoolhouse every two weeks, with an appointment at W. B. Bell presents there every two weeks, and has done a good work at this. Bro. Hylton has been with us occasionally and preaches there. But, after all, the Messenger is the best preacher. It comes to us every week, full of good readings for all. This paper is always read first of all, when it comes to our home. We cannot do without it. We hope that are starving for the precious Word of the Lord.—P. F. Miller, R. D. 5, Fredonia, Kans., Sept. 18.

Maple Grove.—Our love feast was held Sept. 9. Forty members surrounded the Lord's tables, some of them for the first time. Bro. J. R. Garber, of Portis, Kans., officiated. He also preached several helpful sermons for us. In special council Brethren A. J. Wertenberger and G. H. Friend were elected delegates to District Meeting. Since my last report our District Sunday-school Secretary has been with us. He gave us a good talk on Sunday-school work. Bro. Gabriel Ulery, of Indiana, has been with us for some time, doing good work.—Minnie D. Decter, R. D. 1, Oronoque, Kans., Sept. 19.

Osage church met in council Sept. 9, with Bro. W. H. Lessenden, presiding. Two letters were granted and received. The annual church visit was reported. It was decided to call for the same. Bro. Lessenden was appointed to the finances of the church. Bro. W. H. Leaman was reelected our elder. Brethren B. S. Miller and Henry Shideler were elected delegates to District Meeting; Sister Mary Neher and the writer are delegates to Sunday-school Meeting; Brethren Elmer McElwain and Bro. Neher, are delegates to Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. Geo. Manon will begin a series of meetings at Osage, Oct. 29.—Mrs. Ella Neher, Osage, Kans., Sept. 17.

White Rock.—Our church met in council Sept. 16. Our elder, Bro. S. L. Myers, presided. Brethren Earl Myers and Norvel Brubaker were elected delegates to District Meeting at Belleville, Kans. We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, conducted by Eld. Zimbro Sibert and wife, of Red Cloud, Nebr. Four have confessed Christ and three have reclaimed.—Mrs. Elnora B. Switzer, Weber, Kans., Sept. 21.

MICHIGAN.

Broadforling.—Sept. 16 we closed a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Geo. E. Yoder, of Elk Lick, Pa. Bro. Yoder preached thirty-two times in the course of two weeks. One was received by baptism.—Nannie A. Martin, Summum, Mich., Sept. 18.

Meadow Branch.—At a recent special children's service, held in the Meadow Branch church, conducted by Sister Mary Mow, assisted by W. T. Hoover, Bruce Whitmer and E. C. Brown. At our regular council meeting, Sept. 9, one was added to the church by baptism. Our church decided to call for a love feast to be held at one of our regular places of worship for special Thanksgiving services. Brethren Hoover, Whitmer and Brown committees made favorable reports. Sisters Lydia Trostle and Mary Mow were elected delegates to local temperance committee. Brethren John T. Royer, J. W. Thomas and Sister Anna Royer were appointed as a music committee to conduct the Sunday-school library. The special form for installing Sunday-school officers was read in order of service. Brethren Mow and each elder will hereafter be expected to instruct and give charges to the newly-elected officers in his own way. It was decided to advise those who bring letters to the church, before burial, in case of those who die with typhoid fever, to have interment in the church cemetery, and to be held soon in the old stone church at Meadow Branch.—W. E. Hoop, Westminster, Mich., Sept. 18.

MINNESOTA.

Deer Park church met in council Sept. 16. Bro. C. D. Reeves acted as elder. We decided to hold a series of meetings, beginning Oct. 8. We expect to have a love feast Oct. 21, at 5 P. M.—Mrs. Lena Blickenstaff, Nimrod, Minn., Sept. 18.

Lewiston.—The following schedule may prove helpful to those who wish to attend the District Meeting of Northern Illinois and Wisconsin: Leave Rock Falls, Ill., on the train, going west, at 7:47 A. M.; 2:36 and 7:56 P. M.; going east, at 8:47 A. M. and 4:46 P. M.—Laura L. Webber, R. D. 1, Lewiston, Minn., Sept. 17.

MISSOURI.

Deep Water.—Bro. Jimerson, of Kansas City, came to us Aug. 26. He labored earnestly for three weeks. Five were baptized and three reclaimed. The interest was excellent, and we feel much encouraged. Sept. 9 we had a basket picnic to our love feast. Nearly all the members were found to be present. Bro. Jimerson was with us, and was ably assisted by the visiting brethren. Brethren Isaac Dunkel and John Fitzpatrick were elected delegates to District Meeting. Our love feast was held Sept. 9. Several visiting members were with us. Bro. Jimerson preached the first sermon. Bro. Hardy officiated, assisted by Bro. Simmons, who gave an excellent talk to the children on Sunday.—Etta Fahnestock, R. D. 24, Montrose, Mo., Sept. 18.

Kansas City (First Church of the Brethren).—We met in council Sept. 16, with Eld. Lenty Leatherman in the chair. Letter of membership was received and four were granted. We elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Leatherman, having with but a slight change in offices. A spirit of forbearance and love prevailed throughout the meeting. Our District Meeting was chosen, and two papers were sent to that meeting. Our Sunday-school will hold its meeting at 9:30, commencing Oct. 23. Our love feast will be Oct. 29.—T. C. Holinger, 523 E. 27th Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 23.

Nevada.—Our church met in council Sept. 16, at 2 P. M. Eld. Leander Smith presided. The church visit was reported, and all the elders will be in harmony with the arrangements were made for our love feast. Sister Emma Wise was elected delegate to District Meeting. Brethren Hylton and Ott was appointed to solicit help, and pay off the church debt. Our love feast will be held at the close of the Harvest Meeting.—Ruth Smith, 239 North Oak St., Nevada, Mo., Sept. 18.

Notice to Elders.—Brethren and Sisters, The Elders' Meeting of the District will be called at the regular time, Oct. 7, at 2 P. M., subject to change to 9 A. M., in case it is found necessary to do so. The Ministerial Board will meet in place of District Meeting on Monday evening. No change will be made, unless notice is sent to the writer to go on with the work at this time.—D. L. Mohler, Moderator, Leeton, Mo., Sept. 18.

Oak Grove church met in council Sept. 16, with our elder, Bro. A. Killingsworth, presiding. Two letters were granted. We decided to call for a love feast. Bro. OHIO

Bellefontaine.—Our church met in council Sept. 6. Our elder, Bro. E. F. Snyder, presided. Three letters were granted. Owing to Sister Cook's leaving, the following officers were appointed to serve until the next election: Sister Bessie Saylor, clerk; the writer, Messenger agent and church correspondent. Sept. 3 we held our love feast, which was appreciated to have with us Brother and Sister Berkebile, of India. Sept. 10 Sister Mary L. Cook gave an address to the Sunday-school. Sept. 17 a lecture on India, by Sister Berkebile. Both addresses were highly appreciated.—Louella Crim, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Casstown and Troy Mission.—Sept. 20 our members met in council at the parsonage house in the suburbs of Troy, at the Troy house in the evening. Eld. J. B. Barnhart, the presiding elder, was assisted by Elders David Brumbaugh and Jacob Brookwalter. Bro. Adam Pfeifer was also present. The annual visit was planned. The following committee was appointed to consider the time and place for our love feast this fall. Henceforth our regular business meetings are to be held alternately, once each quarter, at Troy and Casstown. We regret meeting no more during the year. Our love feasts are to be held alternately as well. An election was held at the Troy house for a deacon, Bro. Cyrus Petry being chosen. The installation services were deferred until sometime in the near future. Bro. O. S. Yount, with his wife, was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Eld. Brookwalter holds a protracted meeting here. The Board is endeavoring to conduct a series of meetings at Troy this fall. As this latter place was organized but recently, been received into the church by baptism. We are greatly encouraged by the prospects of still more and an increase in our membership.—Mina M. Bosserman, Casstown, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Correction.—In the Messenger No. 37, Sept. 16, the report from Bellefontaine should have read that there were only two letters granted instead of one. I should have said that it was Bro. Chas. D. Cassel's mission, instead of Bro. Eisenman who preached for us on Sunday, Sept. 3.—Miss Bertha L. Snyder, R. R. 3, Bellefontaine, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Deshler.—A good plan of utilizing Gospel Messengers to best advantage, which, in the various towns, collects literature for its reading rooms. Those in the country can send their messengers to their friends for distribution. The new reading tables of the Salvation Army the papers are read by a large number of people, and much good may be done.—Mrs. Mabel Deshler, Ohio, Sept. 14.

Eagle Creek.—Our church met in council Sept. 16, with our elder, Bro. B. F. Snyder, presiding. Eld. Crist Krabill, of Deshler, Ohio, was also present. We had communion services. Preparations were made for our love feast, to be held Oct. 7. The sisters decided to use the privilege of breaking the bread on passing it around among themselves, as they have so received. A temperance committee was also appointed. Bro. Crist Krabill was chosen for us on Sunday evening; Bro. B. F. Snyder, in the evening. On the 4th of Sept. 8 Sister Mary Cook, our faithful Secretary, gave an interesting talk on "Opportunities as Applied to Sunday-school Work," and Sister Nora Bartlow also gave us a splendid talk. Sister Bartlow was with us too, but was not able to talk.—Hattie Bame, Williamsport, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Fairview.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Keiser, presided. The visiting brethren gave their annual reports. Assignments were made for our love feasts, to be held Oct. 14. Our church decided to hold a series of meetings some time in November.—Ella Mohler, Ashmore, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Junction Mission.—The second annual Sunday-school and Harvest Meeting was held Aug. 27. The forenoon was devoted to Sunday-school work. Bro. Preston Fyrnan, of Springfield, Ohio, spoke to the children. Bro. Lawrence Prowant, of Oakwood, Ohio, preached our harvest meeting sermon during the afternoon. We now have a young people's meeting every Sunday evening.—Pearlie Brown, R. D. 16, Defiance, Ohio, Sept. 14.

Newton church met in council Sept. 7, with Bro. Geo. Mohler presiding. At present the Students are holding a two- to six-day school sometime during October. Our love feast has been appointed for Nov. 11 and 12 P. M., to be held at the home church. Sister Hettie Stauffer gave us some Bible Land tales last Sunday afternoon and evening. Some letters have been received since my last report.—Mary West, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Notices to Churches of the Southern District of Ohio.—As I have been engaged already, to conduct several singing classes in Northern Ohio, I will be in the same vicinity the work in all of the churches of the District, desiring to make improvements, or any that may desire it. I will gladly go to Southern Ohio to Iowa, to meet some engagements there. Should any congregation want a singing school this spring we have the new song book. I shall be glad to arrange for same, and save our fare.—Jacob Stoffer, Brookville, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Notice.—The Brethren at Brookville have decided to change the date of their communion, as it conflicts with another near by meeting. The love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 1 P. M., at the Wolf Creek house, instead of Oct. 28, as had been previously announced.—Mrs. Ezra Hoover, R. R. 1, Brookville, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Notice for the District Meeting of Northeastern Ohio.—This meeting is to be held Oct. 3, 4 and 5. Trains on the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railway, going north of Akron will stop at Sister Crossing; coming south from Kent, will also stop at Sister Crossing.—Samuel Sprankel, Massillon, Ohio.

Oak Grove church met in council Sept. 9. Eld. L. H. Dickey presiding. Bro. D. N. Schubert was elected superintendent of the Sunday-school. Annual Sunday-school Conference for Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. A. Workman, of Loudonville, Ohio, was with us in August, conducting a series of meetings. He preached seventeen inspiring sermons. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30, at 10 A. M.—Ella Thomas, Ashland, Ohio, Sept. 18.

Painter Creek.—Our joint Sunday-school meeting, held by the Pittsburg, Georgetown, Red River and Painter Creek Sunday-schools, was held here Sept. 17, with Sister Ada Eberwein presiding. The attendance was large; and the meeting was good. Several vital Sunday-school topics were discussed. An offering was taken for the use of the schools in their settlements.—To send the Gospel Messenger to those not members of the church. The next local Sunday-school meeting will be held at the Pittsburg house in December.—Levi Minnich, Greenville, Ohio, Sept. 20.

Price's Creek church met in council Sept. 9, with our elder, Bro. Joseph Longanecker, in charge. Communion was with us were Brethren B. F. Petry, Henry Baker and Geo. Stump. One letter of membership was received and four granted. A report of the annual visit was given. Bro. Sylvan Bookwalter was elected to the ministry. Bro. Sylvan Bookwalter was ordained to the second degree, and, with his wife, installed. Eld. B. F. Petry gave us a very interesting sermon on Sunday. All-day meeting to be held at Harvey's, Oct. 14. The collection of $12.24 was taken for the benefit of Bro. Cosner. One has been added to the church by baptism, since our last report. Bro. Edward Miller, assistant Sunday-school Secretary of Southern Ohio, was with us Aug. 13, at Castine, and gave us some instructive points on Sunday-school work. We expect to have our local Sunday-school Meeting Sept. 24, at Castine.—Mae Longanecker, West Manchester, Ohio, Sept. 17.

OKLAHOMA

Monitor.—We are now in the midst of a very good series of meetings, conducted by Eld. A. J. Brubaker. Our previous meetings were begun Sept. 3 by Eld. D. Wolf, who preached eight inspiring sermons. Then Bro. Smith took up the work and will continue for at least one week. Bro. Wolf was then called council to attend to some very important work. We were glad to have with us Elders Joseph Glick, A. J. Smith and H. Rosse, who were very helpful in our work. Bro. Samuel Hollinger, a young brother from Goltry, was called to the deacon's office. Bro. A. B. Diller was ordained to the eldership. Our love feast is appointed for Oct. 21, at 4 P. M.—I. H. Miller, Nash, Okla., Sept. 18.

Wichita.—We have just closed a two weeks' series of meetings at this place. The attendance was not so large as at other times, on account of other revivals being conducted at the same time. Eld. D. L. Forney was with us and preached for us. The church feels much revived by his well-prepared sermons and his manner of bringing us truths from the Word, but are waiting for a more convenient season.—Mollie Yoder, R. D. 4, Cordell, Okla., Sept. 18.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Big Swatara church decided in council to have a love feast Nov. 2 and 3, at 10 A. M., at the Hanoverdale house. The children's meeting will be held Sept. 30, at 2 P. M. Harvest Sunday-schools were well attended. Bro. Ralph W. Schlosser, of Hanoverdale, Pa., has been called to the Ministry of the Harrisburg church, very ably and instructively addressed the congregation assembled on Sunday, Sept. 17, as he was the speaker for the latter. Bro. Ober is well adapted for the work in which he is engaged, and his labors are very interesting and instructive. The children's services are looked forward to by the young folks with a good deal of pleasure, hence they are greatly enjoyed by young and old. Two of our most faithful pulpits could not be with us personally, on account of severe illness, but their labors in the past are very much present, and our sympathies were theirs.—John J. Shiffler, Hummelstown, Pa., Sept. 18.

Chest Creek.—We held a very enjoyable two weeks' series of meetings, beginning Aug. 27, conducted by Bro. D. E. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., has been with us since Sept. 4, and we feel that he has done much good. He made an impression. Four were baptized. Thirty-eight members communed. Bro. Jacob H. Hollinger, of Washington, D. C., is our council meeting, but he could not stay for the feast. This was the first love feast he has missed at this place for six years. Our Sunday-school is well attended. Sept. 10 we have organized a teacher-training class. We expect Brother and Sister J. H. Miller, of Elgin, Ill., to be with us in the Kitchen.—Mahaffey, Pa., Sept. 18.

Elizabethtown.—Council met in council Sept. 8. Several letters of membership were granted. Our love feast will be held Sept. 23, at 2 P. M. Communion will be held Sept. 24. The work on the new churchhouse at Stevens Hill, one of our outpost points, is progressing nicely. Services will be held of several of our older brethren, who have planned and worked so efficiently all summer, in order that this work might be accomplished.—M. R. Wenger, Elizabethtown, Pa., Sept. 21.

Fairview.—Our church met in council Aug 26, with Bro. W. H. Holsinger presiding. We expect Bro. S. I. Brumbaugh to be with us in a series of meetings Oct. 1, beginning about Oct. 21 and continuing till our love feast, Nov. 1.—J. D. Snowberger, Fairview, Pa., Sept. 18.

Fairview.—Bro. Levi S. Mohler, of Elizabethtown, Pa., commenced a series of meetings in the Kings Hill house, Sept. 10. During his stay he preached sixteen inspiring sermons. One was received by baptism. Others were fretfully considering. Bro. Mohler was assisted by Brethren Brumbaugh, Michael Markey, York, Pa., Sept. 19.

Fairview.—Bro. Jacob Hollinger and wife were with us Sept 2 and 3. Sept. 2 an election was held for deacons, and Brethren Jacob Hollinger and Wm. Hollinger, Jr., of Washington, were chosen and installed. Bro. L. R. Holsinger was with us in a few services. Sept. 9 we had communion. Sept. 10 we set love feast. One hundred and fifty members communed. Our meeting closed Sept. 13. Four were baptized.—Ida B. Brown, R. D. 4, Kittanning, Pa., Sept. 20.

Hanover church was blessed with two weeks' series of meetings by Bro. J. M. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., who commenced Sept. 3 and continued till Sept. 17. Bro. Mohler preached thirty-two sermons during his stay. Interest and attendance were good throughout. Bro. Mohler surely put the truth before the people in a manner that was clear and earnestness. We believe there are some near the kingdom.—W. H. Hollinger, Hanover, Pa., Sept. 18.

Huntsdale.—Bro. Jacob H. Hollinger, of Washington, D. C., has preached a series of sermons in the Pleasant Hill house, Maryland, has been engaged to hold a series of meetings at Huntsdale, Pa., in the Upper Cumberland congregation, beginning in the latter part of October, and closing the first week in Nov. Oct. 1—W. I. Shaffer, Huntsdale, Pa., Sept. 18.

Mohler.—Bro. Levi S. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., began a series of meetings at the Pleasant Hill house Sept. 2, closing Sept. 14, with Bro. Henry Beelman residing. We preached seventeen soul-stirring sermons. Bro. Mohler was with us in the meetings about ten days, assisting whenever there was an opportunity. Bro. Mohler is a strong, fearless preacher.—S. Myers, Mohler, Pa., Sept. 18.

Oriental.—Aug. 26 Bro. H. M. Stover, of Waynesboro, Pa., came to this place and commenced a series of meetings, to continue for a week's doctrinal sermons. The first week the attendance was not so large, owing to the rainy weather. The interest, however, increased as the meetings progressed. Bro. Stover is a fearless expounder of God's Word. Sept. 9 three were added to the church by baptism.—Emma Bame, Oriental, Sept. 9, prevented us from having services in the forenoon. All our regular appointments were filled except the Lord's tables. Bro. H. M. Stover presided. The best of order prevailed.—Elizabeth Stover, R. D. 2, Box 24, Conway, Pa., Sept. 18.

Waterford.—Sept. 14 Brother and Sister Blough were here and gave us an instructive meeting on Sunday-school things and Sunday-school work in India. A offering of $12.79 was lifted for the India Mission. This is the first time we have had an instructive meeting on Sunday-school work. Glad for their coming.—W. F. Wolford, Ligonier, Pa., Sept. 18.

West Greentree.—Our regular council convened Sept. 5, at the Pittsburg house. Our elder, Bro. D. M. Robelman, presided. The attendance was fair. An effort is to be made to open another house in the Pittsburg district. Sept. 16 and Oct. 26 and 27, at Rhoems, beginning at 10 A. M. In the afternoon of Sept. 16 the Greentree and Rhoems Sunday-schools will conduct children's services in the Rhoems house, which was well attended. Addresses were given by Brethren I. W. Taylor, Ralph Schlosser, Wm. Hoover, Jr., Miss Ada Eberwein and Ralph Schlosser. We have two schools in the District. Bro. Samuel Shearer is superintendent of the school at Rhoems, and Bro. Hiram Eshelman at Greentree.—S. R. McDannel, Elizabethtown, Pa., Sept. 18.

White Oak.—Our church met in council at the Manheim house Aug. 14. Three members were received by letter and two letters were granted. Our love feast will be held Oct. 5 and at 1 P. M., at the Manheim house near Manheim, Pa. Bro. Israel B. Gyandt, of R. D. 6, Little, Pa., was elected to the ministry. He had been one of our deacons. Bro Levi Hershberger, of R. D. 6, Little, Pa., Isaiah G. Gibble, of R. D. 6, Manheim, Pa., were elected to the deacon's office. Bro. Chas. D. Cassel was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. All were installed into their respective offices, except Sister Cassel who was not present. On Sunday Bro. D. C. Reber, of Manheim, Pa., gave us two temperance sermons,—one in the morning at the Graybill house, and one in the evening at the Manheim house.—Anna E. Shank, Manheim, Pa., Sept. 18.

TENNESSEE.

French Broad church met in council Sept. 16, preparatory to our love feast. Eld. Jacob Wine presided. The report of the visiting brethren was favorable. The writer was chosen to serve as correspondent. Our love feast will be held Sept. 30, at 3 P. M.—Mollie Satterfield, Dandridge, Tenn., Sept. 21.

New Hope church met in council Sept. 9. As this was our annual visit meeting, considerable business was on hand. Our church on Sunday one brother was received back into church fellowship. We will hold our love feast Oct. 7. Bro. I. N. Beahm was with us Aug. 22 and 22. His excellent sermons and services were much appreciated.—Minnie Kaylor, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 20.

Pleasant Valley church met in council Sept. 16. As one of our elders was away and two of them sick, Bro. S. W. Beals presided. This was our visit meeting. Some good admonitions were given, and arrangements were made for our love feast, to be held Oct. 14, at 3:30 P. M. Bro. Beals preached for us yesterday. Bro. J. N. Hylton was here Aug. 24 and 25. By special request, he lectured at Sulphur Springs school house, one mile from here, Aug. 28, where a Methodist camp meeting was being held.—Effie Edith Miller, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 18.

White Horn church held her love feast Sept. 16. Several brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations were present. The ministering brethren were Bro. A. Neas, of Limestone, Tenn., and Brethren P. M. Correll and S. A. Gaby, of Mountain City, Tenn. Bro. Neas preached two helpful forenoon sermons. Communion. Two letters of membership were received by letter. Eld. Correll gave us a good, instructive sermon.—Nora McCollough, R. D., Whitesburg, Tenn., Sept. 24.

TEXAS.

Pleasant Grove.—Our church met in council Sept. 16, at the home of Bro. T. N. Powell, with Eld. J. A. Miller in charge. We are to have a series of meetings, beginning Nov. 18, to close before the holidays. Eld. Miller will be aided by visiting brethren with us. Since our last report six letters of membership have been granted. Two have died, one by the name, yet we know the Lord has a planting at this place.—Nannie Bonds, Spring, Texas, Sept. 18.

VIRGINIA.

Burks Fork church met in council Sept. 16, with Bro. Joel Wolfe presiding over us. The visiting brethren reported all the members to be at peace. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 14, at 3 P. M.—C. H. Hylton, Floyd, Va., Sept. 16.

Lewisburg.—We had a series of meetings at Walkers Chapel, in the Pleasant View congregation, continuing until the middle of Sept. Bro. Wm. Beahm was with us and the members seemed to be much encouraged. As an immediate result of the meetings, one was received by baptism.—H. W. Neff, Quicksburg, Va., Sept. 18.

WASHINGTON.

East Wenatchee.—The members of this church were granted a new love feast, to be held as soon as possible for Bro. Hilton and family to stop with us on their way to China. On Sunday, Aug. 27, we had an interesting improvement service on the fact that the Gospel shall be preached in all the world, until all nations shall hear it. We showed by chart and by a full word picture of Chinese worship and superstition. A collection of $11.60 was taken for the Chinese mission work. Sept. 1 and 12 Bro. Andrew Hutchison was with us and gave us two able discourses, which were greatly appreciated.—Vinnie Fillpun Sellers, Wenatchee, Wash., Sept. 16.

WEST VIRGINIA

Beaver Run.—Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, to be preceded by a series of meetings, beginning Sept. 30, by Eld. I. J. Shaffer, of Berlin, Pa.—Geo. S. Arnold, Burlington, W. Va., Sept. 11.

Fairview.—Our council meeting was held at Fairview, Upshur, on Eld. W. Va., began Sept. 2. Bro. Fike preached nine very interesting sermons. Seven were baptized. We held our Watch-night Dec. 31, and love feast Jan. 1. March 16 we held our church council, preparatory to our District Meeting.—Lily A. Ward, Upshur, W. Va., Sept. 14.

Harman.—Eld. Jonas Fike began a series of refreshing meetings here Sept. 3, and closed Sept. 10, Sept. 9 we met in council. The visiting brethren found the church in peace and union. Sept. 9 we held our love feast. On Sunday Bro. Fike preached to large crowds of people. There was good attendance and interest at all our meetings. We use "Kingdom Songs." Eld. Jas. Beahm is our delegate to District Meeting.—Cora A. Harman, Harman, W. Va., Sept. 12.

CORRESPONDENCE.

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

OKLAHOMA, PANHANDLE OF TEXAS AND EAST NEW MEXICO.

The various meetings of the District convened at Thomas, Okla., Aug. 29 and Sept. 1. There was a good attendance, and the churches were fairly well represented. We now have twenty-seven congregations, with an average membership of about thirty-seven. Quite a number of ministers of the city, of various denominations, were present at the Ministerial Meeting, and took part. The theme of pastoral visits brought out many needful and timely talks. God help all our pastors to a greater zeal and service along this line! It was suggested that a minister attend every church-book and pencil, and note down important thoughts that may be presented to him, thus preserving them for future use.

Our Sunday-school Meeting was well represented. Our progress and the future possibilities were a special feature. Our first school was organized about twenty-four years ago in "No Man's Land." In those early days we met in sod-houses, dugouts and arbors. Many successful revival meetings were held in these primitive places; but now we have good churchhouses in most places, and real inviting places for our Sunday-schools. The attendance is growing nicely. We have also installed a session in our gathering for a special temperance program, and expect to have an exceedingly interesting meeting next year.

Good interest was manifested at our Christian Workers' meeting. The speeches and essays rendered by our young people make us feel that the work is going on to success for the Master.

The Child-saving Mission Meeting was of much interest. The church was found too small to accommodate all, so the meeting convened in a large city hall, which was filled to overflowing. Several took part in short speeches. We are glad and thankful for the sympathizing hearts of humanity, offering homes and support to the work of saving the helpless, homeless little waifs.

The last day was a busy one, indeed. Much business of interest to the District was considered, but a loving, Christian spirit prevailed. The missionary spirit was urged, especially was the work among our native Indians emphasized. A special effort in their behalf was placed in the hands of our Mission Board. The writer was chosen delegate on the Standing Committee of 1912.

Elk City, Okla., Sept. 17. E. J. Smith.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL AND MINISTERIAL MEETINGS OF MICHIGAN.

The Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings for the District of Michigan were held in the Harlan church Aug. 16 and 17. Bro. L. A. Fisher was moderator. The beginning of the Sunday-school Meeting,—the devotional exercises,—breathed forth holy incense unto God. Then followed the discussion of the various topics in the program. The different speakers gave us rich thoughts. The Sunday-schools of Michigan are moving forward with energy and Christian zeal. The several topics arranged for the meeting were discussed in a very interesting ordinary interest. The Round Table brought out many helpful suggestions.

The Missionary Meeting opened with a half-hour consecration service, which proved to be a most precious season to all. The very presence of God was felt. Bro. S. M. Smith gave us a vision of a lost world that all were made to realize their part in the world's redemption. Bro. L. L. Wilkins brought to our minds the excellent opportunities of the home field (Michigan). Bro. P. B. Messner spoke about the progress of the Grand Rapids Mission. It is now in its second year, and is increasing in interest and attendance. Bro. G. F. Cullen reminded us that workers are needed. Sister Lelia Cutler told of the possibilities of the Mission. Two precious souls have been baptized and are now helping in the work. On account of failing health Brother and Sister Cutler will close their work in October, and Brother and Sister Mishler will take charge of the mission. May they also have our earnest cooperation and prayers.

Thus closed another interesting and enjoyable District Meeting. The Harlan church is located in Manistee County, has a membership of about sixty-five, mostly young members, three ministers, but no resident elder. Her members are people with large hearts, open hospitality, and a warm welcome. Their kindness will long be remembered. Their manner of entertainment will be helpful to many in the future, to make these meetings a blessing to all. Sarah Long, Sec.

Clarksville, Mich., Sept. 19.

MANCHESTER COLLEGE, IND.

We are gratified to report a large increase in attendance at Manchester College, 138 being enrolled the first week. It is the largest enrollment for the fall term in the history of the college.

A more earnest, studious group of young people would be hard to find. As the school is under the direct control of the church, it is the purpose of those, connected with its management, to make it a power in the Brotherhood, for the good of the church and the glory of God.

We are pleased with the increase in attendance in all the departments. The large number enrolling in the College Course is encouraging, and assures growth and permanence of the school.

Brethren, do not expect too much of our schools. You may expect the leaders to be loyal and true to the church; but when we have students coming from the various congregations of the Brotherhood, and some, perhaps, not so strong in the faith, let us have forbearance and not expect the school to do more than the church or parents can do.

Let us pray for our schools that they may be of great use to the furtherance of the cause of our Master, by saving many of our dear young people to the church, and strengthening them in the faith of the Gospel. May God bless our schools and school workers!

North Manchester, Ind., Sept. 18. Geo. L. Studebaker.

NORTHERN MISSOURI.

The District Meeting of the Northern District of Missouri was held Sept. 8 in the Rockingham congregation. The organization was effected by electing Bro. E. E. Rodabaugh, Moderator; Bro. M. E. Stair, Reading Clerk; Bro. J. S. Kline, Writing Clerk. Bro. J. S. Bowman was chosen on the Mission Board to succeed Bro. W. G. Andes. Bro. G. W. Ellenberger will represent this District at the York meeting in 1912. Some matters, strictly local, were disposed of to the satisfaction of all. No papers go to Annual Meeting.

The Ministerial Meeting was held the day previous, and was one of the most inspiring this District has held. The topics were freely discussed. Bro. G. W. Ellenberger presided; Bro. Bruce Williams kept the record. The question, "What Is the Unit of Missions? What Is My Unit Doing?" disclosed some startling truths and brought out an animated discussion.

The Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings were held the day before the Ministerial Meeting. Topics of interest were handled in an instructive way. The Sunday-school Secretary of the District is advancing, and the District Secretary made a splendid report of his work for the year. Just after making his report, our Secretary, Bro. E. Moller, was called home by the accident in which his wife was so fatally burned. The District Meeting wired a message of sympathy to the family.

Plattsburg, Mo., Sept. 10. J. S. Kline, Writing Clerk.

DISTRICT MEETING OF NORTH AND SOUTH CAROLINA.

Aug. 16, husband and I left home by private conveyance for Ashe and Alleghany Counties, N. C., a distance of one hundred and forty miles. The scenery along the way is beautiful beyond description.

We reached the home of Bro. Floyd Welch Aug. 19, early in the afternoon, and later on went to the Flat Rock church, where we met Brethren Henry Sheets and L. A. Jones, from the Mt. Carmel church, who with Bro. Branscom were here to assist in church work. At three P. M. Bro. Sheets preached to a small but attentive audience.

The Brethren stayed until Tuesday, Aug. 22, at home, while we remained, holding meetings until Thursday morning, when we, too, went to Mt. Carmel, where our District Meeting was held. By nine o'clock of next morning nearly all the delegates were in, and after devotional exercises the meeting was organized by calling Brethren W. H. Handy, Moderator; W. A. Reed, Reading Clerk; Geo. A. Branscom, Writing Clerk. The spirit of the meeting was good, and the business harmoniously disposed of.

Bro. S. P. Jones, of the Boldyn, S. C., church, was elected delegate on the Standing Committee and Bro. W. C. Prince, from the same church, was reelected Sunday-school Secretary.

Friday morning we, together with our delegates from this and the Mill Creek church, started on our homeward journey, reaching our homes Aug. 31, after being on the road for four days in rain and mud. This, however, was no hardship, because the rain was very much needed.

Wind Hill, N. C., Sept. 6. Etta Branscom.

A JOINT SUNDAY-SCHOOL MEETING.

Sept. 3 the Quemahoning Sunday-schools met at the Maple Spring house in a joint session. The meeting opened at 10 A. M. The devotional exercises were conducted by Bro. J. H. Hummel, superintendent of the Maple Spring school. This being a review day for the classes were formed, each teacher taking his part of the lesson, as called for in the program, followed by a general review of the lessons by the superintendents of the different schools. Each teacher came prepared, and each lesson was ably reviewed.

The forenoon session was closed by Bro. W. H. Blough, superintendent of the Stoystown school. After taking dinner on the grounds, we reassembled at P. M. for the afternoon session, in charge of Bro. C. A. Riggs, superintendent of the Hooversville school. We had an address by Eld. S. P. Zimmerman, followed by recitations and talks by different members of the schools.

Our senior elder, Bro. J. W. Blough, who is well up in the eighties, was permitted to be with us, and took an active part in the meeting. We had several visiting brethren and sisters with us. Bro. W. H. Blough led the song service. During our first meeting of the kind, and so great a success, we have decided to hold them annually. May every child of God feel the call to service and enter ardently upon some phase of Sunday-school work.

Hollsopple, Pa., Sept. 5. Wm. D. Rummel.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

BY J. H. MOORE

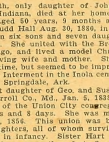
IN THE INTRODUCTION TO THIS BOOK THE AUTHOR SAYS

"The chapters composing this little volume were written at different times during a period of over twenty-five years of active editorial life." Some of them were composed on the spur of the moment, and thus are the best, having been born from a sudden inspiration and not made through long and forced effort.

EACH CHAPTER IS A POINTED LESSON

on some moral or religious topic, vividly illustrated by actual experiences from the author's life. Those who have read some or all of the chapters, which appeared from time to time in the various publications with which the author was connected, say that they are the cream of his writings along these lines. Everyone should read this book in order to have impressed upon the mind the valuable truths contained therein.

THE ONLY WAY IN WHICH THE BOOK CAN BE OBTAINED



is in connection with a subscription to the "Gospel Messenger." Subscribers to renew will get the book for 35c extra. The Gospel Messenger and book only $1.85.

This is a Great Bargain. Don't Miss It.

THE PERFECT BIBLE

Not a new Bible, not a sectarian Bible, not a prejudiced Bible. The American Standard Bible

Edited by the American Revision Committee is simply the writings of the Inspired Penman translated into correct English of today.

A small company of devout scholars worked seven years on the King James translation. A large company, of equal devotion and vastly superior scholarship, worked thirty years on the American Standard. Three centuries of Bible study and discovery gave them great advantages.

Write for Our Free Booklet, "HOW WE GOT OUR AMERICAN STANDARD BIBLE"

It tells you how the sacred work was done, and what the leaders in all churches think of it.

Home Department of the Sunday School

The need of the Home Department is not limited to any locality. It is needed in every church no matter where that church may be. It is sadly needed in the great metropolis, with its unchurched millions. It is needed in the towns with their thousands outside of the Sunday-school. It is needed in the village and rural communities, where only a few are indifferent. It is needed in your own school. It will work in every community whether city or country, where one or more persons are out of the Sunday-school.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 60.) Elgin, Ill., October 7, 1911. No. 40.

AROUND THE WORLD

Congregational Activity.

That much more might be accomplished by the average congregation than is usually done, is a self-evident fact, and it is interesting to note how eagerly the various denominational journals are discussing ways and means of increasing congregational efficiency,—to make every member an active worker and a staunch ally of the pastor in charge. One worker suggests the following as the motto of every wide-awake congregation: Regular church attendance, a strong, inspiring midweek prayer service; a live-wire Sunday-school; a never-wearying campaign for an increase in church membership." Perhaps most congregations have all this in mind, but simply fail in fully carrying out the work as outlined. If so, a close, personal examination, and a renewal of consecrational vows would be in order.

Self-Sustaining Missions.

While the regularly-sustained missions will always be a necessity for an effective promulgation of the gospel message, there will doubtless always be necessity for additional workers, beyond the resources of the mission treasury. It is for these extra workers that Dr. Josiah Strong suggests a most admirable plan which, briefly stated, is as follows: Let young men of Christian faith and character go abroad in the employ of commercial houses, doing the ordinary work demanded of such employés, but using all the opportunities they have for getting into personal touch with the people, and talking and living Christianity in such personal relationships. This auxiliary plan is feasible, practical and efficient, and affords an excellent opportunity to obey the "Go ye."

Proposed Annexation of Egypt.

Diplomatic circles are stirred by the seemingly well-authenticated report that Egypt is to be formally annexed to the domains of Great Britain. The recent appointment of Lord Kitchener, as agent general for the Land of the Nile, is expected to pave the way for this step. While, doubtless, the proposed incorporation with the British Empire would add to the material prosperity of the country, it will not be accomplished without serious protests on the part of the other European nations. The great powers are decidedly opposed to any one nation reaching out for additional territory unless they are assured of equally desirable acquisitions. Thus the weaker nations, or dependencies, are destined, sooner or later, to be absorbed by the leading actors in the great political arena. Might, rather than right, is still the rule of this world.

Infidelity in Colleges.

Outside of the church schools in which the religious element is a leading and predominant factor, American colleges are not conducive to the religious development of their students. Dr. S. T. Willis, President of the Virginia Christian College of Lynchburg, Va., speaking before a recent convention, expressed himself as follows: "The American republic is doomed to destruction because the majority of its college professors are infidels. Unless more stress is laid upon the teachings of Christianity, instead of sending out into the world students and graduates with little or no conception of what an upright life should be, this republic will go the way of the first French republic, ancient Rome, and all others where proper moral conceptions do not exist." Dr. Willis has touched upon a vital point,—one that parents should weigh well, before they entrust their children to schools devoid of religious influences. Why not patronize our own church schools?

Miles of Books.

Had Solomon lived in this age of the world, he might have said with still greater emphasis that "of making many books there is no end," for the production of literature is greater than at any previous period. During last year four and four-tenths miles of shelving were filled with additions to the Congressional Library in Washington, D. C. At the present time there are 1,792,158 books in the library, making if the third in the size in the world. During the period 1905-09 the additions to the British Museum Library were 149,464; to the Bibliotheque Nationale, Paris, 166,634; to the Library of Congress, 425,825. From these comparative figures of increase, Librarian Putnam argues that the congressional institution will surpass its two rivals within a few years. The addition of thirty-four miles of additional shelving within the last few months, to our national library, will provide room for nearly a million more volumes. Such a stupendous amount of literature is truly astounding. One is made to fear, however, that with so much to distract, there is great danger of a neglect in Bible study, which of all things is most essential,—in fact, of supreme importance.

Sad Days for France.

Deepest gloom overwhelmed the people of France Sept. 25 when, by an explosion of the battleship "Liberte," in the harbor of Toulon, five hundred men were hurled to a watery grave. It appears that in some way fire had broken out in the lower part of the ship, and, spreading to the powder magazine, caused this most deplorable loss of life. Thus it seems that the modern battleship,—a mighty engine of destruction in time of actual warfare,—has, within itself, constant elements of danger for those on board, even in a time of peace. While hundreds of homes in France are mourning the loss of dear ones who were ruthlessly snatched from them by the sad and unexpected calamity, the world at large has been given another object lesson that should not fail to leave its impress. Will the sacrifice of these hundreds of souls be a more reminder that only harm can result from the war spirit, so largely permeating the people of today? Why not pray for the ushering in of the glad day when "nations shall learn war no more"?

King George's Visit to India.

The proposed visit of King George of England to his Indian Empire, in December of the present year, has brought a series of unexpected attacks,—not as regards the visit itself, but because of the vast expense involved, most of which has to be defrayed by the people of India. The Delhi "durbar,"—one of the most magnificent and splendid of the mystic Oriental ceremonies,—is to celebrate the advent of the august ruler, involving an outlay of about $6,000,000. The trip of the King and the royal escort will cost approximately $100,000,000. Remembering that India is now suffering from drought, and that famine in many parts is imminent, there is a united plea on the part of many journals, as well as individuals, that the King greatly simplify his visit, or at least so arrange that the burden of the vast expenditure, as now outlined, do not draw upon the resources of the common people of India. Such a move would be in entire harmony with gospel principles, that enjoin upon us a tender regard for the wants of the poor and needy.

Our Dependent Ones.

"Uncle Sam" has a large family, but his records do not show that all are equally blessed. A census report, recently published, shows a most decided increase of inmates sheltered in prisons, almshouses, insane asylums and other institutions of the kind. More than 110,000 persons are confined in jails and penitentiaries. Almshouses claim 83,944 inmates; insane asylums, 184,123 (an increase of 26 per cent in six years); institutions for the feebleminded, 20,190. These figures do not include the large number of persons who logically and rightfully belong to one or the other of the classes above mentioned, but who are still at large. The total number of these, if added to those already referred to, would be most depressing. We are glad to say, however, that there is an adequate remedy for these unfortunate conditions of society,—it can be found in the teaching and exemplification of Christian principles. These, if accepted and applied, will do away with crime and improvidence, and will so influence both body and mind as to bring "life to those that find them, and health to all their flesh."

The Awakening of the Yellow Race.

From times immemorial the white race has constituted itself the conservator of the world's intellectual activity. It will be surprising, perhaps, to learn of the marvelous advancement being made by other races, notably the Mongolian. The Chinese young men and women, now being educated in American colleges, under the provisions of the Boxer indemnity fund, so graciously returned by the United States to China, are evincing the possibilities of a most wonderful development. They are showing a degree of aptitude and general proficiency that are a constant source of astonishment to their teachers. It has been discovered that the Chinese mind is just as susceptible of development as the most favored one of the white race. The Oriental is learning to think, and his thought will be a material factor in the future of the world's history. This is a fact that must be reckoned with in future plans for the moral and spiritual advancement of humanity. Will the yellow and white races labor unitedly for the extension of Christianity? That is a question, as yet not fully answered, but of supreme importance.

Millions for Pleasure.

So pronounced is the present craze for entertainment and pleasure, that it is very questionable indeed whether our modern cities are any better, morally, than those that were destroyed in the days of Noah and Lot. One of the prominent restaurant keepers of New York,—an authority in every way qualified,—states that one million dollars is spent in that city each night for pleasure alone. The enormous aggregate is made up as follows: Dinners, $125,000; banquets and wine, $125,000; theaters, $175,000; taxi-cabs, $175,000; hotels, $100,000; various dissipations, $300,000. Almost incredible as this vast sum seems to be, even for a city like New York, the more appalling fact is the loss in time and character, indicated by the prodigate expenditure of so large a sum. Dollars wasted is bad enough, but manhood and womanhood ruthlessly sacrificed for the sake of pleasure, is criminal in the extreme. What a manifest contempt of the atoning blood of Christ —the great Mediator, who would so lovingly draw all men unto him!

Pennsylvania's Flood.

With the remembrance of the great Johnstown flood still fresh in the mind, grave apprehension filled every heart when the first news of a similar occurrence in another part of the same State, on the afternoon of Sept. 30, was flashed by the telegraph to all parts of the United States. Austin, a city of 2,500 inhabitants, just two miles below a threatening dam built across a narrow valley, and Costello, a town of 700 inhabitants, three miles further down the valley, are the two places overwhelmed by the flood, which, besides causing a loss of perhaps 150 lives, almost completely destroyed both towns, causing a vast property loss. Already the Red Cross Society, with ample funds and supplies for the first immediate needs of the sufferers, has gone to the scene of desolation, and will endeavor to do all that is possible to mitigate the severities of the situation. From various sections of the country spontaneous and liberal contributions are being sent to the stricken people. Amid the scenes of gloom it is cheering to note the abounding sympathy being shown.

The World Peace Imperiled.

With Italy's declaration of war against Turkey, Sept. 29, hostilities are in full blast, and already Tripoli is being occupied by Italian troops, in perfect assurance that no other nation will interfere in Turkey's behalf. The Italian section of the International Peace Society with due solemnity states that "the Italian occupation of Tripoli will conduce to the civilization of that province, and may also contribute to the maintenance of peace by restoring the equilibrium on the Mediterranean." The resolutions call upon Turkey to submit quietly to the proposed occupation of Turkish territory by Italian troops,—thus presupposing remarkable self-restraint and a most commendable love of peace. Granting that the Ottoman Empire will look at the matter in that light, the fact still remains that land-grabbing is so very common among the nations of today that no feeble power can make an effective protest against it. With such a pernicious practice universally accepted as an authorized way of extending a nation's boundaries, justice is relegated to the dim past, and civilization (?) wholly depends upon massive dread-noughts and big battalions.

Europe's Discontent and Unrest.

The disturbances among wage earners, at present affecting practically all countries of Europe, are likely to be of some significance, since, with advancing prices for food, and no corresponding increase in wages, millions are forced to live on the most meager allowance, with no promise for the morrow. Hence it is not to be wondered at if the riot of today is the revolution of tomorrow. One cause of the general condition in Europe is the depreciation in the purchasing power of gold, owing to its increased production. This affects the price of commodities throughout the world, but would not be prejudicial to the wage earner if an allowance were made in his pay. While this has been largely done in the United States, the worker in Europe is not so fortunate. Undoubtedly there is food enough in the world for all, were there a more adjustment of conditions existing. The second cause justified in Europe's excessive taxation,—largely for unproductive military purposes. If European nations would renounce militarism and cease enlarging their armies and navies, the wage earner would be relieved of an intolerable burden. If laws were repealed which make food dearer than it need be, wages would go further than they do. "Man's inhumanity to man" is largely responsible for the troublous conditions affecting the toilers of the European countries.

The Plastic Clay.

I took a piece of living clay,
And gently formed it day by day,
And moulded with my power and art
A young child's soft and yielding heart.

I came again when years were gone,
It was a man I looked upon;
He still that early impress wore
And I could change him nevermore.

Christ's "Go Ye."

BY VIRGIL C. HOLSINGER.

THIS command is one of the greatest if not the greatest that was ever given to man. It embodies much more than the going. But the going is that upon which all the other things hinge. It is the full surrender of one's all for the use of the Master and a willingness to be used by him. It does not necessarily mean that every individual must become a foreign missionary. Remember, the command was given to the whole band of followers: "You, as a church, see to it that the Gospel is preached in all parts of the world."

Of course, that meant that some should go to other lands, and there witness for him, and some should remain at home and work in that territory. The charge fell with equal weight on each individual Christian. None are excluded.

But the work is not the same for each one. Some must actually leave home and friends and let their lights shine in foreign lands. Others are called to our large cities to work among all classes. Not only are the rich and well-circumstanced to be taught, but the poor, degraded wretch in the slums as well. The foreign element must be cared for. If we do not take the Gospel to them, they come to us for it. Others are called to the unworked country districts.

True, all are not capable of verbal teaching, but today the cry is for people who teach by example. Right at home, in the kitchen, in the shop, on the farm, we daily come in contact with those who need the Gospel. We must let them see in us something peaceful, sublime, attractive. In other words, let the Christ-life shine forth so plainly that they will recognize its beauty, and long to possess it. The most effective teaching is sometimes done without a word. There are many who are near our door whom we could teach, if we would. Christ meant, "Go to your neighbor and teach him the way, or speak to him of his soul's interests," just as much as he meant, "Go to the heathen who is lost in idolatry."

Besides going in person he meant going in spirit. If you can not go, send. Send your influence, your sympathy, your prayers, your money. Let us not be so anxious about living in luxury or leaving an ample fortune to our children, but rather let us bequeath them a rich legacy of the Spirit. All we have belongs to God and we should use it to his name's honor and glory. But we, so often, are unwilling to go, and forget to send. We do not feel concerned about those who are careless about their soul's salvation, or know not the light. We fail to remember the promise. Christ said, "Lo, I am with you even to the end of the world." Is it any wonder that those who do go are so happy and successful? To have Christ always with us would be most sweet and enjoyable. And we can have it. We forget that Christ has said that we shall receive one reward in this life and the one to come.

The Master is calling for workers. The cry is for more truly consecrated workers. We want to cling to too much of the world. It means too much sacrifice for us to live close enough to the Master to be of real service to him. We do not have time to spare, or we are afraid that our neighbor will say something about us. Money is a little scarce, just now. All these excuses are measures of our love for him who has redeemed us. Let each one measure his life by the gospel standard, and see if he is living as Christ would have him live. It is only then that we feel ready and willing to heed the command, "Go ye."

Elizabethtown, Pa.

The Book of the Law Found.

BY I. J. ROSENBERGER.

AMONG the interesting Sunday-school lessons of last quarter was the one referred to in our heading. This circumstance occurred during the reign of good Josiah. This young king had bad ancestry in the person of his father, Amon, and his grandfather, Manasseh. Josephus speaks of Josiah in words of praise, because he sought to follow after David, his father. How fortunate it is for a young man or woman to seek some worthy character to imitate! Josiah began his reign at the early age of eight. In tender youth he began to seek the Lord. What a noble example Josiah gives to the young of today!

At the age of twelve he began his work of reform, and to purge Judah and Jerusalem. His work was an aggressive task,—one of conquest. In his eighteenth year, having purged the land, he commissioned Shaphan, his royal secretary, to refit the temple, to gather up the scattered treasure, and to bring it to Jerusalem. "And when they brought out the money, Hilkiah, the priest, found a book of the Law of the Lord, given by Moses."

1. The Book of the Law Being Found, Implies It Was Lost.—Think of the circumstance! Found the Sacred Book of God! The real facts can scarcely be conceived. I have met with individuals who misplaced or lost their Bibles; but in this case God's people had lost their Bible. It is sad to contemplate the loss of health, of home, of life, but the saddest of all is the loss of the soul. Bible history is remarkable for coming back, for repeating itself; hence let us look and see how the Sacred Book may be lost today.

(a) There Is Danger of Losing the Sacred Book When It Is of Little Value.—That which we hold precious, we usually take great care of. Some people do not consider their religion of much value; hence they take but little care of it; they let the precious treasure slip from them almost unconsciously, until it is gone,—lost. With such the Book of the Law is lost.

(b) A Lack of Watchfulness Subjects Us to Danger.—How often we are bidden to watch! The little things need watching. Large estates have been lost by not watching the nickels and dimes. "Take care of the moments and the hours will take care of themselves," is a worthy adage. It is the little things that annoy and distress us in life. Work, Solomon gave evidence that he was master of the situation when he said: "Take us the foxes, the little foxes, that spoil the vines." It is the little acts and deeds that make good citizens. The same is true of a Christian life.

(c) Cease Teaching a Doctrine, and Soon It Will Drop Out, Be Lost, Lost, Lost!—The prayer covering is a Bible doctrine as clear as the sun in a cloudless sky, yet it is lost in some congregations. Why? Because it ceased to be taught. The simple life and plain dressing are practically lost in some congregations where they once prevailed, for reasons already assigned. Plain dressing, in many places, is not taught, hence is being lost. The doctrine of avoidance, so unmistakably taught in 1 Cor. 5, was reaffirmed as late as 1892 by our Annual Meeting. I have taken pains to examine some standard commentaries, such as Clarke, Henry, Burkit, and a number of German commentaries, and they are all clear and outspoken in defense of avoidance, as affirmed by our Brethren. It has about ceased to be taught; hence this part of the Book is about lost to us.

(d) The Book of the Law Has Been Lost by Being Destroyed.—We had a striking incident of this method of destroying the Sacred Book in a recent Sunday-school lesson. King Jehoiakim heard of a recent message by Jeremiah. His curiosity was aroused. As the king's royal secretary, Jehudi, read the message, the king's anger was stirred, and with his penknife he cut the roll, leaf after leaf, as read, and cast the pieces into the burning brazier before him, until the entire roll was consumed. Many persons, like Jehoiakim, employ their theological penknife, and cut out such portions of our sacred roll as are offensive to them, erasing them from their creed. Listen to the penalty for that grave sin: "If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the Book of Life, out of the holy city, and from the things written in this book."

2. Josiah, on Meeting with This Newly-found Message, Proceeded to Test It.—When we meet with that which is new, it is wise to test it; prove its validity. Josiah at once sent a committee of his princes to inquire of the prophetess Huldah. She affirmed that the message was true, and from God. Josiah had the truth from two depositories. The wise men, when they got to Jerusalem, were provided with the truth in two depositories: The star, and the law read by the priests and scribes. The Christian has the truth, also, in two depositories,—the Word, and his law written in his mind and heart.

3. They Seemed to Experience No Inconvenience Worshiping Without the Sacred Roll.—Strange this is, yet true. The church at Laodicea boasted of a glowing experience, saying: "I am rich and increased in goods and have need of nothing." Yet they were wretched, miserable, blind and naked; and knew it not. They worshiped without the Book of the Law.

Dear reader, am I saying too much, when I tell you that there are pulpits today, filled with swelling words of oratory, entertaining large assemblies, reporting full classes in their large Sunday-schools, boasting of their large collections, and yet virtually without the Book of the Law, though realizing no inconvenience? Those distinguished dignitaries who shall vainly appeal to Christ in that final day, were of this class. They lived and died, and never knew in time that they were without the Book of the Law.

4. Let Us Note That When They Found the Lost Message, They Passed It Around.—Hilkiah gave it to Shaphan: and Shaphan carried it to the king. The king had it read to the people. If we find good news it is right to tell it,—pass it on,—for our next neighbor needs it as much as we do. And you and I are rightful messengers to pass the news. When Andrew found the Messiah, he quickly bore the news to Simon. Philip bore the same news to Nathanael. The Samaritan woman at once bore the message to her people in the city. The man, out of whom Jesus cast a legion of devils, wanted to remain with Jesus; but Jesus said: "Go home to thy friends, and tell them what great things the Lord hath done for thee." Jesus bade him go to pass the good news around.

5. Josiah Wisely Sought First to Create Sentiment by Teaching the People.—The first thing that Christ bade his disciples to do was to teach the people. It is true, a law is of little force unless there is sentiment behind it. A great many converts are mere weaklings, because they lack sentiment. The church lacks in the executive of her government,—all due to a lack of sentiment. Elders, preachers and evangelists must, like Josiah, teach the people,—create sentiment,—if we are to have a strong working force. Josiah's success, in his reform work, was due to the strong sentiment he created by his thorough, systematic efforts in teaching the people.

6. It Is Worthy of Note That the Valued Treasure Was Found in the Activities of Restoring and Reforming.—How much we learn, and much we grow by seeking to add to our store,—seeking to build up, to strengthen the weak,—rather than to discourage, tear down and destroy!

Peculiar People.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

God's people are said to be a peculiar people; and they surely are, as their ways seem odd or very different from those of worldly people. In GOSPEL MESSENGER, No. 12, Bro. Chemberlen told of a sister, with means at her disposal, that had the odd or peculiar notion of taking poor children into her home, caring for them and educating them until she had six, and who regretted that she missed the seventh one, whom she might now have had in college. This is a peculiarity of true Gospel color. It partakes largely of the nature of him whose mission was "good will toward men."

There are many peculiar people who are not God's people. They are peculiarly peculiar. They take pride in their peculiarity, yet it rather destroys than advances their usefulness. One may be peculiar in being about fifty years behind the times and, instead of trying to catch up, may be tugging at the brakes to get the whole machinery to stop. If things are different to what they were in his grandfather's day, he thinks God's people are losing their peculiarity; and, doubtless they are, so far as the custom of his day is concerned.

Old days, with their peculiarities are gone never to return. We are in the living present. Here is ample room to be peculiar and to let our light shine. This sister struck a chord that will sound with the true ring down the ages, and will do more to advance the glory of the Redeemer's kingdom than imposing ceremonies and empty forms. They serve God best who serve his creatures.

One who, by being prosperous in business and making things come to pass, has money at his disposal, and,—instead of moving in the fashion-loving, pleasure-seeking and cross-shunning circles of society,—is gathering up the unfortunate and helpless destitute children and caring for them, putting sweetness into their life and shielding them from shame and crime, and opening to them the door of possibilities to honor and usefulness, is peculiar in an exalted sense.

It is not well-pleasing to the Lord if we use the money that God has entrusted to our care for selfish gratification in ease or pleasure. We may, with little regard to the cost, seek for a congenial climate, where we may live comfortably in the changing seasons. We may travel from place to place simply to see or to be seen. We may do all this while want and distress are on every hand, and yet we, like the "priest" and "Levite," unfeelingly "pass by on the other side." Surely, this is not well pleasing unto the Lord. We shall not pretend to say just what God will do with a people who merely try to make themselves peculiar by a display of costume,—a "making broad their phylacteries,"—when, all the while, they are lavishly spending money for their own pleasure, though surrounded by destitute and helpless children. In their pitiful condition these forsaken ones are begging for protection and yet no help is given.

Yes, give us the peculiar people, whose houses and hearts are large enough to accommodate the little waifs, and train their expanding minds, restrain their wandering feet, turn their bitter lot to sweetness, and open to them the gates of usefulness and happiness.

"Yes, I know there are stains on my carpet,
The traces of small, muddy boots;
And I see your fair tapestry glowing,
And spotless with flowers and fruits.

"And I know that my walls are disfigured,
With prints of small fingers and hands;
And that your own household most truly
In immaculate purity stands.

"I know that my parlor is littered
With many old treasures and toys,
While your own is in daintiest order,
Unharmed by the presence of boys.

"And I know that my room is invaded
Quite badly all hours of the day;
While you sit in yours unmolested
And dream the still hours away.

"Yes, I know there are four little bedsides
Where I must stand watchful each night,
While you go out in your carriage
And flash in your dresses so bright.

"Now, I think I'm a neat little woman,
And I like my home orderly too;
And I'm fond of all dainty belongings,
Yet I would not change places with you.

"No! keep your fair home with its order,
Its freedom from bother and noise;
And keep your own unruffled leisure,
But give me my four splendid boys."

The Gospel Rule of Ministerial Aid.

BY W. H. SANGER.

(Substance of an address made at Ministerial Meeting. All the references given are from the American Standard Version.)

WE are not only looking for the Gospel but also for a rule, but not a law which changes not. And since it is a rule and not a law, there will likely be found some exceptions, as there always are. It is needful, therefore, to avoid confusing the two,—getting the rule for the exception and the exception for the rule. Evidently some have done this, for one says we should have a free ministry, while another contends for the salaried ministry. Some one has taken the exception for the rule. It is the rule that we are interested in, just now.

The Bible is not silent on this question, by any means. The references to it are comparatively numerous. The fullest discussion is given by Paul, that master of logic and argument, in the ninth chapter of First Corinthians. Argument after argument is adduced to lead up to and buttress the striking conclusion and summary given in the fourteenth verse. "Even so did the Lord ordain that they that proclaim the gospel should live of the gospel." Notice the exact wording. It is not said that the Lord opposed the support of the minister or that he even allowed it under exceptional circumstances, but that he ordained it. God ordained,—purposed, planned, intended,—that the ministry should be supported. Certainly this must be the Gospel rule.

We should not be content, however, with looking at one passage, though it may seem strong and conclusive, and hence we shall take the various scriptures that refer to the subject,—the important ones at least.

This ninth chapter of First Corinthians should be examined first. Paul first argues as a man from the every-day experiences of life, referring to the soldier, the keeper of a vineyard and the shepherd. He then lays down the proposition that the law demands as much, in that the ox was not to be muzzled when he treaded out the corn. The law said this not on account of the ox so much as for our benefit, that he that plows should plow in hope and he that threshes should thresh in hope of partaking. And, "if we sowed unto you spiritual things, is it a great matter if we shall reap your carnal things?" Certainly not. The priests, also, that ministered under the ceremonial ordinances of the Jewish church, were supported in this work.

Then follows the great conclusion,—based upon human reason and experience, the teaching of the law, and God's ceremonial arrangement,—that it is the Lord's plan and purpose to have also the minister of the Gospel supported by his work. This agrees with Christ's words when he said, referring to the work of the twelve and of the seventy, that he sent them out on a ministerial errand, that the laborer is worthy of his hire. This agrees also with 2 Tim. 2:4, "No soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life; that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier." The preceding verse makes it clear that the minister is here referred to, and the proposition is laid down that he must not be busy with worldly affairs if he wishes to please the Lord who enrolled him as a soldier.

Ministerial support is thus seen to be according to the divine plan, and is necessary if we hope to please our Great Leader. It is also commanded. See Gal. 6:6, "But let him that is taught in the word communicate unto him that teacheth in all good things." And again, 1 Tim. 5:17, 18, "Let the elders that rule well be counted worthy of double honor, especially those who labor in the word and in teaching. For the Scripture saith, Thou shalt not muzzle the ox when he treadeth out the corn. And, the laborer is worthy of his hire."

This is sufficient for the present on the theoretical side. Now comes an interesting question, Did the early church really accept and live by this rule? Or was it only an unattainable ideal? Did the apostolic church support its ministers?

Let us first take the instance of the peerless preacher, the Master himself. He had no resources, not so much as a place where to lay his head, and so had either to work with his hands or depend upon others for his support. I do not know that anything can be said in this instance that is entirely satisfactory, but the instructions to the twelve, and again to the seventy, suggest some kind of support for himself as well as for them. There is nothing, so far as I know to the contrary, while Luke 8:3 ("And Joanna the wife of Churzas Herod's steward, and Susanna, and many others, who ministered unto them of their substance") confirms the foregoing conclusion.

The apostles were supported. 1 Cor. 9:5, 6, "Have we no right to lead about a wife that is a believer, even as the rest of the apostles, and the brethren of the Lord, and Cephas? Or I only and Barnabas, have we not a right to forbear working?" The conclusion is clear that Paul, while foregoing his support, was acting differently from the rest of the apostles, and that they and the Lord's brethren were being regularly supported in the churches.

Other pastors were supported. For instance at Corinth, where Paul refused support, the church supported its ministers. See 1 Corinthians 9:12, "If others partake of this right over you, do not we yet more?" The context indicates clearly that the Corinthian church, while not supporting Paul, did support her own ministers.

Coming down to the case of Paul himself, it is necessary to exercise a little caution. It is well known that at Corinth, Ephesus and Thessalonica Paul worked with his own hands and so was not chargeable to the church with which he was at that time working. Now, does this give us Paul's rule? Or is this his exception? The Word must furnish the answer. We read in 2 Cor. 12:13, "For what is there wherein ye were made inferior to the rest of the churches, except it be that I myself was not a burden to you? Forgive me this wrong." If, in respect to support, the Corinthian church, which did not support Paul, was different from the other churches where Paul labored, dare any one say that Paul made it his rule to refuse support? Clearly this instance was an exception made for some good reason which is unknown to us. The reasons for this unusual conduct at Ephesus and Thessalonica are given. At the former place it was to be an example of sacrificing for others (see Acts 20:34, 35) and at the latter to be an example to those busybodies who would not work (see 2 Thess. 3:7-12). There must have been some equally exceptional condition at Corinth. In fact he is careful to state in two of these instances that his conduct was not according to the rule or authority of the Gospel. "What then is my reward? That, when I preach the gospel, I may make the gospel without charge, so as not to use to the full my right in the gospel" (1 Cor. 9:18). "Not because we have not the right, but to make ourselves an ensample unto you, that ye should imitate us" (2 Thess. 3:9). In not demanding support he relinquished a right which he had in the Gospel. This truth is emphasized by the fact that, while at Corinth, and not receiving support of that church, he was receiving help from other churches. He writes of this, "I robbed other churches, taking wages of them, that I might minister unto you" (2 Cor. 11:8). Most assurredly he was not opposed to the taking of support in principle, nor unaccustomed to it; otherwise he could not have consented to take a contribution which deserved to be classed as robbery. It would have been inconsistent to advise other churches to support their ministers if he regularly refused that same support.

It seems clear, from the scriptures cited and from the easy deductions from them, that the rule with Paul was support and that the exception, where he could accomplish more good thereby, was to forego this right to the furtherance of the Gospel—a good example for any minister to follow. But this would not justify one in taking the exception and elevating it to the dignity of a rule. The only reason for the exception was that the Gospel might be better furthered by so doing. And, really, the great reason for the opposite to be the rule is, that in the great majority of cases it is to the furtherance of the Gospel to have the minister supported.

The gospel rule of ministerial aid, then, is ministerial support. It was laid down and argued for as the divine plan and purpose. It was commanded in the New Testament. It was lived up to by the people who supported Jesus in his ministry, by those who supported the apostles and the brethren of the Lord, by the Corinthian church in the support of its local ministry, and by the majority of the churches in which Paul labored in their support of him. The conclusion seems irresistible.

Several other questions arise in discussing this subject. How were these ministers supported? And what is meant by support? To these questions the Bible does not offer a complete answer. 1 Cor. 9:5 suggests that support includes the support of a wife. It is only reasonable to go a little further and say that the support of a minister demands the full and adequate support of himself and his wife as long as either live and the support of their children until they are fully educated and prepared to meet life for themselves.

It seems clear that the spirit of the Gospel demands more of a support than the average minister actually gets, and I am not speaking of the ministers in our own church where the "free ministry" prevails but of the salaried ministers of all churches. The average annual salary paid to all preachers outside of the 150 largest cities in the United States is $573. The average cost of living, including those who live in the city, of course, per family in the United States was some time ago $751, and it is doubtless higher now.

It follows that the average country and town minister does not get a reasonable support. Really, the great objection to the salaried ministry, as it exists in our country is, that it does not meet the Gospel requirements of a reasonable support. It is contemplated in the Word that the minister should not have a partial support but a full one, so that he can give all his time and all his unimpaired energy to the work of the ministry. "Be diligent in these things; give thyself wholly to them; that thy progress may be manifest unto all" (1 Tim. 4:15). The context shows that the "them" used here refers to teaching, exhortation, and such things,—the work of the ministry. And this support should be so full that the preacher can get along without entangling himself in worldly pursuits.

Paul advises Timothy to suffer hardness as a good soldier, saying, "No soldier on service entangleth himself in the affairs of this life, that he may please him who enrolled him as a soldier" (2 Tim. 2:4). His whole time and thought should be given to the duties of the minister; he should not worry about the affairs of this life; he should not be planning how to make more dollars to add to his bank account, nor how to make ends meet when stingy church members pay starvation wages.

How much better would some men preach if they were kept from want! And I wonder whether the ministers in the Church of the Brethren could not preach better, on the average, if their minds were not so full of the temporal things, of the bread and butter problem. And I also wonder whether it is not the church more than the minister that suffers when this condition exists.

Prayer Covering.

BY EMMA ROOT.

We often wonder why some of our dear sisters regard the prayer veil at love feasts as more necessary than at other services. Is it really more necessary than at other places of prayer?

I have known good-meaning sisters who go to the family table, where prayer is to be offered, without covering their heads. I am sorry to say that some of them are elders' and ministers' wives.

Not long ago several good sisters told me of their timidity in offering a prayer, and during the conversation explained that they had not had the opportunity in the home, while young to exercise in prayer, and now it seemed almost an impossibility. Believe me when I say that these two good sisters are elders' daughters. They love the church, but are too timid fully to comply with some of the gospel requirements.

If these, as well as hundreds of others, had been taught in the home, while young, to take an active part in the family worship, in the thanksgiving at the table, and at all times and places of prayer, it would be a pleasure to them now, and its influence would be felt through after-generations.

I feel quite sure that more plain talk along this line, from the pulpit, by way of encouragement to our sisters, would be of great value to the church. Ministers of other denominations would be glad to see their women come back to this sacred practice. Then, why should not we as sisters stay by it at all times?

Many dear sisters feel satisfied in wearing the devotional covering a few times during the year,—perhaps at love feast occasions only,—and show no hesitancy in standing before a Sunday-school class, without the special covering, Sunday after Sunday, teaching the Word. These same dear sisters would not think of going to the table, three times a day with their bonnets on their heads.

When we fully obey, then we shall realize how much power there is in following Paul's instructions. Notice, again, 1 Cor. 11:5, "Every woman that prayeth or prophesieth.", Should we be ashamed of a neatly-made prayer veil? No, never. Even the worldly people admire them, when properly made and used. No one admires an untidy bonnet or prayer covering, and as the two were made to go together, when so required, just so should our manners and conduct correspond with our outward adornment. I have seen some plain, neatly-dressed sisters, who, when on the street car or sidewalk, were so very loud and unrefined in their manners that their conduct did not correspond with their plain attire.

When we accept the faith and practice of the Brethren, we should understand that the bonnet is not intended to answer as the prayer covering. If we sisters could have more heart-to-heart talks in regard to this subject, I am quite sure we would greatly profit thereby. An audience of sisters, where all believe in complying with the instruction of the apostle, will doubtless possess the power of the Spirit more fully than they could otherwise.

The Garden of Eden.

BETWEEN the Euphrates and Tigris rivers there is as fertile a body of land, as may be found in any part of the world. The climate is mild the year round, water is in great abundance, and the possibilities of the country are marvelous. This, at one time the most populous and prosperous section of Asia, is now a desolate region, all for the want of intelligent attention. But it would seem that the land may yet be redeemed. Some of the cities are to be rebuilt; great dams will be constructed; water will be turned on the fertile land, and the tiller of the soil will once more make the forsaken valley blossom as the rose. There are millions of acres of this productive land, and its fertility can hardly be exhausted. It is believed, by not a few well-informed students, that this famous valley was the cradle of the human race, that here man was created, and that here was the original Garden of Eden. The flood, of course, made many changes, even changing the bed of the streams, but the climate and soil remain. Concerning the present conditions, and what is being done, we give this much of the report of Fred Simpich, the United States Consul at Bagdad. After referring to the present conditions and some proposed improvements of the broad strip lying between the two famous rivers, he says:

"Twenty years ago French engineers battled valiantly with the treacherous Euphrates in building a dam at a point a little above the old Tower of Babel, and diverting water over the rich alluvial plain about. Floods come every year in the Euphrates, however—when the snow melts in the Armenian hills—and the French dam is now in ruins. It is a part of the scheme of Sir William Willcocks (the eminent English Irrigation Engineer, who won fame in the Nile Valley, and who has been employed by the Turkish Government) to dam the Euphrates near this same point, but his method is different.

"For the past year 4,000 Arabs have toiled like moles, digging a new channel for the ancient Euphrates; in the dry bottom of this new channel a giant dam of concrete and American steel is being built. When all is ready, the river will be turned into this artificial channel and the dam will raise the water to the required level. The first steam locomotive ever seen in the old Garden of Eden is now puffing noisily back and forth, hauling material for use in this giant dam. The day it started, wild Bedouins came for miles around, riding in on camels and donkeys to see the 'smoke-horse with fire in it.' About 6,000,000 acres will eventually be watered by a canal to be dug, taking off water from Lake Akkar-Goof. Then old cities like Nippur, in Chaldea, where the University of Pennsylvania expedition lately dug up so many priceless relics of antiquity, may be brought to life once more.

"Actual construction work on dams, canals, etc., destined to water 3,000,000 acres, is now going on, and should be finished in from two to three years. Sir William estimates this acreage will yield 1,000,000 tons of grain and 2,000,000 cwt. of cotton annually. Toaden, the famous Egypt cotton expert, says: 'Mesopotamia's soil, climate, elevation, etc., show the country to be immensely well adapted to the production of high grade cotton.' After giving a brief history of the country the writer continues: 'So now this historic region, once the center of the world's wealth, culture and population, is reduced to a weary wilderness of sun, sand and silence. Lean jackals yelp at night about the bones of kings, and the scorching simoon puffs its hot breath over miles of dust where once tall grain bent gracefully before the whispering breeze. Even the climate has changed. From May till September 120 to 125 Fahr. is a common shade temperature, and the sun temperature is unspeakable. Barely 2,500,000 people are left in all Mesopotamia. Yet here is a land of proved fertility, waiting only water to make it an area of immense value. Already some 200 oil engines and pumping outfits have been put in by Jews, Armenians and Chaldeans who own gardens, date groves and grain fields about Bagdad, and crop yields are enormous. Ancient travelers and historians describe Mesopotamia as a forest of verdure from end to end. Even Herodotus fell under its magic spell. Just as much water flows now, down the Tigris and Euphrates, as in the proud and prosperous days of Nebuchadnezzar, Assurbanipal, et al, and if these early irrigators made money out of Mesopotamia land, modern men ought certainly to do so, and even if the Willcocks enterprise succeeds only in part, it will mean a tremendous addition to the world's available area of corn and cotton land. With the approach of the famous German Bagdad railway from the West, the addition of more steamers to the paddle wheel fleet now plying the Tigris, and the reclamation of vast tracts of rich land about Babylonia, there seems every reason to believe that a boom is about to strike the Garden of Eden.'

"There is still a chance that grass will grow where it did when Nebuchadnezzar went out to graze, centuries ago. The hanging gardens are in ruins, of course, but ten million date trees, worth a dollar a year each, flourish in the delta of the Tigris, and there is not an acre of land in all Mesopotamia that will not grow date palms, if water is applied. Who can say that irrigation may not do for this classis Bible land what it has done for the deserts of the American West, that a land-hungry world may not yet turn back to Adam's old homestead, where tourist hotels are to spring up in the Garden of Eden, and where passenger trains may whistle through green groves about the Tower of Babel?

"As I write these lines a long camel-train is trekking out the west gate of Bagdad, carrying supplies to the English engineers in pith helmets and sun glasses burrowing into the plain above Babylon, making the new channel for the Euphrates. And from the deck of a Tigris steamer an American cube concrete-mixer is being unloaded, marked from Chicago. It has come 15,000 miles, via Suez, the Red Sea, the Indian Ocean, the Persian Gulf and finally up the historic Tigris, 500 miles to Bagdad. Thousands of tons of interlocking steel piling, from Pennsylvania, are also being unloaded. And upon another steamer I see naked Arabs loading wool, dates, skins, carpets and gums for America. Already Adam's old home has revolted against the lethargy of centuries; with abundant water on Mesopotamia's vast area of rich land—land that has rested and grown richer through idle ages,—what a harvest the future may yield! 'Inshallah!'—'Heaven willing,' ejaculates the Arab peasant farmer, watching and waiting for the water wonder to be worked by the pale-faced engineers from the outer world."

The Cause of Unbelief.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

THERE is a cause for unbelief. Belief in God and Christ is so reasonable, the facts set forth in the Bible are so well attested that there must be some cause for unbelief. What is the cause?

In John 5: 30-47 Jesus discusses this question. After recounting the various witnesses that testify of him,—John, the works that he did, the Father, and the scriptures,—he gives the cause of the unbelief of the Jews, —"Ye have not the love of God in yourselves," "Ye receive glory one of another and the glory that cometh from the only God, ye seek not." For that reason "ye WILL NOT come to me that ye may have life."

Our wishes are ever father to our thoughts. It is easy for a man to believe in line with his inclinations, to doubt that which he would rather not know. He who does not love God does not wish to admit the fact of God. Admit the everlasting power and divinity of God and his Son, Jesus Christ, and every sinful life stands in condemnation. To realize that one is standing in condemnation of God, is not a pleasant state of mind. No one courts that condition. From it there are only two ways of escape,—to deny the fact of God with all one's might, or to admit it and come to him through Christ for pardon.

The latter course would seem to be the easier, but it is not so easy for him who loves the praise of men.

It is true indeed that many men respect an earnest Christian, but a large proportion of them respect him, not for his belief in Christ but for his clean, moral character. Today the man who expresses freely his faith in a personal Savior, in the tender providence of God, in the real abiding presence of the Holy Spirit, will find that he is "queering" himself with most of his associates. Do you know that I find plenty of professing Christians who look at me as if I were a mild sort of a crank if I speak of prayer as being a really practical thing?

Under these circumstances, it takes some courage to believe in Christ and his Gospel, that is to believe strong enough that people find out what you believe. He who loves the praise of men will find it hard indeed to confess his sense of sin and need of pardon by coming to Christ for cleansing. Yes, he will find it hard to step out of the ranks of the self-righteous and come to Jesus that he may have life.

What can give a man the necessary courage? Love for God. He who, having a good and honest heart, rejoices in the power, love, and purity of God, as revealed in the Gospel, believes, and, believing, loves the God of love, and seeks to please him above all others. He who loves to please God WILLS to do his pleasure and seeks to know more of him through Jesus Christ, our Lord. That is the way to believe.

But you watch your unbeliever, and you will find that he is priding himself in something that God condemns. He does not delight in the virtues of God, neither does he seek to please him, but rather to put him out of mind. The qualities he delights in are those that appeal to worldly men. I have heard men boast of their bad tempers, of the violence of some of their fits of anger, of their experience in the ways of corruption, and even of dishonest deeds which they have shrewdly done. Such men do not welcome the idea of God.

What is the cause of unbelief? The love of sin rather than righteousness,—of men rather than God.

Middle Iowa District Meeting.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

THE Prairie City church of Middle Iowa lies just east of Des Moines, and is one of the isolated churches of the District. It has a membership of about 50, presided over by Bro. W. I. Buckingham, and stands among the first in the Brotherhood in missionary activity for congregational effort, as well as missions abroad. The neighborhood, made up of three denominations, enjoys each other's confidence in such a way that they seek not to work against each other, but for each other's welfare.

The task of caring for a District Meeting is no small labor of love, but as such they took it up and did their part well. Every one, within easy reach of the church, entertained, and was glad to do so. On Tuesday noon about a hundred arrived, and worship and business for the King began at once.

Tuesday afternoon the elders, in council, transacted their business in a very commendable spirit. The welfare of the church, from the angle of their office, was the constant watchword of the session.

Tuesday evening Bro. Virgil C. Finnell gave a strong and pointed Temperance address, followed by Brethren C. B. Rowe and Frank Wheeler on Child Rescue work. The uplift was splendid, and every member was deeply impressed.

Wednesday morning, promptly at eight o'clock, District Meeting convened and was organized by appointing Bro. W. E. West as Moderator, Bro. Virgil C. Finnell, Reading Clerk, and Bro. A. M. Stine, Writing Clerk. Middle Iowa belongs to that class that changes Moderator every year, but as for the other officers, if a brother has shown himself efficient, he can succeed himself. This accounts for the reason that Bro. Stine has served as Writing Clerk for a number of years in succession.

Business and all reports were in printed form and the work of the meeting went forward in a good spirit the whole day through. There were no queries for Annual Meeting. Last winter the District tried a Sunday-school Institute for all the workers, and the results were so good that the Institute is now made an annual affair. Sister Marie Jasper, who is Sunday-school Secretary for the next three years, is, together with Ella Royer and Robert Bentall, a committee to make succeeding sessions still more helpful. Bro. E. C. Trostle was reappointed on the Mission Board, and Brethren D. W. Wise and A. M. Stine are to fill the vacancies of Bro. J. W. Brubaker and Bro. Casteel, who moved out of the District. Bro. W. I. Buckingham was placed on the Ministerial Committee. Bro. G. E. Goughnour was appointed trustee for the Old People's Home; Bro. Virgil C. Finnell was reappointed on the Temperance Committee, while Bro. D. W. Wise is taking Bro. S. B. Miller's place, made vacant through resignation on the same Committee. Bro. C. H. Eth was reappointed on Child Rescue work and Bro. F. H. Wheeler became a new member owing to Bro. S. B. Miller's resignation. Bro. Miller is still working on three committees for the District. Bro. H. B. Sipling was reappointed on the Auditing Committee.

Bro. I. W. Buckingham was elected a member of the Standing Committee for 1912, with Bro. W. E. West as alternate.

The Deep River church was ordered disorganized, the churchhouse being left for the community to use for funerals. This called forth some sad reflections. How hard our departed Bro. Hopwood labored to build up the cause there! The District followed his efforts, but failed. Yet, no matter how good the reason for disorganization, it is a sad comment on the progress of Christianity anywhere, when a church must be disorganized.

The meeting also provided for the appointment of a missionary and educational secretary, to be announced later, and adopted a splendid plan for helping to train missionaries for the foreign field.

With an abundance of good song leaders, Middle Iowa has splendid singing at her meetings. Whenever a ballot was being counted, the congregation sang. This year "Kingdom Songs" was used, and nearly every song in the book was sung during the session. The meeting adjourned to convene in the Brooklyn congregation next year. Bro. H. C. N. Coffman, of Southern Iowa, led the closing services.

Wednesday evening, under the supervision of Bro. Eikenberry, a missionary meeting was held. There was a full house, and the best of interest. The collection was over $220, half for the District and half for General Mission Work. But, best of all, three came out on the Lord's side, in response to a worldwide missionary appeal. They have joined the army of the Lord, valiantly to fight his battles.

Thursday was given to Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, both spirited, and helpful to every one present. These meetings are a feast to the soul, a joy to the Lord, a blessing to every one!

The spirit of revival being so marked in the community, Bro. Moses Deardorff remained over Sunday and continued the meetings for the Prairie City church. The writer's labors in the congregation for the two weeks including the District Meeting, was enjoyable and a blessing to himself, as he tried to be a blessing to every home.

Sept. 30.

THE KESLER-HINDS DEBATE.

Sept. 19 an earnest discussion began at Laketon, Tex., which continued for six days. The following propositions were discussed in a manner which showed that each debater was earnestly defending the proposition he affirmed:

Proposition I.—The Church of the Brethren, of which I am a member, is scriptural in origin, doctrine and practice.—B. E. Kesler affirms; J. T. Hinds denies.

Proposition II.—The Church of Christ, of which I am a member, is scriptural in origin, doctrine and practice.—J. T. Hinds affirms; B. E. Kesler denies.

As the discussion has been reported, and will come out in book form, in due time, it is unnecessary to give any lengthy or detailed account of it in the Gospel Messenger, further than to say that there was no lack of harmony among the moderators of the discussion; no contentions among the debaters, nor between the disputants, outside of their propositions. The best of feeling seemed to prevail all through the discussion.

The Brethren's doctrine was well presented to the public, and ably defended under severe criticism. The disputants deported themselves courteously, and manifested, by their zeal and ardor, that each felt he was in the right and his opponent in the wrong.

According to previous arrangements, Bro. Kesler was to have five days of four and one-half hour speeches each day, in which to present the faith and practice of the Brethren, and Mr. Hinds was to have three days to present the doctrine of the Church of Christ.

After the first two days were ended it was ascertained that the reporter could not remain longer than the 24th, or the end of six days. Hence it was necessary to rearrange the time and condense the work to some extent.

The discussion was held in a large tent, recently purchased. The people sat on plank seats, without backs, for two hours at a session, with but a few minutes' rest at the end of the first hour, while standing to sing. This showed their interest to bear the discussion. The attendance was good, considering the busy season. The weather was delightful. W. P. Bossermah.

McPHERSON, KANSAS.

McPherson College began her twenty-fourth year's work on Tuesday morning, Sept. 12. Bro. John A. Clemmer, A. M., Ph. D., the new president, delivered the opening address to a crowded chapel of students and friends. After this splendid address, the work of enrolling was at once begun, and the college machinery was soon running again. The enrollment is now above the 200 mark, and as still others are enrolling, the outlook is very good.

The trustees and management are untiring in their endeavor to make the college a credit to the church, and one of the strongest educational institutions in the State. An exceptionally large faculty of scholarly Christian men and women, eager to render their best service, will do their part to make this a banner year in the history of the school. A Bible work the department will give five courses throughout the year. Arrangements are being made for a special Bible Institute sometime in January. Definite announcement will be made in due time.

We note that among the student body are eleven ministers, who are sacrificing in order to prepare for more efficient work. This is always commendable, and others ought to do likewise.

The college is always glad for visits from her friends, as they pass through the city. J. J. Yoder.

McPherson, Kans., Sept. 29.

FORT WORTH, TEX.

We had the first meeting at this place in our house Sept. 17. Our elder, Bro. K. G. Temison, of Manvel, Tex., preached two stirring sermons. Good seed was sown to a large audience. The Baptists showed due courtesy by dismissing their meeting and attending ours. Our house was moved from Saginaw. We now have a property worth about $1,000. We have changed the name of our church to Fort Worth. We will begin a series of meetings Dec. 1 at 7: 30 P. M. Ed. J. A. Miller, of Manvel, Tex., is to conduct the services. Our love feast will be held Dec. 16. Strangers can find the church by taking a stockyard street car and transferring to Fostepso Heights car, then get off where it leaves the main street and walk two blocks north and one west. You can see the house when you get off the car. Remember to ask for a transfer when you pay your fare. Any who want information should write to S. F. Wine, 1009 Edwards St. Fort Worth, Tex., who may be thus addressed until Dec. 1. After that date the address will be R. D. 6, Fort Worth, R. D. 2, Erwin, Tex., Sept. 27. C. C. Derrick.

THE ROUND TABLE

What Is Our Life?

BY J. H. MILLER.

LIFE can be compared to a vapor. A vapor comes from the earth. It rises until it forms a cloud, and then pours out the rain until it comes back to the earth again. So it is with man. "Dust thou art, and unto dust thou shalt return." There are two great powers in the world,—one draws up, the other down. The sun has power to draw vegetation upward, as well as the mist that comes from the ground. The law of gravitation draws things downward. Christ, our spiritual sun, will draw man upward, but sin draws him downward. "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up." Christ was nailed to the cross. We must look up to see Christ. "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto me."

Christ is the great power to draw us to heaven, if we are only willing to follow his mandates. The devil has a power to draw, but he draws downward. "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell." Her wickedness brought her down to hell, and delivered them unto chains of darkness, to be reserved unto judgment. Notice, how the angels that sinned were cast down to hell. Sin was the cause of their downward tendency.

There is much to be learned from the vapor. Let wisdom speak! Christ came down from heaven, not because he had sinned, but to help men,—to raise them up. We should seek that wisdom which is from above. That wisdom "is first pure, then peaceable, gentle, and easy to be entreated, full of mercy and good fruits, without partiality, and without hypocrisy" (James 3: 17). Wherever there is bitter envying and strife, that wisdom comes from beneath. It is earthly, sensual, and devilish.

The rain is drawn up from the earth by the power of the sun; so Christ draws us up to him by the power of his Word. Good things come from God. "Every good gift and every perfect gift is from above, and cometh down from the Father of lights." The rain and snow are good gifts. So was the manna that fell from heaven to feed the children of Israel. But it had a drawing power. God sends us spiritual blessings,—all to draw us closer to him. They come daily. All the blessings we receive from God answer the purpose for the time being. The best gift we can obtain, however, is eternal life,—a home for the soul. No fog or vapor is there. It will be a reality. Jesus went up from the Mount of Olives to draw all the righteous ones to him.

Friendliness Toward Strangers.

BY LAURA GWIN.

THE other Sunday evening a sister and I, walking to church, passed a corner where some young people were holding a street meeting. At first we stopped on the opposite side of the street and listened to the singing; then we decided to cross over, for a little while, as we had about fifteen minutes to spare.

As soon as we got there a young man came and shook hands with us, saying they were glad to have us join them. When they started to sing again we were offered a book, and when we handed it back, expressing our regret at having to go, he thanked us for our presence.

Did that make any impression on us? As we walked on, we spoke very highly of the singing and the talks we had heard, and of the reverent manner of the workers, and were especially enthusiastic about the hearty welcome we had received. Then we got to wondering if other people are not very much like us in that respect,—in liking to be made feel they are wanted. We wonder if our members would not sometimes make a deeper impression upon strangers, as to the genuineness of their Christianity, if they were real friendly.

Again we wondered if we,—especially where there are a good many of our own members,—are as neighborly with outsiders as we should be. We thought of Christ when he dined with the Pharisees and the publicans, how he mingled with all classes of people, always intent upon helping them, and he never lost sight of this aim. Though a Pharisee gave the dinner, Christ was the real host. It was he who controlled the atmosphere. With the same purpose in mind we, too, may safely mingle with the worldly people, provided we ourselves are a live-wire; otherwise let us keep ourselves hid, not so much because of the effect they are going to have on us, as for the harm we will do by lowering the standard of Christ. "Think on these things."

Experimental Religion.

BY CALEB ALTIS.

EXPERIMENTAL religion is something that satisfies men. The religion of Jesus Christ ought to be experimental, and it should also satisfy the deepest longing of the soul. It always satisfies God.

Religion, as is often stated, may not even resemble Christianity. Christianity is religion, but religion is not always Christianity. Religion, properly defined, is a system of faith and practice. It may mean anything that any one believes in, and practices. It may apply to any religion, even to one whose terms do not include the name of the true and living God.

The religion of Jesus Christ, as set forth in the New Testament, is a system of faith and practice as well as other religions, but it is a peculiar system, and embraces all the teachings of the New Testament. Any religion that fails to do this is not true Christianity. True Christianity is governed by the influence of the Holy Spirit. "And when he is come, he will reprove the world of sin, and of righteousness, and of judgment" (John 16: 8).

Religion may be of a zealous sort, and yet not be governed by the Holy Spirit. There is such a thing as "having a zeal without knowledge." We should "try the spirits to see whether they are of God." "Prove all things and hold fast to that which is good." We should be careful, for some religions set aside the fundamental principles of Christianity. Christianity is experimental religion, for it experiences and feels the Divine influence in every act of its being. "It will lead us into all truth."

Ironing Day.

BY ETTA CLINE.

IRONING day is often a day of much pleasure to me. I can be about my household duties, perform them properly, and yet have my mind entirely free from the work itself. I can thus take advantage of the opportunity to study God's Word. I lay my Bible open before me on the ironing board. I can glance at it occasionally, meditate upon it and commit several verses to memory. In this way I get many precious thoughts that are helpful to me in times of the hardest battles. I get strengthening truths that serve as a staff to lean upon.

It is one thing to know the truth, and another to accept it. But how can we accept it when we know it not? Here is the trouble with many of God's people today. They neglect to study the Word of God. May we all seek the truth, and search more diligently for the light that is from above! There is nothing more helpful to us in this life, or in the life to come, than a knowledge of God's Word. In this life it helps us to bear our cross, and to meet the conflicts which are daily upon us.

Loyalty to an Ideal.

BY FRANK ELLENBERGER.

AN ideal, in order to be an ideal in the truest sense of the word, must be characterized by that which signifies the highest accomplishments possible,—such as purity and uprightness.

One can set his standards too high. An ideal which has been reached was set too low at the beginning. By loyalty to an ideal, a distinct resemblance to that ideal is brought about in the character of the one who seeks to reach it. Its imprint is forever to be seen upon the life of its follower.

It has been said, "Our lives are what we make them," or, in other words, the success of our life depends upon the standard of our ideals. Each one of us has perfect liberty in choosing our ideals, and as much depends upon our choice as upon our loyalty to it when once chosen.

The secret of the success of many great men is the determination and patience they manifest toward their aim in life, which is nothing more than real loyalty to their ideals.

Peru, Nebr.

THE way to abolish war is to put a premium on peace by pensioning schoolteachers and ministers, and letting warriors sweat. This is but reasonable; man's benefactors deserve more credit than his destroyers. There are but few sensible soldiers who do not sooner or later abominate war.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

The Danger and Uses of Money.

Prov. 14: 24; 1 Tim. 6: 17-19.

For Sunday Evening, October 15, 1911.

I. Riches—Whence?—(1) "It is God that giveth the power to get wealth" (Deut. 8: 18). And to God the wealthy man must account. (2) "To whom God hath given riches and wealth" (Eccles. 5: 19).

II. Danger Signals.—(1) "When thy herds and thy flocks multiply, and thine heart be lifted up" (Deut. 8: 13, 14; Psa. 62: 10). (2) "A rich man shall hardly enter" (Matt. 19: 23). He has much to struggle with (Mark 4: 19). (3) "Take thine ease, eat, drink," etc. (Luke 12: 19). This man forgot that his farms and barns,—every thing he had belonged to God (1 Tim. 6: 17-19; Jas. 5: 3).

III. Uses of.—(1) "Bring me an offering" (Ex. 25: 2); "An offering unto the Lord" (Ex. 35; 5; 2 Sam. 8: 11). (2) "Give" (Matt. 5: 42; Acts 20: 3). It is good to be in the habit of giving. (3) "With such sacrifice God is well pleased" (Heb. 13: 6; Rom. 12: 13). God is pleased with the offering of prayer and praise; but he is especially pleased with the religion which leads us to do good.

IV. The True Riches (Matt. 5: 8; 8: 10; 13: 45, 46; Luke 10: 42; John 1: 45; Philpp. 3: 8).

Note.—(1) Money is good. The love of it is a terrible evil. (2) "Riches are like manure, only good when spread abroad."—Lord Bacon. (3) An aged couple fifty years ago bought a perpetual scholarship in a college. The increase of their gift has paid the tuition of sixteen students who otherwise might not have been able to prepare for the positions they now hold in the church.

PRAYER MEETING

We Live to Serve.

Gal. 6: 1-10.

For Week Beginning Oct. 15, 1911.

1. Our Opportunities.—To a child of God there are always opportunities for service. Where there is a hand to help, there is a heart to be helped. Where there is a tongue to soothe, there is some poor soul that awaits the soothing. "The poor ye have always with you," and the same is true of the afflicted, the sorrowing, the weary and the heavy laden. Many an open door awaits our coming. Entering with the Master's message, we shall be welcomed as the Master's friend (Rom. 12: 10, 13, 18, 20, 21).

2. Serving by Burden Bearing.—"Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." Failing to bear the burdens we fail to fulfill the law, and so we miss whatever of personal blessing might come to us. Our failure leaves two unblessed,—the giver and the recipient (Eph. 4: 31, 32).

3. Help Others and Be Helped in Return.—Verse 6 impresses the thought that good things should be distributed. The investment of good will, of kindness, of sympathy, will yield golden returns. We miss the harvest by failing to sow bountifully. Blessing is the reward of effort (James 3: 17, 18).

4. We Reap as We Sow.—Verse 7 emphasizes the thought that we reap the same kind of grain we sow, though in greater proportion. A few bushels only will sow a field, but a bountiful harvest fills our bins to overflowing. Eternal life comes to us through our sowing unto the Spirit. That is the one thing for which we have come to the Kingdom,—to sow to the Spirit (2 Cor. 9: 6).

5. Weary Hours Lead to a Glorious Fruition.—God's reward for our effort is sure.—"reserved in heaven for you." We can not do the work and lose the reward. God's gracious promises are sufficient for our day and trial. His strong arm is able to turn back the things that hinder and discourage (Rom. 8: 31-39).

HOME AND FAMILY

Grumbletown.

Folks who live in Grumbletown
Show a scowl and wear a frown,
Never deign to give a smile,
Mumble, grumble all the while.

Winds are always hot or cold,
Making Grumble people scold;
Fretting, fuming, they complain
If it shine or if it rain.

All their tempers are awry,
Can not please 'em if you try;
Nothing right, and all things wrong—
That's the burden of their song.

If you live there, don't you stay!
Pack your goods and move away;
Look around—on every hand
Shines the happy Laughter Land!

The Second Mile.

BY EDNA GARST.

"Whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain" (Matt. 5: 41).

EXAMPLE is better than precept, and no command is as effective when given by one who himself does not adhere to it, as when given by one whose life conforms to its principle.

Christ was one who taught more by example than by theory. All through his beautiful life we have examples of his going the second mile.

Let us look at one scene of his earthly life,—that of the multitude which had followed Christ for three days. It is evening; they are hungry. It soon will be dark, and the place is a desert. The disciples advise Jesus to send them home for food,—that, under the circumstances, would seem to us the kindest thing to do.

But not so to the Great Heart of our Savior. He is moved with compassion on them, for are they not weary and hungry? Might they not faint on the way? Then comes the miracle of the loaves and fishes. The people are fed, and sent on their way rejoicing in the goodness of their Great Benefactor,—one who was and is the very personification of love.

In this example of the Christ-life do we not see the "something more"? Mere compulsion could never have dictated such a deed of love as this.

There is still another beautiful picture of the second mile, in which Jesus is the central figure. Let us look at it. A poor, palsied villager is brought to Christ, carried by four fellow-men. Because of the press of people, surrounding the Great Healer, they are compelled to tear away the roof and let the poor sufferer down to the Healer. They request the Great Physician to heal him.

Had Christ granted that alone, how thankful would they have been that their comrade was himself again! But the same great love that actuated the whole of Christ's earthly ministry said, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."

Such was the unexpected and unsought addition of a heart that could never go far enough! How little they thought or even dreamed of this! They were going to compel Christ by their persistence to go the first mile. Jesus did that; then forgave the man his sins. He went more than double the distance.

Do we see the principle involved? It is simply this: In life there is a certain distance we must go; there is a certain limit we must reach in order to live. The very laws of nature, the structure of our bodies, the call of duty, the demands of society compel us to go so far. But life,—not mere existence,—life in all its sweetness, in all its fulness,—life with the breath of liberty on it, begins when we go beyond the compulsory limit.

Take, for instance, a woman hired to care for a child. She is conscientious in the discharge of every duty. The child's physical well-being is guarded carefully. Possibly her special training would enable her to care for it even better than the mother could, without that training. But the nurse's work is not a free, loving, and ardent service.

How different, in this aspect, is the service of the mother! Compelled by the laws of nature and by duty, she goes the first mile,—so does the nurse,—but it is the mother who trods on and on, past the mile-posts and never sees them. To her, with a heart overflowing with love for her precious child, the second mile is far sweeter than the first.

Service impelled by love is richer in joy than that rendered because of duty only. Love leads the mother to a thousand little services that the call of duty never could demand. She lives for her child,—she could die for it,—and that is not conscience, it is pure love. Love is always the secret of the second mile.

There are some persons in the teaching profession who find no joy in their schoolroom. Law and duty impel the teachers to know and to teach what is in the textbook. Unless one has a grasp of things beyond that, there is not that feeling of security which makes teaching a joy. The work is drudgery in its fullest sense, if not rendered through a desire to help and benefit the lives in their care. What a great pity that so many go the first mile and have not the heart to go a little farther! It is beyond the first mile that a feast for the intellect and imagination awaits us, as teachers. Then we can thank God that we live. It is when we can do this that joy flows like a tide into the soul.

It is the same in our Christian lives. To realize a perfect fullness of joy and happiness and peace of heart, one must go beyond what is demanded.

Without feeding on the Word of God, without prayer; without loving service, one can not be a Christian. It is the mile that we are compelled to go. It is in the overplus of love for God's Word; it is when prayer becomes as natural as breathing; it is when we desire passionately to serve, that joy and gladness begin. Have you begun to experience that gladness,—the gladness of the second mile? Press on. Give thy whole heart to things. Do a little more than is expected of you.

There is no compulsory measurements as to how much will save. Love knows no limit. Love gave its best,—went to the uttermost in Jesus! And you and I are followers of him.

Gambling.

BY ANDREW M. DIXON.

SATAN, the enemy of our souls, is ever putting inducements into the hearts of wicked men to lure children into sin. Here, in our metropolis, children practice almost every known vice. Among these vices are swearing, smoking, stealing, and gambling.

The companies which manufacture cigarettes are at present putting pictures in each box that is sold. These pictures represent flags of different nations; rulers of the world; famous athletes and other attractive things which appeal to the child. The boy, of course, is eager to obtain these things, for this is the age when curiosities appeal to him. Satan is ever alert to this. The child, in his eagerness to obtain pictures, will buy cigarettes; therefore he will begin to smoke. If he does not have money to buy cigarettes, he may steal.

These things he may do, but there is another thing that I have seen him do,—and any person familiar with a city life will bear me out,—and that is gamble.

While passing through one of our busy city streets, your eyes may be attracted to a group of boys, ranging from seven to fourteen years old. If you are not close to them you may think that they are partaking of some innocent juvenile game, but on drawing closer you will notice that the language used is not in accordance with Christian grace. You ask yourself the question, "What are they doing?"

Getting into their midst, you will find out that they are gambling.

"Children gambling?"

"Why, yes."

This is not an unfamiliar sight in our city. "But what are they gambling for?"

The answer is, "Cigarette pictures."

"Surely there is no harm in that."

No harm, my dear friends? There is all the harm in the world. Cigarette pictures never hurt any one, but that little game, which is known as "craps," is one of the most dangerous gambling devices ever originated. Many a young man has gone to a Christless grave through its demoralizing results. In my own experience I have seen bright, honest, virtuous young men ruined. Why was it? Nothing more than they began gambling with cigarette pictures.

Gambling is a handmaiden sin of drinking, swearing, smoking, stealing. Where you find one, you find the other. It is a link in the long chain of vice which Satan uses to bind people. I make an appeal to parents. Are your children gambling for what you may term innocent pleasure? If so the germ of ruin, degradation, and damnation has started. I have the testimonies of gamblers and here they are: "I wish I had never begun." "I wish I could quit." And so on. Where did it begin? With nothing more than innocent cigarette pictures.

Faith-Healing.

BY EZRA FLORY.

As soon as men get away from revealed Truth, though still constrained to hold to a faith, they begin to move in irregular orbits, furnishing singular but not attractive examples of the capabilities of the human soul to accept delusions. There are good people who, in their zeal over the question of faith-healing, leave the will of God out of the question. They seem to think that God is compelled to answer their prayers in every case, if they only have faith, regardless of the views of Divine Providence. And that is not all, but they will refuse all human assistance, expecting a miracle, pure and simple, to be performed. They overlook the fact that, in other affairs of life, works are joined to prayers. We are not to pray that a just cause may be successful, and then wait with idle hands for the outcome. In business we work for success, as well as we pray, and in averting any disaster, we do the same. We pray, "Give us our daily bread," but who would be so foolish as to sit down and expect the manna to fall from heaven?

G. Campbell Morgan said, "I am sometimes asked if I believe in faith-healing and I always say absolutely, 'No.' I believe in Divine healing, which is a very different matter. When I am ill, I will get the best medical skill I can, and thank God for it every time, perfectly sure that, under certain conditions and at certain points, for certain reasons, God can heal me without medical skill if he wills to do it. What I object to, in the nonsense talk of today, is that God must heal me if I want it, whether he wills or not."

Amanda Smith, the colored evangelist, once gave this pertinent incident that occurred while she was in a home where both the husband and the wife were firm believers in "faith-healing": One morning the husband came down-stairs, complaining of deafness and pain in his ears. They followed the prescribed course without his securing relief. Finally the wife prevailed upon him to consult a physician, that the nature of the trouble might at least be known. He soon came back smiling and happy, with the joyful news that the pain was gone and his hearing restored, and then told them in explanation, "The doctor said the wax was pretty hard, but he could remove it without any trouble." From this Amanda drew the lesson that some people were even expecting the Lord to clean their ears.

Do You Pray?

NONE can proceed well in this life without prayer to the Almighty Father. Whoever dwells in the secret place of the Most High shall abide under the shadow of the Almighty. How much parents love to have their children ask good of them. Christ said, "If ye, being sinful, know how to give good unto your children, how much more will your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him! I say unto you, Ask, and ye shall receive; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you! for, everyone that asketh, receiveth; and he that seeketh, findeth; and to him that knocketh, the door is opened!" Do you pray? When God moves your heart to pray, it is the token that his Spirit would lead you into closest fellowship with himself. Grieve not your heavenly Guest, for he can seal you into eternal life!

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

Bro. P. R. Keltner, of Rockford, Ill., called at the Messenger sanctum a few days ago.

Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Pleasant Hill, Ohio, is conducting a revival meeting in Washington, D. C.

Washington, the new District of the great Northwest, is calling for the Annual Meeting in 1913.

At a recent members' meeting at Mount Morris, Ill., Bro. M. W. Emmert was chosen elder in charge.

Bro. W. I. Buckingham has been chosen to represent Middle Iowa on the Standing Committee at the York Conference.

Bro. Archy Van Dyke, who has been getting his mail at Holmes, Nebr., should now be addressed at Grand Junction, Colo.

Bro. H. A. Stahl held a series of meetings at Bethel Chapel, Maple Grove congregation, Md., and five souls were born into the kingdom.

There was some fruitful evangelistic work done by Bro. C. H. Brown at Thomas, Okla. His efforts resulted in ten accessions to the church.

Work has been commenced on the new meetinghouse at Slifer, Iowa, and before the close of the year the building will doubtless be ready for services.

Some very effectual evangelistic work was done in Portland, Ind., by Bro. J. W. Norris. Thirteen put on Christ in baptism and were added to the church.

Bro. A. D. Sollenberger, of Beatrice, Nebr., closed a series of meetings in Dallas Center, Iowa, with five accessions,—four baptized and one returned to the fold.

At the late District Meeting of Washington, held at North Yakima, Bro. M. F. Woods was chosen to represent the State on the Standing Committee of 1912.

Bro. I. B. Trout is in the South English church this week, attending the Sunday-school, Ministerial, Christian Workers' and District Meetings of Southern Iowa.

As the full results of Bro. J. E. Jarboe's evangelistic efforts in the White Rock congregation, Kans., nine came out on the Lord's side, and were numbered with the believers.

In September Bro. A. S. Thomas devoted two weeks to evangelistic work in the Crummet Run church, Pendleton County, W. Va., and had the pleasure of seeing six enter the fold.

In a former issue we stated that the new church at Akron, Ohio, would cost $12,000. This, we are informed, was misleading, as the contract for the building has been let for less than $7,000.

Bro. P. R. Keltner writes us that the revival at Rockford, this State, conducted by Bro. Paul Mohler, closed last Sunday with five baptized. He says the meeting was a good one in every way, and will prove helpful to the work in that city.

At the revival in the Middle River congregation, Va., conducted by Bro. B. B. Garber, eleven made the good confession and were inducted into the church. One was reclaimed.

Bro. Andrew Hutchison is holding a series of meetings at Tacoma, Wash. He will soon reach the Pacific Slope, and by the end of the year hopes to be at Los Angeles, Cal.

Bro. C. W. Guthrie, after spending a few weeks in Chicago, has returned to his home in Los Angeles, Cal. He feels confident that the mild climate of the Pacific Slope will be better for his health.

Bro. B. E. Kesler, who, for the next twenty days, may be addressed at Mattison, Colo., says that there is a call for some one to conduct a class in singing at Miami, Texas, where he recently held his discussion.

Bro. W. D. Keller, who closes his work in Washington, D. C., the middle of November, has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Ashland church, Ohio, and will enter upon his duties the first of December.

Bro. D. L. Miller, after spending a few weeks in the Northwest, has returned to his home at Mount Morris, and on Thursday of this week is celebrating the seventieth anniversary of his earthly pilgrimage.

In the series of meetings at the Maple Spring church, Pa., Bro. D. M. Adams delivered sixteen addresses. Eight were added to the fold by confession and obedience, while one was restored to fellowship.

One of the home ministers, Bro. C. H. Steerman, held a series of meetings at the Shank church, Pa., and six persons applied for membership. Four of the number have received baptism, while two are to be baptized later.

After spending the summer in company with Bro. J. E. Miller and wife, visiting different places of interest in Europe, Bro. E. T. Keiser and wife returned to their home at Pomona, Cal., where they may now be addressed.

The public discussion at Laketon, Tex., between Bro. B. E. Kesler and Eld. J. T. Hinds, is said to have been a pleasant, though a very thorough affair. A reporter was employed, and the debate is to be published in book form.

Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., has opened with a fine attendance for the fall term. Next week Bro. H. B. Brumbaugh, our corresponding editor, will tell us about some of the incidents connected with the opening of the school year.

With Bro. John A. Clement, the new president, delivering the address for the occasion, McPherson College, Kans., opened Sept. 12. The enrollment showed practically 200 students present, and among the number eleven ministers.

The Buena Vista congregation, Va., is increasing in numbers. During a series of meetings at the Arnold Valley house, a mission point, seventeen put on Christ in baptism. Two were reclaimed and others await the washing of regeneration.

The fine meetings at Meadow Mountain, W. Va., conducted by Bro. J. P. Harris, resulted in twenty-one putting on Christ in baptism, while four others are to be baptized later. The members here feel greatly encouraged over the outlook.

We have notice of the death of Bro. David B. Wolf, of Peru, Ind., which occurred Sept. 19. Bro. Wolf was in the ministry a number of years, and since 1888 served the church in the eldership. In 1895 he was placed in charge of the Santa Fe congregation, and proved to be a faithful and efficient shepherd.

Late reports indicate that the conditions in India have greatly improved. Rains have fallen in many of the drouth-stricken sections, and in all probability enough will be raised to supply the needs of the people. Some of our India correspondents will have something to say next week about the conditions and outlook.

Bro. S. Z. Smith, of Sidney, Ohio, aided the members of the Pine Creek congregation, Ill., in revival efforts, and five made the good confession. Four received baptism and one awaits the rite.

Bro. Lemuel Hillery, of Goshen, Ind., writes us that while still among the living, he is a constant sufferer. He seldom preaches, but feels that his work is practically finished, and he is now waiting for the boatman to come and carry him to the other shore.

Bro. J. E. Metzger, our Field Agent, writing us from Grottoes, Va., says that he had a very pleasant, as well as profitable trip in that State, visiting among the congregations of the valley. He is in Indiana this week, and is planning to attend the three District Meetings to be held in that State.

Bro. W. Q. Calvert, late of Inglewood, Cal., having spent most of his time since the St. Joseph Conference in Iowa, Illinois and Ohio, accompanied by his wife, has returned to California and located at Holtville, a point about 225 miles southeast of Los Angeles, where he may hereafter be addressed.

We have several articles on the Rebaptism question, and observe that there is an inclination on the part of writers to reply to each other, and in this way give the exchange of views through our columns the appearance of controversy. We suggest that writers steer clear of the controversy feature as much as possible. This they can do and at the same time not weaken in the least the force of the arguments they may see proper to offer in support of their views. So far as practicable we shall insist on the change of views being conducted on a higher Christian plane, and to be kept entirely free from the spirit of controversy.

William J. Bryan stated a startling fact when he said: "The saloon is the bureau of information for every sort of crime. It is the first place the policeman looks for crime, and the last place he would go to look for virtue." He might have further added, that the saloon is the headquarters for criminals of every class and order. It is the headquarters for murderers, thieves and bank robbers. Criminals meet there, to lay their plans, and when one is caught he is generally located in a saloon. One who reads the police news in our city dailies can not help noticing to what an alarming extent the saloon figures in the crimes and disturbances that disgrace the country.

The regular time for the Annual Meeting for 1912 would be May 28, but as this is rather early for the best of weather in the East, it has now been decided, by consent of the Standing Committee, to move the time up to the first Tuesday in June. It was first thought best to move the date up to the second Tuesday of the month, and to this the Standing Committee consented, but on examining the Minutes of 1902, Art. 1, it was observed that the Harrisonburg Conference had decided that the meeting could not be held at a later date than the first Tuesday in June. Not wishing to disrespect the decision of 1902, the Committee of Arrangements wishes us to announce for them that the Annual Conference for 1912 will convene at York, Pa., on the morning of June 4, and that the Standing Committee will meet on Thursday, May 30.

A number of our churches are petitioning President Taft to throw his influence against any member of his cabinet sitting with the second International Brewers' Congress that convenes in Chicago this month. The Bethany Brethren Mission, Philadelphia, forwards a petition, to that effect, of considerable length. It is urged that the Chief Executive should guard the reputation of our Republic along moral lines, and this can not be done when the administration is shown to be in active sympathy with the Brewers' interests. Like the Independent, we think that Mr. Wilson did not have to accept the invitation to act as honorary president of the Congress, and in view of the fact that more than one-half of the thinking men and women of this country are opposed to the liquor business, members of the President's Cabinet should have declined to take an active part in the Congress.

It is said that the District Meeting, held at Thomas, Okla., made a good impression on the people of the place. This speaks volumes for the members in attendance, as well as for those who took an active part in the deliberations. In some way all of our District gatherings ought to serve an important purpose in our evangelistic efforts. Unless we are careful, we may lose sight of this very essential feature.

Sister Sadie J. Miller writes us that she is to leave Seattle, Wash., Oct. 24, and that those wishing to reach her on, or just a few days before, that date, should address her at Seattle, in care of "Great Northern Steamship Company, Outgoing Steamship Inaba Maru, sailing Oct. 24." As previously stated, she sails from Seattle to China, and from there she goes to India, hoping to reach her field of labor by the end of the year.

The Action of the Late Conference on the Dress Question.

I wish to say a few words on the action of the late Conference on the report of the late Dress Committee; but not as a member of the committee, for the committee no longer exists; nor am I speaking from the standpoint of the committee's view of the subject. Not this at all. I wish to speak of the meaning of the Conference's action and its effect.

When the nature of the subject is considered,—how it has become incorporated into the interest of the whole Brotherhood, whether or not it is a great subject, fundamentally speaking; how it has been dealt with in the past, until about sixty-five decisions had accumulated on the Minutes on the subject; how an effort had been made at the Conference of 1909 to provide for a restatement of all former decisions on the subject, but without avail, further than to recommit the question into the hands of a new committee, the strength and faithfulness of the old committee notwithstanding; how the report was intended to supersede all former decisions on the subject, and do away with them,—when all these things are considered, the action of the Conference in the adoption of the report with such an overwhelming vote is only a little less than a marvel. It was the end of a long, prayerful effort in which many hearts joined. And God be praised for an ending so promising of good for the future, so indicative of closer union!

The approximate unanimity with which the report was accepted, indicates that it expresses the mind of the Brotherhood; it indicates also that the report embraces substantially the points of value in the old Minutes, that it is a restatement in view of present needs, as it was intended to be. These points are clearly evidenced by the action of the Conference.

The adoption of the report has been followed by a peaceful, hopeful tone of feeling, wide-spread throughout the Brotherhood. Almost all rejoice in what was done; almost all believe that the report, if wisely applied, will meet the needs of the church for years to come; almost all believe that the report takes the place of trouble, doing away with all spirit of division, since it is a compromise between radical extremes, pointing out, as it does, middle ground on which all can safely unite.

Now, since a quiet, hopeful feeling has been obtained in the church on the adoption of the report, it is wise, it seems to me, to let the matter rest for the present. Let the District Meetings consider the matter well before sending queries to the Conference, asking for changes in what we have. Take sufficient time to test the report before you petition for its amendment, or offer additional measures. The report is entitled to a fair trial. Then, if it proves insufficient for the churches' needs, it should be improved to meet them.

In all legislation the mentioning of one thing is to the exclusion of all else. For example, Noah was commanded to build an ark. That law could be kept by building only an ark. That was the thing mentioned, and that excluded everything else. This principle must apply in the interpretation of the decisions of Annual Meeting. The things named, not the things not named, must be adopted in practice, to be true to the teachings of the Conference. For instance, when the Conference says that plain bonnets and hoods shall be the headdress for the sisters, bonnets and hoods are the things named, and the naming of these as the headdress is to the exclusion of everything else as a headdress; and to be true to the teachings of the Conference, only bonnets and hoods can be worn.

Again, no law can be used to regulate things that it does not name, except in legislation on general principles. In such cases, things of a class may be provided for, if not in the letter of the law, in its spirit. Things cannot be read into laws that presume to legislate definitely, that presume to mention specifically their requirements.

Let these principles be used in applying the decisions of the Conference. If they are used in applying the late decision on dress, trouble will be avoided.

District and Ministerial Meetings of Washington.

It was our happy privilege to attend the first District and Ministerial Meetings of the new State District of Washington, held at North Yakima Sept. 21 and 22. Fifteen years ago, in company with wife and Bro. Geo. L. McDonaugh, we drove up and down the Yakima as far as Simmons. It was then a sagebrush desert, with an orchard and alfalfa field here and there interspersed, revealing what plenty of water and human energy would bring forth in the future. How little we then thought that a District Meeting would be held in the then desert-looking place. But the meeting has been held and it was among the best we ever attended.

Twelve churches were represented by nineteen delegates. All the elders, save one, attended the Elders' Meeting. Some of them traveled over three hundred miles by rail; while others drove eighty miles across a mountain range to attend the meeting. The zeal of these brethren is heartily commended to the consideration of our brethren in the Middle West. Not long since a District and Elders' Meeting was attended in that section, at which only half the elders of the District were present, and none of them had over a hundred miles to travel, to reach the place of meeting.

The meeting was organized with Eld. Amos Peters as Moderator; Eld. J. S. Secrist, Reading Clerk, and Eld. M. F. Woods, Writing Clerk. The Moderator, on taking the chair, called attention to the fact that this would be an historic meeting, the first held by the new State District. The work, he said, would be largely that of organization, and the greatest possible liberty would be given to all who desired to speak on questions coming before the Conference. A general exchange of opinions was urged, and all were invited to speak. A timekeeper was appointed, but his office proved to be a sinecure, and after a start was made, no attention was paid to the length of or the number of speeches made by individuals.

The first business of the meeting was the appointment of working committees. District Mission Board: Eld. D. B. Eby, Chairman; Eld. J. S. Secrist, Treasurer; Eld. M. F. Woods, Secretary. Temperance Committee: J. A. Eby, N. Stutzman, Eld. J. U. G. Stiverson. Bible School Committee: W. C. Lehman, A. D. Bowman, H. Neal. District Missionary and Sunday-school Secretary, J. Streeter.

Two queries were presented to the Conference. One was referred to the Mission Board and the other was respectfully returned to the church sending it.

A committee on apportionment was appointed, relieving the Mission Board of this kind of work. It was decided to raise two dollars per member for District Mission Work. As there are six hundred and twenty members in Washington, the Mission Board will have $1,240 for the year's work. This is a fine showing and should induce some of our eastern Districts to sit up and take notice.

Provision was made for holding Bible Schools in the different congregations, for the preaching of temperance and missionary sermons, and for the organization of local missionary committees in all the churches. In the important work of "Child Rescue" it was decided to cooperate with the District of Oregon, thus uniting the efforts of two States in this important mission.

It was decided to hold the next District Meeting at Wenatchee, beginning on Monday and closing on Saturday. Arrangements were made for the Elders' Missionary, District, Ministerial, Sunday-school, Christian Workers', Bible School, Sisters' Aid and Mothers' Meetings. It will be an interesting week, devoted to Christian work along lines of needed development. Our Washington Brethren are alive to the interests of the church and we are sure to make progress.

A unanimous call was made for the Annual Conference for 1913 and the District will be able to take care of the Meeting, if they get it.

Eld. M. F. Woods will represent the District at our coming Conference on the Standing Committee, with Eld. J. U. G. Stiverson as alternate.

The elders had a number of interesting sessions. They are men of action and have the cause at heart. Ten ordinations were provided for, thus nearly doubling the number of elders in the State. This is a commendable move. In many Districts the cause suffers for the lack of elders.

The District Meeting closed at noon the second day, and then came an interesting Ministerial and Missionary Meeting. No regular speakers had been appointed, and five to ten minute talks were the order of the day. Among the topics discussed were "Benefits to Be Derived from the Minister Properly Appearing in Public;" "What Constitutes a Good Sermon?" "How to Get Most Benefit Out of Family Worship?" "The Mission Board: Its Qualifications and Duties, and What Can I Do to Advance Mission Work?" The time was taken up promptly, and there was no lagging in the interest. It would be interesting to give a synopsis of the speeches made but space forbids. It was a blessed privilege to attend these meetings and they were much enjoyed. Our thanks are due to our Washington Brethren for their kindness. May they prosper and grow in favor with God and men, until they shall become a mighty power for good in the Great Northwest.

The Hard Cider Evil.

While this has proven a year of plenty in most parts of the United States, still the blessings that have come to some homes may prove a curse to them. We refer to the abundant apple crop. In some localities farmers could not give their apples away, and thousands of bushels have gone to waste. There were those, however, who hardly permitted an apple to escape their notice. They gathered them and made barrels of cider, which they now have stored away in their cool cellars. Hundreds are not through with cider making and, before the season is over, there will be thousands of barrels of cider in American cellars.

Now, there is nothing wrong about making cider, and even using it when fresh, or making vinegar of it, but this is not the purpose of most of the farmers who are barreling up their cider. The apple juice is kept until it reaches the condition known as "hard cider," a condition that renders it more dangerous as a drink than whiskey. This hard cider business has made drunkards of thousands of farmer boys, and to some extent has ruined boys who were connected with the Brethren church. To save the apples, some members of the church, in years gone by, made their apples into cider, stored it in their cellars until it became hard, only to realize later that their boys had taken a liking for it, and were on the road that leads to the drunkard's grave.

We have a pathetic letter from a sister, in which she calls our attention to the evils of the hard cider business in her community. She says that she knows of those engaged in temperance work who are storing cider away in their cellars. She also mentions boys who have been ruined by the intoxicating beverage. If it is the intention of the Brethren to make vinegar of their cider, or to make a legitimate use of it otherwise, then it is none of the church's concern, but if it is their purpose to keep it until it becomes hard, use it in their families, treat visitors with it, or sell it to those who deal in that kind of a drink, then it becomes the duty of the church to look after these offending members the same as she would call to account members for the distilling, using and selling of whiskey.

In this article we do not refer to fresh cider, to sweet cider, or to that which may have been canned and preserved in its unfermented state, as we can and preserve grape juice, but we refer to hard cider, a beverage that is known to be intoxicating, and not only makes men and boys drunk, but helps to create an appetite for strong drink. If we want to make a temperance country of this, we must put an end to the hard cider business.

Disposing of Jewelry.

In a former issue we suggested that members having jewelry dispose of it in the open market and turn the money thus received over to some mission or charitable cause. A correspondent in West Virginia thinks that if it is wrong to wear jewelry, it would also be wrong to sell it to some one else to wear. In a sense this may be right, and in another it may be as one looks at it, and still there is a limit. Some one, while growing a large tobacco crop, may become convinced that Christians should not raise tobacco. Under the circumstances we would expect the man to sell his crop and not raise any more tobacco. We should not care to reason thus about whiskey, for it is too dangerous for anyone to trifle with. The only safe place for the contents of a whiskey barrel is the gutter. As for jewelry, the gold and silver it contains may be employed for useful purposes. Firms engaged in the jewelry business know how to dispose of discarded ornaments, and are generally willing to pay full value for the metal they contain. Christians, who wish to get rid of their jewelry, need have no scruples about disposing of it to a firm dealing in that class of goods. It will do less harm in the jewelry store than in the homes of weak Christians. Our people are supposed not to wear jewelry, and we were we to undertake to collect all they have about their person and in their homes, we should want nothing smaller than a bushel basket. We should be only too glad to dispose of the contents of the well-filled basket to some dealer in jewelry, and then turn the money over to the World-wide Mission Fund. We suggest a movement along this line. This means getting rid of gold breastpins, rings and other articles, worn merely for ornamentation. The rule would include those little gold watches, worn by some of our sisters, just to be seen. We are not now writing about those kept in pockets, and carried solely as articles of utility, for that is another question, and yet the gold case does not render the watch any more reliable, even when carried in the pockets. But let there be a clean sweep of this jewelry-wearing among our members. The inward adorning is far better in the sight of God, as well as in the sight of sensible men and good-thinking women.

The Hard-Working Preacher.

A correspondent, who is fully responsible for what he says, writes us about an earnest minister, who is located on a very small tract of land, among the mountains of Virginia. He lives in a small house, has a delicate wife and seven children, is less than forty-five years old, blind in one eye, has a cataract on the other, can hardly see to read, and works almost every day, rain or shine, to support his family; must walk from three to five miles daily, to and from his work, and has walked fourteen miles and done a day's work. A few years ago he had a good position, but requirements made it necessary for him to neglect his preaching services. This he did not think was the proper thing for a preacher to do, so he now lives on the one acre that he calls his home, does the best he can for his family, and trusts God for the rest. He frequently rises very early on Sunday morning and walks fourteen miles to his place of preaching at 11 A. M. He is said to be happy and cheerful, believing that he can best serve his Master while in this state of mind. His library is scant, and he would appreciate good books. There are those, perhaps, who would be glad to help him with books and in other ways. He may be addressed, P. E. Ginger, Warm Springs, Va. We have among us a few score of preachers who, after reading the above, may feel less disposed to continue complaining, simply because they have to work hard all week, then ride a few miles in a comfortable buggy, or in commodious interurban cars to fill their appointments each Lord's Day. We do not refer to poor preachers, who find it difficult to make a living and perform their ministerial duties, but to that class who are well-to-do, and can afford to spend some time in the Lord's service.

Looking After the Poor.

We are wondering if all of the churches in the Brotherhood are looking after the poor and the sick as they should. It can not be expected that each member will make a specialty of this line of work, but it certainly ought to receive the special attention of the deacons and the pastor, or elder in charge. In too many instances the pastor is left to do the work alone, thus greatly increasing his labors. True, he should visit the sick of his congregation, but he needs the cooperation of others. It might be a good idea for the deacons to appoint a Lookout Committee of their own number, to seek early information regarding any of the members known to be sick. The Sisters' Aid Society ought to have a similar committee, to keep a careful lookout for the sick and needy, and report the necessary cases to the proper officers. A church may be excused for neglecting some things, but no church can afford to overlook her sick and needy. When members are sick, they need attention. Most any one can keep himself interested when he is well enough to go about his business, but this is not always the case when he is disabled by illness. Members should not wait until such cases are pressing. They should be looked after early, and receive all necessary attention. Especially is this true of the poor. Rich and well-to-do people usually have plenty of friends to sympathize with them, when sickness invades their comfortable homes, but this can not be said of the poor. And what we are here saying should apply to the unfortunate and needy. It ought to be somebody's business to keep in touch with them, and that somebody ought to be exceedingly diligent about the duties assigned him.

A Correction.

Several weeks ago there appeared an editorial in these columns under the title of "Referred to the General Mission Board," in which reference was made to a query sent from the Tropico church through the District Meeting of Southern California to Annual Meeting. Since the editorial was published, the writer's attention has been called to the facts in the case. These, given by Bro. M. M. Eshelman, are as follows: "The Tropico church took up the matter with the Gospel Messenger Advisory Committee and not the Sunday-school Advisory Committee. The Gospel Messenger Advisory Committee disclaimed jurisdiction, but recommended that the matter be taken to Annual Meeting through District Meeting, which the Tropico church did."

From this statement it will be seen that the Tropico church acted upon competent advice, and hence is free from any censure that may have been implied in the editorial before mentioned, for which pardon is asked.

It may be added, that if, at any time, occasion for complaint, either supposed or real, arises as to our publishing interests, let it first be referred to the proper committees, and if redress is not had, then refer it to the General Board for action, before troubling Conference with the matter. This will save the Districts and our Annual Meeting considerable work. The General Board is the agent of the church, by which the publishing interests are owned and controlled, and the Board is responsible to Conference. If it goes wrong it is the duty of the Annual Meeting to set it right.

His Salary Too Large.

An unusual thing happened a short time ago at Cape Girardeau, Mo., when Rev. Eugene F. Abbott, of the First Presbyterian church, tendered his resignation, giving as one reason, that his salary, $2,000 per annum, was excessive, considering the amount appropriated in charity and other church work. He has accepted a call to another church where his salary will be $200 less. We often read of preachers receiving a louder call to go to other congregations, but it is quite generally understood that the louder call is simply a larger salary. But when a man leaves a large salary and goes to a church where he receives less, it looks very much like a call from the Lord. An ample support for a minister who devotes all of his time and energy to the work of the church, is a matter of some consideration, but when a minister of the Gospel begins to look around for the biggest pile of money in sight for him, the Lord figures very little in what he may be pleased to designate as a louder call. These louder calls are purely commercialistic,—a money-making matter,—and the rank and file of thinking people so regard it, whether the preachers feel to admit it or not. The Lord calls men to where they are needed, and to where they can do good, and not to where the greatest number of dollars may be secured. Before we take much stock in the theory of the Lord calling ministers from one pulpit to another, we should like to hear of more calls like the one at Cape Girardeau, Mo. There is something in this kind of a call. And as a bit of early church history, we may mention that we once had a Brethren church near this city, in the southeastern part of the State. About 1795 a number of families settled here on a Spanish grant, and in due time a strong church was organized. Here was ordained the first brother set apart for the eldership in Missouri. Misfortune, however, came to the earnest band of believers. Some emigrated to other parts of the trackless West, some went back to the world, and by and by the light of the church went out, and today not a member is known to reside in that part of the State.

The Wine Jesus Made.

A Bible student wishes to know if the wine made by Jesus at the wedding in Cana of Galilee was fermented. The New Testament is silent on this point, and yet the wine is called the best offered to the guest on the occasion. We would infer that it was the unfermented juice of the grape. It was fresh (just made), and had no time to undergo the process of fermentation. Only a miracle could have made it such. And why should Jesus have performed a special miracle to make fermented wine, when he had the power to make fresh wine from clean, pure water, without this damaging quality? The Lord, by nature's process, fills grapes with unfermented juice, and it would have been just as easy for him to have filled the jars at the wedding with wine equally harmless. The water was turned into fresh wine,—just as fresh and as pure as the juice that comes from the pressed grapes. It was handed to the governor of the feast at once, and then passed to the guests, before it had any time to ferment. In fact, we do not think the little left became intoxicating, but remained pure. There is no objection to drinking the kind of wine that Jesus made. One can find plenty of it by pressing the juice from fresh, ripe grapes.

Public Funds for Catholic Schools.

A federation of Catholic societies in this country is now a reality, and at a recent meeting in Columbus, Ohio, the representatives of these societies passed a resolution, declaring that a portion of the public school funds should be set apart for the maintenance of Catholic schools. This means, that, if the Catholics can have their way, the government must help to support the Catholic schools. Of course, this would make class legislation necessary, and when it comes to anything of that sort, we are going to have one of the warmest religious contests ever seen this side of the Atlantic. The Protestants are not disposed to stand idly by and see such a policy adopted in any of the States. If the Catholic schools are to receive financial help from the public funds, the Methodist, Baptist and Lutheran schools will logically come in for their share. The people at large are just a little too wise to agree to such a policy, and if the Catholic Federation wishes to avoid an overwhelming defeat, it will throw its influence against the adoption of any further resolutions of this character.

SPRING CREEK CHURCH, PENNSYLVANIA.

We met in council Sept. 4, at the Annville house, with Eld. J. H. Longenecker in charge. One was reclaimed. Our love feast will be held at the Spring Creek house Oct. 4 and 5, at 3 P. M.

We held a Harvest Meeting at the Canowago home Sept. 2. Brethren D. M. Eshelman, S. H. Hertzler, Nathan Martin and H. B. Mohler, ministers from adjoining congregations, were present. They gave us good sermons, and we were glad for their presence.

We also had a Harvest Meeting at the Annville house Sept. 9. Brethren J. F. Dietz and Jerome E. Blough, of Johnstown, Pa., and Bro. A. H. Brubacher were the visiting ministers present. We held a collection at both Harvest Meetings for the Orphanage Work. Brethren Dietz and Blough remained over Sunday and gave us good sermons, for which we were glad.

A Sunday-school and Missionary Meeting was held at the Spring Creek house Aug. 27. Bro. Jerome Herr, of Myerstown, Pa., was moderator. Though it was a rainy day, the meeting was well attended.

Brethren H. K. Ober and D. C. Reber, of Elizabethtown, Pa., gave us excellent addresses on temperance some time ago. A collection was taken at different places, amounting to $117, for the Anti-saloon League.

Our prayer meetings are very interesting. A very spiritual prayer meeting was held at the Canowago house on the evening of Sept. 6. Eld. J. H. Longenecker was present, and we were glad for his presence and good advice.

Eld. J. F Graybill and wife were visiting in our congregation a short time before they left for Sweden. Bro. Jacob H. Gingrich, a young minister, left Sept. 2 for Bethany Bible School. He enjoys his work there, and our prayers go with him. Our elder in charge, Bro. J. H. Longenecker, was in Ohio recently, where he assisted in important church work.

Eld. H. B. Yoder, of Lancaster, Pa., is booked for a series of meetings at the Palmyra house, to begin Nov. 11. Eld. Elias B. Lefever, of Lancaster, Pa., is booked for a series of meetings at the Canowago house, to commence March 18. Sister Lizzie, aged brother, D. Snader, was laid to rest Sept. 14. He was eighty-five years old.

Elizabethtown, Pa., Sept. 15. Edgar M. Hoffer.

WHO IS TO BLAME? WHY?

Recently, in a town of about 8,000 souls, where our people have been conducting services for over two years, an earnest sister met a certain lady on the street. She manifested an unusual appreciation in meeting the sister. In her own words it was this: "Why don't believe how glad I was to see that bonnet. I once wore the bonnet, but now—"

As the conversation continued, the lady said she did not know of any place where she could attend worship services in this town. The sister expressed great surprise at that, in response to which the lady remarked, that she and her husband did not have access to any daily papers; and, in fact, were not very much in touch with the religious atmosphere of the town in any way. They had lived in the town less than two years. However, she is now truly glad that within easy reach there is the church she once called home and so dearly loved. We, too, rejoice with her.

Now this is only one out of many similar circumstances; hence the question: "Am I my brother's keeper?" Who is responsible for this sister getting out of, away from, and lost to, the church?

Jesus says: "I am the good Shepherd, and I KNOW my sheep." According to our church government each congregation has a shepherd. By virtue of the office, then, in which our elders have been placed, they claim the right to say, "I am the good elder, and I know my membership."

Let me, in all kindness, ask our elders, "Do you know where your members are and what they are doing? If one of your members has moved out of your congregation, do you know exactly to what town he has gone and also do you immediately confer with the elder in charge, into whose congregation that member,—married or unmarried,—has moved, requesting him, without delay, to call upon and look after the welfare of such?

"Well," you say, "our Annual Conference has supplied a way for that, which solves the problem. Where members move out of a congregation they are given a certificate of membership." Yes, this is very much like some other questions our Conference has so admirably solved,—it is not unanimously and uniformly carried out. Thus this specific and extremely important work is not tactfully handled, and precious souls are being lost to the church. Again; who is responsible?

I dare say that this is a condition found almost, if not altogether, entirely in city work, where so many of our members, and members' children, go for employment. Consequently many of our members from the rural districts, and perhaps some of our good elders, do not feel the weight of this particular duty.

Undoubtedly, had this sister's departure from the church been immediately followed up by a letter of introduction and inviting her to the church which she now called home, and full of "suffering" and "heartaches," would never have been experienced by her. Then, too, her heart would not be filled with the remorse of wasted years. Don't tarry in this matter until a letter of membership can be made out "at the next regular council meeting." Procrastination is the thief of time. Neglect means loss.

This, however, is not all. What are we doing in regard to those who are coming to our services from the highways, and whose children, even, are enrolled in our Sunday-school? When they move away,—and this is a common occurrence in city life,—are we concerned as to whether they are identified with some church and Sunday-school? Is it not the Christian duty of either the elder, pastor, or Sunday-school superintendent, to secure the name and new address of the family or individual, sending the same at once to the elder, pastor, or superintendent, in whose territory a location is made?

Brother, sister, will we not earnestly endeavor to keep in closer touch with each other, especially with the lambs of the fold, and with the friends of our church? One soul is worth more than the whole world. Let our fidelity to the church grow stronger and stronger, ever remembering that to win souls for Christ means to keep in close, loving touch with them.

Who could fathom the extent of the church if all of our members' children were saved to her ranks, and actively engaged in her work? And why is this not true? Yes, somebody failed to do his duty. Was that somebody you?

Mina H. Bosserman.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

The Following Notes, Crowded Out of Last Issue, Are Given Space on This Page.

INDIANA.

Colorado City church met in Council Sept. 18. In the absence of any member of the Mission Board, our pastor, Bro. L. H. Root, presided. One was received by letter. Bro. A. C. Daggett was chosen to represent us at District Meeting, next month. Aug. 26 Bro. W. S. Devilbiss, of Otterbein, Kans., gave us two excellent sermons, and one on the following Sunday, Sept. 1, in the forenoon. Under the auspices of the Sunday-school and instructive lectures on the work in India. These were very much appreciated by all who attended. The following Sunday we intended to have Brother Devilbiss speak on missions, after which a collection of $10.25 was taken for the India work. But, to our disappointment, the pastor in charge of a church building at this place was apparently misleading. I did not learn that he was to speak, and that the house would not be built, but that the erection is delayed for a time on account of crop failure. Brother Devilbiss visited by our solicitors. We hope to be able to proceed soon.—Lola Rose, Colorado City, Colo., Sept. 21.

First Indiana church met in council Sept. 16. As our elder was not present, Bro. A. A. Weaver, the assistant elder, presided. Quite an interesting council was disposed of. We decided to begin a series of meetings Dec. 2, and have our love feast Dec. 16. Any ministering brethren in the Grand Valley at that time, are invited to stop off and enjoy the meetings with us. The Sisters' Aid Society is working nicely.—D. M. Click, Grand Junction, Colo., Sept. 24.

INDIANA.

Ladoga.—Since our last report one has been added to our number by letter. Bro. Wm. Beeler was chosen delegate to the Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings, to be held here in October. Our Sunday-school convention will be held in connection.—By order of committee, Lula Goshorn, Ladoga, Ind., Sept. 23.

Notice.—The District Meeting of Middle Indiana is to be held in the Huntington City church Oct. 12. Sunday-school and Ministerial Meetings will convene Oct. 11. The Elders' Meeting will be held Oct. 3, at 7:30 P. M. at the home of Bro. and Sister Kennedy, 1 mile south of Wabash, Ind.—Ed. J. D. Minier, South Whitley, Ind., Sept. 23.

Wabash church met in council Sept. 21.—Our regular council convened last evening. Steps were taken for a better church home. Our love feast was appointed for Wednesday evening at 6 o'clock. There was a unanimous decision to retain our elder, Bro. Jacob Wise, for the coming year. On an early date Brethren M. C. Horst and C. M. Wenger were elected delegates to District Meeting. A number of other matters of minor importance were considered.—Cora V. Wise, South Bend, Ind., Sept. 19.

IOWA.

Indian Creek.—Our church met in council, with Eld. John Zook presiding. Bro. Wess Bittner and Sister Dawson were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Bittner is elected to the Sunday-school Meeting. As our new church, located by the town of Colfax, is nearing completion, we decided to have the dedication services Oct. 22, to be conducted by Bro. Moses Beardorff, of Iowa. Iowa, there will be a series of meetings of at least two weeks, to continue after the dedication services, to be conducted by Brethren Beardorff. The meetings will close with a love feast at the country house. Bro. Beardorff is presently a resident of Colfax, and a member of that town. Twin Falls, Idaho, met with a misfortune of having his house destroyed by fire. A collection of $11 was taken in his behalf. We presented them to feel like we have not forgotten them.—Rebecca Reifeld, Maxwell, Iowa, Sept. 23.

Salem.—Our series of meetings at the above house, by Bro. Moses Beardorff, of Yale, Iowa, closed last Wednesday night. Bro. Beardorff delivered excellent sermons, and was listened with much interest each evening. Many were made to understand the gospel as never before and expressed their regard that the meetings closed so soon. Our love feast was held Sept. 17. Thirty-four members surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. Beardorff officiated. Our series of meetings at the Salem house, to be conducted by Bro. John Brower and Leslie Culver, will commence Oct. 7.—Edna Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Sept. 23.

Sheldon church met in council Sept. 16, with our elder, Bro. J. H. Ballinger, presiding. One letter of membership was presented. Sister Bernice Ashmore was elected delegate to District Meeting. Bro. J. O. Rhinerl, assistant elder. Our Sunday-school officers were elected.—Theda Kennedy, Sheldon, Iowa, Sept. 22.

MICHIGAN.

Long Lake.—We held our love feast Sept. 16 at the home of Daniel Landis, Bro. Lair, of Sugar Ridge, Mich., officiated at the services held in the barn. There were twenty-two communicants,—fifteen from our congregation and seven visitors from near-by churches. Several spectators were present also. We were very glad to have them present, for it gave us an opportunity of showing them the Bible way of doing the Lord's commands. We all felt that we had received rich blessings from God. Bro. Lair's forenoon we listened to a practical yet deep sermon delivered by Bro. Lair, which we appreciated very much. Our minister, Bro. D. E. Sowers, left for Onekama last Sunday afternoon, where he will commence a series of meetings. We miss our dear brother very much and will welcome him back soon. During his absence a brother from Onekama will preach for us at this place.—Wm. Bittel, Freesoil, Mich., Sept. 21.

Zion.—Our council was held Sept. 23, at Bro. Richey's home. Two letters were presented, one received and two granted. Committees were appointed to secure a location and formulate plans for the construction of a churchhouse. We are expecting Eld. R. F. Patty, from Bethany Bible, to schoolhouse we now use for our services until the new church is completed. Our regular meetings, we have decided to hold this meeting in the Township Hall. Since our last report one has been baptized. Three families have bought homes and are expecting to locate in our midst in the near future.—Edith Blocher, R. D. 2, Prescott, Mich., Sept. 23.

MISSOURI.

Warrensburg church met in council Sept. 21. The report of the annual visit showed all to be in the faith, and working for the Master. Arrangements were made for a love feast Nov. 4, at 10 A. M. This will be at the close of our series of meetings. Letters were sent to District Meeting concerning the child-saving work.—one of local, the other of general interest.—Jesse D. Mohler, Warrensburg, Mo., Sept. 24.

NEBRASKA.

Kearney.—Bro. J. [illegible] Redding, of Dawson, Colo., preached here Sept. 29, giving us a missionary sermon which was very interesting. After that our elder, Bro. P. Grabill, made a few remarks. A collection of $3.38 was taken for the India Mission work. Bro. Redding is now in Kearney, soliciting for the Orphans' Home at Lincoln.—Orphans' Home of Nebraska, Zona Rose, 2105 Ave. D, Kearney, Nebr., Sept. 27.

Silver Lake.—We held our love feast Oct. 21, instead of Oct. 28. Bro. P. T. Kindig was chosen as Messenger agent for one year.—Anna Kindig, R. D. 1, Box 37, Roseland, Nebr., Sept. 20.

OHIO.

Beaver Creek church met in council Sept. 21. Brethren Pilgrim, Fidler and Conner were with us. The latter has been conducting a series of meetings. The church has decided to hold a love feast Oct. 21, at 10 A. M. The church called Bro. Jacob Wenrick to the office of deacon. Bro. Alva Wenrick was advanced to the second degree of the ministry.—We felt thankful for the kind assistance of the visiting brethren, and to Bro. Conner for the spiritual instruction he has given during the past few weeks.—Susan Zimmerman, R. D. 7, Xenia, Ohio, Sept. 24.

Black Swamp church met in council Sept. 23, preparatory to our love feast Nov. 4, at 10 A. M. W. Keiser, presided. One considerable business came before the meeting. One letter of membership was granted. Sister Conner reading the text and gave us an excellent sermon on Sunday morning. Our series of meetings, which began Sept. 3, immediately following our love feast, which is to be held Oct. 7. The meetings are to be conducted by Bro. H. V. Thomas.—Edith Baker, Kenoyer, Ohio, Sept. 24.

Lick Creek—Sept. 17 Bro. Jacob Heistand, of Walkerton, Ind., was with us and gave us very inspiring sermons. Our Sunday-school work is moving along nicely. We are looking forward to the time of our love feast, which will be held Oct. 7, to be followed by a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Miller.—Callie McClintock, Ada, Ohio, Sept. 25.

Middle District.—Our church met in council Sept. 14. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Coppock, not being present, Bro. C. V. Coppock presided. Our letter was received. Bro. D. M. Garver, of Trotwood, Ohio, has been secured to hold our series of meetings, commencing Oct. 14.—C. V. Coppock, Trotwood, Ohio, Sept. 25.

Reading.—Our council was held Aug. 19. The visiting brethren reported the members here to be in love and union. Eld. A. W. Hoover was with us, and gave us loving counsel. Aug. 20 we had a cradle roll day, at which time the primary department of the Sunday-school rendered a short program. It was a pleasure sight to see many precious children occupying front seats. We have eighteen enrolled and four present. In the forenoon we have the same program for our beginners' class. Our pastor, Bro. J. F. Kahler, is doing excellent work here. Aug. 27 we had a baptismal service both morning and evening, which are largely attended. Brethren J. F. Kahler and Samuel Forstand were chosen delegates to the District Meeting.—Rena Heestand, R. D. 2, Moultrie, Ohio, Sept. 28.

VIRGINIA.

Bull Run.—Sept. 3 Bro. Dennis Wilmoe, of Bealton, Va., began a series of meetings at Bull Run. Bro. Bell still continuing till Sept. 17. He preached sixteen sermons. The few members present were built up and strengthened. Two united in the faith. Two were baptized Sept. 17. Many others were much impressed.—Ida Bell Wilmoe, Bull Run, Va., Sept. 18.

Cedar Creek Valley.—At a recent series of meetings, held at the Laurel Hill schoolhouse, conducted by Eld. R. B. Mowry, two were received into the church, one by letter and other reasons, our brother did not preach more than three nights. Others are seeking for rest and are near the kingdom. Bro. Mowry commenced a series of meetings Sept. 16, at the Cedar Creek schoolhouse, which is in the Long Woodstock congregation.—M. H. Copp, R. D. 1, Maurertown, Va., Sept. 18.

Christiansburg.—Our church met in council Sept. 16, with Eld. Moses Dickerson presiding. Our elder gave us a good talk. Bro. Matt. R. Layman, when the church visit was reported. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 3:30 P. M. The elders will be present. Bro. Layman has charge of the communion. Sept. 17 Bro. Dickerson preached an interesting sermon.—Fannie James [illegible] Christiansburg, Va., Sept. 18.

Oak Hill.—Our church met in council Sept. 9. It was our church visit meeting. We also held our Harvest Meeting. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Beahm, presided. We decided to have our love feast at this place Oct. 28, at 3 P. M. We expect Bro. G. A. Phillips to hold a series of meetings for us.—Jacob Beahm, Jr., Oak Hill, Va., Sept. 18.

Sangerville.—Eld. J. Carson Miller, of the Timberville congregation, has been with us in a series of meetings. Sangerville congregation, at the Sangerville house, Sept. 3. Services were held each evening, closing with Sept. 17. Good interest and good conduct prevailed during the entire meetings. Bro. Miller labored faithfully to expound the Word of God. He were made willing to forsake sin and serve the true and living God. A love feast was enjoyed Sept. 2. Bro. Miller officiated. Aug. 20 Bro. J. M. Hess began a series of meetings at Lynn Rock, one of our mission points in Highland County, continuing till Aug. 31. He returned to the church at Sangerville. Bro. I. W. Miller of Singers Glen, Va., is expected to begin a series of meetings at the Sangerville house, October 7, in the near future; probably next month.—Annie R. Miller, R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va., Sept. 20.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

St. Francis—Church met in council Sept. 25. Eld. H. J. Lilly was moderator. Brethren D. L. Burns and T. L. Woodell were elected delegates to District Meeting; Bro. H. J. Lilly, alternate. Church decided to have our love feast Oct. 31, and a week's series of meetings, beginning Oct. 14 and closing with a love feast. Bro. W. D. Hutchison expects to do the preaching. Those wishing to attend, should notify the writer, and conveyance will be provided from Palestine.—T. L. Woodiel, Palestine, Ark., Sept. 26.

CALIFORNIA.

Holtville—After a very enjoyable visit to Iowa, Illinois and Ohio, from the time of attending Mid Meeting to Sept. 26, wife and I returned to Inglewood, to find that the land agent had sold our house home, and we must leave here Sept. 31, and a little band of members eight miles from Holtville, Cal. There are about forty members here. They have a new churchhouse and an active minister. A number of young people are members, and they are working earnestly in the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. When we have plenty of young members we will work. It is a hopeful condition. People here are very sociable. Holtville is about 225 miles southeast of Los Angeles, on a railroad branching off from the Southern Pacific. The summers here are quite hot. They are dry and pure.—W. G. Calvert, Holtville, Cal., Sept. 25.

Pasadena—Sept. 19 the members of this church rendered a very helpful program on the subject of temperance. We feel sure that in attendance and interest the occasion was the sum of 14 was contributed for this great work. We rejoice that, as a church, we are taking advantage of the opportunities cause. Our theories have always been the very best. May the way be open for the practical working out of these theories, thereby making our church a powerful factor in helping to solve this great problem.—Asta F. Brower, Pasadena, Cal., Sept. 21.

Reedley church met in council Sept. 3, Eld. Eikenberry presided. Delegates were elected to District and Sunday-school Meeting. One was received by letter, and one was restored to fellowship. We decided to hold a love feast in the near future. Bro. H. R. Pyle closed with prayer. Sept. 18 and his sermons were very much appreciated.—Susie Michael, Reedley, Cal., Sept. 18.

Santee Mission—Eld. A. C. Snowberger will close his series of meetings in the Santee Mission Sept. 26, when two be baptized. This is probably the first baptism by trine immersion performed in San Diego County, since the days of the last evening. Eleven were at the table, with an attentive and interested congregation observing the first love feast ever held in their part of the State. Prayer was offered by Eld. and Bro. Snowberger has presented Bible teaching in a clear and forceful way. Much is bound to result from the effort of Eld. Willing to learn the truth. As one result of these meetings we have decided to secure a cottage organ for the church. This is a fine country. Those thinking of changing location should come and help the Santee Mission.—C. E. Wolfe, Box 52, Santee, Cal., Sept. 24.

COLORADO.

Lowland—Our church met in council Sept. 11, at 2 P. M., with Bro. J. C. Groff presiding. One letter was received and one was granted. The report of the Mid Meeting was given, reporting all the members to be at peace with each other. Bro. Samuel Cohun was chosen delegate to District and Sunday-school. Bro. John Heaston, secretary-treasurer. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 4 P. M.—Nellye Mice, Wayne, Colo., Sept. 25.

FLORIDA.

Herndon—We were made to realize when we met four more members at the train, last Thursday, who, we hope, will help in the Master's vineyard at this place. One of them is a minister. Since our last report we have had the care of our oldest brethren. We look forward to the time when we will be able to organize a church. The good Brethren Hendricks are anxious to have regular preaching services.—Isaac Cripe, Herndon, Fla., Sept. 24.

IDAHO.

Boise Valley—Sister Sadie Miller was with us Sept. 21 and 22, and gave us two very inspiring messages. Her visit was enjoyed by all present. The offering for the Indin Mission was $12.22. We expect Bro. T. J. Heckman with us for a Ministerial Meeting, and a series of meetings about Nov. 1.—Jessie S. Brower, Meridian, Idaho, Sept. 24.

Wanpa—We were favored with a talk by Sister Miller-Sept. 26, which was greatly enjoyed by all present. We very much to feel like sacrificing more for the Lord's work. collection of $17.37 was taken for the mission in India.—Rose B. Bradley, 205 Sixteenth Ave., Nampa, Idaho, Sept. 26.

ILLINOIS.

Coal Creek—We enjoyed a pleasant feast at our country church, Sept. 18. Bro. Hahn, of Mt. Morris, was with us. Our brother had also been conducting a series of meetings at this place, which closed Sept. 16, one confession and one by letter. While there were none added to the church, the members were encouraged. We expect to conduct another series, as well as his clearing sermons. We should be glad to have a minister from Ohio, Idaho leaving us, as we are much in need of help to carry on the work of the Master.—Mrs. Mary Chas. O. Johnson, R. D. 1, Box 4, Canton, Ill., Sept. 25.

Hudson—Church met in council Sept. 18, with Eld. J. H. Neher, presided. Our love feast will be held Oct. 1. Bro. J. H. Neher was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. He also expects to hold a series of meetings this fall for other congregations. During his absence Bro. Neher will preach.—W. D. Neher, of Chenoa, Ill., to fill the pulpit—Noah Bloser, Hudson, Ill., Sept. 25.

Mount Carroll—I came to this place Sept. 14, to help in the work here. I have visited the homes of all the members. Yesterday we reopened the Sunday-school. We had a fair attendance for a rainy day. In the afternoon we had services at the home of an aged sister, at which time the communion service. I feel very much encouraged at the outlook, and believe that the work will be built up.—Brethren, pray for us.—Alice Garber, Mount Carroll, Ill., Sept. 27.

Mount Morris—This is a school town; community and church are enthused each fall by the coming of the students and arrival of new workers. At this time, however, a combination of circumstances seems to make the opening services of especial promise. The steady increase in activity of the local church, which has been noticeable for some time past, and the decided forward inspiration by the convening of the recent District Meeting, developed and fixed in the Mid Meetings. Now the inspiring presence of so many young men and women, who we promise soon to be enlisting us all to the best that we are able to do. The motto of the Sunday-school for the new quarter is: "Is there anything too hard for Jehovah?" and a united effort will be made to maintain an average attendance of 300. Of those present last Sunday, 104 had brought their Bibles, and the offering was $15.37. The same aggressive spirit seemed to be active in the quarterly council, the day before, when business of importance received due consideration. Various offices and committees for the coming year were carefully selected, including the return of Bro. M. W. Emmert, head of the Bible Department, of the Academy, to office of the church. On the following Monday the new elder met in conference with the other ministers of the congregation, and the work of the different parts of the field was outlined.—Ethel Kiracofe, Mount Morris, Ill., Sept. 25.

Notice.—If there are any members of the Church of the Brethren, or children of members, coming to, or living in, the city, or if there is anybody here in whom members are interested, but who is unacquainted with our place of worship, please write to Sister Anna Roy, 2435 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill. She will be glad to correspond with all such, or see that they are visited.—Emma S. Miller, Sec., 2435 Van Buren St., Chicago, Ill., Sept. 28.

Lena—Our church has greatly enjoyed a spiritual series of meetings, conducted by Bro. S. Z. Smith, of Sidney, Ohio. The attendance was good, and the interest was manifested. We had much unfavorable weather. A few evenings we should not have ventured out, were it not for the interest in such good work, however, was done. Four were baptized, and one awaits the rite. Our church met in council Sept. 21. The annual auditing committee reported, and all was clear and union. We decided to install a baptistry in our church. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7.—Bertha B. Miller, Lena, Ill., Sept. 26.

Spring Run.—We had a two weeks' series of meetings, commencing Aug. 29 and closing Sept. 3. Bro. S. J. Nickey, of Cherry Grove, Ill., was with us during the first week of the town. We feel encouraged in our work at this place, although none were added to our number. We held our love feast Sept. 18, at 4 P. M. Eld. T. E. Blain, and his wife, were with us; also Bro. Solomon Buckley, of Canton, Ill., who did the preaching for us. He preached an interesting sermon on Saturday forenoon. In the evening we also had a large audience to hear him. He remained in our home until Sunday, our blessed Master.—Amanda Schisler, Ellisville, Ill., Sept. 28.

Waldman Grove.—Our meetings held by Bro. J. G. Royer, continuing over two Sundays, resulted in two accessions by baptism. Bro. Royer's sermons were helpful to all. Our meeting on and have all our young people in the church.—Ernest Lantz, Waddams Grove, Ill., Sept. 25.

INDIANA.

Buck Creek church met in council Sept. 9. Eld. L. L. Teeter was elected delegate to District Meeting; Brethren Oakley and L. L. Teeter were elected Sunday-school superintendents. Sister Jessie Teeter was elected superintendent of Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. L. L. Teeter will represent us at the District Meeting; Bro. Anson Priddy, alternate. One query was sent to District Meeting. Bro. Anson Priddy was reorganized. The writer was chosen president, and Sister Jessie Teeter, secretary-treasurer, of the Christian Workers' Sept. 17, which was very much enjoyed, and well attended.—Mrs. Ora Teeter, Nappanee, Ind., Sept. 28.

Elkhart City church met in council Sept. 11. Eld. E. L. Heestand was moderator. Bro. Ira Berger was elected deacon. Three letters of membership were granted. Among the letters granted was that of Sister Sarah Hendricks, whom Bro. Lynn Grove was elected clerk for the remainder of the year. The annual visit was reported. Brethren E. L. Heestand and Ira Berger were appointed as delegates to District Meeting. Sept. 21 our love feast was held. Bro. Berger, from Roann, Ind., officiated.—Mrs. Ira Berger, 1020 Lincoln Ave., Elkhart, Ind., Sept. 23.

Huntington church met in council this afternoon. Our elder Bro. J. D. Mishler, presided. Eld. Henry Neff was also with us, and preached for us. No letter of any kind was given or letter. The annual visit was reported. Brethren Grover L. Bowman, Jesse Hoke, and Samuel Kelly were elected delegates. Bro. Quinter Brower, alternate. Sister Rosella Shock is our delegate to Sunday-school Meeting; Bro. Roy Wine, alternate. Bro. Lester Wine was elected superintendent of Sunday morning, and in the evening gave us a talk on Cuba. The Christian Workers' Meeting, which was organized a few months ago, is progressing nicely.—Rosella Shock, Huntington, Ind., Sept. 26.

Killbuck—Sept. 23 we met in council with Eld. I. E. Brandon in charge. The annual visit was reported, and a time which was quite favorable. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting are moving along nicely. We have a live Sunday-school at this place. Sister Ella Mitchell, of Dayton, Ohio, will commence a series of meetings at our district Meeting. Sept. 24 we held our election of delegate to District and Sunday-school Meetings, with Bro. I. E. Brandon, delegate, and Bro. Ira Miller, alternate. Sept. 25, at 1 P. M., at the Brick house.—H. E. Millepaugh, R. D. 12, Muncie Ind., Sept. 28.

Nappanee.—Our church met in council Sept. 21. Our elder, Bro. Daniel Hoover, presided. The attendance was good. A great deal of business came before the meeting. Two were received by letter. The deacons reported the annual visit, preparatory to which they had had a deacons' meeting, willing to work for a greater degree of holiness in themselves and others. Our delegates to District Meeting are Brethren Everett Pippen and John Geyer. Eld. J. C. Murray, of North Manchester, was chosen to fill the appointment with seal and power. Sept. 24 we had our Harvest Meeting, at which Eld. Murray preached one of our most helpful sermons. At this meeting an offering of $40 was taken for the benefit of the Mission Board. In the afternoon Sister Ella Miller Brubaker gave us a talk on Cuba. In the evening Bro. Murray preached for us again.—R. J. Miller, Nappanee, Ind., Sept. 28.

Noblesville.—Sept. 26 Stony Creek church met in council and organized for the coming year. Brethren Andrew Grove Stern was chosen president; the writer, secretary.—Elva T. Haines, Noblesville, Ind., Sept. 28.

North Manchester.—We met in members' meeting Sept. 28. Our elder, Bro. Charles Wolfe, presided. The report of our church treasurer was heard and accepted. A finance committee of three brethren was appointed. Bro. J. W. Miller was selected as delegate to District Meeting. We decided on our love feast Oct. 28, beginning at 4 P. M. This service will be at the Eagle Lake church, Oakwood, Ohio, conducted by Bro. G. A. Snider, of Lima, Ohio.—Edith Miller, North Manchester, Ind., Sept. 28.

Pine Creek—Our Harvest Meeting, held Sept. 16, was well attended. Eld. Henry Neff, of Nappanee, Ind., and Eld. J. C. Murray, of North Manchester, Ind., preached an inspiring sermon in the forenoon, which was served at the church. In the afternoon, at 2 o'clock we enjoyed an interesting missionary address, delivered by Bro. Winegar. The offering for missionary purposes amounted to $40.—Mrs. Ella Miller, R. D. 1, Box 29, Monticello, Ind., Sept. 20.

Pierceton church met in council Sept. 23, with Elders peter Hosek, Amos Kendall, J. D. Rife and Geo. Swihart present. Bro. B. F. Kendall was elected clerk for 1927. Bro. Geo. Swihart has been with us in a two weeks' series of meetings, closing Sept. 26. Bro. Swihart is a strong worker in the kingdom. The brethren and sisters feel greatly strengthened by our love feast will be held Nov. 11, at 4 P. M.—B. F. Kendall, Pierceton, Ind., Sept. 28.

Portland.—Sept. 24 we had one of the most successful meetings ever held in this congregation, conducted by Bro. Morris, of Landess, Ind. The attendance and interest were good. Thirteen were baptized. The congregation voted, in our communion, passed off pleasantly. Sister Zenna Hatcher was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. Our love feast held on the 9th, was well attended. Ministers present were Bro. E. J. Neher and wife, from Alabama, Bro. Polk, from the Pleasant Dale church, Ind., Bro. D. Hummer, from the Camden church, Ind., and Bro. Norris, from the Landesville church, Ind. Bro. Hatcher officiated. We are looking forward under the leadership of Bro. Hatcher. We hope to retain him for another year.—Bertha Hatcher, Portland, Ind., Sept. 25.

Salamonie.—We have changed the date of our love feast from Oct. 23 to Oct. 14, beginning at 5 P. M., at the Lancaster house. The love feast will follow our District Meeting of Middle Indiana, which is to be held in Huntington City church Oct. 12. Salamonie church is just nine miles south of Huntington City. A special invitation is given to ministers to remain from District Meeting and attend our love feast.—Millie Wike, R. D. 6, Huntington, Ind., Sept. 24.

Union Center church convened in council to hear the report of the annual visit. There are over 200 members in the church, but the council is still earnestly striving to carry the work of the Lord. Sept. 17 we held our annual Harvest Meeting. Our collection amounted to $40. Bro. A. Sindy gave us two instructive sermons.—a thanksgiving sermon in the forenoon and a temperance lecture in the afternoon.—Ellen Rosser, Nappanee, Ind., Sept. 28.

Had a meeting with us love feast Oct. 3. Bro. H. A. Stahl held a series of meetings in the Mount Olive Chapel, closing Aug. 27. They were aided by baptism—Fannie King, Grantsville, Md., Sept. 28.

Sams Creek.—Our communion meeting was held at our house Sept. 16 and 17. There were several ministers from neighboring churches with us: C. L. Baker, of East Berlin, Pa., assisted in the evening services. Bro. Baker delivered a good lesson in the town church on Sunday night.—Minerva Hoop, New Windsor, Md., Sept. 25.

West Point.—The members of this church, near Reisterstown, Md., held their love feast Sept. 23. We had a pleasant, and all the members except a few were present. A quiet and spiritual time was enjoyed. Adjourned to evening communion, including visiting members. Bro. W. P. Engler, of Uniontown, Md., and Brethren W. P. Sopp, Walter Engler and Jesse Myers helped bear the ministering brethren's part. Bro. W. E. Roop officiated. Bro. W. P. Engler was recently elected elder of this church for one year. Expect to hold a series of meetings during November. Bro. J. J. John will deliver a Sunday-afternoon sermon for us Oct. 8.—John M. Pohlman, Reisterstown, Md., Sept. 27.

MISSOURI.

Cabool.—Our church met in council Sept. 23. Our elder Bro. C. W. Gitt, presided. Bro. Brenizer and Sister Elvina Cline were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Sister Ruth Ireland is to act as assistant to Sunday-school secretary. Our Greenwood house, and Sister Anna Gitt represents the Cabool house. We have decided to hold a series of meetings in November, at the close of a series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. H. E. Eikenberry, of Lincoln, Nebr.—Mrs. Ella Holland, Cabool, Mo., Sept. 25.

Clear Creek.—We are now engaged in meetings at this church with good interest and large congregations. I trust the result with the Lord. From here I go to the Lost Creek congregation, a mission point of the Leston church, to hold a series of meetings.—Mossa Cruea, 1405 Eastern Ave., Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 23.

Nevada.—Our series of meetings began Sept. 10. There were no accessions, but the members were greatly strengthened. Sept. 23 we held our love feast. We had a sermon by Bro. A. Blackwell, of Eldorado Springs, Mo., Sept. 24. Ministerial examination services were conducted by our elder, Bro. Leander Smith. Eld. A. Hollingsworth, of Deepwater, Mo., officiated at the feast, assisted by Eld. D. W. Teeter, of Jasper, Mo. The sisters broke the bread and passed the cup. Our love feast was very spiritual. We decided to continue the meetings for a few evenings as the interest is good. The Sunday-school and Eld. Leander Smith's ordination will occur at the District Sunday-school Meeting.—Mary Smith, 230 North Oak St., Nevada, Mo., Sept. 25.

NEBRASKA.

Enders.—We have just raised $20 for our State mission work. Our delegates to District Meeting are Sister Mary Flory and Bro. Isaac Mohler.—Orrilla C. Ogle, Enders, Nebr., Sept. 25.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Fraternity church met in council Sept. 9, with Eld. J. F. Robertson presiding. Our deacon brethren were all present at their church visit. They found all the members in love and union. Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 14. Our love feast will be held Oct. 13. We decided to use the new song book, "Kingdom Songs," in our Sunday-school.—Emma A. Spaugh, R. D. 1, Winston-Salem, N. C., Sept. 23.

OHIO.

Charleston Mission.—Aug. 1 Bro. O. P. Haines came to us and began a series of meetings, preaching every forenoon and afternoons. The church was built up by his labors. The attendance was good and the spiritual condition was never better in the kingdom. Sept. 24 we had our children's day exercises. It was an all-day meeting, much enjoyed by all.—Emma Helser, R. D. 6, Chillicothe, Ohio, Sept. 24.

Londonville church held a love feast Sept. 2, at the Plum Run churchhouse. Our elder, Bro. A. I. Heestand, officiated. He was assisted by Bro. Strashaugh, of Ankeneytown, Ohio. Our meeting was enjoyed. It was very refreshing to us all to have our dear brethren and sisters from the adjoining congregations with us.—Mrs. Rose Sanderson, R. D. 3, Londonville, Ohio, Sept. 22.

Palmyra church met in council Sept. 14. Our elder, Bro. J. C. Bright, not being present, Eld. Henry Baker presided. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Andrew Zerby preached the following Sunday morning.—Elia Holling, R. D. 3, Greenville, Ohio, Sept. 27.

Salem.—Our church met in visit council Sept. 14. Eld. William Minnich presided. Elders D. M. Garver and Jesse S. Strashaugh were with us. Seven were received by letter and two letters were granted. The visiting brethren brought in a good report. Some suggestions were made that will be considered at a later meeting. Good admonitions were given by our visiting brethren. The church was divided and the new church decided to assist the West Dayton church in repairing their house, and appointed a solicitor for that purpose. Our communion was appointed for Oct. 21, at 4 P. M.—John D. Ranchart, Union, Ohio, Sept. 26.

OKLAHOMA.

Big Creek church met in council Sept. 23, with Eld. N. S. Gripe presiding. One letter of membership was received and three granted. Bro. Fred Holderread was elected Gospel Messenger agent for one year. We organized Christian Workers' Meeting with Bro. Alba Edgecomb as president. Our love feast will be held Nov. 18, at 2 P. M., to be followed by a series of meetings. Three have been baptized since our last report.—Mrs. Mary Holderread, Cushing, Okla., Sept. 27.

Thomas.—A three weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Eld. C. H. Brown at this place, closed Sept. 21. Ten have been baptized since our last report. The Bible lessons and prayer meetings, held at the homes during the day, were inspiring. Bro. Brown is an able worker, and many blest here by all. The late District Meeting, held here, left a good impression on the people of our town.—Elsie K. Sanger, Thomas, Okla., Sept. 23.

OREGON.

Rogue River.—Our church met in council Sept. 23, with our elder presiding. Bro. T. J. Barklow was also with us. Two letters were granted. Arrangements were made to get a regular the churchhouse. Bro. L. B. Overbisher was ordained to the eldership.—Pauline Overbisher, Grants, Oregon, Sept. 25.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Back Creek.—Our two weeks' series of meetings, at the Shank church, closed Sept. 24. Four were received by baptism and 1 by letter. Bro. A. D. Wolfe, of Martinsburg, W. Va., and Bro. C. H. Steerman, conducted the meetings, and all feel encouraged. Sept. prior to our love feast, Brethren Steerman and Wolfe organized the house of the Lord in general, making it more presentable. Added to the church by baptism, Aug. 26, Miss Mary L. H. Leitzy, Greencastle, Pa., Sept. 25.

Bethany.—Aug. 26 Eld. N. H. Bloom, of Nokesville, Va., gave us a very interesting lecture on Palestine, at the Pike Run church. Sept. 2 we had our love feast, located at the Summit house. We had a very interesting local Sunday-school convention in the house, in the afternoon and evening of Sept. 9. Bro. J. H. Chandler delivered a very profitable temperance sermon at the house in the evening of Sept. 10. Our series of meetings, preparatory to our love feast, was held Sept. 3, with Bro. D. H. Walker presiding. Bro. Abraham Pyack, of Johnstown, Pa., was with us and officiated at our love feast, Sept. 17. Bro. Beahs, of the Quemahoning church, was also with us. Our series of meetings closed with us On the evening of Oct. 21. Bro. Geo. W. Vansickle, or Virginia, will commence a series of meetings at the Pike Run church.—J. C. Reiman, R. D. 2, Berlin, Pa., Sept. 21.

Carlisle.—Our council had good attendance and interest, during the quarter just closed, has been all that could be expected, considering the warm weather and our small membership. Our contributions were in excess of the total enrollment. Our elder, Bro. Falkenstein, our District Sunday-school Secretary, and Bro. J. H. Cassel, Widdor, visited us and gave us interesting addresses during the quarter. Our next council will be held at the home of Bro. W. W. O. Musgrave, 2005 Seventh St., Harrisburg, Pa., Sept. 29.

Conemaugh.—Aug. 26 we held our council at this place, come to this place Sept. 10, to assist us in a series of meetings, and continued until Sept. 24. Bro. Hollinger's sermons were deeply manifested throughout the meetings. The church received much spiritual strength, as the Word was preached with power. Bro. Hollinger was assisted by the ministering brethren. Bro. W. E. Roop officiated. Bro. W. P. Engler was recently elected elder of this church for one year. Expect to hold a series of meetings during November. Bro. J. J. John will deliver a Sunday-afternoon sermon for us Oct. 8.—John M. Pohlman, Reisterstown, Md., Sept. 27.

Clear Creek.—We now engaged in meetings at this church with good interest and large congregations. I trust the result with the Lord. From here I go to the Lost Creek congregation, a mission point of the Leston church, to hold a series of meetings.—Mossa Cruea, 1405 Eastern Ave., Kansas City, Mo., Sept. 23.

Nevada.—Our series of meetings began Sept. 10. There were no accessions, but the members were greatly strengthened. Sept. 23 we held our love feast. We had a sermon by Bro. A. Blackwell, of Eldorado Springs, Mo., Sept. 24. Ministerial examination services were conducted by our elder, Bro. Leander Smith. Eld. A. Hollingsworth, of Deepwater, Mo., officiated at the feast, assisted by Eld. D. W. Teeter, of Jasper, Mo. The sisters broke the bread and passed the cup. Our love feast was very spiritual. We decided to continue the meetings for a few evenings as the interest is good. The Sunday-school and Eld. Leander Smith's ordination will occur at the District Sunday-school Meeting.—Mary Smith, 230 North Oak St., Nevada, Mo., Sept. 25.

TENNESSEE.

Meadow Branch.—Bro. J. H. Lambert came to our place on Friday evening, and preached a short sermon for us, after which we held our love feast. Bro. Lambert expounded the Lord's tables. We had a large and attentive audience. Bro. Laughrun preached five able sermons. Bro. Wine, of French Broad, Tenn., and our elder Bro. Bell, were with us also. Our Sunday-school is moving along nicely, and our prayer meetings are well attended. We will hold our next council.—Cora A. Gammon, Tate, Tenn., Sept. 25.

Parkway.—Aug. 19 Eld. Laughrun came to our place on Saturday, Sept. 16, and preached three inspiring sermons, and baptized seven. Eld. J. H. Lambert filled meeting Sept. 17, and was reported. A good deal of business came before the meeting. We expect to hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 2 P. M.—J. W. Gammon, Sugarlimb, Tenn., Sept. 25.

TEXAS.

Manvel.—Our church met in council Sept. 15. The District Meeting was held here during the Holidays. We held our love feast will be the following Saturday. One member was received by letter. Brethren J. D. Custer and William H. Weaver were elected to the ministry. Brethren planning to take a trip to the Southern States are invited to visit us.—A. J. Hicks, Manvel, Texas, Sept. 27.

Portland.—We met in council Sept. 22. One letter was received. Brethren Wm. Hall and Jesse Hall were elected to serve. were remembered with clothing. We press onward in the King's business. Hope to have many additions to our membership come, with Catholicism to oppose us, and others who give but little heed.—Amanda Hall, Portland, Tex., Sept. 25.

VIRGINIA.

Bethlehem church met in council Sept. 22, with Eld. D. A. Naff as moderator. Three letters of membership were received, and three were granted. Four letters of membership were received. The visiting brethren reported favorably. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14.—N. C. Wine, Bethlehem, Va., Sept. 23.

Valley House.—We met in council at the Valley house Sept. 23, with Eld. J. A. Dove as moderator, Bro. C. S. Ikenberry as clerk. A very pleasant time was had. There was a good deal of business, in the form of committee work, was transacted. Five letters were received. Our love feast will be held at the Valley house Oct. 14, at 2 P. M. Bro. Ikenberry will preside over us on this occasion. A business meeting of the Missionary Circle was held at the close of the meeting.—Mrs. Mary Ikenberry, Bonneke, Va., Sept. 25.

Command.—Bro. Wm. C. S. Thomas and the writer left our home, Sept. 3, traveling by private conveyance across the mountains to Command, to assist Brethren Cramer and Hylton in Gospel work, where Bro. Thomas preached for two weeks the plain truths of the Gospel, which were received by many in the Blair valley. The members of this church held a council, in which Brethren H. G. Miller, M. J. Good and M. G. Sanger assisted. The next day was a love feast, and among other brethren, Eld. Jos. Beverage, of Monterey, Va., was with us. We had a very good feast, and the members were much inspired. Eld. Thomas officiated. Six were baptized, and others are near the kingdom. We also had the pleasure of visiting Brother and Sister Crummet,—the first members of that section. Brother and Sister Crummet are there giving their time back to the Beaver Creek church, to receive baptism. The aged brother is now eighty-four years old, and his wife but a few years younger. They have lived to see a fully-organized church with a membership of 202.—C. M. Garber, R. D. 1, Box 20, Dayton, Va., Sept. 27.

Bethania.—Bro. A. C. Flory began a series of meetings at the Lebanon church, continuing for three weeks. Two were received into the church by baptism. We feel that the stay with us has been a very profitable one.—S. Estelle Garber, Pt. Defiance, Va., Sept. 29.

Meadow Mountain.—A successful series of meetings is in progress at this place, thirteen were baptized on Sunday, June 25. Quite a number more will likely be added before the large. Bro. J. F. Wampler, a man full of promise, is doing the preaching.—E. D. Kendig, Staunton, Pratt, Va., Sept. 25.

Mill Creek.—Aug. 26 Bro. Bowman, one of our ministers, began preaching for us Sept. 3. He delivered twenty-five insighting sermons and then took his leave. Bro. Bowman came and built up. We feel that we had good meetings. Eleven were received into the church by baptism, and one was reclaimed. Others are seriously considering the cost. The meeting continued for two more weeks.—J. P. Miller, Grettoe, Va., Sept. 28.

Mount Hermon met in council at the Bethel house Sept. 23. Our elder, Bro. A. F. Pursley, presiding. Business came before the meeting. One letter was granted. The annual visit was appointed. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, at 4 P. M. Our series of meetings is to begin Oct. 15, to be conducted by Bro. Jesse Ikenberry and others. The report by the committee on repairing the house was favorable. Since our last report we have been received by baptism, and we are glad to report that our prayer meetings are proving a success.—J. W. Sumner, R. D. 1, Eagle Rock, Va., Sept. 28.

WASHINGTON.

Notice.—My present place of work is in the city of Tacoma, Wash., where I will remain to Oct. 1. I will then move to Olympia, Wash., and be there till Oct. 21. From there I will go to Centralia, Wash., and be there two weeks; next to Portland, Oregon, where I will remain two weeks; then to Chico, Cal., and then south, into Southern California. I will not be able to reach the coast again before the first of November—hopes not that soon. The work accumulates, so that I must move along. Will be glad to meet any and all there. The Lord's field is wide and the harvest is ripe.—A. Hutchison, Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 26.

Tacoma.—Our hearts were made to rejoice, recently, when a young sister was baptized by Bro. Wallace. One was also received by letter Saturday and Sunday were days long to be remembered by the churches in this part of the West. On Saturday evening the love feast was held at Seattle, and on Sunday morning the Sunday-school Convention of the Seattle, Olympia, Centralia and Tacoma churches convened. To the afternoon the eight missionaries to China gave us an excellent program. In the evening Bro. Hutchison preached the Word. The entire meeting was a time of soul-feasting.—A real foretaste of heaven. Bro. A. Hutchison is to hold a two weeks' series of meetings for us beginning Sept. 26. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14.—Harriet Sarah Smith, Fiftieth Street, Tacoma, Wash., Sept. 28.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Chestnut Grove.—Bro. S. I. Bowman, of Harrisonburg, Va., came to us and began a series of meetings at the Pleasant View church, Sept. 3 we met in regular council. One letter of membership was granted. Arrangements were made a favorable report. Bro. Bowman preached twenty-six inspiring sermons during the time and ended up at some of our mission points. Sept. 7 we had a love feast with eighty-nine communicants. During the meetings twenty-four were baptized and two reclaimed. Our elder, Bro. Falkenstein, was also present and helped us to be reclaimed.—Anna F. Sanger, Box 46, Bruceville, W. Va., Sept. 25.

MARKLE, INDIANA.

Sept. 3 we had a very spiritual Harvest Meeting. Quite a number were with us throughout the day. Bro. S. S. Blough, of North Manchester, delivered three spiritual sermons. His morning sermon reminded us of the many blessings which the Lord bestows upon mankind, and why we should praise him. At noon four long tables were set on the church lawn. Here a good dinner was eaten with thankful hearts to God.

At 2 P. M. we again assembled in the house of the Lord, while Bro. Blough presented some powerful truths to us on the subject of "Missions." He reminded us that the best gift any one could give in the collection would be a written guarantee to go and labor for souls who know not Christ. It seems, however, that no one was willing, at this time, to take up the cross for the foreign field. All, however, felt that they can bear the support of those who do go. A collection of $32 was taken, to be sent to the General Mission Board for some field. In the evening Bro. Blough again preached a splendid sermon.

At the close of the day we all felt more spiritually benefited for having been together in thanksgiving unto God for the summer's harvest. At the close of the evening service Bro. Blough asked an interest in our prayers in behalf of his work at North Manchester College, in the Bible Department. We feel to support him with our prayers in this work.

Our revival services are in progress at present, with Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, delivering some powerful sermons to the people in this place. There have confessed Christ and are willing to take up the cross of Jesus. We hope and pray that there may be more souls won for Christ ere the meetings close. Lillian Earhart.

Markle, Ind., Sept. 13.

WENATCHEE CHURCH, WASHINGTON.

Our church met in council preparatory to the love feast, Sept. 2. Eld. A. B. Peters presided. The visiting brethren reported favorably. Two letters were received—Brethren L. E. Ulrich and A. B. Peters were chosen as delegates to our District Meeting at North Yakima. It was decided to offer Bro. John R. Peters to the District, as a member of the new Mission Board. Sept. 9 the church held a love feast. One hundred and four members surrounded the Lord's table. Nearly forty could not participate, for lack of room. Eld. D. L. Miller, of Mount Morris, Ill., Eld. Andrew Hutchison, of McPherson, Kans., Eld. Geo. W. Hilton, and his wife, our missionaries to India, and Bro. J. H. Moore, of the East Wenatchee church, were present. Bro. Hutchison officiated. On Sunday morning our Sunday-school was conducted in the regular way, followed by a short address to the children by Brethren Miller and Hutchison. Eld. Hilton was taken by private conveyance to the East Wenatchee church, where he preached both morning and evening. Bro. Miller preached at this place at 11 A. M. At 3 P. M. we met again for worship, and Bro. Hutchison preached. Also at 8 P. M. Their preaching brought deep conviction to the hearts of those present. On Monday evening Bro. Hilton preached to a large audience. We rejoice that the Chinese people are ready for the whole Gospel, and that conditions are such as to easy for them to understand the Scriptures. We had spiritual meetings throughout. A collection of over $40 was taken. Bro. Miller will continue the meetings until Friday night.

SPECIAL TO NEW SUBSCRIBERS

THE Gospel Messenger has long been considered one of the best religious papers published. Each week it contains sixteen large pages. It is published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren and is the only church organ published by the authority of Conference. Price $1.50 per annum.

The worth of this paper deserves a much larger circulation and in order to secure a larger circulation we are making three special offers.

1st. If you are not acquainted with the merits and wish to subscribe for it for a few months we will send you the paper from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1912 for only 25c.

2d. If the paper goes into a home where it has not been going we will send it from the date your remittance is received to Jan. 1, 1913 for only $1.50.

3d. In connection with the second proposition we will send you a copy of "Our Saturday Night" by J. H. Moore for only 35c extra. This is a book of 192 page., containing fifty-four chapters on as many different subjects. It will make a valuable addition to any library and should be read by every one. It cannot be gotten except in connection with the Gospel Messenger.

Below you will find coupons, which we will kindly ask you to fill out and mail to us at once. Now. The sooner you send the more you get for your money. The longer you wait the less papers you get. Send today.

SPECIAL TO OLD SUBSCRIBERS

We want you to assist us in getting new subscriptions. Speak to friends about the special offer. Show them the coupons. Get their signature. Possibly you have a few friends to whom you want to donate the paper. All we ask is that the paper goes into homes where it is not now being received, for no name will be accepted at these prices that is already on our books.

To every one sending us two coupons at the 25c rate, or one at either the $1.50 or $1.85 rate, we will send postpaid a beautiful art picture, size 16 x 20 inches, of the "Lord's Prayer and Ten Commandments." Any one sending his own subscription is not entitled to this premium.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

Meyner.—Bro. John F. Gish, of the Valley of Virginia, came to us Aug. 19, to conduct our series of meetings. He preached thirteen excellent sermons. Aug. 24 Bro. J. L. Glick, also from the Valley of Virginia, was with us. Aug. 29 we had a council, and 34 of our communion served. Visiting members present were Bro. Crist Garber and wife, and Bro. Jacob Glick. The attendance and interest at our meetings were good until Aug. 28, when we had heavy rains. These, however, while much appreciated, as the weather had been quite dry, greatly reduced the attendance. The meetings closed Aug. 31. One sister was reclaimed and the membership strengthened. Bro. John F. Gish has been engaged in Bridgewater College to resume his studies.—Robert Hevner, Hostetman, W. Va., Sept. 26.

Sugar Land church began a series of meetings Sept. 3, conducted by Bro. Albert S. Arnold. We had good meetings. One was received. We met in council Sept. 9, with Bro. Albert S. Arnold in charge. Two deacons were elected. Our meetings closed Sept. 10, with a love feast. Many visiting members communed. The attendance was small, on account of sickness, but the attention was good.—Valeria B. Jennings, Thomas, W. Va., Sept. 26.

WISCONSIN.

Worden church met in council in the afternoon of Sept. 23 and 25, with Eld. John Heckman presiding. Much business came before the meeting, and the time was well occupied. Our Sunday-school and Christian Worker officers had to be postponed until the next council. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 25 and 26, at 2 P. M.—Nancy Stanley, Wis., Sept. 26.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Windfall.—Our church met in council Sept. 16. Bro. Nathan Cripe, our elder, was present. We have Sunday-school every Sunday at 9:30 A. M. We have about forty-seven scholars. Our membership is about seventy. Our love feast will be held on the 30th, at 10 A. M.—Mrs. Ida Hahn, Windfall, Ind., Sept. 28.

Quemahoning.—Sept. 16 and 17 Bro. and Sister J. M. Blough were with us at the Sipesville house, and gave us three very interesting talks on the customs of the people of India and their work among them. An offering of forty-seven cents. On the evening of the 20th Bro. J. H. Cassady, of Johnstown, Pa., gave us a very earnest and interesting missionary lecture.—Mrs. W. H. Blough, R. D. 2, Boswell, Pa., Sept. 23.

Rockhaven.—Yesterday evening we met in council for the purpose of electing a delegate to District Meeting. The writer was chosen. Later in the evening we held a love feast for a sick brother. Eight members surrounded the Lord's table, and although we were few in number it was indeed a feast to our souls.—Ida Mahler, Rockhaven, W. Va., Sept. 26.

Ashland.—Our church met in council Sept. 22. Eld. Thomas Barkley, of Myrtle Point, Oregon, was with us and assisted in the ordination of Bro. M. M. Wagner to the ministry. Since our last report two were received by baptism. Bro. Barkley preached over Sunday and remained for us in the evening. He will soon leave for Los Angeles, Cal., for a short stay. Our collection at the council amounted to $12.56.—Cora E. Decker, Ashland, Oregon, Sept. 26.

Fayette Valley.—Since our last report one has been restored to fellowship. In the forenoon of Sept. 24 T. A. Eisenhise, of Morrill, Kans., preached us an excellent sermon at the Pleasant Hill house. In the evening he gave a Bible Land talk to a large and attentive audience. He dwelt largely upon the people and customs of India. His talk was very interesting and instructive. He exhibited a number of costumes and articles of usage in Palestine that were like articles he was a plow, similar to the ones used in the days of Christ. Sept. 24 Sister Sadie Miller, who is en route to India, stopped with this church and spoke in the Fayette house in Sunday morning. Sunday evening and Monday evening she spoke in the Fruitland house. Her talks were very interesting and impressive. A collection was taken at each house for the India Mission, amounting to $27.50.—S. J. Kenepp, Fayette, Idaho, Sept. 26.

Finger Posts on Life's Highway

Showing How to Succeed in Life

By JOHN T. DALE

A new book, full of pointers which point in the right direction. A book for the young, the middle aged and the old.

The purpose of the author, in gathering the material, during many years, was to assist those who are striving to gain character, intellectual power, business success, and merited esteem of their fellowmen. Out of a long and varied experience he has been able to collect into this volume more than one hundred articles on that many different subjects, touching human life from almost every possible angle. It is a book no novel nor a story, nor yet a long and dry treatise upon some abstract subject, but a collection of articles on everyday topics, written in language and style easy to be understood, making the points so clear that the secret of a truly successful and happy life is more easily found. The book abounds in words of wisdom, caution and warning.

We have great hopes for the sale of this book, knowing that it will appeal to all classes and, equal fore, and be the means of accomplishing good wherever it goes. Should some of our readers be interested in taking an agency for it, write us at once. We can offer liberal commission. 276 pages, handsomely bound in full cloth. Illustrated. Will be sent to any address, postpaid, for $1.50

FIGHTING THE TRAFFIC IN YOUNG GIRLS

By ERNEST A. BELL

Indoubtless the reading of this book will be a revelation to many. The fact that young girls have been and are being sold into white slavery for immoral purposes is not as yet generally known. This vile traffic has been but recently fully exposed. In this book the facts and horrors of it have been compiled. It tells also of the fight that is being waged against this iniquitous business. Many a young girl who has in times past disappeared never to return became the victim of such as make it their business to buy and sell innocent girls.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

If you have boys and girls you want to know about the pitfalls that are set for them and be able to prevent their being entrapped. Everyone who is interested in the welfare of the rising generations should read this book. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. This book will do it. It also contains much helpful advice to fathers, mothers, sons and daughters.

The book contains over 500 pages, also 32 half-tone engravings, and may be had in either cloth binding, $1.50, or half morocco, $2.00.

WE WANT AGENTS EVERYWHERE

to sell this book. It is a ready seller, and we have a special proposition to make to you. Write us for terms. There is money in it for you and much good to be accomplished in behalf of the girls and boys in city and country.

AROUND THE WORLD

Peace Opponents Are Criticised.

The members of the United States Senate have already secured for themselves unfavorable notoriety by their refusal to confirm the peace treaties with France and Great Britain. Now they are coming in for a large amount of rather sharp criticisms on the part of the French journals, which, we are assured, reflect the sentiment of the nation. The "Matin" very properly remarks: "If the United States Senate insists on rejecting treaties which have been studied with so much care, and which are so important to the security not only of the signatory powers but of the entire world, it will weaken the Government, and place it in an unenviable position."

"With the Power of Money."

In announcing the candidacy of a certain ex-mayor of Topeka, for governor of Kansas, on the anti-prohibition platform, his friends significantly say, "His entrance into the campaign is 'with the power of money,' etc." The phrase, "With the power of money," well describes the real platform of anti-prohibitionists. If they were to make one campaign without the "power of money," their defeat would be so pronounced that everybody would be astonished. It is significant, indeed, that the gubernatorial candidate will have the active support of "the power of money." While significant, it is not entirely new. There has been scarcely a temperance election for years where the foes of the saloon would not have triumphed, had the real issue not been tampered with by the "power of money."

Increasing Accidents Due to Fashion's Folly.

Officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company, after looking into the causes of seventy-three cases of injury, sustained by patrons of the road in getting on and off trains, and mounting and descending stairways at stations, declare that lady patrons of the road, in wearing high-heeled shoes and the latest tight-fitting skirts, are deliberately exposing themselves to fatalities of various sorts. The cases above referred to range from slight contusions to painful bruises and cuts, and all of them are admittedly due to the arbitrary demands of "Dame Fashion" in so restraining the natural and unobstructed movement of the body that disaster will sooner or later overtake the unhappy victim. The so-called "worshiper of fashion," nowadays, is but a slave to a most cruel tyrant, willingly sacrificing time, money, health and even life itself in her service.

Regular Sunday-school Attendance.

We are told of a Chicago boy, now nine years old, whose earliest introduction to the Sunday-school was at the tender age of two months, when, seated upon his mother's lap, he started on his continuous Sunday-school career. Up to the present time he has not missed a single session of the school, besides accompanying his mother to various Sunday-school conventions, local, national and international. Might it not be well, for many of our members, to profit by the example just cited? Too many parents make the extreme youthfulness of the child an excuse for its absence from church services, and also give it as a pretext for absenting themselves. There is altogether too much parental solicitude as to "the hardness of seats" and other "harmful effects" upon the little ones, when taken to a church service. The old-time practice among the Brethren brought the entire family,—large and small,—to the church on Sunday, to the general benefit of all.

What Will the Outcome Be?

Concerning the present attempt of Italy to gain possession of Tripoli, there are various opinions expressed. Italy claims to be acting in behalf of the welfare of her own subjects in Tripoli, and even the Pope seems to think that the interests of civilization will be served by an Italian protectorate of that district. On the other hand a Turkish journal pertinently asks: "What sort of Christianity is it that will, with bold effrontery, seek to gain control over a neighbor's territory?" According to New Testament teachings wars are essentially unchristian, and no amount of glossing over can make the present war in any sense a justifiable one. It is simply a case of coveting a parcel of land, just as Ahab, centuries ago, cast longing eyes upon Naboth's vineyard. What impression of Christianity will Mohammedans gain from the present imbroglio? Will it further the interests of American missions, schools, hospitals, etc., in Turkey? Is there not a possibility that the frenzied and fanatical Mohammedans,—not of Turkey alone, but the world over,—may be goaded to a so-called "holy war," involving the slaughter of thousands of defenseless Christians in other lands? Such things have happened before and may occur again, if the present contest should arouse the turbulent elements of Islam.

The Purity Congress.

From Oct. 23 to 27 the Sixth International American Purity Congress will convene at Columbus, Ohio. This gathering discusses the various phases of the social evil, and its delegates include the foremost workers in the anti-vice movement. The "white slave traffic," nationally and internationally, will be considered in the sessions of an entire day. Other sessions will discuss the educational and legislative aspects of the great fight for purity. A notable step in the right direction has already been made by Indiana. That State requires a medical certificate, testifying to the personal purity of applicants for a marriage license. Undoubtedly much is accomplished by gatherings like the one referred to above, for the sentiment created is likely to lead to effective legislative measures. Let it not be forgotten, however, that the cause of social purity will be most effectually advanced by means of proper home influences. "Train up a child in the way he should go." The web of the nation is made from the thread we spin at home.

Disturbances in China.

Under date of Oct. 6 the American Methodist missionaries at Chengtu, the recently-besieged capital of Szechwan Province, report the slaughter of 10,000 people in the struggles between the insurgents and the Government troops. Two thousand of those who were slain were soldiers. The missionaries declare the encounters have been one of the most harrowing sights of their lives,—a most emphatic demonstration of war in its awful destructiveness and horror. Ten thousand rebels are still in possession of the province capital, and more than 20,000 soldiers are marching against them, and hope to secure a peaceful surrender, thus putting an end to the present rebellion. The missionaries also report that, as a result of the disturbances, thousands of natives are homeless and without food, and that many, becoming desperate, are taking their own lives. Though not in any way concerned in the uprising, they are in desperate straits, and the missionaries are endeavoring to secure means for their immediate relief.

The Bible Forbidden in Greece.

Under the new Greek Constitution an absolute prohibition forbids the publishing or circulating of the Bible in modern Greek. This applies even to the Old Testament, written originally in Hebrew, so that only the old Septuagint is now accessible to the people, as the ancient Greek is not understood by the common people, however, the Bible will hereafter be available only to scholars. This leaves the masses of the country unprovided with the blessed Word of God in their own language, and all because of an unwise official interdiction. While such a ruling is most deplorable indeed, probably not much else can be expected from a country so arbitrarily governed. What shall we say of a country, however, like our own, in the highly civilized twentieth century, in which the Bible and its blessed teachings are not given free scope in the training of the young, in many of her public schools? Truly, the time has come to do some vigorous work, lest there be further attempts against the Bible and its blessed teachings.

American Excavators at Samaria.

Several partly buried columns on the site of ancient Samaria, discovered in recent explorations, afforded grounds for the hope that there might be ruins of some importance among the rubbish of the old city. American excavators were not slow, therefore, to make a most extensive examination, and soon uncovered the remnants of what was once a Roman temple or palace, supposed to have been built by one of the Herods on the site of the palace of wicked Omri, who, it will be remembered, had his capital and palace in that locality about a thousand years before the Herods. Not only has the extent of the palace been revealed but much pertaining to its general construction. Mosaics and well-paved floors bear witness to the fact that here once stood a building of rare magnificence and splendor. While still in its glory the wrath of an offended God pronounced the fateful doom upon the city, and upon him who lived in the gorgeous palace. "Samaria shall be plowed as a field," was the solemn denunciation, and it has literally come to pass.

A Commendable Change of Program.

Brief mention was made, in last week's issue, of the English monarch's proposed visit to India, and the lavish display incident to the occasion. In view of existing conditions in that country, and the famine which is likely to affect some sections, the King has now given definite orders that the entire trip be arranged as unostentatiously as possible, and that all public functions in his honor be reduced to the simplest forms possible. He hopes, in this way, to avoid all needless expense, thus relieving the people of India from added taxation at a time when they are least able to bear it. The English monarch is setting a most laudable example of good sense and commendable economy,—a principle that might well be practically applied by those in the humbler walks of life. King George, remembering the welfare of others, is willing to deny himself the splendor and display of regal magnificence in order to ease the burden of his Asiatic subjects. Most of us need to learn the lesson of burden-sharing more thoroughly. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ."

A Surprising Declension.

The Ecumenical Methodist Conference, in session at Toronto, Ontario, for some days, recently, was attended by delegates from all quarters of the globe. At the session of Oct. 5, the all-important question was the decrease of membership of the church, which, it was revealed in the reports submitted, has taken place the world over, during the last decade. The western section, comprising the Methodist churches in the United States, Canada and Japan, reports a net increase of membership, while the congregations in Great Britain, Ireland, France, South Africa, Australia, and the mission fields in general, show a decided and unaccountable loss of membership. While the above applies to the Church of the Brethren has, at times, been a source of discouragement to some of her members, there is much that is encouraging. We are holding our own and reaching out into new fields. And yet, whatever success may have been attained in the past, should be but an incentive to greater and more far-reaching attainments in the future. "Whatsoever ye do, do it heartily as unto the Lord."

Special Days for Church Observance.

An exchange refers to the fact that in many churches and Sunday-schools days are set apart for special purposes, in order that certain great interests may be emphasized. While many of these are good in themselves, there is great danger lest some of these occasions afford features of entertainment rather than devotion. In fact, the matter has been carried so far, in many Sunday-schools, that almost every Sunday is devoted to this or that object, sometimes only very remotely connected with the real work of the church. Very properly the "Christian Evangelist" suggests that there be room left in the church calendar for a "day to be devoted to humility, penitence, forgiving one another, and the promotion of brotherly love." It occurs to us that perhaps more than one day might be profitably used in all of our Brethren churches in emphasizing and practicing these fundamental virtues of Christian life, to the end that all evil speaking, malice and hatred, strife and misrepresentation be put away, that the Lord's work, rid of all hindrance, might go onward to a glorious fruition.

Defying Known Danger.

In last week's issue we chronicled the deplorable flood in Pennsylvania, briefly stating the chief facts of that unfortunate affair. While the total number of lives lost is not as large as the facts of the case, after careful investigation, show criminal neglect on the part of those who caused the dam to be built so insecurely, which makes the loss of life inexcusable. One can not help but wonder, however, that the inhabitants of Austin would, without precautions, have stood the threatening danger of the dam when they, for more than a year, knew it to be unsafe. Knowing the consequences, they accepted the risk incident to staying where they were. They did not take steps for the strengthening of the dam, nor did they provide for a timely warning in case it should break. All this seems very strange, indeed, and yet multiplied thousands are living today in the presence of impending danger, far greater and more certain than a breaking dam. They spurn the wooings of Divine Grace that would have them make "their calling and election sure," and live in total indifference to the fate that awaits those that "know not God, and that obey not the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ."

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

Alone.

Alone—on the seashore at evening,
Watching the trackless main
Whose billows in endless cotillion
Move as if to a joyous refrain.

Alone—while beholding the vision
Of the sun sinking low in the west,
There comes a sweet mental transition
Of the endless bright day of the blest.

Alone—in the fast falling darkness
Where night is consuming the day,
Wondering where a wise Father
In mercy is leading the way.

Alone—in the shadows reflecting
O'er the pathway of life I have trod,
I feel the whole journey is wasted
Except where I traveled with God.

The Rebaptism at Ephesus.

BY EDWARD FRANTZ.

It is fortunate for those of us who like to criticise, that our Shenandoah Valley Corresponding Editor has, besides the gift of clear and forceful expression, the endowment of a large and generous nature. We can be sure that, though he does not agree with us, he will gladly accord us the pleasure of speaking right out and saying what we think.

His findings are, in brief, that the twelve at Ephesus had been baptized by a properly authorized administrator, in the proper mode, and with proper design, and yet, "because they lacked the proper previous teaching and faith," they were rebaptized. How much more then, in this day, those coming from other churches?

It should not be overlooked in passing since we are to draw such important inferences from this case, that the narrative does not say that rebaptism was required of these men. Read Acts 19:1-7 and notice how the question came up. Paul asked whether they had received the Holy Spirit. No, they did not know that this was possible. That was strange, and necessarily raised the question of their baptism. And when they had heard Paul's explanation of the true significance of baptism, "they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." Apparently, because they wanted to be.

But we can well believe that if Paul had not already suggested rebaptism he would have done so, for it would be hard to imagine a case more lacking in the essential elements of true baptism than this one seems to have been. The administrator? He did some rather loose teaching, but for all we know he had been regularly authorized and may have carried credentials, properly signed, so we let him pass.

The mode? Not all would find our brother's reasoning on this point entirely compelling, but we shall raise no questions here. The mode, we may grant, was all right.

The design? If by this overworked word is meant simply the professed relation of baptism to the remission of sins, we can say that this, too, was all right. But if we allow the word design to include the whole significance of baptism, in the minds of these Ephesians, we are bound to think that it was very far from being all right. The purpose of baptism is not exhausted in its relation to forgiveness. Christian baptism is much more than a cancellation of the past; it is also a promise and pledge of the future, as this very incident shows. But whether we use the word design in the broader or narrower sense is not important, if it does not cloud the main issue. The important point is: What was the state of mind with which these men received baptism?

The answer is easy. Paul found that they had not received the Holy Spirit, had not been taught to expect this gift, did not know that the Spirit could be received, or possibly did not know there was such a thing. (So says the old version.) Worse still, they had not been taught to believe on Jesus. Think of it, if you can. Christian baptism without faith in Christ, —without even a profession of faith in Christ. Do you know of anything like it in modern times? It looks to us as if a baptism like this was about as far from true Christian baptism as could be conceived. Just one thing could have made it worse, insincerity in the candidates. But these men were not hypocritical. They were sincere seekers after truth. We are not surprised, then, that, when they heard the apostle's teaching on the real meaning of baptism, "they were baptized into the name of the Lord Jesus." Any sincere person would want to be, in like conditions.

Our Editor holds that the wanting element in the case of these twelve was "proper previous teaching and faith," and we quite agree with him. But one could wish to have the phrase defined a little. Proper previous teaching and faith about what? The author seems to leave it to be inferred that this might concern any matters of Christian belief whatever, the whole scheme, perhaps, of Christian doctrine and practice. But there is no hint of this in the narrative. Indeed it is quite plain that the previous teaching and faith, which Paul corrected, had to do with the significance of baptism itself. It concerned matters immediately connected with the act of baptism,—faith in Jesus Christ and the reception of the Holy Spirit.

Where is the analogy between this case and the case of those who wish to come into the Church of the Brethren from other churches, and have been baptized according to Gospel requirements as we understand them, including "proper previous teaching and faith," and who, under the Spirit's tuition, have been growing in grace and in the knowledge of the truth until they have come to believe that they can serve God more perfectly with us? The only possible ground for such analogy would be in the supposition that the previous teaching and faith, which Paul corrected, concerned the details of the general scheme of Christian faith and life; but such a supposition is excluded by the account of the incident, and is not in harmony with Scripture teaching elsewhere, concerning the prerequisites and meaning of Christian baptism. We are not here dealing with the rebaptism question in general, but we must respectfully submit that this question, as it stands before the church today, is not touched by the rebaptism of the twelve at Ephesus. That incident has no bearing on our case.

No bearing on our case? Wait a little. Maybe we'd better think again. Yes, indeed, it has a most important, most vital, bearing on our case. Not the case that stands before our Conference for decision, but our case,—yours and mine. For the ringing message of that incident is that forms and formulas are empty and worthless when the attitude of the mind does not correspond with them. Here were twelve men baptized with strict correctness, we may well believe, so far as form and formula were involved, but there was, in their hearts, no faith in Christ, no hope of the Spirit's guidance, and it availed them nothing.

What is it, according to this teaching, that makes baptism valid or invalid? We would not disparage the importance of the proper form. We would have this scriptural, too, for only thus does the true symbolism of baptism appear. But we would, if we could, exalt to something like the place which its importance demands, the larger question of the true import of this holy rite, baptism, by the teaching of this same apostle Paul, reaffirming his declaration that the old life of sin is being buried and that there is rising in its stead a new life of righteousness. Christian baptism is the renunciation of all other lords and the full and final commitment of the life to the rule of the Lord Jesus Christ.

What did your baptism mean to you, my brother? Don't you half suspect that, if Paul were here to put some heart-searching questions to us, as he did to the twelve at Ephesus, he could make more than one dozen of us wonder whether, perchance, we ought to be baptized unto the name of the Lord Jesus?

"Taking Life Too Serious."

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

An article in the California Voice, under this caption, is worthy of notice in the Messenger. I therefore take pleasure in presenting it to the Editor for space:

"The above is a quotation from a sermon delivered in one of the churches of this city a few days ago by the pastor. Ordinarily we agree with this utterance, but in the connection in which it was used, as reported to us, we do not agree with it. The inference, as used, to our mind, is a serious reflection upon our Lord and is calculated to do serious harm. The whole sentence, as reported to us, reads, 'Christ drank more wine than any of us Methodists drink; we take life too serious.'

"The implication here is that Christ was a wine drinker in the sense that he drank intoxicating wines. There is no justification for such a conclusion in the Bible, nor is there in the life and character of Christ.

As there seems to be a lingering thought yet, in the minds of some people, and, we are sorry to say, in the minds of some clergymen, that our Savior was a user of strong drink, and that he not only made, but gave it to others, we believe that the time and space will not be wasted to look into this phase of the subject.

"There is no question before the world today that has a more serious bearing upon human society, physically, socially, morally and spiritually than this. In the first place, under the old dispensation, no leaven, yeast of any kind, was allowed—nothing fermented or that would produce fermentation was used in the Passover, and the officiating priests were forbidden to use any kind of strong drink. At Christ's Passover, the 'last supper,' he described the wine that he used as 'the fruit of the vine' that is, as Ferrar Fenton says, the offspring of the vine, or that which is borne of the vine. The vine does not bear intoxicating drink. The fruit of the vine is not intoxicating. There is no alcohol in it; it is pure, good, wholesome, nourishing and health-giving, a beautiful emblem of the life and strength-giving grace of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ.

"Intoxicating wine is the emblem of decay, disease and death. In our Lord's time there was always an ample supply of the pure, unfermented 'fruit of the vine' which was preserved in an unfermented state. Christ making wine at the marriage feast of Cana in Galilee is, says Mr. Fenton, 'one of the most misunderstood and misrepresented passages in the whole Bible.' Among the Orientals and Romans, the 'best wines' were not fermented at all. 'New wine was put into new bottles or skins, free from all yeast or leaven, that it might not ferment, otherwise putting the fresh juice of the grape into old bottles or skins, fermentation would take place and the bottles burst.' Fresh grape juice or 'the fruit of the vine,' was boiled until it was thick, and stored away in large jars or skins and was thinned with water to drink.

"Aristotle says that by 'keeping it for a time in the skins or jars, it becomes as thick as butter and had to be cut out with spoons.' Pliny, speaking of the 'best wine' says, 'The grape juice is boiled down to one-third of its bulk, to secure the finest wine.' The sweetest, most flavored to the taste was called the 'best wine.' No, Christ was not a maker or user or dispenser of alcoholic liquors, and if he 'drank more wine than some of the Methodists drink' it was the pure 'juice of the grape'—the 'fruit of the vine.'"

What Is the Matter With Our Churches?

BY WILLIAM L. JUDY.

It was a bright Sunday morning in early July when I strolled leisurely down the street. One could not have wished for a more beautiful day. It was church time, and I began to look about for a place of worship. Our own people, so far as I was acquainted, had none in all this big and prosperous State, so I was not particular which church I should attend.

There were quite a few churches along the avenue, —most of them large and costly edifices with imposing fronts. Surely, I would have no difficulty in finding a place of worship. I turned my steps to the nearest one. As I approached it I saw a placard on the door, "Closed until September." I went on to the next one,—only a square farther. The massive double doors were closed and bolted, as much as plainly to say that all business within had been indefinitely suspended. "God's house shall be a house of welcome, with doors ever open to receive the stranger," I mused.

But these doors gave no such welcome; on the contrary, they seemed to repulse and drive away the worshiper who sought to enter.

I crossed the street to the next one. Its lofty steeple, crowned with a golden cross, pointed upwards high into the sky, as if to turn men's gaze from the low, groveling things of earth to the heaven of God's goodness and grace. It was a beautiful building without; I began to imagine what an inspiring place of worship it must be within. When I came nearer, I read the bold announcement, "Closed during the summer for repairs." By this time I had given up hope of going to church, yet I thought I might as well try once more.

I did and with a little better success. There was the sign, however, "Main auditorium closed; services in the chapel to the rear." I found the chapel a small room with plenty of seats unoccupied. I listened attentively to what the minister said. Several times he mentioned the fact of the hot weather, how uncomfortable it was in a closed room like this one, and therefore he promised to make his sermon real short. What he said was beautiful to listen to,—a splendid oration and flowery language. But it was no sermon,—it was not even preaching. I remember little of it now, except that once he asked the question, "What is the matter with our churches?" At the time the question made a deep impression on my mind, and I began to ask myself the same thing.

I chanced to pick up one of the weekly announcements of the church. There, among other things, I read the following: "Our Sunday-school is closed for the summer." "Owing to the season of the year and because most of our members are away on their vacations, all meetings will be discontinued except the short morning service." "Our pastor leaves on his vacation this week and will take a much needed rest during the coming two months."

I began to think, "What is the matter with our churches?" "Owing to the season of the year," etc. Well, I'll confess it was a little warm. However, it was comparatively cool within the chapel, while the streets of asphalt and brick without were baking hot. But they were crowded with people, laughing and moving in all directions, as though out for a gala holiday. I questioned a bystander, and he readily remarked, "Oh, everybody goes to the parks on a roasting day like this."

Still pondering over the minister's question, I boarded a car and went down to the heart of the city. Here were the saloons, the drug stores, the theaters, the cigar stores, the moving picture shows,—all wide open, all crowded. Wasn't it too hot to go to church? Didn't the church announcement half-shamefully confess as much? Yet people were crowding into a stuffy, ill-ventilated moving picture show, and in addition paying for the privilege. It seemed that everything was wide-open. Wasn't it Sunday? Again I asked a bystander, and was told, "Of course it is Sunday, but it's the only day of the week that the great majority of people have to themselves. Why shouldn't they enjoy life at least one day out of the seven?"

The minister's question burned itself into my thoughts. I would continue my investigation; I would go to the parks. A visit to one was sufficient. It was true, "Everybody goes to the parks on a roasting day like this." The day was roasting and it seemed that the whole city was at this one park. Yet there were a half dozen other parks in the city and every one of them just as crowded. Hot weather was no consideration to these people, nor was "the season of the year."

The churches were empty, the parks filled. The minister spoke to empty pews, the actor played to crowded galleries. I could come to only one conclusion, The hot weather idea is a bugaboo. Some church members want to sleep late on Sunday morning, after a Saturday night's good time. Breakfast being late, it is so nice to sit on the front porch and read that great blessing (?) of modern civilization, the Sunday newspaper! So interesting and edifying to read about the big murders, the latest divorces, the newest fashions! So funny to look at "Happy Hooligan" and the rest of the comic section! After this feast of fine things, it is so nice to pack a lunch and skip off to the park and get back home late at night! "Go to church?" Why, really, they couldn't find time, and besides, the weather was so awfully hot. That is where the hot weather bugaboo was born,—a lusty infant that grew rapidly and soon found a cordial welcome in nearly every city church.

I could not rid my thoughts of the minister's question. Then I recollected the announcement, "Because most of our members are away on their vacations," etc., and "Our pastor leaves on his vacation," etc. City people lead such a strenuous life, at such a fast pace, that they have to like away to the country for a few weeks, to quiet their shattered nerves! The vacation idea was a good one in itself but some ingenious church members improved upon it. Let the church take a vacation and the pastor too. Of course the pastor couldn't be expected to object very seriously even though he well knew two things,—(1) That Jesus Christ works seven days out of every week and four seasons out of every year. (2) That the devil takes no vacation but keeps his business thriving best at the very time that the church is taking a vacation "owing to the season of the year."

I came to my second conclusion, The vacation idea is just as fallacious a bugaboo as the hot weather idea. "Everybody" is not away on a vacation at the same time nor are most of them away for more than a few weeks. That is to say, at any one time during the summer only a part of the church members were really out of the city, and if all the members who remained in the city had gone to church, the pews would have been crowded.

I came to my third conclusion, "IF PEOPLE DO NOT WANT TO GO TO CHURCH, IT IS EASY TO INVENT SOME PLAUSIBLE EXCUSE WHICH WILL QUICKLY QUIET THEIR CONSCIENCES. APPARENTLY THESE TWO BUGABOOS HAVE BEEN INVENTED FOR THIS VERY PURPOSE, AND THE INVENTIONS ARE PAYING THEIR AUTHORS BIG ROYALTIES." Now I no longer wonder at the "closed" signs on so many church doors. I begin to think that I have found part of the answer to the minister's question, "What is the matter with our churches?"

Another Phase of the Temperance Problem.

BY C. D. REEVES.

We think that Christians and friends of prohibition are doing a great wrong by subscribing for, and admitting into their homes, papers that advertise strong drink.

I have been in the homes of a good many people who appeared very strong in their hatred and denunciation of the liquor traffic, and who insist on every Christian voting the prohibition ticket, and yet they were taking one or more papers that display large advertisements of different kinds of strong drink.

Solomon says, "Wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." Now, are we not deceived by strong drink when we allow it to be advertised with impunity in our homes? Let us see. Suppose, when you get your next daily paper, and open it to read the news, you would be confronted by a large and cunningly-devised advertisement of a house of ill-fame and the white slave trade? Would you not be shocked? Do you think you would continue your subscription and allow the paper to come into your home to be read by your children and friends? Is the liquor traffic a less dangerous evil?

Again; suppose, when you open your county paper next week, you would see there a half column advertisement of the vulgar or obscene picture business, or some lottery or gambling scheme? Do you suppose you would pass it lightly by, as you do the liquor advertisement? I hardly think you would. The fact is, the devil has us deceived regarding the liquor traffic.

We receive into our homes papers that advertise the liquor business without a thought as to the consequences when, if the same paper persisted in advertising lesser evils, we would not allow it in our homes. It is a clear case of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel.

What would be your feelings, next week, when you pick up your church paper, or other church publication, to find there a glowing advertisement of wines, liquors and cigars? I am sure you would at once "have it in" for the Publishing House, but I want to ask this question: "Which is the greater sinner,—the man who will publish liquor advertisements or the man who willfully reads them and carelessly permits papers containing such to be brought into his home, to be read by his family?"

The advertisements certainly bring results, or liquor dealers would not continue them and no sane person will say that they can possibly bring anything but evil results. We know that no business could run without advertisements. We believe that if all Christians and friends of prohibition would insist that their publishers either omit liquor advertisements or stop the papers, a great step forward in the cause of temperance would be taken, and that the liquor traffic would receive a terrible check, if not a mortal wound.

We believe that no Christian, especially, should pay for, or admit into the home, any paper that publishes advertisements of strong drink in any way, shape or manner.

Now I would suggest, as a remedy for this great evil, that all friends of temperance everywhere pledge themselves not to take a paper that advertises liquor. I would suggest the holding of meetings at frequent intervals, at which suitable temperance programs may be rendered, and that everything possible be done to create sentiment against liquor advertising. I would advise that our members write to their several publishers, setting forth their purposes, and requesting publishers either to omit liquor advertisements or at once to stop all such papers.

Further, I think we should use our influence in trying to get our legislatures to pass laws forbidding liquor advertisements, and as a further check to pass laws that will exclude all liquor advertisements from the mails. This has been done regarding the obscene picture business and also the lottery nuisance, and why not do the same regarding the liquor traffic?

We are aware that this would be a tremendous task, but the liquor traffic is a tremendous evil and requires tremendous measures to wipe it out.

Some Essentials to a Successful Ministry.

BY DAVID M. ADAMS.

A GREAT many people have a very meager conception concerning the essentials to a successful Christian ministry. There are those who seem to think that all a young preacher needs to do is to learn to deliver a public address with grace and elegance, or, as they say, "to make a good talk."

That the ability to construct and deliver a sermon in an intelligent manner is indispensably necessary to a successful Christian ministry, the writer does not only admit, but earnestly avows. But there are many other things which the young minister (and it is to the young I aim to write, because I have no right to counsel men who have been preaching more years than I have been living) needs to possess if he wishes to be successful as a leader of men.

Granting that the young minister has been divinely called; possesses the Holy Spirit; and has a burning desire to honor God and bless and save humanity, we shall at once proceed to consider certain traits or elements which he should possess, the lack of which will greatly lessen his power and influence over the people he is endeavoring to lead.

Manliness.

Wherever you are, or whatever may be your environments, remember the charge that David, when the days drew nigh that he should die, delivered to his son Solomon: "Be thou strong therefore, and shew thyself a man." "Let no man despise thy youth." You can not help being young, but you can help being boyish. Be manly! Watch your conduct in the social circle! Don't always be trying to raise a laugh! Avoid saying funny things! There are, of course, some people who enjoy foolish jesting, but the substantial, reliable, and real intelligent people of any community do not want a foolish, boyish jester for their spiritual guide.

Modesty.

In your work for the Master always keep self in the background,—out of sight as much as possible. Your sermons will be powerless if delivered in such a way as to cause your auditors to conclude that self is uppermost in your mind, rather than the Christ and his Gospel, that you are expected to preach. Absence of pretension is characteristic of the Spirit-filled minister, and such you must be if you expect to succeed in your high and noble calling.

Don't be too forward. To assume the prerogatives of a senior minister, is a fatal blunder. In the exercise of your ministerial functions and privileges always keep in view the apostolic injunction, "Ye younger, submit yourselves to the elder."

Good Manners.

This point is so important that the world has long ago had the proverb that "Manners make the man." Culture and refinement are a valuable asset to the minister. Churches have a right to require their preachers to be gentlemen; to cultivate good manners in the presence of society; to be courteous to ladies and children; and above all, to treat old age with the greatest degree of deference and regard.

According to Whately, good manners are a part of good morals. "Manners," says Burke, "are what vex or soothe, corrupt or purify, exalt or debase, barbarize or refine, by a constant, steady, uniform, insensible operation, like that of the air we breathe in." Virtue must be supplemented by good breeding to secure freedom from degenerating into rudeness or incivility.

Upon true culture and refinement depends much of the minister's success in reaching the hearts of his people. Of course he must avoid the extreme of the fop. He must not be polite merely to conform to some outward law of men, but in demonstration of the fact that "Christianity is designed to refine and to soften, and to polish off the rudeness and arrogances of our manners and tempers; and to make us blameless and harmless, the sons of God, without rebuke."

Good Judgment.

This is another factor essential to ministerial success. "Great ability," says Gambetta, "without discretion comes almost invariably to a tragic end." Nothing can take the place of good judgment. There are many shining qualities in the mind of man, but there is none so useful as good judgment. You should exercise discretion not only in what you say, but in what you actually do. The pastor who makes an effort to incriminate his members when things are not going right, is not worthy the name. There are some things both said and done, sometimes, by parishioners, concerning which ignorance on the part of the pastor is bliss.

In making pastoral calls, the proper consideration should be shown toward a family of meager means. It should be beneath the dignity of any pastor to impose upon the hospitality of those in poor circumstances. For him knowingly to enter into a home twenty or thirty minutes before meal-time, where only enough has been prepared for two or three, has its embarrassments on one hand, and evinces a lack of good judgment on the other. No matter how familiar he may be with his host, his lack of discretion is inexcusable. Even though his host may pardon his breach of etiquette, she is made to question his judgment,—a thing which he can by no means afford.

Let us be careful so as not to commit this inexcusable blunder. Better do without a meal than to embarrass a poor Christian mother. Better exercise judgment, even though it cost the gratification of the appetite. In Titus 1: 12 Paul speaks of certain men as being "slow bellies," much better rendered "idle gluttons." Now there are some such men living today. Among them is found the preacher who visits his members primarily for the sake of a good meal. Such are a burden to the poor and a general nuisance everywhere. They lack good judgment.

Sociability.

If you are not sociable you are sure to fail as a minister or pastor. Avail yourself of every opportunity to greet a member of the church or an acquaintance,—yea, even the stranger. Don't overlook the children and the aged.

But you must know how far to go in your greetings and associations. Be careful lest you become too familiar. Avoid being too sweet! Don't become obtrusive! I know a minister who has, in a measure, lost his influence because of his impertinence. He is disposed to stop every person he meets with the view of entering into a conversation. A minister who falls into that habit is sure to be avoided, to a certain extent.

Tidiness.

I have known ministers who considered it unnecessary and fussy to be neat in their personal appearance. But tidiness is not fussiness, neither should it be so considered. Your personal appearance should become a matter of great concern, because people see what you are, before they see what you do or say. Henry Davenport Northrop expressed a psychological truth when he said, "The notion which is formed of the interior qualities is insensibly influenced by the exterior show." "We must speak to the eyes," says Walpole, "if we wish to affect the mind."

I had thought of considering another factor essential to real success in ministerial work, namely, courage, but space forbids. So, in the hope that somebody will be benefited by what I have already written, I submit these remarks to the consideration of the readers.

Obituaries.

BY W. J. SWIGART.

MOST papers contain obituary notices. The obituary column is an expected and regular part of every issue. Whatever else is or is not in, the column of deaths of less or greater length is always there; and, I presume, is read or scanned over by the most readers with less or more interest. In local papers they are of local interest; in a general paper they are of both local and general interest.

What is the purpose of such announcements? Who is concerned about them? One thing is certain, I suppose,—it does not interest the dead; and yet it is about the dead. But their friends are interested. When people die, their immediate friends like to have the fact brought to the attention of the public in print, even if the public already knows of it. Some persons are sensitive on this matter, and feel keenly any abridgment or delay in the publishing. The public are also interested and are entitled to information in regard to deaths that occur. And so it is conceded that obituary notices constitute a proper and important part of every publication.

What should be included in such a notice? What information does the public naturally want or inquire for, in regard to the dead? First, of course, is the statement of the fact of the decease. Then the date, the age of the deceased, his religious life, labors and worth.

But, naturally, there is another immediate inquiry in the reader's mind,—of curiosity in some cases, it may be, but of real interest mostly,—"What was the cause of the death?" The announcement of the death of a neighbor or friend brings immediately and naturally the inquiry for the cause. The mere announcement that a man was killed is vexing. How was he killed? Even the closest friend, overwhelmed and shocked with grief at the sudden announcement of some loved one's death must know the cause and the details.

The blind man must tell the manner by which he became blind to every new person that sees he is blind. A man with only one leg must explain what became of the other one. Of course, this may sometimes be merely morbid curiosity.

In the obituary notices of the MESSENGER the cause of the death is conspicuously absent*. In some issues it is rather rare to find the cause mentioned in connection with the death notice. To read of the death of a young man, twenty years of age, or of a young woman eighteen years old, or a man in the prime of life, at forty-three years, naturally excites the inquiry, "What is it that has thus smitten youth and vigor, or broken the strong staff?"—even if the one should be a stranger to us. Not infrequently it is stated, "died suddenly," and occasionally, "was killed," with no further information or detail. The reader is interested, naturally, and unsatisfied, and concludes that if it is worth while to publish a death notice as a matter of news, with all the details of relatives, extending, sometimes, to uncles and mother-in-law, it will add to the information to publish the cause of the demise. In all legal mortuary notices the cause of the death is a required part.

Huntingdon, Pa.

*Invariably the cause of death is published in the Messenger, if so stated by the sender of the notice. It is obvious that there are cases in which friends of the deceased do not wish to state the cause of death, and it would not be proper to insist upon that point under the circumstances, but in cases where it can be done, it might be well to heed Bro. Swigart's suggestion.—Ed.

"He Shall Be Called Wonderful."

Isa. 9: 6.

BY W. R. DEETER.

THE word "wonderful" means that which causes wonder or surprise. Anything out of the ordinary may cause us to wonder, or surprise us. Among the many appellations, applied to Jesus Christ, is the one at the head of this article. His life was such that many characteristics of it would cause us to wonder.

1. "Look at the Manifestations of His Wisdom.—The officers that came to arrest him, returned to the priests and Pharisees without him, after listening to his speech and declared that "never man spake like this man." They were so startled and surprised at his wisdom that they could not arrest him. After listening to that famous sermon on the Mount, the people "were astonished at his doctrine: For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes". (Matt 7: 28).

His wisdom was also manifested in answering the questions propounded by his enemies. The Pharisees endeavored to bring him into ill-repute with the civil authorities by the question, "Is it lawful to give tribute unto Cæsar, or not?" He perceived their wicked motives and told them of their hypocrisy, and then said: "Show me the tribute money" . . . "Whose is this image and superscription?" They answered, "Cæsar's." Then he said unto them: "Render therefore unto Cæsar the things which are Cæsar's; and unto God the things that are God's." A wiser answer could not have been given. Even his enemies marveled and left him.

So it was with the Sadducees and their "seven husband" question. They were astonished at his doctrine. Next, the Pharisees put forward a lawyer. He was as unsuccessful as the rest. Jesus then asked them two questions, and no man was able to answer him a word" (Matt. 22: 46). In all these questions he astonished them with his wisdom.

2. He Was Wonderful in Power.—This was manifested in many ways. Think of the poor leper, afflicted with that dread disease which could be cured only by Divine Power! It was a contagious disease that consigned him to quarantine and would surely cause a loathsome death. He said unto Jesus: "Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean," and immediately his leprosy was cleansed. Here was power. His power was made manifest in restoring the dead to life, as in the case of the ruler's daughter, the son of the widow of Nain, and Lazarus. It was manifested in calming the storm on Galilee.

3. He Was Wonderful in His Great Humility.—His enemies would fall before him. He "thought it not robbery to be equal with God; but made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of men." He was so great, and yet he humbled himself to wash his disciples' feet. In his humility he allowed his enemies to say all manner of false things against him, and even to spit upon him, without any resentment, whatever. And when legions of angels were at his command, he submitted himself unto the hands of his enemies, to have a mock trial and finally to be crucified.

4. He Was Wonderful in His Self-sacrifice.—"Though he was rich, yet for your sakes he became poor, that ye through his poverty might be rich." Whatever were his riches, power and financial possession in glory, were all sacrificed, and he became exceedingly poor. All this was done for others, that they might become rich. It is said that "poverty pinches those harder who were once rich, than it does those who were always poor." That would make the sacrifice of Jesus so much greater. He also sacrificed himself in giving himself a ransom as a sin-offering for us all, that we might be made the righteousness of God through him.

5. He Was Wonderful in His Love.—Jesus said: "Greater love hath no man than this, that a man lay down his life for his friends." This is the limit of human love, but his was greater. He laid down his life for his enemies. No one ever came to him for help that was turned away. He took little children in his arms and blessed them. He wept over the doomed city, Jerusalem. While his enemies were persecuting him, and while he was suffering the greatest possible pain at their hands, he prayed for them that God would forgive them.

6. He Was Wonderful in the Purity of His Character.—He was the only man without sin. He was absolutely blameless. "Who did no sin, neither was guile found in his mouth: who, when he was reviled, reviled not again; when he suffered, he threatened not; but he committed himself to him that judgeth righteously" (1 Peter 2: 22, 23). He never asked for forgiveness, for he had no sins to be forgiven. He is a wonderful Savior!

Nebraska and Northwestern Kansas District Meetings.

BY GALEN B. ROYER.

In a trip west, in the interests of missions, I was permitted to visit three State Districts. I have written about one of them and now speak of the other two.

This trip was an inspiration. If any one thinks he has all the problems on his own desk, or in his own church or District, just let him go elsewhere. But each organization views its problems with that eye of faith that is bound to win, and one can not help but see hopeful signs. These frontier churches must meet questions from new angles,—slightly different from the long-established churches. It was refreshing to hear one of the overseers of a flock say that his congregation was making first and foremost,—over methods and all else,—the saving of the soul. A splendid ideal!

One needs but to have his eyes open to see how steadily, surely, and almost rapidly, the men who once were leaders are giving place to others. And the others are not men with grey beards and of the "eldest," but smooth-faced men, young in years, so much so that one would find the term "overseer" or "bishop" more suitable to their position than "elders," as is commonly used. This is most hopeful for the church on the frontier where action, great faith and courage are so much needed. Districts that are not putting forward their young men are losing some of their best possibilities.

The Nebraska Institute and District Meeting.

Had a stranger dropped into the village of Octavia, Sept. 30, he would have discovered that an unusual number of visitors were in town; for the Brethren's State Sunday-school Institute had opened, and representatives from the congregations of the Brethren, from about every part of the State, were in attendance. The unusual but much-needed rain had decreased the attendance considerably and yet there were plenty to have one of the most interesting and uplifting meetings one is permitted to attend. Prof. Emmert, of the Bible Department of Mt. Morris College, gave lessons on Bible study, the relation of the Old and New Testaments and its bearing on next year's Sunday-school lessons, and devotional studies in the Bible. Prof. Clement, President of McPherson College, was simply at home and brimful of the best of thought for every one, on the influences of the teacher. In addition to this there were talks on the Sunday-school teacher, the child in the school, Sunday-school organization, missions in the Sunday-school, and several evangelistic sermons that were helpful. These three days' Bible and Sunday-school study, preceding District Meeting, is a splendid thing for the District. The secretary, I. B. Wagoner, tried to get the best for the sessions, and those in attendance appreciated it.

Tuesday morning the Ministerial Meeting was held, and the session fearlessly took hold of some live wires. The meeting passed a recommendation to the District Meeting, which was later granted by said body, that is intended to help the ministerial forces of the District greatly.

The District Sunday-school Meeting was thrilling with interest and helpful suggestions. The Christian Workers' Meeting, in the evening, reached such a point that unanimously it was decided that the societies of the State should raise funds and support a worker on the foreign field. This action was the more commendable in view of the fact that the crops have been decidedly short, and in some parts, through hail, a complete failure. Further, the District is now supporting two workers on the foreign field. But, in the face of all this, more work for Jesus is to be done in Nebraska.

The Missionary Meeting, on Wednesday, was full of life, and a strong sentiment was developed in favor of the missionary educational campaign, passed by Conference last spring.

At noon the District convened for regular District work. Bro. Geo. Mishler was elected Moderator; Bro. J. J. Tawzer, Reading Clerk and Bro. Milton Weaver, Writing Clerk. Early in the meeting the Omaha work was taken up. Bro. Weaver and his faithful wife have been doing some good work. An opportunity was presented to purchase a convenient property, and hardly before one realized what was being done, $1,900 was raised in the meeting,—a sample of the earnestness with which the District will respond to its needs. One query goes to Annual Conference. It relates to the much-needed Christian Workers' organization for the Brotherhood. Brethren D. G. Wine, J. B. Moore and Edgar Rothrock were appointed a committee on ministerial control. Bro. Milton Weaver is made Missionary Educational Secretary. A vigorous protest is sent to President Taft, and others, concerning their support of the Brewers' Congress, to be held in Chicago. Bro. L. L. Meek is reappointed treasurer of Mission Board, Bro. Edgar Rothrock, Sunday-school Secretary, and Bro. D. G. Wine, member of Standing Committee.

District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado.

Preceding the District Meeting, Oct. 6, a whole day was given to the earnest consideration of the development of the work of the Master in various programs.

I was not permitted to attend. Bro. A. C. Daggett, chairman of the District Mission Board, spoke on Thursday evening on the "Best of Life" to a well-filled house. His message was earnest and was listened to closely.

Friday morning the District Meeting convened and organized by electing Bro. D. A. Crist, Moderator, and Bro. O. H. Feiler, Reading Clerk. The Writing Clerk, Byron Talhelm, holds his office for three years and may succeed himself. In this way the District conserves experience at a very important point.

Missionary interests occupied a good share of the forenoon. In this District is located the Denver Colored Home, for which the Brotherhood is being canvassed. The District listened to good reports. The Mission Board is doing its best. That Colored Mission Home proposition is the beacon light for darkest Africa as well as for the many colored people of our own land, and I wish that every brother and sister knew how much good they could do the benighted by helping in that work. If you knew, you would help liberally.

In the afternoon session some thirteen queries were disposed of in a most commendable spirit. It was interesting to discover that it is the rule in this District that only delegates can make a motion, second it, amend it and decide the question. The reason given for such a restriction is that there was a time when a few made the motions, and hurried business through, perhaps not to the welfare of the cause. The plan is worthy of consideration in Districts where a few "run" the meeting; for these delegates were awake to their responsibility as I rarely saw in similar bodies. Several queries were asked to go to Annual Meeting, but the delegates concluded to return them, and it was done without much speech making too.

Bro. A. C. Daggett is the member of the Standing Committee next year, Bro. Geo. Eller alternate. Among the appointments for District work are the following: Bro. T. E. George, treasurer of Mission Board; Bro. Chas. A. Ball and D. A. Crist, associate members of the Board. Bro. T. P. Oxley, Missionary Educational Secretary; Bro. Chas. A. Ball, Treasurer for the District; Bro. Geo. Canfield, Sunday-school Secretary; Bro. J. E. Small, Chairman of the Temperance Committee.

The District is large and the work is great. New zeal was inspired, as through Missionary Meetings, Sunday-school Meetings and other gatherings the membership considered the work of their field. One gets some idea of their earnestness and helpfulness when he thinks that next year the meeting will be in the Lowland church, not far from Denver, Colo., the house being seventeen miles from the railroad. But the District will receive a hearty welcome, and be well cared for, for the delegate said they had good roads, and understood what they were asking for. Compare this with the demands elsewhere, to have the District Meeting where sidewalks and car service are so good that one finds little discomfort in attending, and you have some measure of the willingness of the membership on the frontier, to get together for the work of the Lord.

The Belleville church, where this meeting was held, knows how to make every one feel at home. The churchhouse was well filled with visitors, their homes were overflowing, but their hearts were still bigger than all this. Neighbors and friends joined in their hospitable efforts. The congregation has Bro. Steward for pastor, and it is said they have one of the best Sunday-schools in the State. By the way, the District Secretary made a report of the District Sunday-schools that made me feel good, and I asked permission to say so. The District is awake along temperance lines and other lines of activity also.

PRESCOTT, MICHIGAN.

Sept. 15 I left my home to visit some members in Oscoda County, Mich., and to hold them some meetings. I arrived at Comins the following day, where I was met by Bro. Troyer, and conveyed to his home. Meetings had been appointed for the evening in a schoolhouse, where we met a fair audience, that gave good attention. We had meetings on Sunday at 10.30 A. M. and 7:30 P. M. We never met a more earnest body of hearers than we had during these meetings.

On Sunday afternoon, in company with a few brethren and sisters, we drove about three miles to a clear lake, where baptism was administered to a dear young sister, who is the first person baptized by our Brethren in the county, so far as known. Here is a body of about nine members, who are much in need of a resident minister. Who will go? Here is an opportunity for brethren to get good, cheap homes, and help to build up the Master's cause. Those interested should write to Bro. E. M. Troyer, Kneeland, Mich., enclosing a stamp. May the Lord send more laborers into his vineyard, is our prayer. Jno. P. Bowman.

DENVER, COLORADO.

After a hard day's work of packing our belongings, and being very tired, we retired for the night. Soon there was a rap upon the door. Wife having just stepped out, I said: "Come in," and a happy crowd of some thirty of the brethren and sisters came marching in, to bid us farewell. We are to leave them in a few days to take a much-needed rest from all cares and responsibility,—at least for a while.

All of the visitors brought a present for wife and myself, in token of their appreciation of our labors while among them. The evening was spent in singing, speech-making and prayer, and at a late hour all returned to their homes, leaving us to our meditations. We thought of our meetings and partings here on earth, and of that glorious meeting where there will be no more separation. The Denver church knows how to make their pastor and wife feel that their labors were fully appreciated among them.

Sunday, Oct. 1, was a full day, as it was our last day with the Denver church. We had an all-day service, and the meetings were well attended by the members and friends. We held our love feast in the evening. Thirty-six members communed. The writer officiated, and Bro. Frederick Weidman assisted. It was truly a feast to our souls. May the good Lord bless all, to live each day nearer to the cross of Christ! C. E. Wolf.

THE ROUND TABLE

Economy.

BY J. H. MILLER.

ECONOMY is the parent of liberality. It may be called the sister of temperance and of good judgment. Sound economy gives sound action. It is foreseeing,—a good provider and a safe guide. It is well to walk in wisdom's ways, and to act wisely in providing for the better world,—getting ready for a journey to the heavenly Jerusalem. The loose change which many throw away, or spend injudiciously, would often form the basis of a fortune. In religious matters many do not take proper care of spiritual blessings, to enrich the soul for the better life. Economy, joined to religion, industry and sobriety, is a better outfit to business than a dowry of many thousand dollars.

No one admires stinginess. That will bring us down to rags and starvation. We want to live and let live. Our religion, however, should prompt us to act wisely, that, by habits of economy, we may help others to move on in the line of duty. I have no sympathy with the notion that a poor man should hitch himself to a post and stand still, while the rest of mankind moves forward. I see no reason why a man should make an iceberg of himself, in order to lay up treasures on earth. We should live the Christ-life to gain an inheritance in the kingdom of God. It is our privilege,—yes, our duty,—to live within our means,—just as it is our privilege to make the best use of our Heavenly Father's blessings. We should economize so as to do the more effectually all that Jesus has commanded us.

A penny is a small thing, but a multiplied number of them will give us the necessaries of life. This or that Bible command may seem to us almost useless but if we treasure them up carefully, and heed all that Jesus has said, and obey him, blessings will be showered upon us, so that we can be well fitted for service, ready for the Master's use. When we are blessed with good common sense and fair opportunities, our religion and devotion to the Master's cause will open the way for proper economy, by which we may prosper the Lord's work, and walk in the king's highway. We must not spend the means, lavished upon us, too freely, but use them with much care. God has showers of blessings for all. Let us be careful how we use them, so that we do not waste the Master's goods!

How to Love an Enemy.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

JESUS says, "Ye have heard that it was said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy: but I say unto you, Love your enemies, and pray for them that persecute you; that ye may be sons of your Father who is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sendeth rain on the just and the unjust" (Matt. 5:43-48, Am. R.).

One can not read this text carefully without seeing that the Lord is asking something very unusual of his disciples. It is human nature to love friends and to hate enemies, or at least to resent their evil deeds.

Since that is human nature, how can we help it? Can one force love into his heart for one who is unlovely? No, he can not. If the Lord really expects us to make such a radical change in our dispositions, he must give us a method that will work.

What is his method? Look and see. You will find it parallel with the command to love. "Pray for them." That is his method. When you honestly take up the task of reaching and blessing a man by prayer, when you pray to God to free that man from his sins, to show him the way of righteousness, to give him a change of heart and strengthen him to do the right, you take the attitude of true love toward him; you do what the truest love would prompt.

But that is not all. If you do that faithfully and perseveringly, it will not be long until you find that your feelings toward that man have changed. You will find that whereas you once felt ill toward him, because of his evil deeds, you no longer feel that way. Now you feel more like a mother feels toward her wayward son.

If you don't believe this, try it and see. If you do believe it, the way is open to you to enter into the life of perfect love. You know how to become a true son of God.

The Boy Asking a Blessing.

BY TOLMAN H. FERNALD.

THERE is a little incident that recently came into my life that I wish to pass on. As I live some distance from my work, I have been taking my dinners at a restaurant during this hot weather. Recently, while at dinner, two boys came in and sat at the same table with me. I took them to be sixteen and eighteen years old, respectively. They were brothers, as I learned later. When their orders were given and received, they, then and there, bowed their heads, and the older one, in a low, but a clear and distinct tone of voice, offered a prayer to God, and asked a blessing upon the food. There was a great deal of talking when the boy began, but as soon as he uttered the first few words, "God, our Heavenly Father," all was still and, after he finished, a low but solemn "Amen" could be heard all over the room. Those boys were doing the one thing that I have never known adult members of Christ's family to do,—to ask God's blessings upon the food, and offer a prayer in a public restaurant.

The incident set me to thinking. Do we teach our boys to do those things? Are our children brought up to have the "Dare to be a Daniel" spirit? Do we ask God's blessing upon our food wherever we eat? Do we at home even? Let us look well to the home training of our children! Do not be severe, but do it in a spirit of love, and see what a vast difference there will be. These two boys have started right, and no doubt will be grand and noble workers for the Master. I also had the pleasure of a long talk with them after dinner, and have since received a call from them at the office. They live a few miles out in the country, and have promised to call upon me whenever they come to our city.

The Best Rule of Interpretation.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

THE principle that underlies the interpretation of civil law is this,—that it be understood according to the plainest and most obvious sense of the language in which it is written. Words are to be understood in the most literal meaning of the day and time in which they are used. This forms the basis of the interpretation of the law. It is founded upon common sense, and enables the judiciary to arrive at just and fair conclusions, when adjudicating matters in cases where there are conflicting opinions or interests.

The Bible is given to us in human language. We only know its meaning as we know the meaning and force of words. It is a common sense book. It seeks to instruct the mind by setting forth truth and doctrines that are urged with reasons for obedience. There is nothing in it that is contrary to reason. It appeals to man's reason, to his hopes and fears. It sets life and death, his highest interests and his greatest dangers before him, and asks him to deliberately choose for himself what he prefers.

The principle that governs the interpretation of civil law, should, therefore, be applied to the Divine. It is sane. It is safe. It helps to safe and sound conclusions. It is satisfactory to the intellect which, after all, must go in advance in the matter of soul saving. The soul may cry out, "What must I do to be saved?" but the answer must come by way of the mind. Speculating, mystifying or spiritualizing are at once unreliable, unsatisfactory and dangerous. "They read in the book, in the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the reading" (Neh. 8:8).

Ashamed of the Coat.

BY C. D. HYLTON.

NOT long since I was sitting in a railroad station, waiting for a train. I was a stranger in that section and I knew of no Brethren living near the place. A gentleman came walking in, with a long beard, his upper lip shaved clean, and his hair cut from the lower point of one ear square across to the other. His coat had a standing collar and rounded skirts. As he passed by me, I noticed the absence of buttons behind. He looked like a typical brother of a quarter of a century ago.

I was considering the propriety of approaching him, when I noticed in his hand a lighted cigar. I sat quiet, and soon he passed out. As I looked out through the window, I noticed that he was enjoying his cigar.

It being quite warm, I proceeded to remove my coat. As I noticed the striking similarity of our coats I was impressed with the thought that the Brethren's coat ought to stand for something. The plain coat is becoming to a nice, clean man, but I am ashamed of it on a smoking furnace.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Miriam, the Good Sister.

Ex. 2: 1-8.

For Sunday Evening, October 22, 1911.

1. Miriam was the older sister of Moses and Aaron (v. 4). She was a prophetess, and an instrument of much good to Israel (Micah 6: 4; Ex. 15: 20). She died in Kadesh, near Edom (Num. 20: 1).

II. Examples of Helpful Women.—(1) "She stretcheth out her hand to the poor" (Prov. 31: 20), serving the poor freely and cheerfully. (2) "Ministering unto him" (Matt. 27: 55), a noble example of woman's steadfastness. (3) "Began to wash his feet with tears . . and kissed . . and anointed them with ointment." An expression of affectionate tenderness, coupled with reverence and love. (4) "Phœbe our sister" (Rom. 16: 1, 2), a helpful churchmember; a woman of Christian character. (5) "If ye have judged me faithful . . come into my house" (Acts 16: 14, 15). Conversion-work is heart-work. It creates a desire which seeks opportunity to express gratitude for kindnesses received.

For Workers to Answer.—(1) How did Miriam show herself a good sister? (2) What danger did she have to face? (3) What do you suppose she thought about as she waited by the river? (4) Why did not the mother stay to watch the babe? (5) In what way can the girls of today show themselves good sisters?

PRAYER MEETING

The Struggle That Leads to Victory.

James 4: 1-11.

For Week Beginning October 22, 1911.

1. The Mastery of Resistance.—We learn to overcome by sturdy resistance from day to day. The farmer must conquer the stubborn soil if he would successfully raise his varied crops. Forests must be cleared away, the soil broken up, in order that the virgin forest of yesterday may wave with ripened grain. An education is but the result of many hindrances overcome. So, spiritually, we must make up our minds to conquer the difficulties in the way, in order to gain the crown (1 Cor. 9: 24-27).

2. How May the Victory Be Gained?—"Not by might nor by power, but by my Spirit." "Be subject therefore unto God." If we are not subject unto God, there is no possibility of making the devil subject unto us. It is God's arm that strikes, and not ours. God's arm saves,—not man's. True, we must fight the good fight of faith, but we win because of our Captain; we are mighty because he is mighty. His Son becomes our Helper, his Word becomes our shield, his Spirit becomes our sword, and in his might we go against principalities and powers (Rom. 8: 35-39).

3. A Constant, Unwearying Effort Required.—We must not forget that the stream is constantly pouring its tides around us, and must be fought back. If we do not build with God, the floods will overflow us. The dikes must be cast up; but once God lays his hand to the work, we may cry out to all the fury of the sea, "Hitherto shalt thou come, but no further; and here shall thy proud waves be stayed" (Job 38: 11).

4. Make a Full Surrender to God.—"Submit yourselves therefore to God." There is the secret of all success. Unless there is submission to God, there is no resistance of the devil. We are either God's servants or the devil's slaves. Victory comes only through submission (Rom. 8: 14-17).

HOME AND FAMILY

Keep on Smiling.

There ain't no use in kickin', friend, if things don't come your way;
It does no good to holler 'round, an' grumble night an' day.
The thing to do's to curb yer grief, cut out your little whine,
An' when they ask you how you are, jest say,
"I'm feelin' fine."

There ain't no man alive but what is booked to get his slap;
There ain't no man that walks but what from trouble gets his rap.
Go mingle with the crowd, dear friend, where all the bright lights shine,
An' when they ask you how you are, jest say,
"I'm feelin' fine."

Yer heart may be jest bustin' with some real or fancied woe,
But if you smile the other folks ain't very apt to know.
The old world laughs at heartaches, friend, be they your own or mine;
So, when they ask you how you are, jest say,
"I'm feelin' fine."

The Great Task of Happiness.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

The life of Saul is of surpassing interest. Browning in his poem, Stanley in his story, and Chopin in his "Funeral March," have enshrined Israel's king in the hearts of the people. One of the most striking scenes in the life of King Saul was his attack upon David. Saul in his palace, with every wish gratified and every command obeyed, so unhappy and melancholy that the shepherd boy, David, was called to play his harp, in the hope that the music would drive away his gloom. Well has the Psalmist said, "Let the heart of them rejoice that seek the Lord."

Faith in God brings happiness. King Saul was downhearted and miserable. He hated David, he was jealous of David and so, while David played the harp, Saul thought only of killing him and he threw his javelin at the musician. By all the rules we usually go by, Saul should have been happy, but he was wretched. And there are other people who have many things to make them happy and yet they complain and are miserable. Why is this?

In the first place, we believe that many forget that not by striving can we add one cubit to our stature, or make one hair white or black. Neither can we alter our birth-gifts. Before we were born, our fathers chose for us, and it is ours to accept the temperament and task that God has given. The robin redbreast, cheerily singing in the old apple tree, is in no wise troubled because the nightingale pours forth its notes of liquid sweetness. Men stop and listen to the nightingale, and pay no heed to the robin, but that does not worry the robin. Neither troubles itself about the other; each sings in its own way. If we were only as wise!

Try as a man may, he can not alter his birthright, although many a man has broken his heart in trying. We say, "Hitch your wagon to a star," but we should always add, "Let it be the star under which you were born." When a race horse is trying to pull a heavy load, he is straining every nerve in a task for which he is not fitted by nature. When the heavy draft horse is urged to trot a mile in a few minutes, we have another failure. If the race horse were placed on the road, and the draft horse harnessed to a cart, the chances are that both would accomplish what is expected of them. Many a man is trying to be an artist who would make a clever sign painter. Do try to find the thing which nature intended you to be, and then work faithfully, and you will find happiness.

There are other causes of gloom and discontent. Some of us never learn to enjoy as we go along. Some other time, in some other place, when we are a little better off, and have more leisure, then we will surely enjoy ourselves. But not now. We have too much to do to think about it. We keep our muscles tense and our nerves up to such a pitch that we cannot help chafing, worrying and fretting; of course we are unhappy.

Most of us take life too seriously. This is especially true of middle-aged people. We find so many things to sadden us, as the years roll on, that we forget how to laugh and enjoy things. As you walk along the streets of a large city, notice the sad, grave faces. It does seem as if the daily struggle of life exhausted all our good cheer and happiness. We grow sour, morose and melancholy. Our friends find us dull and uncompanionable.

Let the gospel of good cheer do its beneficent work! Our sympathies go out to the children who are always hushed as soon as they get boisterous, and told to go and sit down and be quiet, until that is about all they can do. Their little lives are suppressed until they almost lose the power of spontaneous, hearty laughter. It is positively harmful to suppress the fun-loving tendencies in children; they were intended to bubble over, to be joyous and happy; let them laugh and romp and play. What have care and trouble to do with young life? Anxiety and worry on the face of a child shows that somebody has been criminal. What is sweeter than the merry laugh of a child?

There is one thing that makes success possible to the poorest man: it is to go through life with a smiling face. Strange how doors will fly open and fortune greet the face that is radiant with sunshine. All things seem possible to him, and he labors gladly in the hope of success. Unhappiness is a frequent cause of insanity. Because disappointment has been their lot, men brood over their failures until they lose their reason. Perhaps they have cherished lofty ambitions which it was not in their nature to realize and in the failure of their plans they refuse comfort. This should not be. Men should take to their hearts the teachings of Jesus, and leave some of these things with God, instead of fretting.

"Let nothing make thee sad or fretful,
Or too regretful! Be still!
What God hath ordered must be right,
Then find it in thine own delight, my will."

Forget the disappointments! do not let your mind dwell upon them! Out of doors we are all equal. There is no monopoly of sunlight or starlight. We can all rejoice in the winding road, the little river and the cattle in the meadow grasses. We can all trust the great Creator of all. And trust and joy are close together. If we do not understand our disappointments, we can at least believe that all things work together for good to them that love the Lord.

We have read of a naturalist who had a cocoon of an emperor moth in his possession. It hung in his library all winter; in the spring he noticed it trying to break the bounds of the cocoon. It struggled, so hopelessly as it seemed, to make its way through the tough fiber of the cocoon, that the naturalist clipped the hole larger for it, so that it might easily emerge. The fine, large moth was his, but it never flew. And some one told him afterward that the struggles were necessary to force the juices of the body into the insect's great wings. It was a mistaken kindness to help it. Let us be patient and joyously triumphant over the things that would make us sour and sad. Let us go on with smiling faces and brave hearts, facing the sun, and care and worry shall be left behind. Then we shall not falter in our "great task of happiness" as Stevenson says, but we shall give praise and joy to our God.

When Mother Is Gone.

BY EMMA J. MODLIN.

Almost every number of the Gospel Messenger records the death of some dear mother, and tells of children left to mourn. Scattered from east to west we find them, where, on leaving the parental roof, they have located to make homes for themselves. Then we can not but think of the hearts made sad, when the dispatch comes, saying, "Mother is gone!"

We know the weight of these words, for one morning, not long ago, there came a telegram, saying, "Mother is dead. Can you come?" The first thought of never meeting mother again in life, was almost unbearable. Could I never see her smile again, nor feel the warm clasp of her hand? No, never! Then, from the depth of our heart came forth the prayer, "O God, may we meet beyond the river."

In one short hour we were on our way to the train which was to bear us to the scene of sadness. On our journey we had much time for meditation. We thought of that great mother-love that, through twenty years of widowhood, had so bravely struggled in bringing up her large family to be useful men and women. Then we thought of her wise counsel that had been to us as a guiding star. We fondly remembered that willing hand that cared for us through the dark days of affliction!

Gone? Yes, gone! Gentle reader, have you a mother? Is she standing on the verge of Jordan? Then be a dutiful child lest you hasten her departure. Never ignore her ideas just because she is old. Never censure her religious views by telling her they are behind the times, simply because they are not so changeable and "up-to-date" as your own. Probably, when they both pass through the Refiner's fire, hers will shine the brighter of the two. If her wise counsel has helped you over the hard places of life, tell her so. If you have despised her counsel, and crushed her old heart in sorrow, acknowledge your wrongs, ere it be too late.

Remember "our days are swifter than a weaver's shuttle." Mother may be here today, but tomorrow we may bow over her lifeless form. Tears of remorse may then flow, but mother heeds them not. That heart we hurt is still. And her hand, O how cold! No more making wrongs right, now!

Kind friends come, and enshroud that loving mother for the tomb, and as we take our last lingering look, we would give worlds (were they ours to give) could we but tell her how sorry we were for our proud ingratitude. But we can only say, "Farewell, mother," realizing that our next meeting will be when Christ comes to reward us all "according as our works shall be."

Our Refuge.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

Long ago there were six cities of refuge for the children of Israel. Those days are past, but God's children still need a refuge. As we sail over the sea of life, in our frail barge, we need a pilot to guide us to the haven of refuge. As we meet the trials and adversities, afflictions and temptations of life, we need protection that will never fail. Jesus Christ is our Refuge, for he can help us always. He has overcome the world, sin, death, hell and Satan. Well may we call him King of kings and Lord of lords.

The Bible tells us that the Lord "is our refuge and strength, a very present help in trouble" (Psa. 46: 1). When we experience dark and dreary days,—when clouds hang dark and low,—when we seem to be all alone, let us not forget to keep close to Jesus, for he thinks of us, and loves us dearly. He has provided a refuge from the tempest, and has promised us an eternal home.

Why My Heart Overflows.

Because I live in a country where every good man is just as good as every other good man.

Because my home may be just as good as I wish to make it.

Because the birds sing just as sweetly for me as they do for the king of any country in all the world.

Because kind friends have been given to me to cheer and bless me every day.

Because I have all my powers of mind and body.

Because I can read and think and keep pace with the great thoughts of the world.

Because I can help to make the government of the land in which I live better tomorrow than it is today.

Because there is nothing I can not do if I will be true to myself and to him who made me and placed me here.

Because the longing to help others all I can is stronger now than ever before.

Because no shadow which has fallen across my pathway has dimmed the glory of the face of him who goes on before me.—Farmer Vincent.

PLANS are being considered by the District of Northeastern Kansas to place a worker on the foreign field, to be supported by funds from that District.

THOSE people who boast about their religion not costing them anything, might do well to remember that most things are worth no more than they cost.

THE revival at Washington, D. C., conducted by Bro. Isaac Frantz, is reported to have been a splendid meeting. There were nine applicants for membership.

BEFORE the District Meeting of Tennessee there were three calls for the Annual Meeting,—one in 1913, one in 1914 and the other in 1915. It was decided to petition for the Conference in 1914. Bro. A. M. Laughrun will represent the District on the Standing Committee.

THE membership of the Smithfork church, Colo., is said to be increasing most encouragingly. The congregation is arranging to erect a meetinghouse this fall.

THIS week Bro. W. R. Miller is at Topeka, Ind. After Nov. 1 he goes to Johnstown, Pa., to remain in that locality several weeks, and from there he goes to Maryland.

BRO. JOHN BURTON did a good work in a series of meetings at Oakley, Ill. His sermons are said to have been practical, and as the fruits of his labors thirteen were brought into the church.

SISTER M. A. SENSENBAUGH, of Grinnell, Kans., not only reads the MESSENGER and enjoys its contents, but says that since the beginning of the year, she has found time to read the Bible through.

IT is now fully settled that Bro. Grover L. Wine and wife will not go to India this season. Sister Wine's health is such as not to make it advisable for her to undertake work in the foreign mission field.

NEXT week Bro. D. L. Miller goes to Jonesboro, Tenn., with the intention of spending a few weeks among the churches in that State. He writes us that he has long desired to visit the churches in Tennessee.

THE Wiley congregation, Colo., has decided to erect a brick meetinghouse, with basement and the necessary Sunday-school rooms. The name of the congregation was recently changed from Prowers to Wiley.

BRO. GALEN B. ROYER, who is at his desk this week, starts east on Saturday, with the intention of attending the District Meeting of Southern Indiana, and before his return may visit a number of points in other States.

THE District Meeting of the First District of Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri, to be held in the Broadwater church, Essex, Mo., is announced for Nov. 2. The Ministerial Meeting convenes the day following.

THE District Meeting of Northeastern Kansas convened in the Washington Creek church Oct. 3. Considerable business was disposed of, but no queries are sent to the Conference. Bro. H. L. Brammell represents the District on the Standing Committee of next Annual Meeting.

ON account of the war between Italy and Turkey the missionaries going to India will not sail on the date announced. The ship on which passage had been engaged, an Italian vessel, has been taken off for the present, and accommodations will have to be provided on some other line, and just now, when all the vessels for India are crowded, this may not be an easy thing to do.

TO allay any anxiety regarding the safety of our Chinese missionaries, we again state that the Szechuen Province, the scene of the prevailing difficulties, is fully a thousand miles from the Shansi Province in which our missionaries are stationed. It should also be remembered that the Chinese Government has matters well in hand, and is amply able to quell any further uprisings.

ONE of the Districts in the Middle West, with a total valuation of at least $7,000,000, was asked to raise $1,500 for District Mission work, but will likely fail in reaching the desired amount because some of the congregations are unwilling to do their part. If these and all other churches in the Brotherhood were to give according to the Scriptural standard,—"as the Lord hath prospered,"—there would be an abundance of means for all needed church and mission work.

THE South Waterloo church, Iowa, decided to do a fine thing, in raising through her two Sunday-schools, not to exceed $125 a year for a scholarship in Bethany Bible School, the money to be used in preparing some worthy young brother or sister of said congregation for mission work, at home or abroad. Other large churches might also arrange for scholarships in our different schools, where the proper training may be secured for young members desiring to enter the mission field. The idea is a good one.

WE have notice of the death of Bro. William S. Toney, elder of the Upper Deer Creek congregation, Ind., who died Sept. 25 at the age of about seventy-four. Bro. Toney was one of the leading spirits among the Brethren in Middle Indiana, a man of fine ability, full of life and sunshine, and greatly interested in the work of the church. We are promised a further account of his life and labors.

BRO. J. K. MILLER, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, says that he is pleased to see in the MESSENGER a well-arranged advertisement of Lordsburg College, Cal., and thinks that the managers of the school should be complimented for their good taste and business judgment. Like hundreds of wide-awake members among us, he would delight in seeing all of our schools advertised in our columns, from week to week. We believe that it would not only be a help to the schools, but nearly a dozen neatly-set school advertisements, with small cuts of the buildings, would give the MESSENGER a decidedly educational tinge. We believe that our schools are missing much by not making a greater use of our advertising department.

WE are asked to comment on the action of a church that holds a boxing match for the purpose of raising money to pay off their church debt. Actions of this kind need no comment. Any man who walks the street will tell you that a church engaging in this business is twice dead,—plucked up by the roots. It is sneered at by outsiders, and even criticised by infidels. To offer such miserable incongruity to an intelligent community is enough to insult nine-tenths of the people. We presume the men and women of the town where the match was held are profoundly ashamed of the church and the pastor that tolerated the performance. As viewed by the sensible people of this country, the church and the pastor have put themselves to open shame.

AS is known to many of our readers, Elkhart County, Ind., at her last election, went back on her record as a temperance county and, concerning the conditions which prevail at this time, Bro. W. R. Miller writes us this: "Here are a few more Elkhart statistics. Last year the jail board bill was $1,050. This year, under the reign of twenty-seven saloons in the county, the board bill will be over $3,000. Criminal prosecutions are thirty-five per cent more this year, under saloons, than last year when the county was dry. The orphan poor bill is very much higher, and the insanity already, this year, shows a marked increase over last year. These figures I got from the county auditor, and they are a matter of record in the auditor's office in Goshen, and are authentic."

WE understand that the late Annual Meeting at St. Joseph, Mo., lacked over $2,000 of paying actual expenses. The crowd was smaller than anticipated. Many of those in attendance took their meals at the city restaurants, and in this way those, having the meal accommodations in charge, did not have the patronage for which they had arranged. Add to the sum named the few thousand dollars raised by the business men of the city, and it will be observed that it costs something to hold an Annual Meeting. At no distant day we may have to devise plans for holding our Conferences at places that will not financially involve the Committee of Arrangements. In fact, any Annual Meeting ought to pay its expenses in full, and this can probably be done only when each one attending pays his part.

OCT. 5 was a red-letter day with Bro. D. L. Miller, it being the seventieth anniversary of his earthly pilgrimage. On that day he received hundreds of letters and cards from friends all over the country. It required hours to read them, and he says that his heart was touched by the many kind words and good wishes, expressed by those who thought to remember him in such an interesting manner. Since it is hardly possible for him to answer each letter or card, he wishes, in this way, to express his thanks and appreciation to each one who so kindly wrote him. We are saying this at his request, and we are sure, from what he writes us, that the hundreds of little missives that came to his desk, not only cheer him and make life more worth living, but they will help to make the burdens of life much lighter.

Brethren Almanac for 1912.

THE MINISTERIAL LIST in the Brethren Almanac, while a great convenience to all, is of special value to every minister. Every minister's name should be on the list and his address should be correct in every particular. We must depend for this information upon those who can give it, and unless pains are taken to give us this with the utmost accuracy, we shall fail in obtaining a correct list.

WHAT WE WANT EVERY MINISTER TO DO AT ONCE!

1. To see if his name and address are correctly given in our last Almanac.

2. If not given at all, or given incorrectly, give us name and address in full, as they should appear.

A GENERAL REQUEST.

We kindly request elders, clerks of churches, and all other members, who can help us in correcting the list, to give us the names of ministers that should be omitted, whether because of death or whether they have been relieved of office. In fact, we shall be glad to be apprised of any mistake in the list of which you may have certain knowledge.

PLEASE DO IT AT ONCE!

The Bible and the Public Schools.

SOME startling statements have come to light relating to ruling the Bible out of the public schools of Illinois. We refer to certain circulars that are being widely circulated by the freethinkers of the State, under the name of American Secular Union and Freethought Federation. These circulars show that the out-and-out infidels are the ones who are working against the Bible, and by their shameful literature, influence and threats are endeavoring to overthrow all the good that has been brought about by the Scriptures. It would appear that this Federation claims the credit of not only ruling the Bible out of our schools, but keeping it out.

The Federation makes a number of demands affecting not only the State of Illinois, but the whole of the United States. We quote a few of these demands:

1. We demand that the employment of chaplains in Congress, in the legislatures, in the navy and militia, and in prisons, asylums, and all other institutions, supported by the public money, shall be discontinued.

2. We demand that all religious services, now sustained by the government, shall be abolished; and especially that the use of the Bible in the public schools, whether ostensibly, as a text-book, or avowedly as a book of religious worship, shall be prohibited.

3. We demand that the appointment, by the President of the United States or by the governors of the various States, of all the religious festivals and fasts shall wholly cease.

4. We demand that all laws, directly or indirectly enforcing the observance of Sunday as the Sabbath, shall be repealed.

5. We demand that all laws looking to the enforcement of "Christian" morality shall be abrogated and that all laws shall be conformed to the requirements of natural morality, equal rights and impartial liberty.

We invite special attention to section four, calling for the repealing of all laws concerning the Sabbath. These are the people who would not only exclude the Bible from our schools, but they would destroy the Sabbath also. Repeal all the laws relating to the Lord's Day, and we will soon have a nation without a Sabbath.

Then take a good look at the last demand. Suppose all laws enforcing Christian morality should be abrogated, then what? Everybody knows to what this so-called natural morality leads. It is not only liberty, but license to do as the flesh demands, without law to hinder.

We might give a number of extracts from the literature that has come to us, showing the ungodly purpose of the Federation, but one thing is made clear, and that is that the Bible shall be completely dethroned. Its principles must not be taught in any of our public schools. Not even a sacred hymn can be sung, and, of course, no prayer can be offered. Even the Lord's Prayer, the most beautiful and touching of all prayers, can not be repeated in any manner. All schools are to be made godless, and the children are to be taught that there is no God, as set forth in the Scriptures, and that the Bible is simply a bundle of myths, with an origin wholly human.

The Catholics and Jews appear to be working with the Federation in having the Scriptures ruled out of our public schools. The strange part of the movement is that the Catholics are working with infidels in effecting the overthrow of the Word of God. Were it not for the aid rendered by the Catholics, the Federation of Freethinkers would never be able to accomplish what they claim in having the Bible barred from our schools.

It is also strange that the Protestant bodies of the United States do not rise up in defense of the Blessed Book, and see to it that the Scriptures are restored to their place in the schools. They should not only preach and distribute literature in support of their movement, in the interest of the Sacred Volume, but they would insist on the Catholics giving good reasons for working with the enemies of the Word of God in their shameful undertaking.

The Brethren, in this part of Illinois, have taken their stand on this question, and we should be pleased to see all the Protestant churches in the State come forward and demand regulations that will permit the Bible in the public schools where it is desired. The activity of the Freethinkers' Federation is such as to make the situation serious, especially so since the Catholics and the Jews are looked upon as being on the infidel side of the movement.

The Corruption That Is in the World Through Lust.

JUST what forms of lust the sacred writer had in mind, we do not know; but we incline to believe that he meant more than what we generally understand by the term nowadays. It is not, we think, the coarser forms of lust that do the most harm, that lead most people away from the truth; for these forms are repulsive to many, and man is not likely to be misled by that which is repulsive to him.

If we take the word in a broader sense, as meaning the desire for those things which give us pleasure, we are not likely to miss the thing had in view. The German word has that meaning, and so does the English. The Children of Israel in the wilderness lusted after the fleshpots of Egypt. They also lusted after a great many other things; and their lusting, their great desire, for things to gratify the appetite led them into almost a countless number of sins. They were not satisfied with what the Lord was giving them, and their journey was a long series of murmurings on their part and of rebukes and punishments on God's part. And this condition was not changed even after they had crossed over into the promised land. But there is no need to particularize.

Let us leave the Jewish record of long ago and come to ourselves. Our desires are what lead us away from that which is simple and true to that which is complex and false. We do not make the effort necessary to control our desires, but let them control us; and naturally they lead us astray. In the beginning the desire may not be bad; but one gratified desire means another one to gratify, and the second is sure not to be as harmless as the first. One step leads to another, and in the end we lose our bearings and think we are all right when we are all wrong. If we could get back to our starting point and see as we did, we would know how much we have lost; but that we cannot do, for the experiences of life cannot be wiped out nor their effect destroyed.

One need not be very old in order to remember the manner of life of our fathers and grandfathers. Their opinions were placed in our Conference decisions. By reading what they decided upon a great many things we can learn what they thought of the gratifying of the desire for more comfortable and more beautiful things in their homes. I often think they were wiser in divine things than we give them credit for being. True, some of their rulings seem out of place to us of today. But they did not consider merely the present. The lusting after, the desire for, things to gratify the eye and the body, they could see would lead from one thing to another, until the church would take pleasure in things which lead away from the Christian life.

There are the two extremes, the one leading to asceticism and the other to luxury. There can be no doubt that, of the two, the former is the more pleasing to God. His servants were never high-livers. Luxury—the sumptuous fare and fine linen—and godliness do not go together—they are contrary one to the other. Here is also a golden mean, which the great majority are never able to find. We are in no danger of denying ourselves too many things when it is a matter of physical gratification. Keeping the body under is a duty.

The lust of the flesh and the lust of the eye have been, and are, the cause of most of the woes to which flesh is heir. And let us not forget that the lust is more often for that which is apparently harmless, or nearly so, than for that which is obviously and grossly wrong. That is what makes it so hard to fight against the lust which has corrupted the world and is making such serious inroads in the church. We do not want to become extremists, but we must stand firm against that which tends away from the simple Christian life. It is corruption which we must shun; it is incorruption which we must seek. By so doing we shall escape much of the evil that has come into the world, and remains in it, through lust. G. M.

Home News.

ALL the news we get, read and enjoy is from somebody's home. If all the home people would be as indifferent to the wishes of others as some are, we would have but little to look for, indeed. What may seem strange about the whole matter is, that those, or some of them, who enjoy the news items, are among those who write the least about their own home doings. This is accounted for from the feeling that such persons have, in thinking that their home news is not interesting and, therefore not worth while. This may be a modest way of feeling and expressing it, but it must be evident that if all would feel this way, we would have no news for anybody.

During the summer months our church passes through a vacation period, as it is the time when Juniata College closes its doors, and hundreds of the young men and women who spend the college year here, are away at their homes. While their absence is quite noticeable in the attendance of our religious services, yet it, by no means, closes our church doors. The fact is the attendance at all our services has been quite good. The Sunday-school, prayer meetings, Christian Workers' Meetings and public preaching services have not only been well attended, but they have been interesting and spiritual, and our home workers have been improving their talents. This, of course, does not mean that we do not appreciate having our brethren, sisters and friends among us, because we do, and are ready to extend to them a most hearty welcome on their return. Yes, we are always glad to have them with us, because they can do us good and help us, and we will try to be helpful to them.

Monday, Sept. 18, was the opening day of the new year for Juniata College. We are glad to say that it was not a cloudburst of storm and rain, as we have been having some during the summer, but it was a regular "inpour," such as we have not had for years. During the day the trolley line from the depot to the college was kept quite busy, bringing the students, new and old, up to their new homes for a season. As the weather was favorable, their smiling faces and gladsome greetings made it a day of sunshine all around.

In the evening, as is the custom, a social service was held for the purpose of entertainment and getting acquainted, which is a commendable practice as we place a high estimate on sociability among the students, the faculty and the management. It is the opening wedge to all the good work and teaching that, it is expected and desired, shall follow. Get open hearts and open minds, and that which is to follow will always be pleasant.

On Tuesday morning are held what are known here as the regular opening exercises, which consist of singing, Scripture reading and prayer, after which the program is properly adjusted, and the work begins.

In addition to the exercises named, we had, on this occasion, the inauguration of the new President-elect, Bro. I. Harvey Brumbaugh, who has been the Acting President for a number of years, as it was not possible for our greatly-esteemed former President, Dr. M. G. Brumbaugh, Superintendent of the Philadelphia Public Schools, to fill the position, in addition to the responsible duties connected with his work there. His resignation was accepted at his earnest request, and his assurance given that it would not affect his relations, concern and good wishes for the continued success and growth of the college. The present change, as now made, is in name only, as the new President has been, for years, filling all the functions of the office into which he is now officially placed. We are glad to be able to say that the college is starting into the new year with unusually encouraging prospects,—that it continues to grow in stature, in favor with our constituents, the church, and, we hope, in favor with the Lord. With the continued coöperation of all these elements of needed help and power, and Divine Guidance, we hope to continue to go forward, to be blessed and be a blessing. Through all the years of our devotion, labors and struggles, the Lord has been very good to us, and we try, in our weak way, to appreciate his many, many blessings.

Wednesday evening we held our first prayer meeting in the new college year and were glad for the large attendance. The midweek prayer meetings are, it seems to us, growing in interest as well as in attendance, and are proving exceedingly helpful in keeping us together and in the unity of the Spirit. While the preaching services are needful and helpful in feeding the flock and enlarging the church, the prayer meeting is especially helpful in developing the power for service on the part of the laymembers, and in feeding each other. In these meetings are afforded excellent opportunities for our younger members to enlarge their possibilities to do acceptable service for the Master, and we would encourage our young members to be where to make the best possible use of these means of grace, because such they are. The same may be said of the Christian Workers' Meetings. It will be seen that in all the churches, those who attend these meetings most regularly and most actively, are the ones that are doing the best and most active service for the church and for the Master. Of too many it may be said: "They are Christians, but they do not work much at it." The Lord wants "live wires,"—workers.

Ever since early May we have been living, reading, writing and doing our work largely on our porch, because it is the outside world we love to associate with and live in. But we are reminded that September is now in the past, which will mean a new atmosphere in which to live and have our being, as well as a change of scenery. We have yet around us the bountiful blooming of the late fall flowers; such as nasturtiums, red sage, petunias, monthly roses, verbenas, German asters, late dahlias, the old posey bed pinks, and the most constant of all blooms,—the outdoor and the indoor geraniums, scarlet, white, and all shades between, with some beautiful clusters of hydrangeas and altheas,—the rose of Sharon.—in our churchyard near by. What softens our sadness and enhances our joys at the approach of the fall days is that Jack Frost has not been hiding in the fields of the goldenrod, and left our fresh and growing world since the late refreshing fall rains, remain fresh and green, so that our world was never more really beautiful and living than just now.

So, if our Heavenly Father has given us a desire and taste for the ethical and beautiful, and then surrounded us with it, why should we not be appreciative enough to notice it, and enjoy it and praise him for it? These pretty things are given us as a foretaste of the more lovely, beautiful things which he has in store for his children, in his prepared world beyond the gates wherein is located the eternal city of pearly entrances, golden-paved streets, and beautiful mansions with wide porches on all sides. Yea, truly, God has made the beautiful things of earth for our admiration and enjoyment. But too many of us have our feet so rooted in the ground, our noses so filled with the odor of roast beef, fried bacon and eggs; our eyes so charmed with fine horses, fat steers and hogs, automobiles, silver and gold, that we lose all taste for the true, the lasting, the beautiful, and continue to tug away after larger farms, more stocks and bonds, finer horses, larger steers, and more of this world's goods. And the more the Lord allows us to get, the tighter are our purse strings when the church calls for money and means to help get men and women to enter in and enjoy to fullness the blessed home that he has prepared for his children.

We are glad to know that when we, as his sons and daughters, get our hearts filled with the beautiful things of the Father, and Jesus Christ, the Son, that the flowers of his love are seen not only in the spring-time, summer and fall, but all the year round. "When I am happy in him, December is as pleasant as May."

The Preacher at the Show.

One who seems to be a devout Christian, and wishes the church to remain unspotted from the world, is asking us to tell him, through the Messenger, what business a preacher has at a circus. We may be able to answer a number of questions, but this is one that we can not answer. It would seem to be certain that the preacher was at the show, and that he was seen by a number of people who affirm that he was there, and also know that he belongs to a church that expects better things of their preachers. We are quite sure that he did not go to the show to let his light shine, for those who frequent such places usually find it consistent to put their light under a bushel before starting. He certainly did not go with a view of seeking a heavenly place in Christ Jesus; nor did he go for the purpose of having his spiritual strength renewed. We also feel confident that he was not led to the place of merriment by the Holy Spirit, for the Spirit never leads the ambassadors of Christ in that direction. We are further confident that, had the preacher known that Christ would come that particular afternoon, to collect his jewels, he could not have been hired to go to the show, for however much he may love the pleasures of the world, he knows that the good Master would never think of going to the circus in search of his chosen disciples. But, candidly, we can not say what business the preacher had at the show, nor can we surmise what might have induced him to go to such a place. We suggest that our correspondent ask him.

Lost to the Church.

Considerable is being said about so many of the children of members being lost to the church. While it is true that a number are being lost, it is also true that a number are gained from other sources. We probably may not gain as many as we lose, and yet, taking the Brotherhood as a whole, we should think that over one-half of the children are saved to the church. We have seen no statistics on this point, but it might be well if an estimate could be made in the light of the experiences in some of the older congregations. We are wondering if our loss, in this particular, is greater than the losses experienced by other Christian bodies holding to the policy of adult membership. Possibly there is not as much difference as some have been led to suppose. It should also be borne in mind that, if the other persuasions would require of their members what we have thought proper to demand of ours, in the way of obeying the Gospel in all things, their success in winning their children might prove far less marked than ours has proven. True enough, our losses have been great, but what is true of us is also true of all religious persuasions depending on adult membership. This is, however, no reason why we should be content with the record of the past. Instead of saving only sixty per cent of our children, we should labor to save all of them; and the person who can tell us how to produce better results in the future than have been realized in the past, is sure to be regarded a blessing to the cause we represent.

Some Dangerous Entanglements.

One of our intelligent elders, who has always been in sympathy with sound, aggressive movements, writes us saying that, while he believes it to be the duty of every brother to go to the polls and vote against the saloon interests when the question is before the people, he fears that not a few of our members are, in the interest of temperance, being drawn into the whirlpool of political excitement. He feels confident that they are doing things not in keeping with our principles, as a people who have come out from the world, and propose to move on a plane higher than that occupied by most religious persuasions. Reference is made to becoming affiliated with semi-religious organizations and societies, and getting entangled by them in matters that we, as a people, can not consistently indorse. For some time we have had the same feeling, believing that, while the Church of the Brethren should do all in her power to help put the saloons out of business, she should not suffer herself, or her representatives to be drawn into things not in keeping with the spirit of her high, spiritual claims. We refer to the popular parades, the following of flags, drums and the band, and also to the public demonstrations that place our plain members, mixed up with others, in a peculiar attitude. To this may be added, taking the stump in the interests of some political party and attending banquets and other gatherings that are far more political than religious. To us conduct of this character never did seem to be in harmony with the religion that should characterize a people who have come out from the world, and propose to keep out of the whirlpool of political excitement. It occurs to us that we can throw our whole strength against the whiskey interests without becoming mixed up with the movements that tend to lead us away from our time-honored simplicity.

God's Oath.

With the above as its title, the George H. Doran Company, New York, has published, at $1.25 net, an excellent 278-page book, by Ford C. Ottman, D. D. The author has made the oath, or promises of God, as set forth in the Old Testament, a matter of careful study, and in this work endeavors to show that the Lord always does just what he promises to do. While a broad field is covered, special attention is directed to the promises made to God's chosen people, the seed of Abraham, through Isaac. These people are kept prominently before the readers, especially in the latter part of the work, where the return of the Jews to the Promised Land is discussed with considerable care. It is held that God will, at his own appointed time, gather the Jews from every known country, and restore to them the land that was promised to Abraham and his seed. A marked distinction between God's chosen people of old and the church of Christ is made, and it is maintained that the church was intended to exist only from the rejection of the Jews until their restoration to Palestine. His manner of disposing of the church, in order to make room for the Jews as a nation, is certainly not sustained by the Scriptures, and yet one reads the book with profit. We believe in the return of the Jews to their homeland and, at the same time, understand that they will be led to accept Christ, and thus become connected with the church by confession and obedience to the teachings of the Messiah.

The Preacher and Business Methods.

During the late M. E. Conference at Joliet, Ill., a number of candidates for the ministry were examined by a committee chosen for the purpose. They were closely questioned regarding their knowledge of the doctrine held by the Methodist church, and also their acquaintance with business principles. It was maintained that a pastor should know how to aid his congregation in looking after the money side of the church. This is something that is not even thought of by the hundreds of congregations when selecting pastors. Not a few preachers have made a failure in their calling, for the reason that they did not know enough about business methods to look after their own finances, or the finances of the church. While they should not permit secular matters to interfere with their duties as ministers, they should know the value of money, how to care for it, and how to employ it to the best advantage.

REGRETS!

The General Temperance Committee regrets its inability to secure a more perfect report of District Temperance Committees for the Almanac for 1912. After waiting ten days beyond the time indicated in the notices by mail and in Messenger, we still can report but thirty-two Districts with organized committees. Seven other Districts have Committees as yet unorganized. These Districts are reported accordingly. Seven Districts remain with Committees yet to be appointed. We will be pleased to receive the much desired information at an early date. Send all information to the writer. W. M. Howe, Sec.

NOTES FROM KARADOHO, VIA DAHANU, INDIA.

Good Prospects.

The latter rains have come in these parts, and the rice crop will give a larger yield than even the most sanguine farmer hoped for, a month or two ago. Surely, the Giver of rain should be praised for his bountiful goodness! And yet many, in their blindness, bring their thank-offerings to Ganpatti and other dumb idols. Even in the districts of Ahmedabad and Kathiawar, where famine seemed imminent, conditions are said to be somewhat relieved by recent showers. There may still be grass for the cattle and a partial crop of winter grain. Oh, that men would praise the Lord for his goodness!

How a Young Widow Was Helped.

Last week a poor young widow came to our door, begging for food and medicine. She had been an inmate of a Christian orphanage, but heathen relatives had taken her back to her old village and, according to her own account, they beat her and tried in every way to compel her to fall before the family idols. Finally she ran away, determined to seek refuge among Christians somewhere, and was directed to our mission home. We kept her a few days, then took her to our "Widows' Home" at Jalalpor. Perhaps few in the homeland understand what a good work Sister Quinter is doing for a few of India's widows and she hopes to be able to do much more by the grace of God, and by the help of a few more of your alms. If a few of India's desolate widows may be saved for Christ, Sister Quinter's life of service will not be in vain.

Our Medical Work.

The medical side of the work at our station grows larger, and we often feel the need of a skilled doctor. About 6,000 persons have received medicine since the first of the year and, under the blessing of the Lord, a number have been healed. Our daily prayer is that many of these sin-sick souls may come to the Great Healer for healing and eternal life.

The Little Girl from the Temple.

A little priestess is a frequent caller at our mission home. She is about twelve years old and lives with her parents in a temple of Mahadev (Shiva) about half a mile away, across the fields. Sometimes she brings her little three-year-old sister to play with our little daughter, Lois, and sometimes she comes with a basket on her head, begging for flowers to offer to the idol. Then we try to teach her of the true God, the living, loving Father and who made the flowers and all things. The idol, in whose temple she has lived from birth, can not smell the flowers nor behold their beauty. Then the child goes her way, doubtless wondering why the white people should refuse to give a few fragrant flowers for the temple. How our heart goes out to this child of tender years, that her young life might be given to the God who dwelleth not in temples made by hand!

Our Women's Meeting.

One of our most interesting services is the weekly Thursday meeting for women. It is original intent was to give a special opportunity for worship and Bible study to our Christian women, with special reference to their duty to the home, husband, children, etc. A few heathen women attend occasionally and their number seems to grow, and now we usually have some nonchristian women present, assenting to the doctrines set forth in the Holy Scriptures. Yesterday there were present five women of the despised sweeper outcasts, one Dubli of the respectable farmer caste, and six Christian women. All were greatly interested in the trial of Paul before Felix and readily understood that we should not procrastinate as Felix did. Will you join in prayer for a deepening of spiritual life among our believing women, and for the opening of unbelieving and hesitating hearts?

INDIA NOTES.

A Brighter Outlook.

The present is far more hopeful, with respect to the rains, than a month ago. Recently, slight showers have fallen on the hitherto most parched areas,—North Gujerat and the Punjab. If the latter rains fall yet, winter crops will be grown and famine will be averted, but, at most, great scarcity in certain parts will be felt. In the area where our missionaries work, the rainfall has been somewhat short, yet crops are fairly good and people have no reason for complaint.

Progress in the Work.

Several weeks ago, with family, we came out from Pimpalner to our old home at Jalalpor. In this time we have been permitted to visit at several of our stations. This summer, even during the rains, Bro. Emmert and his own boys have built a much needed house, a line of ten rooms, for teachers. The school work at Bulsar goes on nicely and the work in the shop is growing in favor, both within and without the Mission, the demand being as great as the possible supply.

Favorable Sentiment.

As we toured a bit, in the villages about Ankleshwer, and in the Raj Pipla State, we were more and more filled with hope and courage over the outlook. Our missionaries and Indian helpers, with one voice, speak encouragingly. The sentiment is clearly growing in favor of Christianity, and one should not be surprised at the thought of, but rather should expect, a general forward move into the Christian kingdom. Let us pray that the masses may turn, and that the work may all be Spirit-inspired and Spirit-led!

The Work at Pimpalner.

Sept. 1, in company with Bro. Lichty, the writer went to Pimpalner for pay day, and to give a few final suggestions as to the work. In our absence, the work of seven teachers and some school building and timber cutting for a future bungalow, is all directly in the hands of an Indian brother. Bro. Ittenger, from Ahwa, forty miles away, will have general oversight of the work. At Pimpalner there are at present four schools running very encouragingly, and other schools are asked for. In general the outlook is good. We have just finished a new house,—a line, of ten rooms. As a result I shall not be out only have a home to return to but the people now believe more in us, and think of us as fixtures among them.

Retrospective Thoughts.

The Lord willing, we set sail from Bombay for the homeland Sept. 15, and are due to arrive in New York Oct. 29, per S. S. Panama of the Grand Line. At the time of our arrival home it will have been eight years and a week since we last saw the steeples of New York, to say nothing of the loved ones left behind. At that time we had three years work to do. By this time we have had some time to practice our theories, and they do not all work, no, not by a good bit. At that time we knew how it ought to be done and what ought to be done. Now we know far less. Ups and downs, sorrows and joys, encouragements and disappointments,—how they flitted into and out of our lives! Yet for all, and, unlike the drunkard who was a "sadder and wiser man,"—we are wiser and more and more hopeful for the cause we all alike love.

Our Stay in the Homeland.

Our home address will be "Port Republic, Va." Any one desiring meetings, will correspond with Bro. Galen B. Royer, Elgin, Ill. Bro. Royer will plan at least a part of our meetings. During the time while in the homeland we desire to work among the churches as we may have strength, and to him who is worthy be all praise, world without end! Amen! I. S. Long.

THE KESLER-HINDS DEBATE.

No doubt many of the readers of the Messenger are anxiously waiting to get the particulars of the above debate.

Without being charged with egotism, I may say that the results were very satisfactory to the brethren who were present. The debate was poorly attended, especially in the daytime, as the people were so busy. But as the work was taken by a stenographer, all who so desire may have a chance to get it in book form and, in a few spare moments, each day, may get what good there may be in its perusal.

This debate was one of the inevitable things. It had to come sooner or later. With the sentiment, as to the differences between the two churches, running high in many parts of the country, a published debate was the only alternative, sooner or later.

In the published accounts, held with these people, five in all, I have ever instructed my moderators to "be very conservative" in their statements, while, on the other side, the reverse seems to have been the rule, and some very reckless statements have been made. Now all have a chance to read for themselves, and I am sure that, on our people's part, the result will be very gratifying.

In many respects this is one of the most important debates yet published, between ourselves and the Disciples. In our judgment, Mr. Hinds will compare favorably with any man in his church as a debater. Had he had the foundation to build upon, he would have put up an able defense for his people. No building is stronger than its foundation, and as his foundation is "sinking sand," of course defeat was the inevitable result for him. And yet, the zeal and earnestness he wove into his part of the work, were surely worthy a better cause. Indeed, on some points he struggled manfully, only to be floundered in the end.

If the debate is widely circulated, I believe it will not be deemed necessary to have another encounter with the Disciples for another twenty years at least,—until another generation comes upon the scene.

As I was compelled to abridge some of my work, I was unable to present some of it as fully as I had hoped. (It had been decided to have an eight days' debate, but the stenographer could remain only six. So, by putting in three sessions the last day, we virtually had six and one-half days, my time being shortened one day, and his one-half day.)

I have a list of all the names, so far sent in for the book. It is my purpose, if it adds but slight extra expense, to have the names of those who order in advance, placed in the first edition of the book.

I am unable now to say anything definite as to the time when the book will come out, as our reporter is a very busy man, and has other work before him, but he promises to accelerate the work all he can. Send all future orders to me, at River Bend, Colo.

The size of the first edition will be determined largely by the number of advance orders received. So, if you expect ever to want this book, better order now, as a second edition may never be published. The price will not exceed $1.50, I think, for a cloth-bound book.

River Bend, Colo. B. E. Kesler.

A VISIT TO MIDDLE TENNESSEE.

Sept. 14, in company with Eld. D. F. Bowman, we boarded a car for McMinnville, where we arrived the next day, about noon, and were conveyed to the home of Bro. Alfred H. Duncan, who lives about three miles out in the country.

The object of our visit was to hold a few meetings and anoint Bro. Duncan. We found the old brother quite feeble in body, but strong in mind, and very vigorous, indeed, on the spiritual side, which demonstrates what Paul says in 2 Cor. 4: 16.

We held services that evening at his home. Several of his neighbors were present. Meetings had been announced for Saturday evening and Sunday at the church, and on Sunday, at 3 P. M., at Bro. Duncan's home, where we spoke on "The Anointing." After that Bro. Duncan was anointed.

The meetings were well attended, considering the rainy weather. Bro. Duncan is the only member we have there now. The writer was there eighteen years ago. Quite a number of other members and sisters were then living in Warren County,—mostly from Ohio. Some have died, and others have moved to other places, where they could have a church home.

Bro. Duncan has done all he could, as he was old when he joined the church, after having preached many years in the M. E. church. He is now eighty-four years old, strong in the faith, and perfectly resigned to the Lord's will. He was much pleased with our visit, and very happy after having been anointed. We were strongly reminded of the words of Jesus, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me." May the Lord ever bless the aged!

Limestone, Tenn., Sept. 30. P. D. Reed.

MEADOW MOUNTAIN, VIRGINIA.

Our meetings, conducted by Bro. J. P. Harris, closed temporarily on Wednesday night, Sept. 27, with eight more applicants for membership. They were baptized the next day. Twenty-one members have now been received at this point, and four more await baptism.

The doctrine of the New Testament, as we teach and observe it, is new to the people. While the community, as a whole, accepts immersion, the people never before witnessed the administration of the trine act. They need further teaching, and are anxious to know more about the truth.

Bro. Harris will return Oct. 7, and spend a few weeks in Bible study, organize a Christian Workers' Meeting and introduce the Brethren literature. In the meantime he will arrange for more doctrinal sermons.

We expect to organize a church here in the near future and give them regular meetings. We hope to be able to build up a church at this point to the number of forty or fifty members within a year. Bro. Harris is proving himself to be a persistent and untiring worker, and deserves to be encouraged in his efforts.

Bro. Harris was unfortunate in losing his right arm a few years ago. Since then he came to the church, and shortly afterward was chosen to the office of deacon, and a little more than a year ago to the ministry. We pray that he may become an efficient worker in his calling, as he expects to give his entire time to the work of the ministry, and is preparing for it. E. D. Kendig.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Covina.—A local Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting, conducted by Bro. Harvey Bond, was held in the Covina church Sept. 30. The questions considered were such as will bring renewed interest in our Sunday-schools, such as will bring renewed interest in our Sunday-schools, such as will be profitable to the entire membership, and such as will inspire them to better work, more consecration and a feeling of greater responsibility in the upbuilding of souls. Oct. 1 we had rally day.—Eulalia Overholtzer, R. D. 1, Box 4, Covina, Cal., Oct. 4.

Los Angeles church met in quarterly council Sept. 29, with our elder, Bro. Crist, in charge. Reports of committees and others were received, and one was granted. It was decided to have a series of meetings in connection with our Sunday-school, with love feast in connection as soon as we secure a minister. Brethren to be invited as soon as we secure a minister. Brethren D. W. Crist and G. G. Lahmer were elected delegates to the District Meeting. Bro. Lahmer and Smith was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and duly installed. Elders Wm. Stutsman and L. D. Bosserman had charge of the work. Lately four dear souls became willing to take up the cross of Christ, and follow him.—Eva M. Pruitt, 2181 N. Broadway, Los Angeles, Cal., Sept. 30.

Pasadena.—Our church met in council Aug. 24, with Eld. W. E. Trostle presiding. One letter was granted. Sisters Bessermen and Bowman were elected delegates to the District Meeting. We decided to hold a love feast, and also a series of meetings, at which time we expect Bro. Wm. Stutsman's wife to be with us. The date will be given later.—Bertha Harper, Pasadena, Cal., Oct. 2.

Salida.—Sept. 23 our council met in session. Our elder, Bro. Harvey Eikenberry, had charge of the meeting. Considerable business came before the meeting, and reports were received by letter. We are glad to receive more workers at the time. Our membership now numbers 28 in good standing. We trust others who are thinking of changing their location will investigate this place. Sunday-school and Christian Work will represent us at the District Meeting, and Sisters Mable Weaver and Cora Eikenberry are elected delegates to the same meeting. We expect to be able to have services in the near future.—Mrs. Alice Dickey, Salida, Cal., Oct. 2.

Santa Ana.—Our church met in council Sept. 23, Bro. S. D. Lehmer presided. Brethren J. B. Bashor and J. M. Wine are our delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Bashor to visit Chas Ninninger, alternates. We decided to have our love feast Nov. 4 and 5.—J. M. Wine, R. F. D. 6, Box 1, Santa Ana, Cal., Sept. 29.

Peoples.—Berean Bible School building is nearing completion. We expect to dedicate it Oct. 30, Bro. L. D. Bosserman, of Pasadena, to conduct the services. The school opened in the basement room yesterday, with hopefulness. We shall have Sisters Hettie Stouffer and Ora Nine, recently at Polo, in Bible Methods. Our educational testament, Bibles as seven instructors. Missionary efforts have heretofore been confined to American fields. Now missions are established in the Chinese and Japanese. Charter-members' meeting was held last evening. Twenty members were present. Elected a board of twelve trustees. No debt rests upon either the building or the furnishings. The building and furnishings and the equipments possibly $1,500.—M. M. Eshelman, Tropico, Cal., Oct. 4.

COLORADO.

Prowers church met in council in Wiley, Colo., Sept. 26. After the regular business was attended to, several plans were discussed and adopted. We decided to build a brick house for the parsonage. Subscriptions were taken to push the work as much as possible. Our solicitor has been very successful, but we still need about $1,000. We are planning to hold a series of meetings and a love feast as soon as the house is ready for us. We invite members to help us in this and irrigation, to locate among us. They can help in building up the cause of Christ here.—Anna V. Ullom, Wiley, Colo., Oct. 2.

South Fork.—We met in council Oct. 1. Bro. Geo. A. Dove presided. Ten letters were read. Our membership is increasing materially. We decided to have a series of meetings, the work to begin after the apple harvest, which will be in about four weeks. Bro. D. N. Brubaker, our elder, and the writer, were elected delegates to District Meeting. We will have preaching twice each Lord's Day, and midweek prayer meeting at our home. Our elder will be with us, and will hold sometime this fall, as soon as we can procure a minister. The meeting is to close with a love feast.—E. A. Saylor, Crawford, Colo., Oct. 2.

IDAHO.

Nezperce.—Our church met in council Sept. 26. As Bro. H. C. Longanecker, our elder, was absent, Bro. R. J. Pike acted as former. We decided to have a series of meetings. We will also hold a Bible meeting, beginning Dec. 25, to be conducted by Bro. L. H. Eby. Bro. Eby is in very unusual circumstance accord. The parents of little Barbara Jeffries, who died of cholera six months ago, left $500 to the primary class to which she had belonged. The church dedicated the money as a Memorial Fund for the erection of a new church house. "A little child shall lead them."—Ida Jeffries, Nezperce, Idaho, Sept. 28.

ILLINOIS.

Bethel church met in council Oct. 4, at 7:30 P. M. Our pastor, Bro. J. H. Snavely, presided, in the absence of our elder, Bro. J. H. Moore. Considerable business was disposed of. Our fall love feast is to be held at 7 P. M., Nov. 5. Last Sunday our little granddaughter, Elizabeth Ruth Snavely, was buried. We now have a number of these little lambs in the fold.—Sarah W. Snavely, R. No. 3, Pearl, Ill., Oct. 4.

Decatur.—Sept. 28 our church met in council. Bro. Geo. Miller, our elder, was present, with Bro. Jas. Custer, his assistant. Four were received by letter. Bro. Garber and the writer were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. We will hold our love feast on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 30, at 5 P. M. Bro. W. W. Lowry was chosen to have prize reading.—D. W. Cripe, 1443 West Decatur St., Decatur, Ill., Oct. 2.

Franklin Grove.—Oct. 1 was chosen by this church as rally day for our Sunday-school.—Richard Brown, R. F. D. 3. We met in regular Sunday-school, and at 10:30 the regular services were given to the children. After which the program was rendered by those young workers. At the close of the program a collection was taken, which was counted and gave her heart to God. She was received by baptism immediately after the services. This makes one by baptism of our home department. At the end of the last quarter it was decided that our home department meeting be held at the church, the first Sunday in October, and that some one be chosen to conduct the review lesson. At 2 P. M. we met again, with Bro. O. D. Buck conducting the review lesson. Those present felt that it was good to be there. Many of the home department members could not meet with us on account of the inclement weather. We had Christian Workers' Meeting at 7 P. M., and at 8 we had a sermon by Bro. Jesse Brown Krouse—Rachel A. Pfoutz, R. D. 2, Ashton, Ill., Oct. 5.

Lanark.—Bro. our last visited us. Tobias Myers, of Philadelphia, Pa., preached for us. Our business meeting was held on Friday evening, Sept. 22. We have set Oct. 22 for our love-feast, commencing at 5 and Oct. 23 for our feast. Bro. Trout tendered his resignation as pastor and elder in charge at this meeting, but we took a unanimous vote not to accept it, and he decided to remain with us another year. The church decided to prepare a folder containing the names of all the members of the church, with the names of the officers and such other matter as may be of general interest to the church, a copy of said folder to be distributed one to each member when the annual visit is paid. Since the writer is at least of the manner has failed the interest in the Sunday-school is increasing.—Addie Arnold Zuck, Lanark, Ill., Sept. 30.

Liberty.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Geo. W. Miller, began Sept. 3 and closed Sept. 17. A Bible study meeting was held, which was enjoyed by all present. Owing to the inclement weather the preaching services were not well attended. At our love feast forty members and one visitor communed. The writer had a good eight members surrounded the font and he held Sept. 23. Our elder Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, and wife, were chosen as delegates to District Meeting.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, Liberty, Ill., Sept. 28.

Mulberry Grove.—Bro. Dorsey Hodgden, of Huntington, Ind., began a series of meetings in our church, which continued two weeks. The heavy rains interfered with our meetings somewhat, but Bro. Hodgden's sermons were full of interest and were good. Our love feast, Sept. 30, was very well attended and the spiritual meeting was interesting. We enjoyed Bro. Hodgden's sermons. Much good seed was sown.—M. N. Lee, Lilligh, Mulberry Grove, Ill., Oct. 2.

Oakley church, Decatur, Ill., Muscatine, Iowa, began a series of meetings at this place Sept. 3, and closed Sept. 17, with excellent interest, and good results. His sermons were practical, and many good impressions were made. Our love feast was held Sept. 16, and was a good one. Quite a number of neighboring ministers and other members were with us.—Ella Hoffman, Decatur, Ill., Oct. 2.

Pleasant Grove.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. O. Beahm, began Sept. 3, and closed Sept. 17. Inclemency of the weather, we had a good attendance throughout the meetings, and marked interest was manifested in the preaching services. Our love feast. Twenty-two surrounded the Lord's table. Bro. Stutsman officiated. Bro. Beahm preached the first sermon. A Miller and wife, Bro. Miller, of Lanark, Ill., Bro. Henry Lilligh, of Mulberry Grove, Ill., Bro. Asher Myers, of Mulberry Grove, Ill., Bro. Jesse Brown Krouse, Bro. S. S. Miller and wife remained with us until Wednesday night, and Bro. Krouse and wife and Bro. Myers stayed with Bro. Sheller, Ill., Sept. 29.

Sterling.—Our council was held on Monday evening, Oct. 5, our elder, Bro. Ezra Flory, presiding. One letter was granted. Bro. Flory's time in charge of the congregation is extending his time to June, 1913. We praise God for having such a consecrated man in charge. Bro. Flory is of Chicago, with us for both morning and evening services Sept. 30. We were glad to have him with us. His sermons were good. His subject in the morning was "China's Customs and Religion;" in the evening, "China's Needs." Bro. Flory's home is in China with others who are preparing, shall return to China, prepared and equipped for the work. Pray for them. We are now in such utter darkness.—Bertha G. Dutcher, 511 Thirteenth Ave., Sterling, Ill., Oct. 5.

INDIANA.

Burnetts Creek.—Bro. W. R. Miller came to us Monday, Sept. 18, and continued his lectures each evening during the week. Sept. 23 he left for Mexico, where he is now engaged. He was called to Chicago on Saturday, to conduct funeral services. Bro. Miller preached to us Sunday morning and evening services, and in the afternoon gave us an account of his great work in Mexico, to the land of Aztec. Notwithstanding the inclemency of the weather the house was not large enough to accommodate the large and interested audience. Bro. Miller's lectures are quite gratifying to all. An invitation was extended on Monday evening, at the close of the lecture, inviting all who were desirous to be saved to unite with the people of God.—Bessie Mertz, Burnetts Creek, Ind., Sept. 25.

Camden.—Sept. 24 we enjoyed an all-day meeting. After preaching by Bro. J. H. Brumbaugh, pastor of North Manchester, Ind., gave us a very interesting harvest sermon, after which dinner was served to all. In the afternoon the children rendered a missionary program to a large audience, which was very interesting. Then Bro. Wine gave a Sunday-school address, which was enjoyed by all.—Missionary work.—Eva L. Whitacre, R. D. 1, Portland, Ind., Sept. 29.

Elkhart Valley.—Sept. 18 we had a Bible lecture assisted in a series of meetings at our East house, beginning Sept. 12 and closing Sept. 18. Interest was manifested from the good, and the members much strengthened. The "Joint Sunday-school Convention" of the Yoke Prairie and Elkhart Valley River churches will be held at the Eel River Brick house on the first Sunday in November.—Mary E. Miller, North Manchester, Ind., Oct. 2.

Elkhart Valley church met in council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. Frank Crumpacker, was present. Annual visit was reported at this meeting. The members of our church are at peace and unity. Bro. Crumpacker presided over the meeting. At this meeting the writer was elected Sunday-school superintendent for the ensuing year. Brethren Crumpacker and the writer were chosen as presidents of the Christian Workers' Meeting for one year. Brethren Frank Kreider and Eli Culver are chosen as delegates to District Meeting.—Wilbur Baker, Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 2.

Fort Wayne church met in council Sept. 29. Our pastor, Eld. J. W. Kitson, presided. Two letters were received, two were granted, and one was presented by letter. Annual report was read and accepted. The envelope system for collecting tithes and offerings was adopted, and will be used hereafter. J. Ahner was elected delegate to the District Meeting; Sister Ida W. Kitson, alternate. Our love feast will be held Nov. 5, at 4 P. M. The following were elected as the committee committee: Brethren O. Wike, G. F. Bender and F. Colclesser. We decided to hold a series of meetings, to begin Oct. 15. The report of the visiting brethren showed that the church is in a prosperous condition.—Secretary-treasurer, Sister Ida M. Bender, 2063 Gay St., Fort Wayne, Ind., Sept. 29.

Four Mile church met in council Sept. 23, at the White Water house. Our elder, Bro. Carey Toney, presided. Sept. 9 we had a Bible lecture by Bro. Lilligh, at the Burnetts Creek church, Ind., officiated, and did the preaching. We expect Eld. Manley Dester, of Milford, Ind., to begin a series of meetings at this place Oct. 7.—Chas. W. Miller, Hagerstown, Ind., Oct. 3.

Santa Fe church met in council Sept. 13, our elder, Bro. D. B. Wolf, presiding. One letter was received. Bro. Sherman Kendall and the writer were advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Bro. D. B. Wolf was appointed to the installation services. Bro. J. L. Mahon, of Vanburen, Ind., began a series of meetings Sept. 16, which closed Sept. 25. He preached the call and were received into the church by Christian baptism. Others will be received at the next meetings.—F. P. Hostetler, Brenstein Switch, Ind., Oct. 2.

Upper Tall Creek.—Our council convened at the old church yesterday, Sunday, Sept. 24, Bro. W. Teeter in charge. One letter was granted and two were received. Bro. H. B. Martin was elected as delegate to District Meeting; Bro. Fred Hoover, delegate to Sunday-school Meeting. One query was sent to the District Meeting in regard to having the Annual Meeting held at Winona Lake, Ind., when the call comes east of the Mississippi River and west of the Ohio. Bro. Abraham Wolfe resigned as treasurer, and Bro. Paul Hoover was chosen to fill his place. Bro. S. F. Early will begin a series of meetings for us on the 30th, at our church east of town.—Florida J. Green, Middletown, Ind., Oct. 2.

IOWA.

Albia.—Eld. Abraham Wolf, of Udell, Iowa, was with us at this place last Sunday, and delivered two splendid sermons. Bro. Wolf is one of our old ministers, and a member of the church, but earnestly admonished the members also. We rejoiced to have the privilege of one of our dear old elders who has labored so long in the Master's service, and to enjoy his sermons once more.—Samuel Switzer, 39 Tenth Ave., Albia, Iowa, Oct. 2.

Des Moines.—In spite of the inclement weather we had an attendance of 75 at our Sunday-school, Sept. 24, Sept. 31. The following Monday evening we had the privilege of hearing Bro. Wm. Beckner, of Polo, Illinois, deliver a very interesting, prepared and intensely practical sermon, At members' meeting, Oct. 3, we received one by letter membership and baptism two. Our Sunday-school offering, next Sunday, will go to Ashland College and Seminary. The next meeting for business, giving of time and money, by our workers, betokens a bountiful harvest of souls. Bro. Beckner will begin a series of sermons to which are to begin Oct. 22. Bro. John Heckmans of Polo, Ill., will be with us.—Virgil C. Pinnell, 164 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 5.

Des Moines Valley.—Bro. W. Grove, of South English, Iowa, is holding a series of meetings with us. Began Oct. 1, and later. The writer is now engaged in a series of meetings in Southern Iowa, and will be with this church in the close of the old churches of Southern Iowa. Many of the old veterans of the cross are now receiving their reward. We have also some excellent middle-aged and some fine young members who will be ready for the older ones pass away.—W. F. West, Ankeny, Iowa, Oct. 2.

Kingsley.—Our communion services were held at the West house, Sept. 30, at 2 P. M. Bro. Jesse Ebershole officiated in serving, as was announced. The change was made because of inclement weather. Bro. H. B. Martin preached the communion sermon and Bro. Chas. Eisenbise officiated at the communion. Bro. Martin's sermon was especially practical and well given.—Phebe Pohl, Kingsley, Iowa, Oct. 2.

Nelson.—Bro. Geo. Hoffman was chosen as Chairman of the Mission Board, I wish to call your attention to the article on page 634, District and Missionary Meeting of Washington. The Brethren have decided to raise $1,500 annually for their Mission Board. Your Board has called for $1,500, and the Lord has blessed us abundantly, and we feel that the churches not agreeing to give their share, we are cut down to much $1,000. We are planning to go to the field and ask to change those cut-down decisions, so that we do not need to go out in debt to raise funds for the work we have undertaken or carry on the work? You have asked us to do the work and told our hands. Your Board could not succeed profitably on $1,000, if we would have the middle Iowa churches to work between $5,000,000 and $7,000,000. The Board has asked for $1,500 annually, and we feel that we can raise $1,500 easily on one mill on the dollar. Will not Middle Iowa and all other Iowa do their part? The Lord is with us.—Eld. J. Kinsel, Albany, Iowa, Oct. 7.

Riverside.—Our church met in council Sept. 26, with Eld. A. P. Blough as moderator. A large amount of business was disposed of. Three members were received by letter, and two three letters were granted, mostly to students going to Mount Morris College. Examination services will be held Oct. 7, 8, and 9, to be in charge of Eld. J. H. M. Brethren A. P. Blough and O. W. Hamer will represent us at the District Meeting. We decided to have the Sunday-school services of the two Sunday-schools, we obligate ourselves to pay, but not to exceed $5 per month, the amount to go to Bethany Bible School, said scholarship to be used by some worthy young brother or sister who is desirous of securing in preparation to do mission work at home or abroad.—Samuel Switzer, Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 2.

KANSAS.

Grenola church met in council Sept. 30. Eld. S. E. Lantz presided. Five members were received by letter. Bro. Wm. Hoffman was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. Frank Wyant and N. K. Crumpacker were chosen delegates to District Meeting. Sister Ella Eagelin is our delegate to Christian Workers' Meeting, and Sister Bessie Wyant is our delegate to Sunday-school Meeting. Our love feast will be closed on Sunday evening. We certainly enjoyed Bro. Garber's stay with us. Ten were received by baptism, and the congregation has been strengthened by it. We all will help the Godspeed in his work. Sept. 30, at 7:30 P. M., we held our love feast, with Eld. Lantz officiating.—Mrs. Ella D. Eagle, R. D. 3, Moline, Kans., Oct. 2.

McPherson church met in council Oct. at 1:30 P. M. Eld. E. E. John had charge of the meeting. Eighteen letters were received and one granted. We decided to observe the 4th "Kingdom Songs." We will hold our love feast soon. Bro. E. E. John was chosen as our elder; Sister Nettie Lichtenwalter, clerk; Bro. Jesse Hoover, treasurer; Bro. Jesse Hoover, Bro. Haugh, choristers; Brethren Mohler and Austin, ushers; Bro. Haugh, leader of congregational singing; Brethren Haugh and Bland; Sister Edna Detter, secretary-treasurer; Bro. F. A. Richman, assistant; Brethren Haugh, Richman, Mohler, Dresher and Sister S. J. Miller, superintendents of the primary department; Sister Pannell, superintendent of the home department; Sister Alice Hoerner, secretary; Sister Laura Haugh and Bro. Fred Crouse, assistants; Brethren Haugh, Mohler and Mr. Craik, auditing committee; Prof. Harnly and Bro. T. P. Detter, finance committee; Bro. Paul Harnly, responded Messenger and Brethren Haugh and committee to correspond with the pastor. Bro. J. J. Yoder, as chairman—Sarah Wilson Haugh, McPherson, Kans., Oct. 2.

Neosho.—The Galesburg arm of this church has been enjoying services at the home of F. Goodpaster, on our home ministers, commenced a series of meetings at this place Sept. 9, continuing over two Sundays, preaching three sermons. On the 17th Bro. J. P. Campbell, of Parsons, Kans., came to our assistance, and continued the meetings over two longer, leaving brethren Worrell earnestly for the saving of souls. Sept. 23 our regular council was held at this place. Our elder, Bro. J. H. Worrell, presided. Eld. J. P. Campbell was also present and rendered valuable assistance. Bro. P. Goodpaster was chosen delegate to District Sunday-school Meeting. J. H. Holloway, of Chanute, were chosen to represent our church at the Christian Workers' Meeting. Laura Lantz, Lizzie Miller are our delegates to Sunday-school Meeting. We have a membership of 28, with prospects of more to come from the fold, made application to return. She was reclaimed at this meeting. The writer was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Bro. Campbell closed his meetings the following day, after preaching eight sermons. The meetings have been a great inspiration to the little band at this place. Our attendance at Sunday-school last Sunday was forty-six, the largest number since the Sunday-school's organization of September, was thirty-seven.—F. E. Miller, Galesburg, Kans., Oct. 2.

Osage.—We held our love feast Sept. 23. About sixty members communed. Three were present from a distance—Bro. A. B. Lichtenwalter officiated. Bro. Lichtenwalter's sermon

LOUISIANA.

Bonsoba church met in council Sept. 30, at 2:30 P. M. Eld. J. C. Mintz presided. Not much business came before the meeting. We decided to hold a series of meetings and close with a love feast in November if we can get help and be prepared. On account of the meeting being in the midst of the rice harvest and threshing, the attendance was small. All the members was very small.—J. I. Miller, Roanoke, La., Oct. 4.

MARYLAND.

Maple Grove (Bethesda Chapel).—Our church has been greatly revived spiritually since Bro. D. L. Forney, Jr., has begun a series of meetings here Sept. 17, and continued until Sept. 24. We have had some fine strong sermons, and one was baptized, three await the rite, and one has been restored. Our council at the Maple Grove house was on the 23d, at 10 A. M. Miller presiding. There was a large attendance of the members present. Bro. Forney rendered good service in conducting the meeting. After special devotional services and a good talk by Bro. Forney, Bro. J. C. Burkey was reinstated in the ministry, and he and his wife were duly installed. It was a very solemn and impressive service. Bro. Forney, Bro. Burkey and Linnie Miller were chosen as delegates to District Meeting. Bro. Forney was elected delegate to Sunday-school Convention, secretary.—Perry Bowser, Grantsville, Md., Sept. 29.

MICHIGAN.

Bouverton.—At the West Dale schoolhouse there was a union Sunday-school organized April 1, with Bro. Nathan McKinny, superintendent. We decided to use the Brethren literature, which has proven very satisfactory. We closed Sept. 24 with Bro. Nathan McKinny as superintendent. The outlook of the school is very encouraging and the interest in attendance. We also have preaching every two weeks at this place by some of the Brethren. We have had the privilege of having our elder, William Neff, with us. Sept. 24 he gave us a very encouraging sermon. We had a well-attended, much-needed council meeting a few days before, and a new point, needs careful attention, which we ask the prayers of our dear brethren and sisters in Christ.—Mrs. M. D. Hoover, R. D. 1, Bouverton, Oct. 1.

Morton (Morilla house).—Sept. 24 we reorganized our Sunday-school with Bro. Claude Hamilton as superintendent. Our average attendance last quarter was forty-nine; average contribution, seventy-nine cents.—Mrs. E. A. Alley preached last Sunday morning, and Bro. C. H. Deardorff in the evening. Bro. J. Moss preached in the morning.—Mrs. Ida Moss, R. D. 1, Copemish, Mich., Oct. 5.

Little Traverse.—Our love feast was held Sept. 9, at the home of Eld. D. B. Kolsley. Bro. J. Sala, of the Bear Lake church, Mich., officiated. Several others from that church were also present. There was a large attendance. Some could not go on account of sickness. Our next council will be held Oct. 14, at the home of Bro. J. S. Stutsman.—Mrs. Josiah Stutsman, R. D. 1, Harbor Springs, Mich., Oct. 2.

Woodland.—Our church met in council Aug. 26, with Bro. J. M. Smith as chairman, assisted by Bro. P. B. Messner. The regular routine of business was disposed of, and a committee on temperance appointed; also a committee to readjust financial aid for missionary work. Two letters of membership, in favor of Eld. A. S. Workman, of North Manchester, Ind., in favor of Eld. A. S. Workman, of North Manchester, Ind., will begin Oct. 28. The time of our love feast has been changed to Nov. 18, at 10 A. M., at which our elder can be with us.—J. J. England, Woodland, Mich., Oct. 3.

MISSOURI.

Centerview.—Our church met in council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. G. W. Lentz, presided. Bro. Frank Repp is our delegate to District Meeting; Bro. J. C. Gauss, alternate. Our series of meetings is to begin Oct. 15, to be conducted by Bro. Jos. D. Keim, of Independence, Mo. Our love feast will be held Oct. 21, at 10:30 A. M. The church chose Eld. D. R. Miller as our presiding elder for the coming year. Bro. Lentz preached an excellent sermon on Sunday morning, and all were glad to hear him. Bro. Lentz's dear aunt was baptized after services.—Elda Gauss, Centerview, Mo., Oct. 2.

MONTANA.

Medicine Lake.—Our church met in council Sept. 23, at Beverly schoolhouse. Eld. J. E. Reed presided. Some committee work was disposed of. Bro. Rodger Cookson was appointed to write to the Brethren Mission Board and missionaries in the District of North Dakota, Canada, and Eastern Montana, to learn if they decided to form a Mission Aid Society in the near future. We expect to hold a Harvest Meeting beginning Oct. 28.—Mrs. W. W. Cookson, Scobey, Mont., After which a report will appear. The kind Father is blessing us with a bountiful harvest, in spite of rain. Farmers are busy plowing. The threshing is not near all done yet.—Katie E. Keller, Enterprise, Mont., Oct. 2.

NEBRASKA.

South Beatrice.—Our love feast was held Sept. 22. Nearly all our members were present, and also some from the Beatrice church. Eld. D. J. Fry was with us. Sunday-school, Sept. 23 we had an all-day Harvest Meeting. The forenoon sermon was delivered by Bro. D. J. Fry, from the Beatrice church. Nebr., the afternoon sermon by Eld. J. E. Crist. Two baptisms were received from our Sunday-school, and a partook of the fruits of the earth. The contribution for missions in the day amounted to $111. Bro. Crist closed a three weeks' series of meetings on Sunday evening. Three came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. The church has been greatly revived and built up.—Mrs. Lizzie Crist, Lydia Dell, Beatrice, Nebr., Sept. 28.

Beatrice.—Our church met in council Sept. 21, with our elder, Bro. N. B. Wagoner, presiding. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14, commencing at 10 A. M. Sister Lucetta Throne Smith was chosen as delegate to District Meeting. A collection was taken for our mission fund. Sunday-school work, Bro. N. B. Wagoner was reelected elder for two years. Bro. Joseph Fry was chosen as superintendent. Sunday-school is attended to Eld. J. C. Bright to locate in our midst and assist us in our work. The call was accepted, and we expect him to be with us in the near future.—Mrs. Lizzie Crist, R. D. 1, Brookville, Ohio, Oct. 5.

Canton.—A series of meetings was commenced at the Center church Sept. 24, continuing every evening through the week. Our love feast will be held Oct. 7, commencing at 10 A. M. The preaching was done by the home ministers, except a few sermons from Bro. Hollinger, of Ohio, Bro. Samuel Hoover, of Massillon, Ohio.—Geo. S. Grim, Louisville, Ohio, Oct. 3.

Donnellson church met in council Saturday afternoon Sept. 30, with our elder, Bro. J. E. Barnhart, in charge. Bro. A. S. Neher, of the Hickory Grove church, was present. Two letters were received, and one letter of dismissal was granted. The report of the visiting brethren was given. Bro. Neher reported for Bro. J. H. Gordon, of Ottumwa, who was chosen for the ministry at the council meeting in July, was also present. Brethren Neher and Barnhart had charge of the work.—Elsie Winget, R. D. 1, Box 172, Springfield, Iowa, Oct. 5.

East Dayton.—Our love feast, held Sept. 30, was a very spiritual one. Eld. D. Leatherman, of Leon, Iowa, and Bro. A. D. Brewster officiated. Brethren Isaac Beery and C. V. Coppock remained with us on Sunday morning. Bro. Coppock conducted the Sunday-school, and Bro. Beery preached a strong sermon by Bro. Beery. Both of these services were much appreciated by us. Bro. Coppock remained and held services at this place. He also preached for us last evening. Since our last report we have had the privilege of baptizing at this place, through Christian baptism.—Elizabeth Grove, 264 Maple St., Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 2.

Fort McKinley church met in council Sept. 27, our elder, A. L. Kleginger, presiding. Reports from committees of Aug. 26 were read, and the work was very satisfactory. Our visiting brethren gave us some very helpful talks. Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 15, conducted by Bro. Jos. Keim, of 320 W. Third Street, Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 2.

Pittsburg church met in council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. Jesse Stutsman, presided. Brethren David Hollinger, William Mohler, and Jacob Hollinger were with us. We have a very good meeting, and splendid talks from our brethren. We had baptizing at the close. Two came out on the narrow way, one breaking the bread and passing the cup. The brethren presented this question at the annual visit. Thirty-one dollars were left in the treasury, and $37 voted to continue the old way. Our love feast will be held Oct. 14, at 2 P. M.—Ruth Hyle, R. D. 1, Box 6, Coyle, Okla., Oct. 2.

Stonelick.—Eld. S. A. Blessing came to us Sept. 30. He preached two excellent sermons. Bro. J. H. Davidson preached in the afternoon. In the evening thirty-two members communed. Bro. Blessing left for his home Wednesday, Oct. 1 we had an interesting, well-attended Sunday-school, and after hearing another good sermon by Bro. Blessing we conducted a children's meeting, and preached again on Sunday evening. We appreciated the visit of Brethren Blessing and Davidson. We are very glad that two more members have located in this congregation.—Anna Lesh, R. D. 3, Lovelland, Ohio, Oct. 3.

Trotwood church met in council Sept. 27. Our elder, Bro. D. M. Garst, presided. Many matters was disposed of. Elders J. C. Bright and L. A. Bookwalter were with us, whose presence was appreciated by all. Two were received and five were granted. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4. A temperance committee was appointed to look after the A. S. A. temperance work. Solicitors were appointed to solicit the members of the Trotwood congregation for means to build a schoolhouse of the West Dayton church. The writer was elected to the ministry, and, with his wife, duly installed. Bro. Bookwalter, of the Dayton church, conducted the installation service.—Norman A. Conover, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio, Oct. 2.

OKLAHOMA.

Hoyle.—Bro. and Sister D. E. Cripe were with us Sept. 9, 10. Cripe gave us a splendid talk. Sister Cripe, New York, Bro. Andrew Detrick was also with us, and preached an instructive sermon on Sunday evening. We have organized a Christian Workers' Meeting, with the writer as president. We would most heartily welcome any members in our midst who are thinking of changing location. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. The average attendance is fifty, but we expect a considerable increase.—Mrs. Ida Hoyle, Oct. 3.

Mound Valley church met in council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. Jacob Beer, presided. We had three sermons and lees on Thanksgiving Day, at 11 A. M., and a love feast at 6 P. M. Hereafter we are to have a prayer meeting, connected with Bible study, on Sunday evening after Christian Workers' Meeting, instead of preaching services. Our average attendance at Sunday-school last quarter was ninety.—Elsie K. Sanger, Thomas, Okla., Oct. 4.

Pandora Prairie church met in council Aug. 26, our elder, Bro. Daniel Wolfe, in charge. We reelected officers for the Sunday-school for the next six months, with Sister Westfall as superintendent. Bro. J. H. Gordon will conduct a series of meetings for us, beginning Oct. 29. Our love feast will be held Nov. 11. Three were received by letter at our council.—Jane Morris, R. D. 1, Box 6, Coyle, Okla., Oct. 2.

OREGON.

Williams.—Bro. J. Hartman has come to us Sept. 23 and preached that evening. Sept. 24 he preached the dedicatory sermon of our meetinghouse, and gave us sermons every night for one week. We had fair congregations, and found the Gospel preached as never before. The people were well pleased. Last night the meetinghouse was filled to overflow. There were no additions, but the membership was much built up.—Nicholas Saturday, R. D. 1, Box 1, Grants Pass, Oct. 3.—Jacob F. Moomaw, Williams, Oregon, Oct. 2.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Conestoga.—We held Sunday-school exercises at the Earlville Sunday-school Sept. 24. The meeting was fairly well attended. Brethren Henry Kettlehut, of Flinton, and Bro. Myer, of Lancaster, Pa., addressed the school. Bro. Myer's theme was Intemperance. His talk was very interesting. In the same congregation we held a similar service at the Barrville school, Oct. 1. Bro. Jacob H. Longenecker came to us Sept. 30, 1 P. M., and filled an appointment for us in Marietta, and on Sunday morning at Eby's meetinghouse. In the afternoon he preached at Mountville. Bro. Baltz to the school was full of interest and instruction. The meetings were all well attended. Bro. Baltz took special collections for Sunday-school services for the benefit of the Orphans' Home, amounting to $13.—Mrs. Lizzie Eby, R. D. 1, Mountville, Pa., Oct. 2.

Elk Lick.—Beginning with Sept. 6, when Bro. R. D. Murphy, our Field Secretary, was with us, and gave us a good talk on Sunday-school work, we feel to have been especially blessed with good things. Sept. 7 our pastor, Bro. Rasp, delivered an able discourse to women. Sept. 8 we had a love feast, and on the morning of Sept. 24, Brother and Sister J. M. Blough, returned missionaries, gave an interesting talk to the work in India and its needs. Bro. Dietz, of Johnstown, followed the same evening with a temperance discourse. Good interest was shown and we feel benefited by the labors of these dear brethren. Our next love feast will be held Oct. 28.—Olive Hollsopple Egan, Elk Lick, Pa., Oct. 3.

Hatfield church met in council Sept. 16, our elder, P. P. Cassel, presiding. We decided to have the Missionary and Sunday-school Meeting at the meetinghouse on Thanksgiving Day. We hope that all missionary and Sunday-school workers in this part of the Eastern District will take an interest in the meeting. We also decided to hold our love feast Nov. 25. Eld. E. M. Wenger, of Prodickleburg, Pa., will begin a series of meetings at the Hatfield church next week previous to the love feast, the Lord willing. One was received by letter.—Mrs. Lizzie Detwiler, Hatfield, Montgomery Co., Pa., Oct. 1.

Liverpool.—Sept. 24 another of the applicants, previously referred to, was baptized by Eld. Geo. Strawser. One more remains to be baptized. Sept. 25 our Sunday-school was reorganized, and was reorganized into a Bible class.—the result of Bro. Stover's efforts. He also succeeded in making the people of Orrtanna feel ashamed of their A. S. Blessing, Oct. 4.—Oct. 2.

Lovejoy.—Yesterday we closed a two weeks' protracted effort at Purchase Line. We had a fair attendance when the conditions of the weather are considered. The effort as it was so rainy that we could not have any meetings. Some bridges were taken away and crops damage in a large measure. During our meetings Bro. D. R. Berkey, from the Montgomery church, Bro. Jacob Longenecker, from the Conestoga church, our outgoing missionary, also gave one sermon. The rest of the preaching was done by the home ministers. Three young people and a child were added to the church by baptism, and are rejoicing to walk in the light of God.—Lizzie Swartz, R. D. 1, Box 24, Purchase Line, Pa.

Mechanic Grove church will hold a love feast in the Grove meetinghouse, Oct. 14, commencing at 10 A. M. Sunday-school superintendent for the coming year; Bro. Ellis Kreider, secretary, Sister Ella Kreider. Our series of meetings in the Grove house sometime this fall or winter. The time will be decided on by council.—Mrs. Ella Kreider, R. D. 1, Quarryville, Pa., Oct. 5.

Rockton.—Oct. 4 Bro. J. M. Blough gave us an excellent talk on some of the things of India, which gave us an idea of some of the wretchedness and misery existing among those people. The church helps them with its means as well as with our prayers. Oct. 5 he spoke at the Greenville house. We wish Brother and Sister Blough a safe trip to India.—Libbie Holsopeter, Rockton, Pa., Oct. 8.

Summit Mills.—Bro. S. A. Blessing, of Greensburg, Pa., came to us on the evening of Sept. 21, and held services at the Summit Mills schoolhouse. He preached two sermons. He preached ten soul-cheering sermons. Five were buried with Christ in baptism on the evening of Sept. 28, and others are almost persuaded to come.—John B. Schrock, Garrett, Pa., Oct. 4.

Uniontown.—The George's Creek church met at this place in council Sept. 30, at 10 A. M. Letters were granted to Bro. F. P. Hoover and wife, moving to Virginia, where Bro. Durr will have charge of the Glendale church. Our preaching places, Fairview and Uniontown, are twelve miles apart. The church, in council, decided that each place is to have its own local appointments.—Oct. 3, 1911. Eld. A. A. Gaunt, of Huntingdon, Pa., is preaching a series of

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

DENAIR, CALIFORNIA.

About five months ago we started for California, seeking for a location where our assistance was needed, and where our health would be improved. We were guided to the faithful little band of members at Denair, Cal., and for the present we are located here.

We found twelve members without a minister, but a little chapel had been built up by our dear Brethren before we arrived. Each Sunday they held Sunday-school and met once a week to sing and have a social gathering, in order to keep more closely united. Twice a week they were supplied with a minister from the Empire church. Thus we found them waiting and praying for some one to assist them in their work.

The first Sunday, at our preaching services here, my mother was present whose home was just two weeks old. She resides one-half mile from the chapel, and in the morning she rode in a cart, and in the evening walked one-fourth of a mile to be present. On speaking with her, relative to her venturing so much in her condition, she replied: "Do you think I could stay at home after praying and waiting for this for over a year?" The sister has not missed one service since, though she has a family of six children to care for. Oh, for more such faithful ones!

Last Sunday evening the Christian Workers decided to render a missionary program. This called for a collection. We now have fourteen members and greatly desire to have other families to assist us. We have Sunday-school at ten o'clock, and preaching at eleven; also Christian Workers' Meeting each Sunday at 7 P. M. Thus we have work for many. We are located among citizens who have emigrated from the Eastern States, and there are no foreigners among us.

Denair is a new town of about 200 population, situated between the Tuolumne River, nine miles to the north, and the San Joaquin River, seventeen miles to the south, in the San Joaquin Valley, San Luis Obispo County, Cal., about forty-five miles south of Stockton. We have a wonderfully more suited to the eastern farmer than anything we have yet seen in the irrigated West, it being a dairy country. It is also well adapted to all vegetables, fruits and stock raising.

We have recently enjoyed some rich spiritual feasts from Brethren J. Z. Gilbert, of the Lordsburg College, and Bro. D. W. Crist, of the Los Angeles Bible School. To those who may pass through, we bid a hearty welcome, and will appreciate your aid in this little corner. You can reach us from Turlock on the Southern Pacific, five miles away, or from Denair on the Santa Fe, one-fourth mile from our home.

Denair, Cal., Sept. 25. Myrta Leavell.

BUENA VISTA, VIRGINIA

The Oronoco church, in the Buena Vista congregation, held a series of meetings during the latter part of August, resulting in three putting on Christ in baptism, the ordinance being administered by their pastor, Bro. R. L. Figgers. He has now purchased property in that vicinity, and the members are rejoicing because he has settled among them. They have a membership of about eighty, and are a busy people in the Lord's work. The three referred to above, that united with the Lord's people, were girls from the age of eleven to fifteen years, who came a distance as far as nine miles, to attend services. They did not hear the Brethren preach a great many times before they applied for membership. This may look a little strange, but when I mention that we have good, consecrated Christian workers, it will be readily seen how all this could happen. Surely, "We shall reap what we sow," and why should not we, as parents, train our children in the way we would have them go?

Arnold Ikenberry, another preaching point n the Buena Vista congregation, closed a two weeks' series of meetings Sept. 24, resulting in seventeen putting on Christ in baptism, two reclaimed, and others still awaiting baptism. It made our hearts glad when we reports came of a marked interest and success in so short a time! Surely, the Lord is working with us! Some, in the above number, have passed their three score and ten, and none are less than fifteen years of age. Services were conducted by Brethren S. I. Flory and H. L. Alley. The song services were conducted by Sister Mae Albright.

Two applicants in our home church, Buena Vista congregation, are now awaiting baptism. May the Lord continue to bless us, and help us ever to be faithful to him!

Buena Vista, Va., Sept. 26. W. E. Gilbert.

SOUTHEASTERN PENNSYLVANIA, NEW JERSEY AND EASTERN NEW YORK.

The Ministerial and District Meetings for the District of Southeastern Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Eastern New York were held in the First Brethren church, Brooklyn, N. Y., Sept. 27 and 28. The Ministerial Meeting opened at 2 P. M. with scripture reading by Eld. J. T. Myers, and prayer by Eld. S. R. Zug. Of the twenty-five ministers in this District seventeen were present: Bro. M. C. Swigart was Moderator, Ira C. Holsopple Reading and Writing Clerk, and Bro. C. D. Bonsack Messenger. Following the organization, the various topics of the program were discussed. The speakers were at their best, and as all on the program except two were present, the meeting was a complete success. The Spirit of the Lord prevailed in each discussion and the presence of God was manifest.

The first topic, "The Church," was discussed in its various phases by Brethren A. F. Geib, Quincy Leckrone, M. C. Swigart, T. R. Coffman, Seth Myers, Ira C. Holsopple and Paul H. Bowman.

The second topic, "Our Obligation to the New District," was very forcefully presented by Brethren M. B. Miller and W. G. Nyce.

The third topic, "Two Sides of Our Pastor's Life," was given in two parts. The first side, "What He Ought to Be," was presented by Brethren Quincy Leckrone, Gary C. Myers, C. F. McKee and B. F. Kittinger. The second side, "What the Few Ought to Be," was argued by Brethren J. Y. Eisenberg, Henry T. Horne, J. T. Myers and W. S. Price.

The fourth topic, "Plans for Aggressive Work for Our Young People" was discussed by Brethren Paul H. Bowman and P. B. Fitzwater. The latter brother having very recently come into the bounds of our District, we were all glad for his presence, and profited by his message.

We all received a royal welcome to the city of churches, and we believe that the church enjoyed our presence, as many expressed themselves as desiring to have such a meeting every year in their congregation.

May God's blessing attend the messages given, and may, as a result, much more aggressive work be done in the name of the Master! May the church, that so heartily received us, be the recipient of a double blessing!

The following day, at 8 A. M., the District Meeting convened. There was considerable business transacted all in Christian love, and we believe large things for God will be accomplished in the year before us. Bro. J. Kurtz Miller was the Moderator of this meeting, and filled his place well. Bro. C. F. McKee was District Clerk, and Bro. Ira C. Holsopple, Writing Clerk. Eld. J. P. Hetric was elected as delegate on Standing Committee for 1912, with Eld. J. T. Myers as alternate.

Pottstown, Pa. Ira C. Holsopple.

Delp and Rev. Van Everet.—I. R. Young, Lanark, Ill.

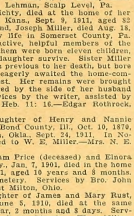
MISSIONARIES WANTED

You don't have to go to India or China or Africa and endure privation and suffer hardship to be a missionary. You can do the best kind of missionary work right at home, and you won't need any preparation or previous training either. All you need to do is to use a little of your spare time and a little of your surplus cash.

One of the best missionaries to the home that we know of is the Gospel Messenger. It preaches several sermons each week to each and every person that reads it, besides containing interesting bits of news and timely articles on up-to-date subjects.

This paper does not have the circulation that its worth deserves; possibly the reason for this is that a good many people do not know of its value, and thus are not aware of the benefit they are missing.

OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS



We will offer the Gospel Messenger for only 50 cents a year if sent into homes where there are no members of the Church of the Brethren. This fact of course is to be mentioned when sending in your orders. The General Mission Board will pay the deficiency.

Why not take advantage of this special offer and BE A MISSIONARY? If each present subscriber would send in but ONE subscription we would double our list, and the good derived could not be estimated.

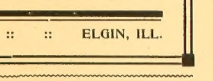
THE LORD'S PRAYER and The Ten Commandments

A most appropriate and beautiful ornament for any home. The Lord's Prayer is printed inside an oval figure, and the Ten Commandments, each split phrase artistically arranged around this figure, three at the top, three at the bottom and two on either side.

Each of the illustrations is an object lesson, and helps much to make the meaning clearer and more forceful. Especially will the picture appeal to children, to whom knowledge comes most readily through the eye-gate. As they read the words the pictures explain their meaning, and the impressions will be lasting.



The picture is not only beautiful, but useful as well. It is printed on heavy paper, in bright colors, beautifully blended. Size, 16x20 inches.

The Gospel Messenger

A weekly religious journal, 16 large pages, is published in the interests of the Brethren, and is the only church organ published by the authority of the Conference. Price, $1.60 per annum.

It most earnestly stands for a return to the apostolic order or worship and practice.

It holds that the Bible is a divinely-inspired book, and recognizes the New Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice for the people of God.

It also holds to the doctrine of the Trinity; teaches future rewards and punishment, and emphasizes the importance of a pure, holy and upright life before God and man.

It maintains that only through a prayerful, faithful until death have the promise of eternal life;

That Faith, Repentance, Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence for the remission of sins;

That Trine Immersion or dipping the candidate three times face-forward in Christian Baptism.

That Feet-washing as taught in John 13, is a divine command to be observed by the people of God.

That the Lord's Supper is a meal, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day.

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the followers of Christ;

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying principles of the religion of Jesus Christ;

That a Non-conformity to the world in walk, dress, customs and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11: 4, 5.

It also advocates the Scriptural duty of Anointing the sick with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have enjoined upon us, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and standards of modern Christendom, to point out ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe. Send for sample copy. Address sermons at Fairview, and was with us in council. Our love feast will be at Fairview Oct. 14. We expect to have a number of meetings here in Uniontown, beginning Dec. 24. Eld. T. S. Fike, of Detour, Md., is to do the preaching.—Mary C. Barnhouse, No. 8 W. Craig St., Uniontown, Pa., Oct. 4.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Laurel.—Bro. J. Schechter, Jr., came to us Sept. 9, and began a series of meetings on the 10th, closing on the evening of the 24th. Five members are located here, and there is room for many more. Our attendance at the meetings was fair, and at the close we took up a collection of $17.15. Good attention was given to the Word preached. Members visiting this way are invited to stop with us.—J. A. Buck, Laurel, S. Dak., Oct. 1.

TENNESSEE.

Jonesboro.—The Brethren had services here yesterday. Bro. P. D. Heed, of Limestone, Tenn., did the preaching. We had a very attentive audience. There being other services in town on the same date, the congregation was not so large.—N. Y. Lortner, Jonesboro, Tenn., Sept. 25.

VIRGINIA.

Antioch church met in council Sept. 30, with Eld. S. M. Lenberry presiding. Two letters of membership were received and granted. Our visiting brethren reported the members in love and peace. The missionary offering was $34.75. A collection was taken for the churchhouse at Bluefield, W. Va., amounting to $18.90. Our series of meetings will begin Oct. 28, to be conducted by Bro. Wine. Our love feast will be Nov. 4, at 3:30 P. M.—Martha Mitchell, Wirtz, Va., Oct. 2.

Evergreen church met in council Sept. 29. Our elder, Bro. S. A. Sanger, presided. A favorable report was given by the visiting brethren and sisters. We decided to hold our love feast at Mountain Grove Church, the church in Bacon Hollow. The time will be fixed a little later. Bro. Sanger closed his meetings in Honeyville Sept. 24, preaching on Sunday-school scholars put on Christ in baptism. This is a promising mission point and we are sorry to have to close the Sunday-school this winter, owing to the poor roads in which to work. We have been working out in the grove all summer.—Nelle Wampler, Dyke, Va., Sept. 29.

Johnsville church met in council meeting Sept. 16, with Eld. D. C. Wampler presiding. One letter of membership was granted, and one was received by baptism. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 14, at 2 P. M., to be preceded by a two weeks' series of meetings and conducted by Bro. J. H. Wimmer.—Drusilla Brank, Box 28, Catawba, Va., Oct. 2.

Madison.—Bro. Geo. A. Phillips, of Waynesboro, Va., commenced a series of meetings at this place Sept. 23. Besides ten soul-reviving sermons he held one Sunday-school session at our love feast. The members were encouraged and outsiders much interested. Some were deeply impressed.—Hontas Un. Port, Va., Oct. 5.

WASHINGTON.

Mount Hope.—Our church met in council Sept. 26. Bro. J. O. Streeter presided. Bro. J. U. G. Stiverson will conduct a series of meetings at our opening point in the country, beginning sometime toward the last of December, to continue about four weeks. We are pleased to know that Sister Stiverson will come with him. We will hold our love feast sometime during the meetings. We decided to build a church in the country next fall. The work will be pushed to such an extent that we feel the need of workers more than ever before.—Ed Hinsey, Box 141, Grandview, Wash., Oct. 2.

Tacoma.—At our council, on Friday evening, Bro. H. M. Rothrock was advanced to the eldership, and, with his wife, duly installed. Bro. Secrist, of Olympia, Wash., and Bro. Fitts, of Bickleton, Wash., attended to the work. Bro. A. Hutchison is preaching the Word for us now in Seattle. The attendance and interest are growing. It makes our hearts rejoice to see by letter that the young people are taking in the Christian Workers' Meeting, and to notice the progress they have made in the short time since we organized.—White Temple, 813 South Fiftieth St., Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 2.

Wenatchee.—The members at this place met in council Sept. 30. Eld. A. B. Peters presided. Two letters of membership were received. Bro. C. E. Hoffer, with his wife, was ordained to the eldership. Elders A. B. and Andrew Peters conducted the ordination service. Our series of meetings will begin Nov. 19, to be conducted by Bro. Andrew Peters.—Goodyear, Wash.—Vinnie Sellers, R. D. 4, Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 2.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Shiloh.—Our congregation met in council Sept. 16. In the absence of our elder, Bro. J. B. Hoffer took charge of the council. Bro. U. G. Bolyard was elected sexton. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 15, with one week's meetings prior to that time.—Dora Auvil, Valley Furnace, W. Va., Sept. 28.

WISCONSIN.

Cloverdale church met in council Sept. 20, at the home of our elder, Bro. T. D. Van Buren. Much business was disposed of. The church officers, as well as our elder, were re-elected for another year. We decided to hold our love feast Oct. 15. Our Sunday-school was also reorganized with Bro. Geo. Van Buren as superintendent.—Mrs. Viola Michael, Conrath, Wis., Oct. 2.

EVERYBODY'S BUSINESS

BY AGNES GIBERNE.

This is one of a number of excellent books written by the author, for boys and girls. It is a book that will be read with interest and helpfulness by young people generally, and older ones, too.

"What is everybody's business is nobody's business." The one special lesson aimed at and clearly and forcibly illustrated in this volume is the importance of the assignment of definite tasks to particular individuals, and their obligations for the performance of the duties assigned.

As a story book that is interesting as well as profitable to a boy or girl it has few equals.

The book contains 311 pages, printed on good paper, bound in cloth. Throughout the pages are found a number of apt illustrations.

AROUND THE WORLD

The Jerusalem Method.

Long years ago, when Jerusalem was in her prime, some one is said to have hit upon a most practical method of keeping the city in a perfect sanitary condition. It was decreed that each householder should cleanse and keep in proper order the part of the city lying immediately in front of his dwelling. Modern sanitary experts can suggest no better plan. And what finer method could there be to cleanse a local church of any troubles that may exist! There will be less friction and more thorough work if each one cleanses his own dooryard, than for all of us to attempt to meddle in work that should be done according to the Jerusalem method. It's a plan well worth trying!

Millions for America's Navy.

Secretary Meyer has decided that the modest sum of $129,000,000 will be needed to maintain the United States navy, and provide for a suitable increase of its fighting strength during the next fiscal year. Adding to the above the vast millions required for the United States Army, we have a grand total that almost staggers belief,—considerably over half a million for each day of the year. With these immense funds,—so we are assured by statisticians,—every foot of barren land in the United States might be irrigated, the homeless provided with ample shelter, and the benefits of a higher education bestowed upon the humblest citizen of the republic. Truly, this country stands in need of a conversion to better things,—its men and women, but also its unlimited resources.

A Day of Humiliation and Prayer.

Yielding to the pressure of increasing public sentiment the British ruler has appointed Oct. 24, 1911, as a day of humiliation and prayer, in penance for the forcing of the opium trade upon China in 1842. The better elements of the British people have never ceased to agitate for the removal of the darkest blot upon the fair name of the nation, and it is gratifying to note that at last tardy recognition is being given to the insistent pleas. As for the people of China, they are already most successfully grappling with the opium traffic, and effecting the gradual elimination of the use of the drug. The Chinese may not know as much, in some things, as their American brethren, but when it comes to the prohibition of a recognized evil, they have a determination that knows no failure.

Secretary Wilson and the Brewers.

Whatever hopes may have been entertained by temperance workers throughout the United States,—that Secretary Wilson would be influenced by the thousands of earnest protests sent him during the last few weeks,—were blasted by his polite though decidedly unfavorable answer. Evidently the Secretary and, perhaps, those "higher up" do not see their way clear to oppose the all-powerful brewing interests by a bold stand for the right. Not for a long while have the people of the United States been so stirred about a question as they are now on this open connivance of the Federal Government with the liquor interests. Not only is the entire religious press roused to righteous indignation, but even secular papers are voicing their severe disapproval. It is the consensus of public opinion that no amount of "explaining" can justify the action of the Secretary of Agriculture.

Why Not Be a "Big Brother" to Some One?

We have referred, in a previous issue, to the "Big Brother" movement, by which the "power of personal influence, put forth in the name and spirit of Christ," seeks to reclaim some erring boy to a life of rectitude. This is accomplished by the direct personal help of some one who elects to be a "big brother" of the dependent one. The work was started some years ago in New York, when there was evident need of effectual help and protection for the many boys brought before the Juvenile Court, and also those who were discharged from reformatory institutions. So successful was the plan of making a volunteer "big brother" responsible for his little charge, that there were but few relapses into former evil ways, and now the report comes from London and other English cities, that the adoption of the same plan has led to most happy results. It occurs to us that the same method might be followed most advantageously in many of our country towns, also, and by any one with the necessary tact and discretion. Many a weak and struggling boy might be given a new grip on life, were there a "big brother" to help him over the hard places.

Prohibition of Tobacco in Colleges.

Indiana, with its effective law concerning the use of cigarets, has virtually driven the baleful practice out of every educational institution in the State. Several large colleges in the East,—among them Columbia University,—have also issued restrictive measures, concerning the use of tobacco in any form, on or about the school premises. These commendable indications of awakening public sentiment should not be without effect upon every thoughtful mind. He who professes to be a servant of the Great King,—the very personification of purity,—can hardly reconcile the use of the vile weed with the holy life he has vowed to live.

Two Crowned Heads Opposing Masonry.

That Emperor William of Germany, and King George of Great Britain should, contrary to the precedent of their illustrious predecessors, refuse all affiliation with the Masonic lodges, seems strange indeed, and yet it is said to be a fact. Both of these rulers,—and especially Emperor William,—have expressed themselves in no uncertain language of disapproval. At a recent court function at Berlin, when a part of the musical program contained productions distinctly Masonic in their influence, they were promptly ordered to be expunged. The firm stand taken by the German monarch is said to be a decided check upon the popularity of Masonry, and especially does it affect those who are influenced by the scriptural reasons he urges against secret orders.

Their Own Testimony.

One is really puzzled whether to believe the emphatic denials of Mormon leaders, as to the existence of polygamy, or to trust the evidence of their own official publications. Judging by two of these books, "polygamy is still regarded by the Mormon church as of divine origin, having the divine sanction and being the divine ideal. Plural marriages are called celestial, and regarded as binding not merely for time but for eternity. To marry one man, and leave him to live with another man, is unlawful, but for a man to marry many wives is commendable." The public teaching of the Mormons may be against polygamy in order to avoid conflict with the authorities, but their private teaching, to those within their ranks, is decidedly different. The fruit proclaims the character of the tree.

Germany as a Peace Mediator.

Whatever may be the final outcome of the war between Italy and Turkey, much credit should be given to the efforts recently being made by Germany to bring the hostilities to an early close, and to arrange terms of peace mutually satisfactory to all concerned. There seems to be an all-around satisfactory basis of settlement, by which Turkey is to surrender Tripoli to Italy in exchange for a concerted recognition of Turkish consolidated rights in Western Europe, and this plan, apparently, has the tacit approval of the Powers. Such a settlement, in view of the important business interests of the leading European nations in Mohammedan lands, would be, perhaps, most conducive to the preservation of world peace. It is decidedly gratifying, however, that the affairs of nations are settled on principles of policy rather than right and justice. The millennium has not yet dawned.

The Brewers' Exposition.

In connection with the much-discussed Brewers' Congress, an Exposition of all the varied appliances connected with the business is now being held. At an outlay of multiplied thousands of dollars the great Coliseum building in Chicago has been fitted up with the varied machinery, etc., pertaining to the brewing business, and for the small sum of fifty cents all are invited to view the great progress (?) of the business! And yet there is a radical difference between this and other expositions that have been held in the great building. Other exhibitions were proud to show the finished product of their varied industries and boast of the benign effect exercised upon the welfare of humanity, but what about the "finished product" of the brewery? Nothing to be proud of, however, that the effects of the spacious room of the great Coliseum would be all too small for the vast procession of wrecked humanity. They could but pass through in a constant stream,—blear-eyed, beer-bloated men, hollow-cheeked, sorrow-stricken women, half-fed and ragged boys and girls! There would be no room for the display of the ruined homes, nor of the various business enterprises, and all else, destroyed by strong drink. No, it would not look well, in the brilliantly-lighted exposition, to exhibit that saddest of all sights,—a drunkard's grave!

Restriction of Marriage.

That marriage is made entirely too easy, in the various States of the Union, is a claim advanced by many earnest promoters of the nation's best interests, and at several recent gatherings the question of wise restriction of marriage has been seriously discussed. While there is a strong demand for a curbing of the continually-increasing cases of divorce, closer attention should doubtless be given to the more fundamental evil,—the ill-advised marriage. Without question, we shall not rid ourselves of the divorce evil until, by all possible means, we guard more carefully the entrance into matrimony. Of the varied relations in life, that of matrimony is entered into, perhaps, with less concern than many others, and we are reaping the deplorable harvest of countless divorces.

A Consul's Opposition to Temperance Work.

A temperance society was organized some months ago among the children in the vicinity of a mission post in Central China by Dr. Edgarton H. Hart, a medical missionary. Upon his recent return to the United States he gave a graphic account of the great interest created among the children, and the excellent progress of the work in general. He greatly regrets, however, that the Consul, representing our great Government, felt called upon to censure him and others severely, because they were "creating a boycott against a great American industry!" Then, too, agents of the large breweries and distilleries are freely distributing samples of their goods, to cultivate a habit that will insure an open market for the liquor trade,—all under the open and avowed protection and countenance of our Government. But the missionary on the field must fight not only the forces of heathen darkness, but also the nefarious liquor traffic, aided and abetted by his own Government.

Protestants Discriminated Against.

The claim, frequently urged, that our Government favors Roman Catholics, to the great discouragement of Protestant interests, would seem to have some foundation, judging by several well-authenticated incidents. The Bureau of Education in the Philippine Islands has directed American teachers to take no part in religious work, even outside of school hours. This ruling prevents these teachers from taking a Sunday-school class in their churches, or even from having a Bible class in a private house. American residents in the Philippines declare, however, that the ruling is enforced only so far as Protestant teachers are concerned. Roman Catholic teachers are not interfered with, and can engage in the various forms of church work that will help to forward Roman Catholicism. The veracity of the above statement is vouched for by the "Missionary Review of the World" and other prominent journals. One is made to wonder whether the Government of the United States is preparing to follow the lead of Great Britain, whose laws and representatives favor Islam in Egypt and the Sudan, as against Christianity. Religious liberty in our insular dependencies should insure the same rights to Protestants as are given to Catholics. Nothing less will accord with the great fundamental principles of our glorious republic.

The Uprising in China.

In the great central provinces of China, traversed by that mighty river, the Yangtse, the revolutionary movement has now progressed to a stage that threatens to end the Manchu dynasty, and even the Chinese throne itself. That the rebel forces are conquering with ease the strongest cities along China's greatest water way,—such as Hankow and Wuchang,—proves that the imperial troops and their commanders are mainly in sympathy with the rebels. Even the troops in Pekin and other points are becoming disaffected, and the capital may ere long be taken by the insurgents. All indications seem to point to the early establishment of a republic by the promoters of the new movement. Dr. Sun Yat Sen, the reputed leader of the insurrection, is at present gathering funds from the Chinese in the United States, but is in close touch with affairs, and directing the movements of the uprising. A manifesto, just issued by the rebels, assures "absolute safety to the persons and property of all foreigners in China." This assurance judging by the respectful attitude of the insurgents so far, will be fully lived up to, and will largely allay any anxiety that may be felt by friends of missionaries. At latest reports telegraphs and other means of communication have been seized by the Pekin authorities, so that further news, regarding the progress of the uprising, will be hard to obtain by the outside world.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth

We'll Hold the Fort!

BY D. MANCY QUELLHORST.

When days are dark, and gathering clouds
With gloom our sky o'erspread,
When friends, we've learned to love, have failed,
And fondest hopes are dead—

When our frail bark, by angry winds
Is driven far out to sea,
Must we give up, while others fight,
To gain the victory?

No, while our God is at the helm,
To aid us in the fight,
We'll rout the foe, and hold the fort,
For Jesus and the right.

What matters it, if all the world,
Do scorn us and deride,
If we can but his smiles receive,
And in his love abide.

We'll brave the roughest gale that blows,
No matter what the pain,
For but one ray of hope that we,
May heaven's blessing claim.

Auburn, Nebr.

Sermonology.

BY DR. O. H. YEREMAN.

ARE the sermons of today better than those preached by our Brethren twenty-five years ago? The almost unanimous verdict of our congregation is "Yes."

Are they carefully studied and logically arranged, so as to act with precision and produce the desired results? We, of the ministry, are forced to answer, "No." The sermons of the Savior and the apostles are masterpieces of earnest, logical, scientific array of spiritual truths, and they invariably produced the desired results. Why are not ours more like unto them?

Every one of us know of some one or more preachers who are always listened to with interest, whose every word seems to possess a magnetic attraction, and whose congregations are loath to see them end their discourses. What is their secret? If you were to ask them, perhaps they would not be able to explain it themselves, and you would be led to say that they were born with natural talent. But this matter has been the subject of careful study and observation of many scholars, and they have discovered and classified the various elements which spell success in preaching. A study of these will help any of us to develop and improve our talents, and although we may never be able to attain to the heights of phenomenal success, reached by these natural-born preachers, still we can all make commendable progress and improvement over our present status.

There are two kinds of sermons. The one composed of a series of formal words and gestures; the other a logical, earnest appeal, which draws the attention, grips the interest, sways the emotions, and sends conviction home. Many ordinary sermons are like a shotgun,—they scatter volleys in every direction. But the successful ones are like an arm of precision, aiming carefully and hitting one mark. The changing from the stereotyped, formal sermon to one with a living Gospel message, pulsating with earnestness, and full of power through the Holy Ghost, is the secret of the better sermon of today.

A strong sermon springs from the soul's vision. Just as a sculptor has a vision of his statue before he sets chisel to his block of marble, and as the painter sees his picture, before he touches his canvass with a brush; so a powerful sermon is depicted in the mind of the successful minister before he ever delivers it.

The sermon is, perhaps, the most important means through which you, as a minister, come in contact with the people. It is preëminently the medium through which you draw and reach nonmembers. If you simmer things down to a fine point, the sermon is, after all, the thing for which the average individual goes to church nowadays.

You feed the flock, train the young, and instruct the old, through your sermons. You interest the nonchurchmember, argue, prove your point, convict him of sin, and convince him that it is to his advantage to accept Christ through your sermon.

Managed rightly, you can often do with a sermon what you can not do by direct, personal interview. There are many persons who dodge all your efforts to speak to them about their souls. Many things of which it is not wise to speak in a direct, personal way, can be sent home through the sermon by the tactful preacher.

A logical, step-by-step development is necessary if a sermon is to achieve its desired purpose. Every statement and every illustration should have a specific reason for being there. Your sole aim is to get your congregation to believe and to act according to your teaching. All nonessentials detract from the directness of your sermon, hence you can not allow them to creep in, neither has your hearer the time to listen to them.

It is the easiest thing in the world to go rambling from one topic to another without getting anywhere, —without proving anything. But the successful preacher has a definite end in view and he goes straight to it over a definite, carefully-planned route. There are a thousand things you might say, but only a few are vital. Confine yourself to those few, and drive them home, and you can be certain of the effect they will produce.

The logical sermon divides itself into the following parts:

1. The Introduction.—The opening words which win the hearer's attention, whether it be the relating of some incident, or the statement of some fact or local event of public interest.

2. The Explanation of the Text or Subject.—The description of it in such a manner as to produce a vivid picture of it in the minds of the audience.

3. Argument, or Proof, and Persuasion.—This convinces your hearer's mind and reasoning powers, and draws him to your way of thinking.

4. Inducement.—This gives the reason why he should. Nowadays we do not do things without knowing what we are to gain by them.

These various component elements are always present in all ideal sermons, but often in varied proportions. For instance a doctrinal sermon is mostly explanatory, while in a revival sermon persuasion and inducement are mostly dwelt upon. Nevertheless, let us not forget that teaching, conviction and conversion are the all-important aims in every gospel sermon, and that a systematic and logical arrangement of facts makes their attainment much more certain and easy.

As an example let us look at the sermon at Jacob's well. Christ uses the words, "Give me to drink" in verse 7 (John 4), as the introduction to his sermon. This being an unusual request from a Jewish man, attracts the interest of the Samaritan woman. Having aroused the woman's interest, Christ proceeds to explain to her about the spiritual water in verse 10. This leads to argument, and the Master's answers are found in verses 13 and 14, where he tells that the spiritual water is like a well in one's soul, springing up into everlasting life. In verses 16, 17 and 18 Christ produces proof of his knowledge and authority. His inducement is found in verses 21, 23 and 24; and the climax is reached in verse 26, where he says, "I that speak unto thee am he." This led to action, for "the woman then left her waterpot and went," etc. (verse 28).

Getting the attention of your hearers at the start, usually determines whether you will have an unbroken chain of interest all through your discourse. If you fail in this at the beginning, you may succeed in getting it later on, but it is much more difficult to accomplish. You may do this in a number of ways. By an opening sentence or illustration that arouses their curiosity, or by a striking statement that hits some one of their problems, difficulties or desires. Their attention once gained, they will follow you all through the discourse, while, if you fail in this, they are liable to nap and fidget for you.

Following this attention-winning opening, the ideal sermon goes right into the description and explanation of the subject which is planned to gain the hearer's interest. This part, above all, must be vivid and plain, so that your audience can understand, SEE and FEEL. Make it so plain and definite that there is no possible chance for vagueness and lack of grasp. You will not succeed in doing this unless you yourself can see and feel the subject matter of your description.

Proof or argument follows logically after explanation. Your audience must have proof of your statements; and proof of the right kind creates desire, without which there is no action. Following in the footsteps of our Master, we must give Bible proof of our statements to our audiences.

Persuasion on the heels of argument intensifies desire. By this the hearer must be shown tactfully how a following of your instructions will bring benefit to him personally. Argument is the production of evidence which will prompt a person to act of his own volition. Persuasion is the added influence of the preacher's personality that brings action when the man himself hesitates. This is the point where the climax or the clincher should come in, and in bringing it, do not forget that we are living in an age of special inducements, and the Bible offers a great many inducements, which, if tactfully presented, will win over many a soul who is hesitatingly waiting just outside the ark of safety. This is the psychological moment in your discourse, and should receive your closest study and attention.

A great many persons are out of the church, in spite of the fact that they believe in her doctrines, know that it is to their advantage, and expect to join it some day, but they keep putting it off from time to time. In many instances these persons began this attitude by being deeply impressed by a sermon or some circumstance, but were not given an opportunity, right then and there, to make a public confession and unite with the church; or else the invitation was so half-hearted, and the manner of giving it so casual that they did not act, and ever since that time have been putting off the decision to immediate action.

Just as the traveling salesman has an order blank for you to sign, the moment you decide to make the purchase, so the wise minister urges immediate action at the psychological moment when the sinner shows signs of contrition and repentance. I recognize the danger of hastily urging people to unite with the church, before they have thoroughly weighed the cost and understand what they are doing, but, on the other hand, I can not lose sight of the countless hundreds who are in danger of eternal perdition, for no other reason than the whisperings of Satan to procrastinate. And I am rather inclined to let a few come in without realizing the full cost, than to allow thousands to perish because of overcarefulness. Therefore always have your inducement carefully prepared and as your hearers hesitate, drive conviction home with all the solemn earnestness that characterizes the messenger of the Great Almighty.

The Power of Agreement in Prayer.

BY MABEL CRIST.

CHRIST'S teaching on agreement in prayer, as found in Matt. 18:15-20, was brought about by a strife between his disciples. They were disputing as to which of them should be the greatest. Then they went and asked Jesus.

He began this lesson by teaching them humility. He said unto them: "Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as a little child, the same is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18:1). The Father puts an enormous value on the one who humbles himself and becomes as a little child, and it is not his will that "one of these little ones" should go astray and perish. He knows immediately when we cause one of them to stumble.

Jesus said that it must needs be that occasions of stumbling come, for he knew the frailty of man. Therefore he gave us verses fifteen and twenty, as a guide to direct us when we come to these trying places. If we truly follow the guide, we shall be led safely through the dark places, and glorious will be the result.

He does not say that we should go to our brother and stand up for our own rights and want all things our own way, but he does say that we should go to him and use our best efforts to get him to become reconciled and to make peace with God and his brethren. Be earnest in this, for "whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven" (Matt. 18:18). But the work of the church can not be bound in heaven unless God's children are gathered together in the name of Jesus. Therefore the church must do her work, in his name, in order to have the Father ratify it in heaven.

One thing that is essential, in order to be gathered in the name of Jesus, is agreement in prayer. In verses eighteen and nineteen he gives the church authority conditioned on the agreeing. And if the church agrees "as touching anything that they shall ask, it shall be done for them" in the name of the Father. In verse twenty the reason is given for the authority cited in verse eighteen, and the reason why he opens up the power of heaven is referred to in verse nineteen. The church is given authority on the basis of being gathered together in Christ's name.

It means something to be gathered together in Christ's name. It means that we accept him as our Lord, and do all we can for the advancement of his cause and kingdom. A church must necessarily be under the guidance of the Holy Spirit to do anything for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. The church would have more power if everyone would prayerfully do God's work.

The only authority the Christian has, toward his brother, is to get him reconciled to God, thus advancing Christ's cause and kingdom. God will help if the church is gathered right. If every believer goes forth in Christ's name, and strives for the advancement of his cause, there will be no trouble in the ranks of God's people.

The way to know that we are working in Christ's name is to get close to the Father and his Word, and pray for the guidance of the Holy Spirit, because it will help our infirmities (Rom. 8:26). We should follow Jesus' example by submitting ourselves to the Father and doing the things he wants us to do.

Agreement in prayer helps us in strengthening our faith. It makes the plea stronger, and we have the sure promise of receiving, when we agree, as touching anything that will bring honor and glory to God. We have no authority unless the glory of God is the purpose in view. We should talk about the work that the Father has given us to do, and decide in what way we can best work to his glory. Therefore, agreement in prayer draws us nearer to God, and we can expect him to answer our prayers.

Prayer empowers the church to work for the advancement of Christ's kingdom. We must be in perfect harmony with God's will if we want him to bind in heaven what we bind on earth. A church can not be in perfect harmony with his will unless the members all agree to bring honor and glory to his name.

Where the Shepherd Feeds His Flock.

BY JAS. A. SELL.

"Tell me, O thou whom my soul loveth, where thou feedest, where thou makest thy flock to rest at noon; for why should I be as one that turneth aside by the flocks of thy companions" (Cant. 1:7)?

THE Savior speaks of himself as being a good shepherd. He surely is. He possesses all the characteristics of a good one. He left the company of angels in a world of perfect bliss, and went into the mountains, "seeking that which was gone astray." He has tenderness. "He giveth his life for the sheep." He has unlimited power and can defend his sheep. "No man can pluck them out of my hand." He seeks their comfort. "He maketh them to lie down in green pastures; he leadeth them beside the still waters." He is faithful and constant in his devotion. "Having loved his own which were in the world he loved them unto the end."

He not only has a flock, but he has a fold, and feed, for it. He can shelter, protect and make it comfortable. A yearning heart, longing and craving to obtain what the world can not give, overflowed in the beautiful love song quoted above, "O thou whom my soul loveth," etc. The Good Shepherd answers: "I am the door; by me if any man enter in he shall be saved, and shall go in and out and find pasture." He feeds in the sanctuary where his flock "enter in," to sing and pray and preach and obey his Word.

One who had experience speaks of the "fatness of his house," and "drinking of the river of his pleasure." Here is where the soul is nourished and made strong to do his will, and resist temptations, and find the way of duty one of pleasantness and peace, thus finding rich pasture everywhere.

The flock of the world are fed on amusements and the indulging of appetites and passions that are unsatisfying to the higher and better part of our being. If we "turn aside" to feast with them, the peace and pleasure afforded by the green pastures and still waters will be lost.

"O, tell me, thou life and delight of my soul,
Where the flocks of thy pastures are feeding;
I seek thy protection, I need thy control,
I would go where my Shepherd is leading.

"O, tell me the place where thy flocks are at rest,
Where the noontide will find them reposing.
The tempest now rages, my soul is distressed,
And the pathway of peace I am losing.

"O, why should I stray with the flocks of thy foes,
'Mid the desert where now they are roving—
Where hunger and thirst, where afflictions and woes,
Where temptations their min are proving.

"O, when shall my foes and my wanderings cease?
And the follies that fill me with weeping!
Thou Shepherd of Israel, restore me that peace
Thou dost give to the flock thou art keeping.

"A voice from the Shepherd now bids thee return
By the way where the footprints are lying—
No longer to wander, no longer to mourn
O fair one, now homeward be flying!"

Power.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

THERE are but a few people who can tell what power is. They may go to a power house, and see the building, and the machinery, and the sparks made by electricity, but they do not see the power. They might go to Niagara and see that huge waterfall, by which the dynamos are propelled that generate the electricity, operating the cars in cities over a hundred miles away. Although there is power here, equal to that of a hundred thousand horses, yet no man has ever seen it.

When Christ stood before Pilate and said nothing, Pilate said, "Knowest thou not that I have power to release thee and power to crucify thee?" Jesus answered, "Thou wouldst have no power against me, except it were given thee from above." All power originally came from above. "There is no power but of God." It is as invisible as the Spirit of God itself. It is that invisible energy which propels, repels, upholds, controls and directs all things.

Power may be classified according to the agency through which it works, as "Physical Power" and "Spiritual Power"; also "Human Power" and "Divine Power." Physical power is illustrated in nature by the earthquake, the thunderbolt or the storm at sea, and by man in all the activities in which he is engaged, whether it be the building of the Panama Canal, the railroads that span the continent from sea to sea, building the cities, navigating the ocean or the air, or the simplest act in domestic life.

Since power is invisible, man uses a sign of power or authority. The king shows his power by his crown, the officers in the army by their uniforms, the policeman by the star on his breast. All corporations and notaries public have their seal. In spiritual life the woman, when she prays in public, or prophesies, is required to wear a token of power on her head because of the angels, who are supposed to be in the public assemblies, and also to indicate her relation to man.

Man has no power except that which was delegated to him at creation when he received "dominion over the fish of the sea, over the birds of the heavens and over every living thing that moveth upon the earth." He also had the power to use every plant, and shrub, and tree, except one, and when he transcended the power or authority God gave him, he met with dire consequences. Human rulers have no power to govern except what they obtain from those governed. "There is no power, but of God. The powers that be are ordained of God" (Rom. 13:1). The "powers that be" implies the civil government, or power, and not the rulers. Civil government, or power, is invisible, like all other power. Rulers are not that power, but are the administrators of that power. A government may be very good, while the officers or administrators are bad men. Since the civil power is of God, we are to sustain it by paying tribute and giving "honor to whom honor is due."

Satan, too, has power as well as man, but no more than God allows him. From Job 2:6 we learn that he could have no power over Job beyond what God allowed him. He can have no power over us beyond what we allow him. "Resist the devil and he will flee from you." He has great power over the heathen world. The Chinese nation, the largest in the world, makes it an object to worship the evil one; so do many of the inhabitants of India. In a general way, Paul says in 1 Cor. 10:20, "The things which the Gentiles sacrifice they sacrifice to demons and not to God." When he tempted Christ and pointed out all the kingdoms of this world and the glory of them, he claimed that he possessed them and Christ did not contradict him. On another occasion Christ calls Satan "the prince of this world." That Satan has great power in this world and among the nations, is evident from the great evil committed through the sale of intoxicants, supported by governments, and the enormous burden imposed by nations for the support of armies and navies, and the preparations for war, working directly against the Prince of Peace.

Divine Power is vested in the Father, the Son, the Holy Spirit and the Word. Before the advent of the Son into this world, it could be said of the Father, "His kingdom ruleth over all." The mineral kingdom, the vegetable kingdom, the animal kingdom, and the civil powers of all the nations were controlled and directed by the Father. Concerning Pharaoh he said, "For this purpose did I raise thee up that I might show in thee my power." He used the nations surrounding the Israelites as whips to chastise his people when they lapsed into idolatry. He used Nebuchadnezzar to punish the Israelites and carry them to Babylon on account of their sins, and when they had repented he said of Cyrus, "He is my shepherd and shall perform all my pleasure, even saying of Jerusalem, She shall be built" (Isa. 44:28). In Isa. 45:1 we read, "Whose right hand I have holden to subdue the nations."

While the power of ruling or governing nations is in the hands of the Father, the power of redemption is in that of the Son. "Neither is there any other name (power) under heaven, given among men, wherein we must be saved." When the Savior said, in Matt. 28:18, "All authority hath been given unto me in heaven and upon earth," he had reference to that spiritual power by which he was to "put all his enemies under his feet." The last enemy that shall be abolished is death. The Father has his line of work and the Son has his, therefore the Son said, "My Father worketh hitherto and I work." The Father rules over the nations or civil governments still, and can cast down one and raise up another. Satan has power to deceive the nations (Rev. 20:3). The Son has power "to destroy the works of the devil."

The power of the Son in heaven is to prevail with the Father when saints pray. "Whatsoever ye ask in my name I will do it." He is our Mediator between us and the Father. He has power to give to every one that overcometh, the privilege of eating "of the tree of life which is in the Paradise of God." He gives him "the crown of life," and "writes his name in the book of life."

The agencies by which the Son works on earth is the Word or Gospel which is "the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

The Holy Spirit is another power which the Son sent on earth to be a Comforter, into whose name or power we are baptized, who bestows on us gifts and graces, and sanctifies the soul.

Southern Iowa.

BY I. B. TROUT.

IT was the good fortune of the writer to have the pleasure of attending the recent Sunday-school, Ministerial, Christian Worker, and District Meetings of the State District of Southern Iowa. These were held Oct. 5 and 6, in the South English house of the English River congregation. We also attended the Elders' Meeting, held on the afternoon of the 4th. There are not many elders in the District, but they work together in a most friendly and admirable manner. Every one seemed to respect his brother more than himself, and every one showed a deep interest in the welfare of every congregation of the District.

As is their custom, a love feast was held on the evening of the 4th. Two hundred and twenty-five or more communicants surrounded the table. The meeting was in every way a spiritual feast and uplift. The workers who took part in the various sessions named above entered into their work with a very commendable zeal and intelligence. There was manifested a determination to make the Sunday-school work go better in the future than in the past. The ministers in their session showed clearly that they all are determined to exalt the calling to the ministry by endeavoring to grow into larger service.

The work of the District Meeting was completed in a half day. Aside from the usual routine of various reports at such a meeting, there were but three queries, and two of these related to the subject of child rescue work. A constitution governing this work was adopted, and a competent board appointed to begin the work. The other query related to the manner and method of conducting the meetings of the District, and was returned to the church from whence it came. Eld. George W. Burgin, of South Ottumwa, was chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee of 1912, with Eld. Orlando Ogden as alternate.

Following the Christian Workers' Society program, on Thursday evening, the writer preached the annual missionary sermon, after which about $1,000 in money and pledges was collected. There is a growing missionary spirit and enthusiasm in the District, and without a doubt we may safely look for large things within the next generation.

It was clearly shown, throughout all the sessions, that the Southern District of Iowa is a great field. There is much unoccupied territory. There are a number of places ripe for the harvest. The people are calling for the Gospel. The laborers, relatively speaking, are few. However, they are ardent and earnest. The greatest problem before the church in this locality, as in many other localities, is not what to do, but how to secure a sufficient number of workers to come anyways near doing the work that is waiting and ready. It looks to the writer as if the church in general is greatly in need of a large and deeper consecration to the Master's cause. It looks as if commercialism has taken hold of us with a terrific grip. We are making money, adding farm to farm and dollar to dollar, but are we as wide-awake to the saving of souls and adding numbers to the Master's kingdom? We came away from these meetings feeling that in years to come the work will grow in Southern Iowa and that the workers will become more numerous.

John's Baptism.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

JOHN as a forerunner of Christ, was commissioned of God to baptize and make ready a people for Jesus.

The apostles were received by Jesus into the church upon John's baptism. They did not go forth as administrators until commissioned by Jesus. John, as a forerunner, had no right to appoint other men to perform his work. Apollos, as a disciple whom John had baptized, needed more perfect instruction before he could do acceptable teaching (Acts 18: 26). John, as a forerunner, could prepare a people for Christ, but one of John's disciples, going out and baptizing into John's baptism, could not prepare a people. He would have no authority from John, for John could not appoint sub-forerunners.

One of John's disciples, baptizing, could not give the proper and full instruction; he could only point them to a Jesus yet to come.

He might be mighty in the Scriptures (Acts 18: 24) but he could only speak of the Savior yet unborn. He would be utterly unprepared to instruct an applicant to accept a Savior who had come to save and sanctify them. An applicant who did not know that Christ had come, could not be baptized into Christ, and he could be baptized and made ready for Christ only by the forerunner appointed by God.

For this reason, whoever baptized the twelve in Acts 19: 1-5, made a complete failure and Paul had to rebaptize them. Whether Apollos or some other disciple of John did this work, it was wrong. They could not baptize into Christ while they were looking for a Savior yet to come. They could not themselves be in the church,—members of Christ's body,—until by faith they accepted Christ as a reality. Though Apollos had been baptized by John, he could not be counted a member of Christ's body,—the church,—until he accepted a real and not a prophetic Christ. The apostles became members of the church only after they accepted Christ as their Savior.

If one of John's disciples baptized the twelve, he not only failed to tell them of a Savior in reality, but he failed to tell them that the Holy Ghost was the special gift for each newborn son. He could not talk of a newborn soul, he could not instruct them to believe in a Savior that was a reality, he could not promise the Holy Ghost. Whoever did the baptizing, not knowing that Christ had come, could not be compared to an administrator with a full knowledge of the Gospel, one who believes that Christ lived and died to save every true believer. They could not be compared to one who accepts Christ as his Savior and the Holy Spirit as his Comforter.

The twelve, not knowing that Christ had come, could not be prepared to receive baptism as an applicant receives it who believes in a Jesus as his Savior, and who accepts the Holy Ghost as his Comforter and Guide.

The twelve, as baptized by Apollos, can not be compared to one who has been baptized by trine immersion for the remission of sins, believing in Christ. They can not be compared to one who, with enough light to accept Christ as his Savior, bows in baptism according to God's Word.

The twelve were wrong fundamentally, in their belief, and can not be compared to those who are fundamentally right in their belief.

Their failure was on the great essential to Christian pardon and fellowship with Christ and his church, and can not be compared to one who believes in Jesus now, and is baptized by his direction in the Word.

"The New Testament plainly teaches that those who believe, repent and are baptized by trine immersion for the remission of sins have the promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit, and then come into fellowship with the people of God (Mark 16: 16; Matt. 28: 19, 20; Acts 2: 38-42)."

Ten Dollars' Worth of Experience.

BY B. E. KESLER.

Too good to keep, and so I "pass it on." Recently, on leaving the Union Station at St. Louis, on a Wabash train west, I had the following experience:

Shortly after the train left the station, a neat-looking gentleman(?) took his seat beside me, and I enquired, "How far out are you going?"

"To Des Moines. I have a sister on the train whom we are sending to Colorado for her health. She has tuberculosis."

I asked, "To what part of Colorado is she going?"

"To Colorado Springs."

"Well," I said, "I live in Colorado and I believe she will be benefited."

He continued, "Well, we hope so; but we are trying to keep the worst from her, so we are sending her to her aunt's on a visit (?)."

At this instant the newsboy came along and my friend (?) purchased a paper to learn the results of the ball game. This done, in a few moments my friend (?) No. 2 came up and wanted to know if either of us could give him "a ten-dollar bill for smaller change."

My friend No. 1 fumbled about his pockets, but said nothing. I said, "I guess I can."

As I opened my pocketbook, he saw I had a five-dollar bill also, and asked if I could let him "have that also."

"Yes, but why do you want to exchange small bills for larger ones?"

"To put in an envelope, neighbor."

The two bills were handed him, and my change was handed to me. I counted it and found it one dollar short. He reached for it and counted it, and, finding it short one dollar, he asked if it would be all right to "give me a silver dollar."

"Yes," I said.

Then he handed me the bills and the silver dollar, and I folded the bills and put all into my pocketbook, whereupon my friend (?) No. 2 went away.

Presently the newsboy came along and my friend (?) No. 1 thought he must have some reading matter for his sister,—religious matter preferred,—such as "First Mortgage" or "Talmage's Sermons." Not being able to get these he said, "A novel will do." Following the newsboy to the front of the coach, he said, "Why, I am on the wrong car," and got off.

This was just as the train reached the first stop, Vandeventer Avenue. Up to this time the conductor had not called for tickets, and I wondered why.

I've met new friends (?) since, but I'm short ten dollars, that's sure.

"How was it done?" you ask. Simply by the way he manipulated the bills he handed me in the exchange. I could explain fully to any one present, I think, but it is more difficult to explain on paper, and as it is questionable whether such tricks should be explained in detail, suffice it to say, I got ten dollars' worth of experience, which you may some time have an opportunity to get and so I "pass it on."

Believing that such friends (?) should be openly exposed, I think it well to relate my experience with them, and now you have it for what it may be worth to you.

My friend No. 2 wanted to know if I had a "twenty-dollar bill." If I had had, it is easy to see how my experience might have been twice ten dollars. Hereafter, I'll tell such friends (?) to have the conductor change their bills.

Fashion's Follies Versus Church Piety.

Read before the Ministerial Association of Johnstown, Pa., by J. H. Cassady.

To love to dress beautifully is not to be a slave to fashion, for God has dressed every flower in richness and fragrance. Every field is clothed with its mantle of green. Every star twinkles with its own brightness. Every bird is decked with its many colors. The running brooklet sparkles with its countless diamonds, as the rays of the morning sun first dawn upon it. But the slave of fashion ever bows in humble submission to the dictates of a stern tyrant. She sacrifices her errands of mercy and helpfulness by dressing in elegance, but does not think or do anything for the benefit of mankind.

Beauty in dress is a good thing, but it is a lower form of beauty for which a higher form of beauty should never be sacrificed. They love dress too much who give it first thought, their best time, and most of their money, thus neglecting the culture of the mind and heart. Such persons do not heed the calls of others for service. They care more for their dress than for their dispositions. They trouble more over an unfashionable garment than a neglected duty.

Feminine beauty never appears to so good an advantage as when one is clad in simplicity of dress. What artist ever painted his angels with birds and feathers, gaudy colors and extravagant ornaments of jewelry? So, if our human angels wish to have the admiration of the pure and the good, they should never hide nor mar the beauty with which God has endowed them, by the use of superfluous articles.

That we should be clad is proved by the opening of the first wardrobe of Paradise. That we should all be beautifully and gracefully clad is proved by the fact that God never made a thing in nature but that he beautified it, as we may see in the flowers and leaves of various forms and colors. So it is with the highest form of his creation. I know that he wants us to be beautifully clad. I say this, because I do not believe in an iron-clad, ecclesiastical rule by which every detail of Christian attire should be measured, but it does appear to me that the goddess of fashion has been so enthroned in the country that it has become a rival to the Lord of heaven and earth.

No heathen god has ever had more zealous devotees than the "Goddess of Fashion." Her laws, like those of the Medes and Persians, must be implicitly obeyed; but, unlike them, they change as the moon changes. Another absurdity is, that the laws of fashion are rarely based on reason. They usually violate common sense, common decency, and common comfort. Where is the comfort, common sense and common decency in the modern bobble and the tube skirts, which are now to be replaced by the incarnation of the libertinism of Paris,—the harem skirt?

We do not expect much better of the world, but when Christian women become such slaves to a system,—the most tyrannical in all the world,—Christian piety has been lost. Think of her tyrannical ruling! She pinches our feet with tight shoes; chokes us with high collars; deforms our bodies with tight lacing; paints our faces to make us appear what we are not; places upon our heads an artificial burden that produces headache and stupidity; ruins our feet with high-heeled shoes, and endangers our health by low-necked and short-sleeved gowns, which expose us to the vulgar taunts and ridicule of indecent men.

While waiting on a car, a few days ago, a lady, dressed in one of the late-style skirts, passed along the street. I noticed that no less than a score of men turned and watched her as far as they could see her, each one passing some vile remark about her gown. What Christian woman has a right to expose herself in this way?

But this is not all. Fashion compels people to dress gaily, whether it is upon their own property or that of some one else. She imposes burdens with no regard for the strength of her hoodwinked followers. She cheats them out of time, health and happiness—all of this with the one remuneration—that it is better to endure pain, endanger health, and live a lie in order to be in style, than to have comfort and ease, and be what you are, even if you are out of style.

No king with such absolute power has ever lived. See this queen as she issues her orders! No police department is necessary to enforce her mandates, but at the sacrifice of health, comfort and Christian piety, willingly and peacefully her subjects bow in humble submission to her semiannual messages. In this message, if she requires silks from France, lace from Holland, or furs from Alaska, these must be had, even if health and home comforts are the price. If she requires comparative nakedness for winter and woolen garments for summer, it must be obeyed. If she orders that the circulation of our bodies, and the organs of respiration be retarded by steel, whalebone and cords, she speaks and it is done. How disease and death laugh at the folly of these worshipers!

Then, again, the fashion plates of any age are an index of the morality and piety of that age. Do you wonder why Tyre and Sidon were destroyed? Read her fashion plates in Isa. 3: 16-22. Do you wonder why Rome fell? Read her fashion plates in history. Do you know why France and Spain are in the last throes of a great struggle for existence? Read her fashion plates for the last half century.

Another of fashion's baneful influences is fraud. Do you know that Arnold, the traitor of the Revolution, by his own confession, sold his country in order to get money enough to supply his wife's wardrobe? I firmly believe, before God, that the effort to keep up expensive wardrobes in the country is sending many, many men to temporal and eternal perdition. A few years ago the richest man of Philidelphia was sent to the penitentiary for watering stocks to get money to pay a $25,000 wardrobe bill that his wife had incurred in Paris. It is a well-known fact that the president of a prominent bank in New York, who is now serving a sentence in the penitentiary, was driven to defraud because of the annual visits of his wife and two daughters to Paris. Much of the graft and defaulting of today,—even in our own State,—has not been because men wanted to defraud, but because of the desire to supply the demands of "Queen Fashion" upon his own household. These demands being greater than his power to do right, he fell. Then we pity the mother and the daughters who have been so dishonored, and yet their unreasonable demands for means to follow their queen has caused the downfall of the husband and father.

You and I know scores of men who are put to their wits' end, lashed from daylight until dark, from January to December, not simply to supply the necessities of life, but to keep up a style that they think is in keeping with their social standing in the community, and all this at the sacrifice of their spiritual lives, and, many times, at the price of their moral character.

Here is the way in which the temptation naturally comes: A man thinks more of his wife and home than all the world outside,—and he ought to. He comes home tired. His wife has seen her neighbor with a new gown and bonnet. It is just the latest. She tells him that she and her daughter must have new gowns and hats. Styles this year are so different that it will never do to appear before her neighbors in last year's style. His family pride is touched. He yields. He knows his bank account is not sufficient, so he takes money from the drawer of his employer, forges a check, and they all go down together,—the husband to prison, the wife to the washtub, and the children to other homes. Thus the tragedy is ended and the curtain falls.

Such experiences are repeated over and over while the "Queen of Fashion,"—the very incarnation of Satan himself,—laughs at the downfall of her victims. Again; this queen numbers her victims by the thousands in the fall of virtuous womanhood. Between the demands of this goddess and the avariciousness of many men and corporations, hosts of our fair daughters are forced into a life of shame.

While visiting a silk mill, some time ago, where over four hundred girls were employed, I found upon inquiring, that the average wages of those girls was $3 per week. Some were working for much less. As these girls go out from the mills into society, on every hand are the demands of fashion. The store windows are full of gaudy display. Their more fortunate sisters have already donned the new styles, so they, too, must have it or be ridiculed and forced out of society. What must the poor girls do? They must either steal or sell their virtue. They can not steal, so they fall, and their new-style hats, each summer and fall, are but the price of their virtue. Jacob Riis says that "fifty per cent of all the fallen girls in New York came through this doorway."

Then, how can a Christian be associated with a system that is so demoralizing? Or how can the church remain silent while this "Goddess of Fashion" erects her shrines in the very jaws of our places of worship? What is the influence of these devotees with whom the cut of the collar, the depth of a flounce, or the style of a hat is of more importance than the style of life or the strength of virtue? They look at the fashion plates oftener than they do their Bible. They speak of fashion and style more than of virtue and piety. They follow its instructors much more diligently than they do the silent teachings of their Lord. They look at misery, poverty and vice without a blush, but a plume or a gown out of style would throw them into hysterics.

Oh, goddess, how thou art dwarfing the intellect, robbing our people of their piety, sacrificing virtue and womanhood at thy shrine! Genius and talent are laid upon thy altar; manhood is sold unto slavery because of thy demands!

If there must be a place in which to display diamonds and silks, broaches, earrings, bracelets, plumes, birds and feathers, frizzled heads and false hair, perfumes and cosmetics, harem skirts and mammoth hats, let it not be in the church of the meek and lowly Christ, where saint and sinner, poverty and riches, king and servant, rich and poor, call upon the one Great, Supreme Being as "Our Father who art in heaven," but let it be at the wine party, the card table, the dance hall, the ball room and the theater, where the Meek and Lowly Christ has never entered, can never enter, and where true Christian piety is never found.

JUST FIFTEEN YEARS AGO.

Bro. D. L. Miller's article in Gospel Messenger of Oct. 7, recalled instances of that trip that will undoubtedly be of interest to the Brotherhood.

The writer met Bro. D. L. Miller and his wife at Seattle, and accompanied them to Portland, stopping en route to visit the few members living near Centralia, Wash., then going to Portland, Oregon, where there were but few members. On the return trip east we stopped at North Yakima, and Mr. Granger, a banker, very kindly took our party in his surrey over the sagebrush country, where the orchards of Sunny Side of today are yielding large crops of luscious fruit.

Then, as we came farther east, we stopped at Spokane, took a rig and went out some miles north of the City to visit an isolated member, an old lady who had not met any of the Brethren for years. Then we went south to Tekoa, Washington, and east to Moscow, Idaho, where there were a few members who still held to their organization, but had not had a resident minister for some years. Their presiding elder, old Bro. Meesmaw, lived at Salem, Oregon, 423 miles away. They were indeed glad to have Bro. Miller remain with them several days, and hold some meetings.

I write to call particular attention to what colonization has done for the missionary cause. Now, Bro. Miller speaks of it not only in this article but in several articles he has written recently of his trip to the Northwest.

The writer wishes to call attention to the phenomenal growth of the Church in the Northwest of today, as compared with what it was fifteen or twenty years ago. Now, instead of having the three States of Oregon, Washington and Idaho in one District, they have three church Districts—each one strong enough to call District Meetings, and appoint delegates to the Annual Conference, and one strong enough, as Brother Miller says in his article, to assess themselves and to collect an aggregate of $1,240 for Home Mission work.

Bro. Miller said that his trip to the Northwest, at this time, was primarily to visit and bid Godspeed to the band of missionaries who sailed from Seattle to the Orient. Not only did he do this, but he was assisted in this by the strong membership that had settled in this country during the last fifteen years,—showing that while this country is not only prolific in raising fruits of the soil, it is also prolific in raising fruits of the gospel seed that had been sown during that time.

Speaking of old Bro. Meesmaw, who resided at Salem, Oregon, it should be noted that he, like many others with their families, crossed the continent over the old Oregon trail with ox teams. Today the members who wish to go to that country can practically make the trip over very nearly the entire trail, by railroad. While the early pioneers traveled days and days without seeing a white man, the members of today can, if they choose, reach that country in three or four days, from the time they leave the Missouri River till they reach the Pacific Slope. Instead of spending three or four months on the trail with the ox team, without seeing a white man, they can make the trip by rail in three days, or if they wish to extend the trip over the period of three weeks or three months, they can do so. Not only can they see a white man, but visit with members of the Church of the Brethren every day, clear across the Continent, and when they arrive on the Pacific Slope, they can find, instead of a wilderness, as good churchhouses as those they left in the East, and as active, pushing members of the Church as they have ever visited in the East.

But I can not close this article without calling attention to the fact that the members who left us just seven fifteen years ago, they have held a District Meeting in a congregation strong enough to make the call, and have it endorsed by that District Meeting, for the Annual Meeting to be held in their midst in 1913.

EXTENSION DAY NOTICE.

The Trustees of the Brethren Sunday-school Extension of Chicago have appointed Sunday, Oct. 29, as "Extension Sunday." It is fervently hoped that this day will be observed by every Extension Sunday-school. Prayers for the extension of Sunday-schools in every part of the vineyard should be offered.

On this day the returns from the dime investments will be paid in, and should be mailed with the special collections, whenever such are taken up, direct to the General Mission Board at Elgin, Ill. Be sure to state that the collection is intended for the Brethren Sunday-school Extension of Chicago, or it may be confused with funds intended for other purposes.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Day of Life.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

THE life of man is often called a day. As every day has its morning, noon and evening, so the life of man has its youth, manhood and old age. As every day is followed by a night, so death will close the day of life for every man.

Youth we might well term the morn of life. What beautiful scenes we view, as morning dawns and the sun rises above the eastern horizon! The birds are singing their morning melodies; the flowers are refreshed by the dew, and every one feels happy and vigorous, ready for the duties of the day. Thus, likewise, a child starts out in the morning of life, not knowing what is in the future. As the sun often rises clear and bright, only to be obscured by clouds ere noon, so man starts out in this life with great changes before him. In the days of yore our German brethren used to sing:

"Es kann vor Nacht leicht anders werden,
Als es am frühen Morgen war."

Every child who starts out in life's morning, should remember Solomon's advice, when he said: "Remember now thy Creator in the days of thy youth." Every child that keeps Jesus in the heart, will have a joyous time when the years of maturity draw nigh.

After the sun has reached the zenith, and shines very brilliantly, we say, "It is noon." When the days of childhood have passed by, a youth becomes a man. He is now in the prime of life, with many golden opportunities at hand. A small child is helpless, but a strong man can perform great deeds. His eye is keen, and his intellect is at its best. Heat and cold mean nothing to him. He strives to make his mark in the world. He wants to work during his best days, for he knows that the night of death will meet him after a while.

Man should serve his Maker throughout his best days, and not wait till his life's sun has almost set. He should not neglect the one thing needful, for "time and tide wait for no man." This we know to be a fact.

After a while evening comes on, and the sun sets beyond the western hills. The day is past and it is night. So the evening of life comes on, and man feels that he will soon pass away. The frosts of winter gather on his brow, his eyes are dim, his steps are feeble, and he needs a cane. As he looks back he can rejoice, if he lived the Christ-life. As his sun sets beyond the hills of time, he can bid a peaceful farewell to this old world, for Christ will pilot him across the chilly waters, to the blessed home where he can enjoy the pleasures of an eternal day.

Anti-Saloonism Not the Remedy.

BY M. M. ESHELMAN.

TO VOTE men into office who will license saloons to sell the awful, intoxicating stuff which is so destructive to men and wives and children, is not the remedy. Even stopping saloons will not stop drunkenness. If the nation wants to stamp out the bubonic plague, it can not do so by simply doctoring the sick. To destroy the plague, the Government must destroy the propagators,—the rodents,—rats, mice, squirrels, etc. This done, the flea can not carry the disease to the people. So with the extermination of drunkenness. Stop the making of the vile stuff, thus curbing the evil in the very start. Why move against the saloon man and the drinker, while we let the manufacturer have a clear field, and even give him laws to protect him in the making? Strike at the root of the evil! You can not kill the bad use of money by decrying against money, turn the love of it into righteous channels and money will not be abused. Turn the mind of man to true manhood, and the abuse of money will cease. Prevent the manufacture of intoxicating drinks and you destroy the thirst for it, and manhood comes to the surface. Nothing but prohibition will fit up to gospel requirements.

The Train Was Late.

BY S. A. POWERS.

THE District Meeting of Middle Iowa closed on Thursday evening, Sept. 28. About thirty members were taken to Percy, a small station on the Wabash Railroad to take the train for Des Moines.

On arriving at the depot, we learned that the train was two and a half hours late. As the only thing to do was to wait for the train, we tried to make ourselves as comfortable as circumstances would permit.

There being a number of ministers among us, it was soon decided to have services in the depot if the agent would grant us the privilege, which he gladly did.

After singing a few songs, John 15 was read and prayer offered. Then Bro. Virgil C. Finnell gave us a fine discourse on "The Vine and the Branches," or "Christ and his Members," followed by Bro. John Robinson with the theme "Traveling." He painted a word picture of man's pilgrimage from earth to heaven. Both speakers handled their parts well.

The service was closed with songs and prayer. Our train proved to be five hours late, but the time was passed pleasantly.

"Come Here, John."

BY C. D. HYLTON.

I ONCE knew an old man who was very ambitious in his undertakings, but a little disappointment would wonderfully frustrate him. In most cases his judgment was good, but he was human and made some mistakes. It was said of him that when things did not move on to suit him and he became provoked, he had a custom of calling on one of his boys, "Come here, John." The boy knew that a "flogging" awaited him and he obediently marched up and took it. This served as an escape valve for the old man, but what of the boy?

I wonder if this old man is alone in this respect, or does the same spirit get into other families?

Again I wonder if the same spirit ever gets into those who are regarded as leaders in the church. When spirituality is at a low ebb, and things do not move on as desired,—when people do not attend church so well,—then some one is ready to say, "Come here, John," to some of the young members. They try to put the blame on them, and accuse them of being stumbling-blocks.

A Good Watchman.

BY J. H. MILLER.

THE duty of a watchman is to have a careful eye over his flock. "When I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman: if when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet, and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head." . . . . "But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity: but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand" (Ezek. 33: 2-6).

So much is required of the elder in charge to keep his flock from the enemy's grasp. The lambs of the fold should be kindly warned against the evils that are so prevalent. Many of the young members need to be taught along this line.

Satan In Church.

BY IDA M. HELM.

In the day of Job when the sons of God came together, Satan came among them. He came not to worship God, but to work mischief. In these modern times Satan is a regular attendant at church. In pleasant weather, through heat and cold, sunshine and storm, he is sure to go to church. He walks the aisles, sits in the pews, and with bold effrontery he seeks to enter the pulpit; not that he may point men and women to God, but that he may lead astray the ones for whom Christ died. He is ever striving to enter into the hearts of the people. He sets traps among God's people to ensnare the unwary and take them captive. Paul says: "Satan himself is transformed into an angel of light. Therefore it is no great thing if his ministers also be transformed as the ministers of righteousness; whose end shall be according to their works." Jesus says: "Watch ye and pray that ye enter not into temptation." It behooves us to be ever on our guard against Satan's malicious schemes.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Ruth, the Trustful Daughter.

Ruth 2: 1-12.

For Sunday Evening, October 29, 1911.

I. Her Choice Was (1: 16, 17). (1) Instant—without hesitation. (2) Sentimentate. Ruth loved Naomi. (3) Trustful. She was poor, but she could follow. That was all. (4) Entire. "Whither thou goest, I . . . go."

II. She Was Influenced by Another (v. 16). (1) "Thy people shall be my people." She chose Naomi's God. (2) "Where thou dost . . . I die." Here was a determination from which there was no going back.

III. She Was Rewarded. She found (1) service (2: 2); (2) favor (2: 13); (3) kindness (2: 20); (4) rest (3: 1, 18); (5) a husband (4: 13); (6) a son who was the ancestor of Israel's greatest king, and of Jesus the Christ (4: 16, 17).

IV. Reasons for Choosing God's People.—(1) Theirs is a holy, a glorious God (Psa. 109: 9; 145: 5). (2) They are a happy people (Psa. 144: 15). (3) They earnestly desire you to go with them (2 Cor. 5: 2; Rev. 22: 17). (4) Unless you choose God's people there will be an eternal separation between you and them (Luke 16: 26).

Learn—(1) Ruth did not ask for time to consider. She decided immediately. (2) She was poor. She had only herself to give. (3) She was trustful. She left her country, her home, her friends, her all.

Read the entire Book of Ruth.

PRAYER MEETING

Some Things That Defile.

Prov. 6: 16-19.

For Week Beginning October 29, 1911.

1. "Haughty Eyes."—The pride of the heart here expresses itself in the haughtiness of the countenance. It is here placed first on the list. "Pride goeth before destruction, and a haughty spirit before a fall." Anything that God hates is more than a weakness; it is a sin. Haughtiness is a disposition despised in heaven. What has man to boast of? Born of the dust, to the dust he shall return (Prov. 16: 18; 29: 23).

2. "A Lying Tongue."—Speak every man truth with his neighbor," says the apostle. Lying is one of the meanest, most injurious sins to which society is subject. All good men despise a liar; he can not be trusted (Col. 3: 9).

3. "Hands That Shed Innocent Blood."—Here we have the quarrelsome man, the fighter, the murderer. Here, also, is the warrior, the statesman, the diplomat, who, rather than to submit his case to arbitration, plunges a whole nation into war, and destroys tens of thousands of innocent lives (1 John 3: 15).

4. "A Heart That Deviseth Wicked Purposes."—Here we have the cunning, deceptive schemer. We find him in the marts of trade, in the shops, in the schools, in politics, and, also, even in the church. Not "devices" merely, but "wicked devices." God loves the man with the open hand (Prov. 24: 28).

5. "Feet That Are Swift in Running to Mischief."—The mischief-maker is the pest of society. He is a bad neighbor and a worse friend. You can not afford to have him on your list of friends (Prov. 24: 8).

6. "A False Witness That Uttereth Lies."—The second time we are warned against the grave sin of lying in this brief catalogue of things that God hates. The false swearer strikes at the very foundations of social order (Prov. 19: 5).

7. "He That Soweth Discord Among Brethren."—The law of love is the highest attribute implanted by God. He hates the trickster, the talebearer, the individual who is always gossiping and fomenting trouble, and arousing hard feelings among the people of a neighborhood. Such is the meanest kind of a sinner (Prov. 16: 27-30).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Bright Side.

SELECTED BY AGNES M. RYAN.

There is many a rest on the road of life,
If we would only stop to take it,
And many a tone from the better land,
If the querulous heart would wake it!
To the sunny soul that is full of hope,
And whose beautiful trust ne'er faileth,
The grass is green and the flowers are bright,
Tho' the wintry storm prevaileth.

Better to hope, though the clouds hang low,
And to keep the eyes still lifted;
For the sweet blue sky will soon peep through,
When the ominous clouds are rifted.
There was never a night without a day,
Or an evening without a morning,
And the darkest hour, as the proverb goes,
Is the hour before the dawning.

There is many a gem in the path of life,
Which we pass in our idle pleasure,
That is richer far than the jeweled crown,
Or the miser's hoarded treasure.
It may be the love of a little child,
Or a mother's prayers to heaven,
Or only a beggar's grateful thanks
For a cup of water given.

Better to weave in the web of life,
A bright and golden filling,
And do God's will with a ready heart
And hands that are swift and willing,
Than to snap the delicate, slender threads
Of our curious lives asunder,
And then blame Heaven for the tangled ends,
And sit, and grieve, and wonder.

Home-Going.

BY J. D. HAUGHTELIN.

WEBSTER defines "home": "All that pertains to a dwelling place." A traveler in foreign lands speaks of the United States as "my home." This is home in its widest sense. I may, with equal propriety, speak of Iowa, Guthrie County, or Panora, as my home, but when I arrive at the station, I go out to a little place on East Main Street, rendered sacred by its hallowed associations, and say, "This is my home."

In the first paragraph of that great book, "Girdling the Globe," the author says: "The very moment we started from home, our homeward journey began." If we could, at all times, realize that every day we are going home, and that, too, with the strong truth that any day may close the journey, we surely should try always to be ready."

The most beautiful description of "home-going" that I ever heard, was Bro. D. L. Miller's account of their arrival at New York, where he expected to meet his wife and loved ones. Many other passengers were similarly situated. When it was shown that they were nearing the homeland, there was a general preparation by all,—cleaning, bathing and brushing. The best toilet arrangements were scrupulously seen to. The first objects that could be discerned on the coast were of more than ordinary interest. When they could begin to discern the forms of persons, how the eye of every one, expecting to meet a friend, was strained! Strong men would lean over the rail, in order to get a little nearer, if possible, to their loved ones. With an anxious eye each figure was scanned, and a nervous hand clasped a signal, ready to indicate the much-desired recognition. This is home-going, in the largest sense, in this life.

When the farmer returns from his labors in the field, or the mechanic from the shop, or any worker from his labor at the close of the day to his "dwelling place,"—the place where he meets his loved ones and enjoys their fellowship, the place where he gets nourishment, rest, and all the higher blessings of life,—this is home-going in the closest and most realistic form in this life. The labor of the day, and even the fatigue of the body, makes the rest and comfort of home in the evening all the sweeter. The quiet, the cleanliness and the purity of the home, compared with the noise, bustle, dust and other unavoidable annoyances of an ordinarily busy and useful life, afford a great contrast and a great relief to the busy, useful home-goer.

The second part of our caption, "going," signifies a leaving. So, as the laborer, mechanic, clerk, merchant or busy financier leaves his daily occupation to go home, there is a great difference in the anticipation, appreciation and enjoyments of the home-goers. To those who have lived selfish and debauched lives, and have done little or nothing toward making a happy home,—or home happy,—but have lived and squandered their time and means for self only, there is but little or no enjoyment in leaving the grind and burden of their daily labor and fatigue, to go to a neglected or miserable home.

On the other hand, the provident, prudent, virtuous and wise man who has denied self and judiciously used his time and means to provide a good home for those who are dependent on him, and, by distributing to the necessity of saints, and being given to hospitality (Rom. 12: 13), has helped the needy, to him the "home-going" is the happy event of the day.

So will be the "home-going" in the evening of life, when God "will render to every man according to his deeds, . . . unto them that are contentious, and do not obey the truth, but obey unrighteousness, indignation and wrath, tribulation and anguish, upon every soul of man that doeth evil, . . . but glory, honor and peace, to every man that worketh good" (Rom. 2: 6-10). So the faithful Christian can look forward to his "home-going" as the happiest event of his life.

As the wise laborer, mechanic, or artisan, lays off his work clothes, bathes and cleanses himself for the better enjoyment of home, so every Christian should hold and use the things of this life as a loose garment, that he may easily lay aside when the "home-going" time comes.

As, after a separation of a time the "home-goer" is the happier for the fond anticipation of meeting loved ones there, so the faithful Christian family looks forward to the great reunion above, expecting to meet loved ones gone before. Is it any wonder that the aged veterans, who have more ties over there than here, look with fond anticipation to a glorious "home-going"? Let us ever so live that we may always be ready to welcome the call, "Child, come home!"

A God-Blest Gift to Missions.

IN the mountain district in one of the Southern States, says the C. and M. Alliance, a home missionary labored. His people were so poor, he never asked them to give to missions.

He finally saw he was hindering their development. He preached a sermon and asked them to bring an offering in a week. Among the worshipers was the mother of a large family, a happy Christian, although the wife of an abusive drunkard. During the preaching she wept, because she knew she could not give one penny. As she climbed the mountain pathway, homeward, she still wept. It meant so much to her, this knowledge of her Lord, she wanted to help carry the good news to others. Finally it was whispered in her heart, "Can not God help you give something?" There, in the woods, she asked his help. She arose with a burning face. Soon a little fur-coated animal, common there, crossed her path. She killed it with a stick, and took it home, where the pelt was laid aside.

Her pastor called to inquire the cause of her trouble on the Lord's Day, whereupon she brought forth the hide, joyously telling him how God had answered her prayer, and sent this skin for her to give for missions. As she approached, he started back, the skin being odorous, and her tears started again, as she exclaimed, "Oh, are you not going to take it? It came in answer to prayer." "Yes, certainly," he quickly said, and started home, wondering what he could possibly do with it. At home was an unfinished letter to the Home Missionary Society's headquarters. He concluded to send the skin there. It was packed, and its history written in a letter, the pastor adding that "he dared not withhold it, as it was sent in answer to prayer."

A few days later the Editress of the Woman's Home Mission Magazine (from whom I have this story) entered her office (in New York). Striking a most intolerable odor, she opened the door, saying, "What is this, Mary?" Mary could only say it was the strongest at her desk. There she carefully lifted the cords of the package with finger and thumb, when the skin fell out, and she quickly sent it to the ash pit.

Upon opening the letter she found all about the skin and wrote it up for the next number of her magazine, concluding the article by saying, "Anyone who wishes, can own the skin, by sending their money to this office, until the next amount is sent in." Sunday-schools, classes, churches and individuals bought it. In three years the Editress concluded to close it up and reported that $337.74 had been given to the credit of the skin, and the person making last payment was to be permanent owner. Soon after the magazine was out, a richly-attired woman inquired for the Editress, and was assured the story as printed was true in every particular. She requested to see the skin. Mary succeeded in finding it, hard, wrinkled and filled with ashes. After cleaning she brought it to the office. Upon seeing it the stranger fell on her knees, hid her face, and was convulsed with sobs. Gaining control she said, "I used to know the Lord, but after I was married he let such dreadful things come into my life I began to doubt his goodness, and wandered far away from him. But this story of his love and care for that poor mountain woman has brought me back to my God. I want this skin that I may have it made up into a bag embroidered 'Gold for God,' and send it out in my own denomination to gather gold for the Master."

When last heard from, the bag was still circulating. A little later the Editress made a speech in Boston and related this story. At the close of the meeting, an old lady came up to her, and said, "I am just as ashamed of myself as I can be! I made my will this week and forgot to give to missions! I am going home and will bequeath $20,000 to missions."

At the time the story was told in my hearing, it was estimated, upon reliable data, that not less than $200,000 had been given to missions through the influence of that little prayer-filled skin, and the end is not yet.

About three years later the same Editress reported how the mountain woman's gift returned its blessings on her own head. When the Home Mission Society was informed that this mountain woman was ill with a prolonged and fatal illness, they sent to her bare home many comforts. An invalid's chair and gowns, blankets, canned goods; also clothing, books, etc., for the children. Her drunken husband was in bed when the goods were being unpacked. After an hour or two he said, "Wife, why do those folks send such nice things here? They don't know us." She replied, "It is their religion." Three days after, he said, "Wife, if being a Christian will make folks do such nice things, I want to be one." He became soundly converted. The dear woman who lived this story finally went to her long home, having reaped the fruitage of her seed-sowing.

The Force of Example.

A RAILROAD conductor once went with a large company of fellow conductors on an excursion to a certain city. They arrived on Saturday night; an attractive trip had been planned for the next day. In the morning the gentleman was observed to be taking more than usual care with his attire, and a friend said to him: "Of course, you are going with us on the excursion?" "Oh, no," he replied, quietly, "I am going to church; that is my habit on Sunday." Another questioner received the same reply. Soon comment on it began to pass around, and discussion followed. When he set out for church he was accompanied by 150 men whom his quiet example had turned from a Sunday excursion to the place of worship.

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

FALLS CITY, NEBR.—Sept. 7, our Sisters' Aid Society met at the home of Sister Mary Peck, and elected the following officers for the coming year: Sister Lucy Blough, president; Sister Edith Peck, vice-president; Sister Daisy Peck, secretary-treasurer. During the year we held five all-day meetings, with nine members enrolled. We made fifty-two bonnets, ten prayer coverings and two aprons. We donated one carpet and sent $5 to the Omaha Mission. To the East St. Joseph Mission we sent two bags of supplies and four comforts. Our collection for the year was $18.32; expenses for the year, $12.61; leaving a balance of $5.81 in the treasury.—May Kelsey, Sec., R. D. 5, Falls City, Nebr., Sept. 26.

BRO. J. G. ROYER, of Mount Morris, Ill., gave us a short call on Saturday of last week. He conducted the services in Elgin on Sunday morning.

BRO. A. W. ROSS writes us that eight natives were recently received into the church in India. A large ingathering is looked for in his field of labor.

WE are asked again to announce that the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of Eastern Pennsylvania will be held at the Petersburg house, Mountville congregation, Nov. 8 and 9.

BRO. J. J. SHAFFER assisted the members at Burlington, W. Va., in a series of meetings, and five were added to the church by confession and baptism. One was restored to fellowship.

WE have the splendidly-arranged program for the Bible, Missionary and Sunday-school Institute of Western Pennsylvania, to be held in Roxbury church, Johnstown congregation, Dec. 4 to Dec. 9.

BRO. H. C. EARLY writes us that the series of meetings in the Mill Creek congregation, Va., conducted by Bro. D. K. Clapper, has started out well. The sermons are excellent, the audiences large, and the attention good.

BRO. I. S. LONG and wife, of India, were due to land in New York on Thursday of this week. They are expected to attend the love feast in the Mill Creek church, Va., on Monday evening, Oct. 23.

BRO. D. L. MILLER is with the Brethren in Tennessee this week, and if health permits will visit a number of congregations. Later he will likely have something to say about his trip in the South.

TWO weeks were devoted to a series of meetings at the Union house, four miles southwest of Goshen, Ind., and nine persons put on Christ in baptism. The services were conducted by Bro. C. Walter Warstler.

WE have a good report of the District Meeting of Southern Illinois. Much business was done, and everything passed off pleasantly. Bro. J. W. Lear will represent the District on the Standing Committee.

GLANCING over the Minutes of the District Meeting of Eastern Virginia, we observe that the meeting sends two papers to Annual Meeting. Bro. S. A. Sanger is to represent the District on the Standing Committee.

THE Mount Zion church, Md., is in the midst of a promising series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Isaac Frantz. A deep interest is manifested in the Word preached, and many prayers are being offered for the conversion of sinners.

BRO. C. WALTER WARSTLER, of 126 Wilson Ave., Goshen, Ind., has decided to give his entire time to church work next year, and is in a position to hold six series of meetings, outside of his home church. Those desiring his services may address him as above.

BRO. JOHN HECKMAN, of Polo, Ill., called at the MESSENGER sanctum on his way home from Covington, Ohio, where he had spent one week, looking after the interests of the congregation. He reports a good members' meeting, an enjoyable feast and a very hopeful outlook for the congregation.

BRO. S. P. BERKEBILE, of Jewell, Ohio, in making a change of one mile in his location, changes mail routes, and should hereafter be addressed at Defiance, R. D. 4. Bro. Berkebile says that while he feels quite well, his throat still troubles him. He and his wife, Sister Nora E. Berkebile, will be remembered as missionaries from India, at home on a furlough.

THE missionaries to India sail from New York Oct. 28, instead of Nov. 2, as previously announced. They go by way of London, leaving that city Nov. 10, on the Steamship Arabia, of the P. and O. line, and should arrive in Bombay, India, Dec. 1. Those wishing to reach the party by mail in New York, should address them in care of the White Star Steamship Company, outgoing Steamship, Majestic, Oct. 28.

IN the ESSAY Department, this issue, will be found an address on "Fashion's Follies Versus Church Piety," by Bro. J. H. Cassady, that was read before the Ministerial Association of Johnstown, Pa., and is said to have created a good deal of interest. Some of the pastors most heartily approved of the sentiment of the writer, and expressed regrets because of the hold that pride has secured on their churches. They would be glad, they said, for a return to New Testament simplicity in the Christian attire.

THE Sunday-school workers and Christian Workers of Elgin, Chicago and Naperville met with the members of Batavia last Sunday afternoon in a joint meeting, that proved to be a most interesting gathering. Bro. I. B. Trout preached a good sermon in the morning, thus preparing all those in attendance for the feast of good things that followed. Bro. J. G. Royer, District Sunday-school Secretary, also helped to make things interesting. Several splendid addresses were given, and we are quite sure that all those who helped to make up the crowd, enjoyed the exercises from start to finish. It is not often that we have a meeting of this sort in which everything is looked upon as first-class. The next union meeting is announced for Elgin.

The Mount Morris Index for Oct. 12 contains a splendid write-up of Mount Morris College, filling nearly three pages. The work and personnel of the school are given special consideration, and what is said is certainly a credit to those having the institute in charge, as well as to the community in which the school is located.

ONE of the wide-awake churches in the West, feeling the great need of good literature for the young, appointed a committee to make a suitable selection. We would say, in this connection, that the book department of the Publishing House is ready, at all times, to render helpful assistance to any of our churches in procuring for them appropriate books at most reasonable prices. We invite correspondence.

DURING the last fourteen years the Lanark church, Ill., has more than doubled in membership, and what is true of the congregation in this particular, is true of the Sunday-school. The splendid results have been attained by a strict attention to business. All the workers stand together and labor with a view of permanent results. There has been no excitement, no scheming; nor has the Sunday-school found it necessary to resort to some of the so-called up-to-date methods and special attractions in order to secure and hold pupils. A straightforward and steady movement has given both the church and school a prestige second to none in the city. A movement of this sort never wears out.

BRO. S. A. SHAVER, of Maurertown, Va., closed his long and useful life Oct. 12. He was one of the most active elders in the Shenandoah Valley, having preached the Gospel for more than fifty years. He might well be called a horseback preacher, for he did most of his traveling on horseback, often riding from forty to fifty miles to meet his engagements. It is said that it was never too cold, hot or too stormy to keep him from attending religious services. In fact, he was a busy preacher from the time he entered the ministry, sixty days after he was baptized, until about two years ago. At the time of his departure he was past eighty-two years old, worn out and feeble, yet strong in the faith that he had accepted when a young man. Of him it could well be said, "He kept the faith."

LAST summer one of the Brethren went fifteen miles south of Buena Vista, Va., and organized a Sunday-school at an isolated and neglected point. From time to time some preaching was done in the community, and the people became interested in the meetings, as well as in the Sunday-school. Quite recently a series of meetings were held, and seventeen good gospel addresses were delivered. As the immediate fruits of the efforts put forth, fifteen, upon their confession, were baptized, and two were reclaimed. What was done in this part of Virginia might be accomplished at other points all over the Brotherhood. In fact, there is no better way of doing mission work. Instead of going hundreds of miles in search of mission fields, we might do well to give attention to those within easy reach of our well-fed congregations.

PELOUBET'S "Select Notes on the International Lessons for 1912" is on our desk, and we find the high standard of the work fully maintained in the present volume. The maps are splendid and the few colored plates show fine workmanship. The lessons for the entire year are in the New Testament, beginning with the birth of John the Baptist. The early history of John, as well as the early history of Christ, form an important feature of the course of studies. Of course, it is understood that the treatment of the lessons is undenominational, and for that reason our own teachers must refer to the Brethren literature for any help they may need on doctrine,—a thing they ought to do, whether they consult a lesson commentary or not. There will be occasion for considerable doctrinal teaching during the first half of the year. The splendidly printed and well-bound volume of nearly 400 pages is well illustrated, and contains comments and suggestions on all the lessons for the year. The book may be ordered from the Brethren Publishing House. Price, $1.15, postpaid.

Few men among us have done more in the way of planting churches in the West, by immigration, than Bro. Samuel Bock, formerly of Dayton, Ohio. He has, however, retired from the immigration business and is living quietly in Pomona, Cal., and may be addressed at 384 East Pasadena St.

The October number of the Missionary Visitor will prove more than ordinarily interesting to thousands of its readers. It contains short, well-prepared biographical sketches of all the new missionaries going to the foreign fields this year, accompanied by their photographs. If you do not read the Visitor, send to the General Mission Board for this issue.

The Seed We Are Sowing.

As a rule earnest and devout sisters have clear heads. They generally know what they wish to do, and if not interfered with, may be depended on to do about the right thing. But we have a well-written letter from one of these clear-headed sisters, and she says that she is puzzled. Her home is in a congregation where there are scores of young members, as well as many who have years and much experience in the Lord's work to their credit. Those having charge of the church work believe in the simplicity for which our people stand, and so teach both publicly and privately. But there comes, to some of the gatherings, a talented young woman, belonging to one of the semi-religious unions, and she is invited to deliver addresses to the young people, as well as to others who happen to be present. What the lady says in her addresses, from time to time, is good in a general way, but her appearance places her wholly on the side of the unconverted. Her bare arms, jewelry, powdered face and fashionable attire contrast sharply with the New Testament simplicity for which the church of the Brethren stands. A spectacle of this sort in a pulpit that is known to stand for something entirely different, is what puzzles our earnest sister. She can not understand why our ministers should teach and insist on Gospel simplicity, and then place on the sacred stand an object lesson teaching just the reverse.

We are asked for a solution of the problem, or something that will remedy the situation. At this some may smile, but here is a serious side to the incident. An object lesson that is in line with proper teaching is a power for good, but should the object lesson contradict the teaching, then serious results are certain to follow. We are told of a loving mother who wept from year to year because her boys, as soon as they reached manhood, went to sea and became sailors. She did her utmost, as she thought, to prepare them for the usual pursuits in life. While they were quite young she had, in order to interest them, hung the picture of a large ocean vessel on the wall of her sitting-room. The picture delighted the boys; they looked upon it, and talked about it in their home life. In after-years a minister entered the lonely home and listened while the mother wept and told the story of her boys leaving their pleasant home and their lovely city because they preferred the seafaring life. After hearing the long, sad story, the minister pointed to the picture on the wall and said: "Dear Sister, that fine ocean vessel, shown in the picture, is what took your boys to sea. They learned to love the sea while here in your room." Like a flash, the sad-hearted mother realized her mistake, but it was too late. By the aid of the picture she had unconsciously prepared her boys for the sea.

Our ministers can go on preaching New Testament simplicity; they can preach against jewelry, and in favor of modesty until they are old and gray-headed, but let some semi-religious society furnish occasional models for the pulpit, and the labor of the preachers will be in vain. What we are saying here may apply to our Sunday-schools, as well as to our Christian Workers' Meetings. It may also apply to much of our school work. If we would train our people, young and old, for the Lord, we must consider the pictures on the walls, as well as the examples in the pulpits, and the models on the rostrums. We have scores of ministers and other church workers who are as sincere and as loving as was the devoted mother whose boys went to sea, but they lack the foresight of the wise minister, who could explain to the misguided mother how she in tears was reaping what she had sown. We have shepherds of the flock, as well as Sunday-school leaders, and Christian Worker leaders, who are permitting seed to be sown in the hearts of the rising generation that will some day produce results more serious than they contemplate. We need to pray for more wisdom.

Equipment for Business in the Local Churches.

That the local churches are out for business should be a settled fact in the mind of each individual member. Their mission is in the interest of the King's business, and the "King's business requireth haste"; it is an urgent business; it is an active business; it is a progressive business; it is the supreme business of men; and it requires the best of men and the best of means. For the churches to be satisfied with a mere existence is censurable; it is a sin, and a great sin. They ought to feel called upon to do something; feel impelled to plunge into the fight for the right, for souls, for the honor of their King. Certainly, the churches ought to feel themselves called upon to do great things, for so they are. And they ought to plan and equip themselves accordingly.

That many of the local churches are poorly equipped for business, is only too true. The most of them are poorly equipped. No reference is made, in this connection, to workers, organization, etc. There is much to be done for improvement in these respects, to meet the needs of the hour. But reference is made, for the most part, to the church buildings, lights, hymn books, etc., etc.

In many of the congregations the churchhouses are old, and were not built to meet the needs of the present day. Plenty of them were built a half a century ago. They met the needs then in a very satisfactory way, but not so now. Then it was the practice to meet at the church once a month, probably, for preaching. This was all. A building, all in one room, met the requirements. It was all that was needed. Then there were no Sunday-schools, Christian Workers' Meetings, etc., to be provided for. Now all these organizations are running in full blast, and provisions must be made to meet their needs. In building new churches these things should be considered, by all means. It is easy then, to provide for them. If they are not provided for, the future will prove the blunder, and it will become more and more a misfortune as time moves on. It is absolutely imperative that all the church agencies should be considered in building new churches, and the future should be carefully studied. It is proper to use the same good judgment in building churches that is used in planning other buildings. It is folly to close our eyes to the advantages of improvement, and against new needs. These things must be considered, and it should be done without waste.

But what shall be done with the old churches, too good to be torn down? That's the hard question. It is easy to provide for present day needs in building new houses. A good many of the old churches are so arranged that they can be remodeled without much trouble and expense. In all such cases, this should be done. In cases where the arrangement is such as not to allow remodeling and dividing into separate rooms by shifting partitions, the only thing left, to meet the needs of the Sunday-school, etc., is to build additions to the old churches. This is usually practicable and satisfactory, and it should be done. The Sunday-school, especially, to do its best where it is large, must have separate class rooms; if not for all the classes, the little folks, especially, should be so supplied.

In the way of equipment, a good house, well arranged, well ventilated, supplied with apartments sufficient to meet the needs of the several lines of Christian endeavor, is of great importance,—greater than the most of us know. In addition to a good house, it should be well lighted at night. A dim light is bound to render the place gloomy and uninviting, while a bright light makes cheer, and puts all at their best. In some of the churches, at night, the people can scarcely see to read a hymn, the lights are so poor. More than once have I been compelled to change position to get sufficient light to read the Scripture lesson. This condition destroys the influence of a meeting to a great extent. It takes the audience practically out of the hands of the minister. How can one man talk to another, with the best effect, without seeing him? It is the facial expressions of the congregation that enable the minister to know where he is, and the facial expression of the minister is the emphasis he places on the sermon to the congregation. So, to preach without a good light, is like firing in the dark.

And there is no excuse. Churches can have good lights if they will. There are better lights now than the fat lamp, the tallow candle and the dingy oil lamp. The worship of God demands the best. It is too bad; it is a shame. The lights, in many of the churches, would be considered an offense in the homes of many who sit under them in worship. Why is it that we will endure in the house of God what we will not endure at all in our own homes? For ourselves we insist on better houses, better furnished, better lighted, better in almost every way. Under the law, the best went to the Temple. And I am wondering how this reversion of matters in our day pleases God.

All the churches should be well supplied with hymn books. Every one that can sing should have a book, and every stranger, or visitor, that comes in should be supplied with a book that he may join in the song; and it should be the business of some one to see that all such have books offered them. If the churches are to do business, they must be supplied with tools, etc. It's a foolish man that would expect the carpenter to work without his tools. It is just as foolish to expect the churches to work successfully without the necessary equipment. It will cost some money to equip the churches as they should be, and it will require interest in the work of God's house to enable us to furnish the means cheerfully; but it will bring a tremendous return in the end, and the day will never come when we will regret it.

"As It Was So It Will Be."

So many think, and so many believe, and the stronger and the longer men so believe, the more firm they grow in such a belief, and the more evidence they find for its confirmation.

The religious world has been, and continues to be, divided in their views as to what will be the condition of the world at the second coming of Christ. And what seems most strange about it is, that the two different views held are directly opposite, one to the other, and that both claim sufficient scriptural grounds for what they believe.

Now it is not our purpose to try to show that both views are right, or both wrong, or to decide as to which is the right, or which is the wrong, but to look at some of the scriptural texts used as evidence in favor of the different views held.

The different views grow out of the question: "Is the world morally and religiously growing better or worse?" This, too, seems to be a debatable question, having its opposite sides. If it can be satisfactorily proven that the world is gradually growing better,—more liberal, more charitable, and more religious,—the former views would be settled and the discussion would cease. There does not really seem to be any good reason why men should differ so widely on a question about which so much has been said and written; but we must look at it as it is, and not as we may think it should be.

On the side of those who think the world is gradually growing worse, the following scriptures are most generally quoted: "But as the days of Noe were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be" (Matt. 24: 37). In Luke 17: 26 we have the same words, and in Luke 17: 28 we have: "Likewise also as it was in the days of Lot; they did eat, they drank, they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded; but the same day that Lot went out of Sodom it rained fire and brimstone from heaven, and destroyed them all. Even thus shall it be in the day when the Son of man is revealed."

In our younger days the reading of these passages gave us much thought and concern, as we looked at them as representing conditions that would exist at the time of the coming of Christ. But this does not seem to be the case. This was not the purpose of Christ's teaching at the time. It was in reference to the world knowing the exact time of his coming: "The purpose of his teaching, at this time, is given in the preceding verse of Matt. 24: 36: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only." The desire, on the part of the disciples and others, was not to know what the conditions would be at his coming, to become the universal earthly king, because they were looking for it at any time, —soon. The thought in their minds was, when,— when? Then he quotes to them how it was in the time of the flood and the destruction of Sodom, to teach them that the exact time of his coming was not to be known by them or anybody else, as it was not known when these events were to come until they actually came,—until Noe entered the ark, and until the fire and brimstone commenced falling upon Sodom. So will it be at the coming of the Son of man. And as to the conditions, as they will be found at that time, Christ, in his own teaching, shows that they will be very different from what they were at the coming of the flood and the destruction of Sodom. At that time the religious condition showed thousands and millions destroyed to one saved. But at the time of his second coming, if Christ's teaching at that time would mean anything, as to the moral and religious condition, it would be half and half.

Let us see what he does say about it in Matt. 24: 40, 41, "Then [at that time] shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at a mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left." In Luke 17: 34, 35 we have the same thought: "I tell you, in that night there shall be two men in one bed; the one shall be taken, and the other shall be left. Two women shall be grinding together; the one shall be taken, and the other left," following with two men in the field and the two women grinding at the mill. As we said, if it teaches anything as to the religious conditions, as they were in Noe's and Lot's time, and as they will be at the coming of Christ, they will be very unlike indeed.

So, it seems to us, that the most reasonable interpretation we can give to these passages, referred to, is that he, the Christ, was trying to impress on the minds and hearts of these people that it was not given to them to know the season and time of his coming to reign as a universal King. This knowledge God reserved for himself, to work out in his own good time, by his own wisdom, to accomplish his own wonderful purposes. That the Lord will finally be defeated by the devil, is a thought that we have never accepted or entertained as being in harmony with his divine and loving purposes. If it is his will that all men shall come to a knowledge of the truth and be saved, we would like to know by what power his will can be frustrated or set aside. Though Satan is, at this time unbound and is excercising a great power among the children of men, yet God has given him limitations beyond which he can not go. Paul understood this when he said to his Roman brethren: "But where sin abounded, grace did much more abound." His children shall not be tempted above that which they are able to bear, but with every temptation there shall be made a way for escape.

If this is true,—and we believe it is,—why should we be discouraged and say, There is no use in trying to save the world, because it is given over into the hands of the devil, and no amount of preaching can save it, from the fact that, as it was in the days of Noe and as it was in the days of Lot, so shall it be when the Son of man cometh. Of course, Christ says this, but what does he say after all? He says: "For as in the days that were before the flood." How were they? "They were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noe entered the ark" (Matt. 24: 38). Luke says the same thing of Noe, and of Lot he says, "They did eat, they drank, they married wives, . . . they bought, they sold, they planted, they builded." What else would be expected of them to do? If God's people continue to believe what Jesus says: "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angels in heaven, but my Father only," we do not know what else rational people would be expected to do, but to continue to eat and drink, buy and sell, plant and build.

At different times in the past, religious men and women, who thought they knew what Jesus told them they could not know, and figured out their own time for Christ's coming, banded together and prepared for the event by ceasing to eat and drink and no longer buying or selling, marrying, etc. But when their day came, Jesus was not ready and did not come. If men and women were wicked in the days of the flood and the destruction of Sodom, they were wise enough to continue to provide for their families while they did live. The mistake which they made was that they persisted in their wickedness. Had they turned away from their sins, their eating, drinking, building, and marrying would have been all right, because in such a case Sodom would not have been destroyed.

The second coming of Jesus Christ will be, in our mind, an entirely different event, and it is not necessary for the world to go to the devil to bring it about. If the church of Jesus Christ expects and wants the Christ to come under such conditions, and wants the kingdom to come as soon as possible, we can, as a church, help to shorten the time by calling all of our missionaries home, cease holding revival meetings to save sinners, and thus give Satan full scope to finish up his work in the shortest possible time. Why not? If we believe that the blessed Christ can not, and will not usher in his glorious kingdom until the world becomes as wicked as the people were before the flood, or before the destruction of Sodom, why not labor, work and pray for the things that will most speedily bring about the thing we want?

But such a view is so abhorrent to our view of Christianity that we can not, for a moment, entertain such an idea. The Christ taught us to pray: "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth, as it is done in heaven." We know, and we are sure that he does not want his will to be done in this way. The "go ye" falls upon our ears as the heart-burning desire of our soul, that sinners may be saved, that his house, his tables in his kingdom may be filled. And when this is done, when his house is filled, when there is enough, then will he come in all his loving power,— not to destroy but to gather all his loving children home to enjoy the great feast of his love, and dwell with him for evermore. In our next we may say something about what leads to the "will be."

Visiting Those in Prison.

We have a touching letter from a fallen brother who is now serving a term in penitentiary. He writes us that he was once a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren, but in an unguarded hour yielded to temptation and committed a crime that landed him where he is,—away from all church influences, and away from all that is near and dear in life. His is the letter of a penitent, for he confesses his sin and is seeking to live a better life. Still there are things to discourage him. He has been in prison three years, and during that time has been visited but once by the elder and the pastor of the church, and once by the Sunday-school superintendent. He has received one letter from the elder, and two from the superintendent. To other elders and church workers he writes, but they do not reply. And while he realizes that what he has done has brought disgrace on the church, still he thinks that, since he is cheerfully paying the penalty of his crime, there ought to be some one who cares for his soul. His good wife, who is a member, remains faithful and sends him the Messenger, otherwise he would not know what is going on in the church.

But what must he do when released? He hardly has the heart, he writes, to knock at the door of his former church for readmittance, for it seems to him that he is not wanted there. Then he thinks of the Salvation Army people, who make a specialty of looking after the fallen, and wonders what is the matter with our members that they do not undertake some of that kind of work too. The man still holds to the faith of the church, he loves the religion of his devoted wife, but he can not understand the attitude of preachers and Sunday-school workers, who maintain that the whole Gospel should be taught and obeyed, and yet refuse to visit those who are in prison.

We do not blame him for being puzzled. Possibly some of the angels are puzzled over the situation. Our members need to be aroused regarding the duty of looking after those in prison, as well as those who are hungry and sick. They should not make it necessary for the Salvation Army people and a few others to be the only ones who look after the unfortunate. Except our righteousness, in this and some other particulars, exceed the righteousness of the Salvation Army workers, we may eventually be weighed in the gospel balance and found wanting.

What Kind of Sunday-school Teachers?

It has been suggested that, as far as possible, our Sunday-school teachers should be selected from the class of members who have a fairly good literary education. Something of this kind might be urged, were it not for the fact that some of the very best thinkers and Sunday-school workers in the world have never been inside of an up-to-date literary institution. A fine education is a splendid equipment for any young man or young woman, but there is such a thing as making too much of even a good thing. We urge that for Sunday-school teachers the most proficient workers in the church be selected, regardless of the number of years spent at college. Other things being equal, the college-trained teacher should be preferable, but other things are not always equal. To start with, a Sunday-school teacher should be an exemplary Christian. Then he should understand his Bible and know how to teach the lessons it contains. If he has a finished education, that has been consecrated to the Lord's service, all the better. But if his training goes no farther than his head, it will be safe to trust the teacher who has more Bible and more genuine faith even if his education has been somewhat neglected.

Preaching Dreams.

When the Lord sent his disciples into all the world to preach the Gospel, he did not authorize them to preach their dreams, feelings and opinions. It is all right to dream dreams, but dreams, such as come to people these days, are not intended for the pulpit. People will have their feelings, such as may at times be impressive, but they must never be made to serve as a substitute for the Gospel. Generally speaking, each man has a right to his own opinion, but the office of the Spirit is not to help one to proclaim his opinions, but to help him speak the Gospel set forth in the New Testament. The man who will study the Written Word, and understand the truths therein presented, will never disturb his congregation with his dreams. He will also guard his feelings and be careful how he deals out his opinions. Preaching the Word will occupy his time.

Brethren Almanac for 1912.

THE MINISTERIAL LIST in the Brethren Almanac, while a great convenience to all, is of special value to every minister. Every minister's name should be on the list and his address should be correct in every particular. We must depend for this information upon those who can give it, and unless pains are taken to give us this with the utmost accuracy, we shall fail in obtaining a correct list.

WHAT WE WANT EVERY MINISTER TO DO AT ONCE!

1. To see if his name and address are correctly given in our last Almanac.

2. If not given at all, or given incorrectly, give us name and address in full, as they should appear.

A GENERAL REQUEST.

We kindly request elders, clerks of churches, and all other members, who can help us in correcting the list, to give us the names of ministers that should be omitted, whether because of death or whether they have been relieved of office. In fact, we shall be glad to be apprised of any mistake in the list of which you may have certain knowledge.

PLEASE DO IT AT ONCE!

OMAHA MISSION, NEBRASKA.

Sunday, September 24, was our rally day in the Sunday-school. The attendance was 63. The children furnished a well-rendered program. We have secured a lease on a church building, located at Twenty-Second and Seward Streets (within walking distance of the present location), for a very low rental. It is very conveniently arranged, and fully equipped for all our work. The indications are that we will have a much larger attendance in our new location. Sunday, Oct. 1, Eld. S. G. Nickey and Bro. Buckingham, from Illinois, were with us. Eld. Nickey gave us a much appreciated sermon in the evening. Bro. A. J. Nickey and wife, of Kearney, were also with us at this time. We have decided to have a dinner and special service for the children of the Sunday-school on the day after Thanksgiving. The Sunday following this, Dec. 3, the joint Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting of the Octavia, Lincoln, Alvo, and Omaha congregations will meet with us in their regular quarterly meeting.

CONDITIONS IN INDIA.

[The following we quote from a letter by Bro. Stover concerning conditions in India at the present time.—Ed.]

The weather has changed a bit for the better. It is drizzling over much of the country, but even here, where we have had rain, as we feel, plentifully, the water in the reservoirs is very low yet, whereas it should be above one's head.

The rain that has come, even in such limited quantity, north of us, encourages the farmers and hearts of the people, for they have hope that there will be fodder for the cattle. Yet there will be needed much more rain, even to supply that demand.

As for the people, I have written a most sensational series, and have watched the papers, and without question there will be famine in several districts north of us, and that quite serious. Will be? Yes, it is on now. Each day is making matters worse. There is no real hope for rain till next June!

Government has opened famine relief works in a number of places. The people, as yet, are nowhere to be seen in that fearfully emaciated form which was presented to us in the famine of 1900, and perhaps will not be, for both people and Government have learned the needed lesson.

Sept. 27, there is to be a meeting of all the Protestant missionaries of Gujerat, in which the needs and demands for the present year will be fully discussed, and after which I will report to you fully.

We are not calling for famine money. If there is opportunity to use it to the glory of the Lord, I will report both the opportunity and the need, and the way we think of disposing of it, if any choose to entrust money to our care for this purpose. We know that the China famine is just ended, and the liberality of the Brethren is being called on more and more, but still, I would that the liberality of the Brethren would become proverbial. It is so in some places, but it should be in all. W. B. Stover.

WASHINGTON CITY CHURCH, D. C.

Our series of evangelistic services, conducted by Eld. Isaac Frantz, closed on Sunday evening, Oct. 1. Bro. Frantz labored earnestly, declaring the truth alike to saint and sinner without fear or favor. The congregation has been greatly strengthened, not only spiritually but numerically as well, nine precious souls making the good choice. Eight of them have already been baptized and we trust there may be more, as we have reason to believe that others are seriously counting the cost.

The regular quarterly council convened on Monday evening, Oct. 2, with Eld. Bonsack present. Bro. Frantz, as well as the elder, favored us with short talks, which were full of good advice. Reports were received from the various committees, including the parsonage committee, showing that pledges now aggregate over $300. Three letters of membership were received, including one deacon and wife, and two were granted, among which was that of Bro. A. K. Graybill, one of our deacons who has been a staunch supporter of the work in Washington for a number of years.

Since our last report two of our aged sisters have gone to their reward, namely, Mary R. Whalen and Margaret Keller. The latter was very poor, and was afflicted with the dread disease of consumption for a few months of her life she suffered much and, being in destitute circumstances, the members living near her volunteered to take her meals to her each day. We were fortunate in having one of the city nurses call daily to attend her. She was opposed to going to the hospital, which made it difficult for the members to assist her in the way that we should have liked to do.

As has been previously announced in the editorial columns of the Messenger, Eld. H. C. Early has been secured to take up the pastoral work on or about Jan. 1, 1912. We feel much encouraged that we have been able to secure the services of Bro. Early, and our prayer is that the Lord may richly bless him in his coming, and that the work may be pushed forward to even higher standards in the future. Our love feast is to be held on Sunday evening, Nov. 5. Mrs. D. E. Miller.

STATE MISSIONARY MEETING OF NEBRASKA.

As an opening song that splendid missionary hymn, No. 232, was selected, and by special request was led by its author, Eld. Galen B. Royer, who pointed out the various fields on a large wall map as we sang, which added much to the interest and expression of the singing.

After devotional exercises, conducted by Eld. A. J. Nickey, the moderator, Eld. Geo. Mishler, spoke to us on the needs of the State of Nebraska and some of the problems that are confronting us as a State District.

The question was then propounded, "What Related to Mission Work?" It was very clearly and convincingly shown, by the different speakers, that we are closely related, the whole plan of salvation being a missionary plan from the first, and if we are at all true to our calling, we must, of necessity, be related to mission work, as it is the very essence of salvation and blessing. We have no right to claim our relationship to God if we deny our relation ship to mission work. We lose our claim to the means of grace when we lose our identity with mission work. A wrong attitude toward the lost means a wrong attitude toward God. Seeing, then, that this relationship is of such importance, we should regard it as a relation too tender to be severed by any earthly ties. It was also argued that we should prove our relationship by our fidelity to God, in obeying the great commission and going out after the lost, and bringing them to Christ. We should give to the support of the work through the Mission Board, but as giving unto Jesus and lost souls. It was suggested that some do not clearly see their relationship because their eyes have become darkened by worldliness and consequent missionary sentiment among the people.

At this point Bro. Royer outlined and explained the recommendation of the General Mission Board, as passed by last Annual Conference, with a strong appeal for all heartily to endorse, support, and put into operation, the plan as outlined, which would provide for everything embodied in the question then under discussion.

The third question raised was, "To What Extent Is It Expedient for Mission Boards to Engage in Financial Enterprises to Obtain Funds for Carrying on Mission Work?" It was emphatically stated that it was expedient and legitimate to go into business if you want to make it the Lord's business, and want to increase the work, and reach unsurmised territory. It is not expedient if thereby we try to support what is already being done, thus shielding individuals from the responsibilities they had already assumed. The general consensus of opinion, however, was that care should be exercised along this line. It was thought that if each one lived according to the New Testament plan, "As the Lord hath prospered him," the work would be amply provided for.

An interesting and instructive round table discussion was then conducted by Bro. Royer, after which a collection of $139.79 was lifted.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

The Following Notes, Crowded Out of Last Issue, Are Given Space on This Page.

CALIFORNIA.

Glendora church met in council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. J. S. Brubaker, presided. Eight letters of membership were received and two granted. Brethren Ira Netzley and A. Fluke were chosen as delegates to our District Meeting. Two queries were sent to District Meeting. Oct. 1 Bro. England, of Lordsburg, Cal., met with us in our Sunday-school rally day exercises, and addressed the school. This was followed by an acceptable talk on 2 Tim. 2: 15. The Sunday-school decided that all who felt like bringing their birthday offerings that day should do so. The offering amounted to $15.88. There were 179 in attendance.—Mary White, Glendora, Cal., Oct. 3.

Lindsay church, 14 miles southeast of Reedley, Cal., came to us to deal out to us the Bread of Life. His sermon was very helpful. We are rejoicing over the arrival of Eld. I. S. Brubaker and wife, recently of McPherson, Kans., but late of Glendora, Cal., his son, Bro. Alpheus Brubaker, and wife, and his son-in-law, Bro. H. M. Stutsman, his wife and three sons. There is room here for many more. Those looking for a location where they can get homes and be of help in the Master's cause will do well to investigate further. Lindsay is located at Tulare County, near the foothills of the Sierra Nevada Mountains. Those wishing to know more about this place should write the undersigned.—Sadie Finch, Box 634, Lindsay, Cal., Oct. 3.

Lordsburg church met in council Oct. 2. Our elder, Bro. E. Forney, was present. Considerable business was disposed of. The deacons reported the annual church visit. Eld. J. Lordsburgh was elected church clerk; Sister Olive Cox, chorister, with Bro. Lordsburgh as assistant; Elders M. A. White and Andrew Blickenstaff, delegates to District Meeting. Several queries were sent to the District Meeting. Twelve letters of membership were received. Bro. Snyder, of McPherson, Kans., and Bro. C. J. Brubaker, of Los Angeles, Cal., have each been with us in a Sunday morning service since our last report, and preached for us. Our Sisters' Aid Society is now holding all-day meetings, biweekly, instead of weekly afternoon meetings.—Grace Hileman Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., Oct. 6.

Pomona.—Our church council enjoyed an interesting rally day program Oct. 1. Feeling the need of good literature for the young, a committee has been appointed to make a selection of books. At this service we presented the school with thirty-one volumes, as a nucleus for our new library. An offering of $10.00 was lifted. In the evening the Christian Workers of the Covina, Glendora, Lordsburg and Pomona churches met in a joint meeting at this place. Short addresses on each of the societies gave us much good spiritual food, on the theme of "Things to Be Not Forgotten and Things to Be More Cared For in Our Quarters." Since our last report nine have been received by letter and one has been received by baptism.—Clara B. Wolf, 310 Kingsley Avenue, Pomona, Cal., Oct. 3.

IDAHO.

Winchester.—Sister Sadie Miller, of India, gave us a lecture on Monday evening, Oct. 2. After the lecture a collection of $20.30 was taken.—Amanda E. Flory, Winchester, Idaho, Oct. 5.

ILLINOIS.

Hurricane Creek.—Bro. M. J. Hahn, of Colchester, Ill., who had been attending the District Meeting of Southern Illinois, came into our meeting and preached for us three inspiring sermons. Bro. Hahn formerly lived in our congregation. The members were glad to have him visit them again.—Oscar B. Nedenbo, Pleasant Mound, Ill., Oct. 9.

Milledgeville.—We met in council Sept. 29. Our pastor, Bro. D. F. Wine, was present at this meeting. As our elder, Bro. D. R. Brubaker, wished to be relieved of the oversight of this church, we appointed Bro. J. D. Miller in his place. We decided to hold a Bible term during the Holidays. Bro. D. R. Brubaker, who was with us Oct. 1, preached for us, "The World's Great Need." We were all glad to have him with us again.—Annie Frantz, Milledgeville, Ill., Oct. 6.

INDIANA.

Indianapolis.—About the last of August Bro. Grover T. Wine and wife came to this city, in order that Sister Wine might enter a training school for important mission operation, while here. Bro. Wine was prevailed upon to conduct some special services, and during the time preached a few afternoons to personal work. It was a sacrifice for both of them, to do this work, as they were willing to go where they consented to do it. Bro. Wine delivered eight powerful sermons, and while here, on Sunday, Sept. 17, as a result of his work, others have been brought nearer the kingdom. The church met in council Monday evening, Sept. 29, with Eld. A. C. Young in charge. Sister Jessie L. Weeks, who was recently married to Bro. R. W. Weeks, one of our deacons, was officially installed. Bro. J. H. Mann was elected delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. F. P. Hoffert, alternate. Sister Jessie L. Weeks was elected delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. It was decided to hold our next love feast Sunday evening, Nov. 5. A. J. Culler, Bro. Lewis, Central Indiana Hospital for the Insane, Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 7.

Logansport.—Our church met in council Sept. 28. Our elder, Bro. Jesse D. Norris, presided. Much business was disposed of. Three letters were granted. Bro. Chas. B. Oberlin was chosen delegate to District Meeting, and also delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 28. We also decided to hold a series of meetings in December, to be conducted by Bro. J. L. Mahon.—Gertrude Oberlin, R. R. 4, Logansport, Ind., Oct. 9.

Summitville.—Bro. W. L. Hatcher, of Portland, Ind., will take charge of the church work at this place by Jan. 1, 1912. —Grace Hiatt, Summitville, Ind., Oct. 9.

MICHIGAN.

Kneeland.—Bro. J. P. Bowman, of Prescott, Mich., came to this place Sept. 23, and preached three sermons—one each on Saturday evening, and on Sunday morning and evening. One dear soul was made willing to accept Christ as her Savior, and was received into the church by baptism. So far as we know, this was the first time ever by Brethren in the Oscoda County. We believe that others are near the kingdom. May the day soon come when a ministering brother will locate at this place and gather in precious souls! Who will come?—E. M. Troyer, Kneeland, Mich., Oct. 8.

Nettle Hill.—Bro. J. W. Killian, of Bessemer, Mich., came to us Sept. 11, to conduct our series of meetings. He preached twenty-three impressive sermons. Twenty united with the church. The attendance and attention were good. Oct. 2 closed the meetings.—J. Settle Miller, McBain, Mich., Oct. 9.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Beachdale.—We dedicated our church Sept. 24, free of indebtedness. We thank our Brethren and kind friends who contributed liberally to this end. In the dedicatory service we held a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. A. McDowell, of Hollsopple. There were no additions to the church, but we had very spiritual meetings. Our members profited much by the good, spiritual sermons that Bro. McDowell gave us. At the close of our meetings we had a love feast. About fifty-five were present. It was a very lively evening, but that feast proved to be the most spiritual we have ever enjoyed for a long time. The services were conducted by our pastor, Bro. Jesse Ober, and Bro. Howell. Our pastor certainly does our pastor, who so faithfully labored for the new church. Our elder, also Bro. Howell, was greatly missed in every way. Our council met Sept. 26, prior to our love feast, and the regular business was attended to.—Fred Ream, R. D. 1, Lock Box 146, Garrett, Pa., Oct. 8.

Juniata Park.—Our church convened in council Oct. 5. Considerable business was transacted. We decided to begin a series of meetings Nov. 12, and to continue indefinitely. The ministry will be conducted by Eld. H. B. Brumbaugh. Our love feast will be held Nov. 26.—J. B. Brumbaugh, Juniata Park, Oct. 9.

Spring Creek.—Our love feast was held at Spring Creek Oct. 4 and 5. Eld. Hershey Groff officiated. Elders Hiram Gibble, John H. Witmer, William H. Oberholtzer and Levi S. Mohler were present. The Carrowago Sunday-school held a children's meeting Oct. 1. Brethren J. B. Brubaker and R. W. Schlosser delivered fine addresses. Bro. Schlosser delivered a powerful sermon in the Carrowago house recently. He is only a young minister, but can preach in the English or the German language with equal facility. Brethren Brumbaugh held a children's meeting Oct. 1. Brethren John L. Royer and H. E. Kaylor were the speakers.—Edgar M. Hoffer, Elizabethtown, Pa., Oct. 8.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS.

Notice.—The District Meeting of the First District of Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri will be held in the Broadwater church, Essex, Mo., Thursday, Nov. 2: Ministerial Meeting, Nov. 1.—J. I. Buechley, Corrector, Ark. Oct. 9.

CALIFORNIA.

Imperial Valley church met in quarterly council Oct. 7, with our elder, Bro. C. E. Gillett, presiding. Brethren C. E. Gillett and W. Q. Calvert were elected delegates to District Meeting, with Sister Rachel B. Gillett and Bro. W. P. Gillett, alternates. One has been received by letter since our last report. We are very glad to hear from the Lord's side of things. Sickness prevails, but none in our midst. Their help is up, of heavenly Call, move into our midst. Their help is very much appreciated. We decided to continue our regular meetings every Wednesday night, instead of having the mid-week prayermeetings.—Minnie E. Gillett, Holtville, Cal., Oct. 9.

Tropico church met in council Sept. 23, with our elder present. Bro. S. S. Garst presided. The brethren reported the annual visit and all were found to be in love and union, and desiring to do greater work for the Master. Brethren Jacob M. Eshelman and S. S. Garst were chosen to represent us at the District Meeting. Sunday morning, Oct. 1, Bro. Eby gave us a good sermon from Isa. 53. At 7 P. M. eighty members received the Lord's supper, and enjoyed the communion services. Eld. L. B. Keltner gave us a very impressive lesson on the ordinance of feetwashing. Bro. Eby officiated. The ordinances of God's house. Eld. L. H. Eby officiated.—Jennie S. Brower, Meridian, Idaho, Oct. 5.

Correction.—Our correspondence of Sept. 24, referring to the address of Bro. Eisenbise, reads, "He dwelt largely upon the people and customs of India." It should read, "He dwelt largely upon the people and customs of today."—S. S. Kenney, Fayette, Idaho, Oct. 5.

Fruitland.—Our Sunday-school report of the last two quarters is very encouraging. The average attendance during the past six months was seventy-nine; average contribution, $1.99; balance of money on hand at present, $13.75; amount received, $13.75; birthday offering, $5.10; general fund, $58.47; total balance on hand, $81.32. The school has received a donation in support of a student in India. Bro. J. C. Hiner has been elected as our delegate to the Sunday-school Convention, to be held at Nampa, Nov. 11.—S. J. Kenney, Fayette, Idaho, Oct. 5.

Madden View church met in council Oct. 7, with Bro. J. H. Graybill presiding. We had a pleasant time. Bro. Graybill was to hold our love feast Oct. 21. Our little congregation is still anxious to have a series of meetings, but no one could be secured any one to hold the meetings for us. Bro. Graybill preached for us Oct. 1. We are glad to report all the absent members at our services. Last Sunday Bro. J. K. Waltman and wife, and Bro. E. J. Nohre, wife and daughter, of Nampa, Idaho, were with us. Bro. Waltman preached a very interesting sermon. We reorganized our union Sunday-school, with Brethren H. A. Wine and J. W. Nohre as joint superintendent; Sister Eda Hosack, secretary.—Emma I. Wine, Bowmont, Idaho, Oct. 12.

Nezperce.—Sister Sadie Miller, who is on her way to India, came to us Sept. 20 and gave us two very interesting lectures which were enjoyed by all present. Sister Sadie met many of her old acquaintances here, and formerly lived in Nezperce, Iowa, which made her feel at home while with us. Her many friends and old schoolmates here made her a present of $26. The mission collection amounting to $13.50 will also still be forwarded to the General Mission Board. Wylie Sister Miller enjoyed her visit to the Nezperce church, and will be long remembered by these people.—William H. Lichty, Nezperce, Idaho, Oct. 9.

ILLINOIS

Oak Grove.—Bro. John Baker gave us three encouraging sermons. Our love feast was held Sept. 23. We had a fine day-school every Sabbath, and preaching services on Sunday morning and evening, every two weeks. We desire the prayers of God's children.—D. E. Eshelman, Lowpoint, Ill., Oct. 12.

Sunday-school Convention.—The Fifth District of the Christian Workers' Meeting. Bro. J. L. Garrison gave a clear and pointed lecture on "Temperance," showing through statistical facts the many evil consequences resulting from strong beverages, both upon individuals and upon the nation at large. The necessity of disposing of the liquor traffic, which engages the strength of humanity, was especially emphasized.—A. Brod, Cor., Oct. 8

Waddams Grove.—We held our love feast Oct. 7 and 8. Though the roads were very bad, we had a fine day. We realized the Lord blessed us with fine weather, and we had a good attendance. Many of the ministers were present. Sunday, Oct. 8, Brother Miller was with us. Bro. Miller officiated, and also preached on Sunday evening after the feast.—Albert Myers, Waddams Grove, Ill., Oct. 12.

West Branch.—We held our love feast Sept. 23. The attendance was good. Bro. J. M. Smith, of Michigan, officiated. The following evening he began a series of meetings and continued during the evening of Oct. 4, and much interest and good weather. While there were no accessions, we feel that the meetings were a great inspiration to the members, and made some good impressions upon others. Bro. Smith is an able speaker and delivered some good sermons.—Frank Long, Leaf River, Ill., Oct. 16.

Woodland.—The meetings at the Mount Pleasant house continued two weeks, as Bro. Brubaker's health has called home on account of his daughter's injuries in a runaway accident. Bro. Brubaker is a very acceptable worker, and while he could have stayed longer. Three precious souls were added to the church by baptism. Sept. 30 was a day long to be remembered. We had a good meeting. Bro. Brubaker, of Canton, Ill., officiated. Bro. J. M. Hahn was also with us. We had visitors from neighboring churches. This was our first communion in our new house. About 150 members were at the tables. There were also a number of lookers-on. Everything passed off very orderly, and we had a very good meeting. A number of us on Monday for District Meeting.—Pansie B. Stambaugh, Shumway, Ill., Oct. 9.

INDIANA.

Bethany church met in council Oct. 7. Eld. Elias Smeltzer presided. Sister Grace Reiber was chosen delegate to District Meeting; Sister Bessie Hicks, alternate. Bro. Smeltzer gave us two good sermons while with us.—Gertie Harrison, R. D. 1, Lebanon, Ind., Oct. 9.

Bitte River church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. Walter Swihart, presided. The report of the annual visit was received. The members were found in love and in the work for a greater degree of holiness. We decided to hold our quarterly meeting in the last Saturday and Sunday services, and on the first. Our love feast has been appointed for Nov. 27 and 28. Sept. 3 we held our Harvest Meeting. Bro. J. W. Kitson, of Pleasant Hill, was with us. He gave us two interesting sermons, after which an offering of $37.83 was received for the World-wide Mission Fund. Sept. 17 Bro. Daniel Wysong, of Nappanee, Ind., was with us. He gave us some rich thoughts, and we were much benefited.—W. E. Arnold, R. D. 1, Churubusco, Ind., Oct. 10.

Elkhart River.—The time of the joint Sunday-school Meeting of the Sugar Creek, Spring Creek and Eel River churches, to be held at the Eel River Brick church-house, was changed from the first Sunday in November to Oct. 22.—Mary E. Miller, North Manchester, Ind., Oct. 9.

Howard City church met in council preparatory to our love feast, Sept. 23. Eld. John Flora presided. Three papers were read by Brethren Jacob Wagoner, Jr., and Jacob Wagoner, Sr., District Meeting; Bro. M. V. Watts, alternate. We held our love feast Sept. 23. Brethren Wagoner were the officiating ministers. A. G. Crosswhite and Kerney Elkenberry. Bro. Crosswhite officiated. Bro. Watts was solicited to succeed Bro. Crosswhite Henry. R. D. 1, Kokomo, Ind., Oct. 11.

Manchester.—Our church met in quarterly council. Our elder, Bro. S. B. Blough, presided. We have set Thanksgiving evening as the time of our love feast. This will be our first communion since the organization of the North Manchester congregation. Brethren A. G. Lautzenhiser, John Stauffer, Glen Wright and Hugh Brumbaugh were appointed to solicit donations. A number of letters were received at the council, and also at our last appointment. Our elder reported that the work of the Christian Workers' Society has not been doing the amount of work that was desired, but new officers were installed, the society has been reorganized for more effectual work. Sister Ella Wike, who has been under care so faithfully, has been elected as our president. A number of committees were appointed to carry on different phases of the work. Sister Laverel is the corresponding secretary, and we hope that the efforts of the society will result in much good for the Master.—Ella M. Laverel, R. D. 3, Box 64, Beaumont Station, Manchester, Ind., Oct. 9.

Monticello.—We held our love feast Oct. 8. Several brethren and sisters were present from adjoining congregations. Bro. S. B. Heeter officiated. Saturday, Oct. 7, and Sunday morning, after the Sunday-school, Bro. Heeter preached for us. This was the first communion since the organization, and we will long be remembered.—Mrs. R. G. Keever, Monticello, Ind., Oct. 9.

Spring Creek.—We held our love feast on Sunday evening, Oct. 8, which was enjoyed by all. Brethren Geo. Swihart, Joseph Eby, Jr., and Jacob Wolf, of Cuba, Illinois, and Bro. Frank Neal assisted us in the meeting. Bro. Swihart officiated. This was a very interesting communion service. Bro. Geo. Swihart will be with us on Sunday evening, Oct. 22, to assist us in a series of meetings, which will begin that day.—Oct. 14.

Sugar Creek.—Bro. J. D. Mishler came to us Sept. 17, and preached for us three weeks. His preaching was very helpful and spiritual. It was the best revival we have had for a long time. Quite a number were converted, although the weather was inclement. The dear souls came out for the Lord and put on Christ in baptism. Bro. Mishler was also with us Sunday, Sept. 24, when we are praying that they may come later. Sister Ella Myrtle had been elected Sunday-school secretary, and the Sunday-school and the community. The members are much strengthened and spiritually built up.—Mrs. Ella Myrtle, Thorntown, Ind., Oct. 14.

Tippecanoe church will begin a series of meetings Oct. 14. Bro. J. A. Miller, of Wawaka, Ind., will do the preaching. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, at 5 P. M. Sisters Anna Crippen and Sarah Longanecker were elected delegates to District Meeting.—Josiah Garber, R. D. 3, Syracuse, Ind., Oct. 10.

Yellow Creek.—We held our love feast Sept. 30. About 175 members communed. Bro. J. M. Miller, of the West Goshen church, officiated. Bro. J. M. Miller preached every service, although many hearts were sad, because our old elder, Bro. John Nicholas, was not with us. Bro. D. L. Miller and other visiting ministers were present. Our hearts were made to rejoice on Sept. 24, when our house was dedicated free of debt to Jesus by baptism.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 5, Goshen, Ind., Oct. 12.

IOWA.

Cedar Rapids.—Our church met in council Oct. 3. Our elder, Bro. D. Elmer Miller, presided. All lines of work seem to be moving along nicely. Our new Sunday-school was organized, with Bro. Geo. York reelected as superintendent. Our love feast will be held Nov. 11, at 2 P. M.—Sadie Miller, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Big Creek, River.—Our love feast, Oct. 14, was well attended. Many visitors were present, as it was just before our District Meeting. A goodly number of ministers were present. Bro. I. B. Trout officiated.—Peter Brower, South English, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Franklin County church met in council Sept. 23. Our elder, Bro. Harvey Gilliam, presided. Six letters of membership were received. Sister Barbara Brower was chosen as our delegate to District Meeting, with Bro. C. Laudner as alternate. We decided to hold our love feast Nov. 18 and 19, and have a two weeks' series of meetings. Bro. Samuel Pike, of Waterloo, Iowa, Bro. Jacob Wolf, of Cuba, Illinois, assisted in the latitude, which was greatly appreciated.—Lanah May Allen, R. D. 2, Dumont, Iowa, Oct. 9.

Libertyville.—Since our last report two more have been baptized. Bro. Jacob Wolf decided at our Sunday evening service. Bro. J. G. Rarick will conduct a Bible Normal each evening before preaching.—H. B. Johnston, R. D., Batavia, Iowa, Oct. 9.

KANSAS.

Altamont.—Bro. B. Bell closed his protracted meeting at this place on Sunday evening. Seven were added and our local Sunday-school meeting. There were no converts, but we feel that much good was done. Communion services were announced. Brethren Bell and F. E. Miller officiated. Bro. Edmund Miller, of Parsons, was with us on each communion and conducted our Sunday program. A very spiritual meeting was enjoyed by all. Communion at the Independence church favorably impressed. We feel that much good has been done, but much yet remains to be accomplished.—Cora Morris, R. D. 2, Box 29, Altamont, Kans., Oct. 9.

Belleville.—Bro. Ernest Sherry came to us Sept. 15 and preached every evening for two weeks. The attendance at the street were good, considering the very rainy weather. Six were out on confession of faith, and about fifteen have expressed themselves as desiring baptism. Bro. Sherry is now with us. Ministers who were here to attend the District Meeting of Northern Kansas and Nebraska were with us Sept. 17. We felt as if we could not close the meetings yet, so Bro. Sherry, of Kansas City, Kans., and Bro. Geo. Snowberger, of Rossville, Kans., decided to remain a few days longer. So far seven have put on Christ. Others have stood up for Christ, but because of different circumstances have not yet been baptized. The meetings have passed off very pleasantly. In the evening Bro. Galen B. Royer presided. The meetings were well attended. They are enjoyed by all, and will long be remembered.—Susie R. Williams, Medel, Kans., Oct. 9.

Garden City.—Our church met in council Sept. 30. Eld. J. V. Crist presided. All the business that came before the meeting was pleasantly disposed of. The same evening, at 6 P. M., we had our love feast. Bro. J. Geisinger, of Rocky Ford, Colo., officiated. Bro. Nevinger preached for us the following Sunday morning and evening, and also on Monday evening. The attendance was not large, but the services were greatly refreshed.—A. N. Goff, Garden City, Kans., Oct. 12.

Independence church met in council Oct. 7. Eld. W. H. Miller presiding, assisted by Bro. Amos Leedy, who has moved to this place from Nebraska. Sister Leedy has also moved her letter. We decided to purchase "Kingdom Songs" for use in Sunday-school and church services. Bro. Leedy was chosen as our delegate to District Meeting, with Sister Ida Williams as alternate. Bro. Leedy was also elected as our delegate to the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting, with Sister Ada Williams as alternate. We are to have children's services Oct. 29. Our series of meetings will begin in the evening of the same day, to be conducted by Eld. C. A. Miller, Polla Carson, R. D. 2, Box 8, Independence, Kans., Oct. 11.

Monitor church met in council Sept. 30. The usual business was disposed of. Five letters of membership were granted. Brethren J. C. Peterson and H. M. Brubaker were chosen our delegates to the District Meeting at Newton, Kans., Brethren Jacob Wolf and J. E. Kitzmiller, alternates. We enjoyed our love feast on the evening of Oct. 7. Bro. M. J. Blauker officiated. The purity and sanctity of communion services. We expect to have a Bible Normal and revival meeting during the month of November.—Mrs. Ida Neuhauser, R. D. 5, M. Stadtacker, of McPherson, Kans.—Emma T. Stutsman, Conway Springs, Kans., Oct. 9.

Prairie View church met in council Sept. 30. The report of the annual visit was received. Bro. Jacob Wagoner, Jr., and J. E. Crist has been elected as our delegate to District Meeting; Bro. Eber Wagoner, alternate. Bro. Force, our Sunday-school superintendent, is very sick with typhoid fever. He has been chosen as superintendent. We reorganized our Christian Workers' Meeting. Will be elected delegate. A series of meetings will follow our love feast.—Louie Krueger, Friend, Kans., Oct. 9.

Santa Fe church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. J. E. Crist, presided. All of his counties were present at the close of this church, and Bro. C. E. Wolf was chosen to fill his place. Our love feast was held in the evening of Sept. 30. Six sisters and eight brethren surrounded the Lord's tables. On Sunday they were filled to the pulpit. He will put forth his best efforts to break the Bread of Life with the members here. Bro. Crist gave a talk to the young people in the evening. Meeting was enjoyed by all. Sunday-school has been received by letter and one by baptism. Bro. Chas. Kegley, who has been elected as our delegate to the District Meeting.—Nellie Wolf Hylton, New Ulysses, Kans., Oct. 9.

Verdigris.—Our church met in council Sept. 19, at the Lutzenhiser church. Eld. Jacob Wagoner presided. Reports were read and accepted. The choosing of delegates was the great part of the work. The Verdigris congregation in the country represents in each meeting 100 members. The new town congregation represents with one delegate at the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting. Sister Ella Lautzenhiser gave their report, and the church was found to be in good condition. Bro. Jacob Wagoner began a series of meetings at the close of the council meeting. Bro. John Sherfy, Jr., Bro. Paul Mishler, of Nebraska, and Bro. Wm. Lautzenhiser preached every one night. Bro. Sherfy is awakening a deep interest, especially among the young people. Meetings will still be held and prayer service was held on Friday, Oct. 6, between twelve and one o'clock.—Ellen Quakenbush, R. D. 1, Olpe, Kans., Oct. 9.

Wichita.—Our church met in council Sept. 30. Eld. F. P. M. Bro. F. C. McCune is in the midst of a series of meetings here, with good attendance and a large attendance.—Lizzie Bellenbach, Beattie, Kans., Oct. 10.

MARYLAND.

Denton.—Oct. 22 we will have our children's meeting, at 7:30 P. M. Oct. 23 Bro. A. P. Snader, of New Windsor, Md., will begin a series of meetings. Nov. 11 we will hold our love feast Nov. 12, at 6 P. M. Brother and Sister W. A. Miller have promised to be with us the week before Christmas, to give us a few lectures.—Mrs. Ida Hopkins, R. D. 2, Box 38, Denton, Md.

Pipe Creek church met in council Oct. 7, which was a very spiritual service. As we had unfavorable weather and roads we were unable to have our love feast. Our attendance was not so large as usual. Bro F. Anthony, of Waynesboro, Pa., officiated. Bro. Anthony is very feeble, being quite poorly. Bro. Anthony is very feeble, being quite poorly. Brethren A. Snader, G. Ecker, Jesse Burrall and ——— Gosnel were present with us. Bro. Anthony preached for us Sunday morning and evening to a full house. We held several communion services on Sunday evening. Bro. Anthony officiated. We also had our regular love feast.—Maggie E. Ecker, Mount Airy, Md., Oct. 10.

Long Green Valley church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. Wm. Lambert, presided. Delegates were elected in the persons of Brethren Arthur Southard and Moses Nafsinger were elected delegates to the Sunday-school and temperance committee made a favorable report, and asked that a sermon be addressed by a speaker from the Annual Meeting Temperance committee. The committee made a good showing in spite of its finances. The church decided to secure some adjoining property. Quite a number of members of the church were appointed as a cemetery committee. Brethren T. S. Fike and J. M. Fridinger were elected as elders of the church, and Bro. J. M. Fridget to the ministry, and Brethren J. C. Breidenbaugh and Minor Shaffer to the deacon's office. After the close of their wives, were installed. As an immediate result of the series of meetings, two united with the church by baptism. Min. meeting, Oct. 11. Bro. Lambert will be with us for the near by kingdom.—Ida M. Neuhauser, Gittings, Md., Oct. 9.

Mt. Zion church met in council Oct. 7, with our spiritual love feast. A spirit of deep reverence pervaded the entire meeting. Quite a large number of members were present, including Bro. Isaac Frantz, of Ohio. On Sunday morning Bro. Frantz preached to an attentive and full house. He is now engaged in a series of meetings at the Mount Zion church in this congregation.—K. Mae Rowland, R. D. 4, Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 11.

MICHIGAN.

Thornapple.—We held our love feast Oct. 7, at the West house. Eld. J. S. Mohler officiated. Bro. J. M. Smith assisted. Three members were received by letter. A number of visiting members from adjoining congregations were present. Meetings will be held in the mission work at Grand Rapids.—Sarah Long, Clarksville, Mich., Oct. 12.

VIRGINIA.

Winona.—It has been our privilege, the past few Sundays, to have with us our elder, Bro. D. H. Keller. He was accompanied by Bro. Jacob Wagoner, who gave us two inspiring sermons on Sunday. On Monday evening, Oct. 2, Bro. W. R. Deeter, of Bridgewater, Va., preached to an audience of the Brethren stopped with us on Friday evening, returning from District Meeting. Bro. Lichty was one of the number, and preached another interesting sermon for us. Sunday, Bro. Keller's stay with us he gave us two inspiring sermons. He also preached in the evening at the Independence house of Bible work. We enjoyed having the Brethren with us. It is our prayer that we may labor more together.—Maud Thompson, 465 Olmstead, Winona, Minn., Oct. 9.

MISSOURI.

Cedar County.—On account of return from the District Meeting at Cabool, Mo., Eld. A. Killingsworth, other brethren and sisters stopped and visited the brethren and sisters in Cedar County, Saturday, Oct. 7, and at 2 P. M. preached to an attentive audience. At 7 P. M. we met at Bro. Tingley's home to hold a love feast. Bro. Killingsworth officiated. The meeting was well attended. On Sunday morning our dear Bro. Tingley, who was very sick, was taken home at his request. He has not been able to preach for more than four years. At 2 P. M. we had a large audience to preach to. In the evening I went eight miles west to the Independence schoolhouse, where we had a large crowd and an attentive people. The Cedar County church has no resident minister nor churchhouse, but Bro. Killingsworth has been looking after them and the meeting for several years. There are a few brethren and sisters at that place who are very zealous for their Master's cause. Cedar County would be a good place for brethren to locate who have no home at present. A good work can be done there.—Lander Smith, 210 North Oak St., Nevada, Mo., Oct. 19.

Clear Fork.—Our series of meetings, of two weeks' duration, closed Oct. 1, with a large attendance and good interest. The meetings were conducted by Bro. Marcus Cruea, of Kansas City, Mo.—L. C. Slusher, Lucien, Mo., Oct. 12.

Clear Fork church met in council Sept. 9. Our series of meetings started the 19th. Bro. M. Cruea was with us. We were no accessions, but the interest was good. We expect to have an other series a few weeks. Our next week's meeting we will hold our love feast Oct. 24.—Mrs. Sue Long, R. D. 6, box 34, Warrensburg, Mo., Oct. 5.

Rockingham.—We met in council on Friday, Oct. 13, to consider the matter of the visiting elder and we unanimously asked the church to be in a reasonably good condition, spiritually. Eight letters were received and one was granted. Bro. Harshbarger, of Girard, Ill., preached for us, while visiting relatives on his way to California. The meetings were well attended and much appreciated.—Elizabeth Bashaw, Sidney, Mo., Oct. 14.

Shelby County church met in council Oct. 7. Bro. Conrad Steffen presided. We decided to hold a series of meetings as soon as we can get a minister to come and do the meetings. We will be glad if any ministers passing near, will give us a call. We will meet them at the train at Shelbina.—Ora Hamilton, Mo., Oct. 14.

Wakenda.—We met in called council Sept. 39. The report of the annual visit was favorable, showing all to be in the faith, and willing to continue their work for the Master. Bro. Frank Vangelder was elected to the ministry. On evening of Oct. 1 we held our love feast. At 2 P. M. Bro. S. B. Shirley preached the sermon, after which Bro. Vangelder was installed into the ministry. About eighty members surrounded the Lord's table.—Grace Bonebrake, Hamlin, Mo., Oct. 11.

NEBRASKA

Juniata church met in council Sept. 28. Our elder, Bro. C. J. Hargrave, was present. We reformed our Sunday-school, and reorganized our Sunday-school with a slight change in officers. Five letters of membership were granted—Susanna Blankenbiller was chosen delegate to District Meeting. Bro. A. D. Sollenberger, of Beatrice, Nebr., has kindly consented to do the work of meetings for us. Address—Mary Liverighouse, Juniata, Nebr., Oct. 6.

Sappy Creek church held a love feast in the tent at Bro. Abe Mishler's home Oct. 7. Fifteen members communed. Our elder, Bro. Hargrave, officiated. Two were baptized into the meetings closed on Sunday night. We will have protracted meetings in the near future.—L. J. Chapman, Edison, Nebr., Oct. 12.

NORTH DAKOTA

Englevale church met in council Oct. 7. One letter was received and one was granted. We will hold our love feast and a series of meetings as soon as the church is completed.—Ladona Shively, Sawyer, N. Dak., Oct. 12.

Solem.—Two have been baptized since my last report. We have had good attendance at our Sunday-school and most of the children have their report cards filled with stars for the last quarter. We have preaching every evening by a visiting brother conducted by Bro. Will Shively, following the outline given by Bro. Noah. Some of our members are moving away.—Mattie Moore, Newville, N. Dak., Oct. 9.

OHIO.

Black Swamp.—We held our love feast Oct. 7. Fifty-five members communed the Lord's table. We had a large and attentive audience. Visiting ministers present were, Eld. Jacob Hoke, of Ashley, Ohio, Eld. Jacob Hollinger, of the Fairview church, and Simon Garber, of Fremont, Ohio. Eld. Stutzman presided. We were much encouraged by them as many dear brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations with us. Bro. Jacob Garner was advanced to the second degree of the ministry, and he and his wife were duly installed. On account of sickness in the family of Bro. Hoover, our elder, he was to have a series of meetings, but have postponed our meetings indefinitely.—Edith Baker, Lemoyne, Ohio, Oct. 14.

Blue Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 7. Thirty-nine members surrounded the Lord's tables. Ministers present were Brethren Eld. Eli Prowant, Eld. Jesse Reese, Bro. John Flory, and Eld. J. L. Guthrie. The latter officiated. Bro. John Flory preached for us on Saturday night. One more was made willing to accept Christ and was baptized in the river.—Another one has asked to be baptized.—Oct. 18. Since our last report the church has called Bro. Theodore Beverly to the deacon's office. Bro. J. L. Guthrie will preach for us on Sunday morning and evening and will have the sermons at Blue Creek for the present, as he expects to leave soon for Missouri.—Mrs. L. W. Prowant, Ada, Ohio, Oct. 19.

Bryan church met in council Oct. 3. As our church is not completed yet, we met at the Brethren Home. Bro. Hollinger presided. Some arrangements were made for the opening of our services at the church again, which will be in a few weeks. A temperance committee was appointed and an aged father and mother were baptized since our last report. We expect Bro. Dorsey Hodgden to assist us in a series of meetings after the Holidays.—Anna Hoffer, Cavernville, Ohio, Oct. 9.

Jonathan Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 1. Eld. E. B. Bagwell officiated. The services were well attended and much enjoyed by all. On Sunday morning communion was served in the church. At 9:30 A. M. we had Sunday-school, and at 10:30 A. M. Bro. S. A. Wenger preached the first discourse. Dinner was then served at the church. At 2:30 P. M. Bro. Bagwell addressed a very attentive audience. At 7:30 P. M. Brother Samuel Sprankle preached the last sermon. The best of attention and interest prevailed throughout the entire meeting. The church has been without a resident minister for some time, but we have been able to secure Bro. Rufus Wenger, of Ada, Ohio, who is now living with us. We feel that Jonathan Creek will yet become a strong church. The outlook is very encouraging since Bro. Wenger's visit in preaching the Word with power.—J. S. Leckrone, Somerset, Ohio, Oct. 9.

Ministerial Meeting of Northeastern Ohio.—The meeting was held in the East Nimishillen church on Tuesday evening, Oct. 3, and Wednesday, Oct. 4. Twenty-four ministers were present at the roll call on Wednesday morning. The program was carried out as planned. All of the ministers were present, and all of the regular speakers were present to respond when their names were announced. The consecration service, devotion and inspiring songs made the meeting both pleasant and profitable. Communion and footwashing was also observed and had been made for all. We feel grateful to the brethren, sisters and friends of East Nimishillen for the hospitality shown in caring for us during the meeting.—A. P. Shriver, 807 Coburn St., Akron, Ohio, Oct. 9.

Mohican.—Our love feast, held Sept. 30, was well attended, considering the inclement weather. A goodly number were here from adjoining churches. About forty-five surrounded the Lord's tables. Brethren Wm. Dessenberg and D. R. McFadden were the visiting ministers. Bro. McFadden also preached an inspiring sermon on Sunday to an attentive audience.—Mrs. Emma Kenney, West Salem, Ohio.

West Milton church met in council on the evening of Sept. 21. The adjoining elders, Brethren Eld. Jacob Hoke, Henderickson and Mumaw, were present. Bro. Jeremiah Heisey was called to the ministry, and Bro. Russel Wenger was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. This was a pleasant and helpful meeting. The Spirit of the Lord is working among us.—S. L. Brumbaugh, West Milton, Ohio, Oct. 9.

OKLAHOMA

Elk City.—Since our excellent city schools have opened, we have an increase in our Sunday-school service, especially in the Sunday-school, which is endeavoring to be among the banner Sunday-schools. How we miss our ministers, however. We would be glad to have some one locate here to take up mission work, as the people of the city are well impressed with our Brethren generally, and an earnest worker could find much to do in this worldly city.—A. B. Coover, Elk City, Okla., Oct. 9.

Shawnee.—Our church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. A. D. Boyd, presided. Bro. Jesse Hoover was present. We decided to order another dozen of "Kingdom Songs" books. The report of the yearly meeting was read.—Ida Hoover. We will hold our love feast Dec. 9, at 4 P. M., and on Dec. 10 we expect to hold our Ministerial Meeting.—Mollie Yoder, Cordell, Okla., Oct. 9.

OREGON.

Coquille Valley.—We met in council Sept. 29. Bro. J. S. Root presided. Much business came before the council and was disposed of. Bro. Wilbur Hilton and Bro. Louie Jones were elected to the deacon's office. They, with their wives, were duly installed. Bro. J. Barnard was also informed her husband having been elected to the ministry and installed before their marriage. Our annual District Workers' Meeting were also appointed. One of our brethren, Bro. Thomas Bordley, who has been in the hospital for a surgical operation performed for cancer, is getting along quite well and thinks he will be able to return home soon.—J. F. Stevens, Myrtle Point, Oregon, Oct. 14.

PENNSYLVANIA

Chiques.—Our congregation has two Sunday-schools, and on Sept. 24 the school at Bro. Jacob Rissers had a children's meeting at 2 P. M. Bro. Amos Koontz, of Union Deposit, Pa., was the speaker. Bro. Koontz was favored with a talk by Bro. J. H. Brubaker, of the Fairview congregation. Bro. Brubaker has been Sunday-school worker for many years. Bro. William Zobler, of East Petersburg, Pa., and Bro. John H. Zug, of Lancaster, Pa., were also with us. Bro. Amos C. Gelb and S. N. Beckner are the superintendents. Good impressions were left.—Minerva C. Eng, R. D. 1, Mount Hope, Pa., Oct. 10.

Conestoga.—Eld. E. S. Miller, of Blue Rock, began a series of meetings at the Bubbs union house Sept. 21, ending Oct. 7. He preached fourteen sermons, delivering the Word in the purity and power of the Spirit, and was much edified, and much interest was manifested. Our love feast was held in the Conestoga church Oct. 1, which was well attended. Visiting ministers present were Eld. E. S. Miller, Bro. Daniel Bowers, of Lancaster, Pa., and Bro. Jacob Hollinger, Columbus, Pa. Eld. E. S. Miller officiated.—J. L. Myers, Loganville, Pa., Oct. 13.

Dunnings Creek.—Eld. John M. Mohler, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., began a series of meetings in the Holsinger house Sept. 25, and preached seven sermons. On account of illness the Sword of the Spirit reatiessly. One was born into the Kingdom and was baptized during the time. Our love feast was held Oct. 7. On account of the rain and muddy roads the attendance was not as large as we expected, but the meeting yet we had a very spiritual communion service. Bro. Mohler officiated.—Mrs. Ella Mann, Bedford, Pa., Oct. 13.

George's Creek.—We met in council Sept. 29, preparatory to our love feast, which was held Oct. 1, with a large attendance. The visiting brethren reported all the members to be in love and union. At this time it was decided to have some one take charge of the services in some longer meetings. In the place of Sister Mary Sheckle, who is sick and unable to be with us, Sister Luetta Cover was elected to act as elected superintendent, with Sister Luetta Cover as assistant. After the business was disposed of, preaching by Bro. J. H. Gaunt, of Riddlesburg, Pa., preached in the evening, and each succeeding evening of the week. Bro. Gaunt spoke many what inclement, yet the church has been greatly benefited. We are sorry to lose Bro. Gaunt, as he expects soon moving from us to Glendale, Ariz., where he has accepted the pastorate of that congregation. They have been long and faithful workers here, and will be missed much by the church as they enter their new field of labor. Oct. 7 we held our love feast, at 1 P. M. Bro. Gaunt spoke on the ordinances, and a number of visitors were present. Sunday evening, the last evening of our meeting, Bro. Gaunt spoke impressively to a young man decided for Christ, and was baptized on Monday.—Mrs. Ella Mann, Bedford, Pa., Oct. 13.

Harrisburg.—In the absence of Bro. Widder, our pulpit was filled by our visiting brethren. Bro. Jacob Hoke, of the Church of God, together with Bro. L. E. Lose, of York, Pa., who is especially gifted in song. In the morning Rev. Detwiler, of Philadelphia, preached from Acts 2:38. In the evening Rev. Aston, of Youmstown, Pa., preached from Eccl. 12. Both were very interesting services. Oct. 4 Bro. Hoke is assisted in our children's day exercises by Bro. H. K. Oberholtzer, Elizabethtown, Pa., and Bro. Detwiler, of Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 10.

Little Pine.—Our love feast, held Oct. 3 and 4, was largely attended. Visiting ministers present were Brethren Hiram Shultz, Hershey; Eld. John Hoke, Ashley, Ohio; Superintendent Allan Kaylor and Nathan Martin. Eld. Hiram Gibbs officiated. We recently enjoyed several children's meetings. Bro. Hiram Shultz preached from Eph. 5. Brethren Martin spoke, and at the Union house Bro. H. K. Ober addressed the people. Bro. Hoke had charge of the children's meeting. Our church decided to hold a Sunday-school Meeting Oct. 24, to be addressed by Bro. Hoke. Bro. Hoke will be in charge of home talent,—ministers and Sunday-school workers.—Emma Pittinger, Box 1, Milroy, Pa., Oct. 13.

Lower Canowago.—We held our love feast Sept. 30 and Oct. 1, at the Bermudian house. Visiting ministers present were Eld. Jacob Hoke, Ashley, Ohio, Bro. Amos M. Kuhns, of Union Deposit, Pa., Brethren C. L. Baker, S. S. Miller and D. B. Detwiler, of Mount Bethel, Pa., Bro. Jacob Hollinger, Columbus, Pa. The services began on Saturday at 10 A. M. Brethren Amos Kuhns and Jacob Hollinger officiated. Bro. Hollinger being officiated at the love feast. Brethren Group and Long assisted at the communion Sunday morning. Bro. Amos Kuhns delivered an excellent sermon. At the close of the meeting Bro. Hollinger was elected to the ministry.—Mrs. J. W. Harlacher, Dover, Pa., Oct. 9.

Marsh Creek.—Our church has just enjoyed a spiritual feast. Eld. Silas Snoufler, of Green Spring, Pa., was with us, and gave us much spiritual food. He also officiated at the feast. One brother was baptized. Visiting ministers present were Eld. Jacob Hoke, Ashley, Ohio, Bro. Amos M. Kuhns, of Union Deposit, Pa., Brethren C. L. Baker, S. S. Miller and D. B. Detwiler, of Mount Bethel, Pa., Bro. Jacob Hollinger, Columbus, Pa. The services began on Saturday at 10 A. M. Brethren Amos Kuhns and Jacob Hollinger officiated. Bro. Hollinger being officiated at the love feast. Brethren Group and Long assisted at the communion Sunday morning. Bro. Amos Kuhns delivered an excellent sermon. At the close of the meeting Bro. Hollinger was elected to the ministry.—Mrs. J. W. Harlacher, Dover, Pa., Oct. 9.

Morning Spring.—Our members met in council at this place Oct. 3, with Eld. David Sell presiding, having been elected as our elder at a previous meeting. We had a very interesting meeting. Two members were received by letter and one letter was granted. We decided to hold our love feast Nov. 12, commencing at 2 P. M. Brethren Eld. Jacob Hoke, Eld. J. H. Cassady, beginning Oct. 15. One year has about expired since the Brethren Eld. Jacob Hoke and Hollinger, Bro. Lehrer, were elected, with Sister Clara Replogle as superintendent; Sister Mae Stuckey, secretary. At this time Bro. Lehrer was chosen chorister for the church, with Bro. D. Brammell as assistant. May the Lord direct our efforts in this busy little town to the glory and honor of the Master.—Evangeline the Master's cause!—Elizabeth Barnhart, Roaring Spring, Pa., Oct. 14.

Tyrone.—Oct. 8 we had an enjoyable love feast. Bro. J. B. Miller and wife, of Curryville, Pa., and Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh, of Huntingdon, Pa., were present; also a number from Bellwood. Since our last report ten have been added to the church by confession and baptism. This is encouraging to our Lord's work.—Anna Wertz, Twenty-first St., Tyrone, Pa., Oct. 16.

Upper Canowago.—Our church had a very enjoyable love feast at the Latimore house Oct. 7 and 8. Ministers from the Bermudian congregation were present, Eld. Jacob H. Hertzler, of Elizabethtown, Pa., Bro. D. H. Widder, of Harrisburg, Pa., Brethren Eld. Jacob Hoke, of Ashley, Ohio, Eld. S. H. Hertzler officiated. We expect to hold a series of meetings at the Hampton house, commencing Oct. 24, to be conducted by Eld. T. S. Fike, of Detour, Md. We expect to have a special Sunday-school Meeting at East Berlin Nov. 12.—Bro. H. Brown, Dover, Pa., Oct. 14.—Bro. T. S. Fike, of Detour, Md., are to discuss different topics. Since my last report seven have been received into the house of worship, among the members. Our elder likes that much better than having it in the church.—A. D. Shank, Manheim, Pa., Oct. 9.

TENNESSEE.

Pleasant View.—The Brethren here met in council Oct. 1, with Eld. Wm. Hutchison presiding. On Sunday Bro. E. Richwards gave us very good admonitions. The Sunday-school is progressing nicely in this place. Bro. H. Richwards also organized a Sunday-school at Ebenezer. He reports a good turnout.—N. T. Larimer, Jonesboro, Tenn., Oct. 9.

TEXAS

Sawyer.—Our traveling evangelist, Eld. J. A. Miller, came this way Sept. 23, and preached ten very interesting sermons in the Methodist church, closing at night at the usual hour. The attendance was good, and the people were intensely interested in the Word. Bro. Miller has been pastor of us for one year. Prospects look favorable for the future. One has put on Christ in baptism.—Carrie Derrick, Irving, Texas, Oct. 11.

VIRGINIA.

Fairfax church met in council Oct. 7, with Eld. I. M. Neff presiding. Much business came before the meeting and was disposed of very satisfactorily. Two letters of membership were given and one received. The visiting brethren gave a very favorable report of the Sunday-school at the home mission. A doctrinal talk on "visiting" directed more especially to the deacons was given by Bro. J. B. Brumbaugh.—Maggie Miller, Oakton, Va., Oct. 11.

Middle Creek church met and began a series of meetings Sept. 17, at the Mount Hermon house, continuing till Oct. 1. Fourteen sermons were preached, of which were interesting and full of Gospel truth. On the evening of the 29th we had a most enjoyable love feast. Eld. Hiram May officiated. Eld. S. G. Early and Bro. Jacob Hollinger were with us in ministerial work. One was added to the church by baptism, others by visit.—Mrs. Lizzie Hylton, Mount Jackson, Va., Oct. 19.

Mount Union Grove Chapel.—We met in council Oct. 6, Elder S. A. Sanger presiding. The visiting brethren's report was read. It was decided to hold our first love feast at this place Nov. 11. Several committees were appointed to look after the needed improvements. It was decided to hold a series of Bible Institute sometime during the winter. The work will be largely along doctrinal lines.—Nelie Wampler, Dyke, Va., Oct. 16.

Potters Creek church met in council Oct. 7, Eld. J. H. Garst presiding. Our meeting was a pleasant one.—Secretary pro.—Mildred Nutt, Roanoke, Va., Oct. 9.

Valley Mission.—Bro. M. R. Zigler came to us Oct. 1 and preached eight interesting sermons. The meetings closed Oct. 15. We had a love feast Oct. 10, at which time a dear brethren was good. Our ministering brethren gave us some interesting talks. At the close of the feast Oct. 11 one was baptized and two were reclaimed. Bro. M. B. Miller officiated. Four young people were received by baptism. One letter of membership was granted since our last report. The meetings at the Chimney Run church, conducted by Bro. Geo. Phillips, closed with one accession to the church.—Ida Hassard, Dale City, Va., Oct. 9.

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches."

ECHOES FROM NORTHEASTERN KANSAS.

The Sunday-school, Ministerial, and District Meetings of Northeastern Kansas were held in the Washington Creek church near Lyons, Kans., The meetings were preceded by a stirring sermon on the evening of Sept. 30, by Bro. E. M. Studebaker, on the subject, "How Shall the Dying Millions Be Saved?" His text was Rom. 10:14, 15.

On Sunday morning, at nine o'clock, the Sunday-school Meeting was organized by electing Bro. O. R. McCune, Moderator, and Bro. Park Strole, Writing Clerk. At ten o'clock the regular Sunday-school session was held, followed by a sermon on "The Spirit-filled Life" (Eph. 5: 18, 19), delivered by Eld. H. L. Brammell.

At 1:45 P. M. we enjoyed a spiritual song service. The regular Sunday-school program was then taken up, and the various topics were discussed, giving us many good and practical lessons. A Sunday-school and general temperance program was rendered, emphasizing the evils of the great liquor traffic, and the many crimes committed each year by its influence. Following this program Eld. R. A. Yoder gave a good sermon from Heb. 12:22-24.

On Monday, at two P. M., the Ministerial Meeting was opened by Eld. R. A. Yoder, Moderator, and F. E. McCune, Writing Clerk. Several live topics were ably discussed, among them the questions of "Church Government," "More Evangelists," and "Spiritual Life." We feel that all present, and especially the ministers, were greatly benefited.

At six P. M. we enjoyed our first Educational Meeting. Dr. O. H. Yereman, Eld. R. A. Yoder and Prof. E. M. Studebaker spoke on the subject, "The Relation of the Church to the School, and the School to the Church." Beginning at 7 P. M., an hour was given to the Child Rescue Work, after which Bro. E. F. Sherly addressed the meeting from Acts 1. Collections for Child Rescue, Tenperance, and Mission Work were taken, amounting to $117.

On the morning of Oct. 3 the District Meeting was organized by electing Eld. Geo. Mason, Moderator; Eld. H. L. Brammell, Reading Clerk, and W. A. Kinzie, Writing Clerk. An unusual amount of business came before the meeting, but was disposed of in a Christian spirit. No queries were sent to Annual Meeting. The questions of mission work in our home District received due attention, and a call for $2,000 was made by the District Board, and approved by the meeting. It was also decided to represent our District on the foreign field, and a committee was appointed to formulate plans and secure the worker by next District Meeting.

Eld. H. L. Brammell was chosen delegate to Annual Meeting, with Eld. Geo. Manon, alternate. The meeting closed by a sermon from Eld. C. B. Smith. Subject, "The Seven Walks." W. A. Kinzie, Writing Clerk.

McPherson, Kans., Oct. 5.

THE FIRST DISTRICT MEETING OF WASHINGTON.

It was our privilege to attend the last Joint District Meeting of Oregon, Washington and Idaho, held at Myrtle Point, Oregon. The business of this meeting was to dissolve the old joint District, in order that three new Districts could be formed, namely the District of Oregon, the District of Washington, and the District of Idaho and Western Montana.

North Yakima was chosen as the place to hold the first District Meeting of Washington, which was held Sept. 21 and 22, with nineteen delegates present, representing seven churches. Eld. A. D. Wolf was called upon to take the chair and organize the meeting. The officers chosen were as follows: Eld. A. B. Peters, Moderator; Eld. J. S. Secrist, Reading Clerk; Eld. M. F. Woods, Writing Clerk. The organization was completed by adopting the rules of the mother District, to govern the meeting.

The first business that came before the meeting was the appointing of a Mission Board. Those appointed were Eld. D. B. Eby, Eld. J. S. Secrist, and Eld. M. F. Woods. Brethren Eby and Woods were members of the old Mission Board of the joint District, and in close touch with the field and its work.

The Mission Board asks the new District for $1,000 for the Mission work of the coming year. Their desire is to make a forward move this year, and raise more per member than during the past year. They have a number of calls for workers from new fields, and we feel sure that the Lord will open the way, that those who are in darkness may have the light brought to them.

Bro. J. O. Streeter was chosen as District Missionary Secretary, and District Sunday-school Secretary. His duty is to visit all the churches of the District, and to cooperate with the Home Mission Board and Sunday-school, and, if possible, inspire greater earnestness.

According to the recommendation of the General Conference, a Temperance committee was appointed, consisting of Brethren J. A. Eby, Noble Stutsman, and J. U. G. Stiverson. The spirit of the meeting was good from beginning to end, and all present were deeply interested in the work of the District, showing that the District, though young, has made a healthy start.

We were very much pleased to have Bro. D. L. Miller with us, who was called on often for advice on questions that confront the District and her mission work. Bro. Miller was also present at the sailing of the missionaries for China. He also visited a number of churches on his return. J. A. Eby

DISTRICT MEETING OF SOUTHERN MISSOURI AND NORTHWESTERN ARKANSAS.

I left home Oct. 2, to go to the District Meeting held at the Greenwood house in the Cabool congregation. We were joined at Springfield by Eld. Geo. Barnhart, of Carthage, Mo. On Tuesday, Oct. 3, at 2 P. M., the elders met in council and organized by chooing Eld. A. Killingsworth, Moderator, and Leander Smith, Clerk. They held a very pleasant session.

On Wednesday, Oct. 4, at 9 A. M., the District Meeting was organized by choosing the following officers: Eld. A. Killingsworth, Moderator; Leander Smith, Reading Clerk; N. A. Duncan, Writing Clerk; D. W. Teeter, Assistant Writing Clerk. Some very important business came before the meeting, and was disposed of in a very pleasant manner. The spirit of love and harmony prevailed throughout all our deliberations. Bro. N. A. Duncan was reelected on the Mission Board. The following brethren were elected on the Temperance Committee: Elders C. W. Gitt, Cabool, Mo.; D. W. Teeter, Jasper, Mo.; Leander Smith, Nevada, Mo. Bro. A. W. Adkins, of Collins, Mo., was elected District Sunday-school Secretary. Eld. J. B. Hylton was elected to represent our District on the Standing Committee of 1912.

The topics of the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meeting were ably discussed.

Our next District Meeting will be held at the Shoal Creek church, Newton County, Mo., on Wednesday before the fourth Lord's Day of October, 1912.

KANSAS CITY, KANSAS (SOUTH SIDE).

With our District Meeting, held Oct. 1, closed another year's work in this Mission. Since the work was so well supported by the many parts of the brotherhood, by donations of cash and clothing, we will give a report of the work that was done. We give the Lord the praise for all the good.

During the year we preached 128 sermons, attended ninety-four Sunday-schools, seventy-five prayer meetings, forty-seven Christian Workers' Meetings, preached twenty funeral sermons, held eight anointing services, five councils, three love feasts, seven Aid Society meetings, forty-nine rummage sales, thirty-two industrial classes, made 183 visits with prayer in private homes, and 1,867 other visits in homes. During the year thirty were received into fellowship by baptism, all heads of families except four.

The outlook for the salvation of souls is encouraging, but the financial prospects for the poor are not good. On account of the extreme drought many who were willing to work could not get anything to do. Many who made a failure in the country, and moved to the city for work, could not get any. Living expenses are very high, and there will be much destitution the coming winter. We feel very thankful for the aid given our work during the past, and we are sure the Lord will bless all, and that stars will be added to their crowns in glory, for making our work result in the salvation of souls. The Lord willing, we will continue this work for another year, and we need your help and prayers. I. H. Crist and Wife.

DENVER, COLORADO.

The members of the Denver church have again enjoyed a season of spiritual refreshing. Oct. 2 was the day appointed for our feast. We had Sundsky-school and preaching in the morning as usual. Lunch was served at noon, and a social time enjoyed.

At 2:30 Bro. Wolf gave us another sermon, followed by encouraging talks from each of the members. All were edified, and we believe, bound closer together by that strong tie by which all men shall know whose disciples we are.

Sister Coffey, who underwent a critical operation a few weeks ago, has been most wonderfully helped by the anointing as well as by the special prayer of the church, and now seems on a rapid road to recovery.

At 5:30 Bro. Stephens, who has been afflicted for some time, was anointed at the church. May the Lord renew his strength!

At 6:30 we surrounded the Lord's tables, and after a short, preparatory service on self-examination, we partook of the supper and sacred emblems, which mean so much to the true followers of the Master.

Many regrets were expressed that Bro. Wolf must leave us. May the Lord richly bless him, both physically and spiritually! We will be as sheep without a shepherd, for a short time, but humbly trust the Lord and await the coming of a new pastor.

BUENA VISTA, VIRGINIA.

About fifteen miles south of Buena Vista, in the Blue Ridge Mountains, is a fertile little valley, known as "Arnold's Valley," in which the Brethren have done some preaching in years past, but which has been neglected by them for some time.

June 11 Bro. S. R. Mays, at the request of some of the people of the valley, organized a Sunday-school in an old schoolhouse. Bro. Mays was assisted by other members from the Buena Vista church, and the school soon grew until the house was full to overflowing every Sunday. Bro. S. I. Flory and the writer did some preaching during the summer, and Sept. 10 we began a series of services in the church which is owned by the Presbyterians, but is open to all denominations. We preached seventeen sermons. Fifteen were baptized and two reclaimed. The two reclaimed were young sisters who had married and moved into the valley. Having no one to care for them, they grew cold and strayed away from the fold. We were glad to bring them into the fold again, and especially glad were we to receive both their husbands by baptism.

We now have a little band of enthusiastic members there. They will help very materially in the Sunday-school, which will continue through the winter. The people in the valley, as a whole, like our doctrine, and listened eagerly to the simple gospel messages as we, in our weakness, delivered them. Sisters Laura Crausebarn and Mae Albright, from the Dry River church, Va., rendered valuable assistance in the way of music and personal work during the meeting.

There are many opportunities for preaching and teaching the Word even at our own doors! We give this little account of our work with the hope that it may encourage others to go forth and "possess the land" for Christ our King.

We need only to look at the early history of most of our strong churches in Virginia, as well as many other States, to see some consecrated brother riding for miles, preaching and perhaps starting a Sunday-school in some little log schoolhouse.

Shall we not, in turn, reach out into the many places, even in Virginia, where our Brethren are not known, and begin to sow the good seed of the Kingdom, believing that God will cause it to grow and bring forth a harvest? God alone knows what the result might be if our established churches were fully awake to their duty, and many of their number would be "scattered abroad" and would go "everywhere preaching the Word." May we surrender our wills fully to God's will, and in the truest sense go and "make disciples" of all nations!

Buena Vista, Va., Oct. 7. H. L. Alley.

MARKLE, INDIANA.

Recently Bro. Geo. W. Flory, of Covington, Ohio, conducted a series of meetings for us, which was uplifting to our souls. He presented some powerful sermons to the church, as well as to nonprofessors. Five were born into the kingdom of Christ by baptism, and many others were almost persuaded.

We regret that Bro. Flory could not be with us longer, but hope and trust that the time will come when he can again return, as the people everywhere, in and about town, were stirred to a sense of their duty. As a church we were greatly awakened. We trust we have been aroused to a realization of our duty to God and man.

Sept. 30 our church met in council with Bro. D. B. Garber presiding. A goodly number of members were present, and the work was disposed of in the spirit of love. This was a good council before our love feast, Oct. 28, beginning at 10 A. M., an all-day meeting. The deacons made their reports of the annual visit. They found all in the faith. Bro. John Crull and Sister Schridlia Hite were chosen delegates to the District Meeting, with Sister Lavinia Brumbaugh and Sister Rena Maddux as alternates. Delegates to the Sunday-school Meeting, Sister Flora Funderburg and the writer, with Sister Mary Heasten and Sister Pearl Brumbaugh, alternates. For our Christian Workers' Meeting the writer and Sister Pearl Brumbaugh were elected presidents, and Sister Effie Hite, secretary-treasurer. Lillian Earhart.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Barnett, Glen, little son of Thomas and Cora Barnett, born Jan. 11, 1906, died Oct. 7, 1911, aged 5 years and 9 months. He died of membranous croup and diphtheria. He was very patient until death. He was a bright and loving child, and will be sadly missed by his parents and one little brother. Services by Rev. Friend, of Strasburg.—Mrs. Mary Shonk, R. D. 1, Navarre, Ohio.

Boots, Sister Alice, nee James, wife of Bro. Mont Boots, born in December, 1876, in Kansas, died from an accident Sept. 28, 1911, near her home at Light, Ariz. She united with the Church of the Brethren at Lordsburg, Cal., in March, 1911. She was a fine Christian character. All who knew her loved her and spoke of her kindness. She was married just six weeks. Bro. Boots is the son of Brother and Sister Saul Boots, formerly of Kansas, but recently from Lordsburg, Cal., and now residing near Spears, Ariz. Sister Boots and her husband were out riding, when the team ran away, throwing her out, and she died instantly. She was taken to the home of Mr. Light, where the last short services were conducted, and interment was made in the Pearce cemetery. The young husband is very much grief stricken.—Mrs. O. S. Pratt, Pearce, Ariz.

Root, Bro. Jacob, died of general debility, at his home in Vernfield, Pa., Sept. 23, 1911, aged 74 years, 4 months and 16 days. He is survived by his wife, five sons and four daughters; also one brother and two sisters. Bro. Jacob was elected to the ministry about forty-five years ago, in the Springfield congregation, Pa., but has lived and preached in the Indian Creek church for thirty years or more. For the last few years he was so stricken with bodily infirmities that he was unable to preach. Interment near the church he loved, and for which he labored. All the home brethren took part in the services.—Brethren Price, Shinler, Brumbaugh and Moyer. —Hannah B. Shisler, Vernfield, Pa.

Cromer, Sister Jane, died of cancer, in the bounds of the Deep Water congregation, Mo., Oct. 1, 1911, aged 61 years, 6 months and 21 days. She leaves a husband and four children. Services by Rev. Richmond, of the M. E. church. Interment in the Fenay cemetery.—Lizzie Fahnestock, Montrose, Mo.

Pasmore, Sister Sarah, nee Lierle, daughter of John Lierle and Catharine Lierle, born in North Carolina Oct. 28, 1816, died at the home of her daughter at Liberty, Ill., Oct. 1, 1911, aged 94 years, 11 months and 3 days. She was united in marriage to Nathan Pessenden Nov. 24, 1839, and soon after that she and her husband united with the Church of the Brethren. She was a faithful member for about seventy-two years. Her husband and five children preceded her in death. She was a sister of Bro. William R. Lierle (deceased), one of the pioneer preachers of Adams County, Ill. Services by Bro. Shultz. Interment in the Pleasant View cemetery.—Lillian Walker, Liberty, Ill.

Funderburg, Sister Sarah, born in Clark County, Ohio, Oct. 11, 1838, died Sept. 30, 1911, in the bounds of the Salamonie congregation, Huntington Co., Ind., aged 72 years, 11 months and 19 days. She moved with her parents to the above-named place in 1842, and was married to Isaac Brumbaugh, Feb. 18, 1858. She united with the Church of the Brethren in March, 1883, and lived a faithful and consistent member until death. She died in the hospital at Huntington, Ind., after sustaining a surgical operation. She leaves an affectionate husband, three sons and two daughters; also three brothers and one sister. Services by the writer, assisted by Bro. Aaron Mast. Text, Psa. 90: 12; Eccles. 12: 13, 14.—M. Flory, Girard, Ill.

Masterson, Simon M., son of Eld. Joseph and Fannie Masterson, of Carthage, Ohio, died in Ottawa, Kans., Oct. 11, 1911, at the home of his sister, Fannie Dickson. Bro. Masterson was taken sick about five years ago, and suffered much suffering during the last two years of his illness, which time he spent in his sister's home, who was his nurse. In all his sickness he was not inclined to complain, and patiently awaited the Lord's call. Services at the home. Text: "It is appointed once for man to die." Services by the writer, assisted by A. F. Wine.—W. R. Miller, Nappanee, Ind.

Maxey, Chas. McKinley, son of C. L. and Miriam Maxey, born Oct. 19, 1896, died of typhoid fever, Sept. 29, 1911, in the bounds of the Bonsilus congregation, Ill., aged 15 years, 11 months and 20 days. He united with the Church of the Brethren at the age of 10 years, and was a faithful and noble Christian boy. He was exceptionally bright, and was our church secretary. He endeared himself to all who became acquainted with him. Brother and Sister Maxey have lost a fine boy, and the church a good member. He leaves his mother, mother, three brothers and two sisters. Services by the writer.—Samuel Weimer, Buchanan, N. Ind.

Metton, Mrs. Catherine, nee Elkins, of Elizabeth, Ind., born Dec. 3, 1866, died Sept. 16, 1911, aged 44 years, 9 months and 4 days. For ten years she was a consistent member of the Disciple church, having as her principal place of worship the church on Portland Avenue in Louisville, Ky. Interment in the cemetery at Sinners' (union) Chapel, near Laconia, Ind. She leaves a faithful husband, two daughters and one son. Services by our pastor, Bro. J. H. Morris, assisted by Rev. McKimm, of the Disciple church. Is remembered by the song "Sweet Hour of Prayer" and "Face to Face." The first three were sung. The funeral was largely attended, and many gathered at the cemetery.—Lydia Zimmerman, Dogwood, Ind.

Mooseaw, Bro. Asanias Josephus, was born in Mount County, Va., Aug. 20, 1846, died at his home in Lordsburg, Cal., Sept. 14, 1911, aged 64 years, 1 month and 4 days. Cancer was the cause of his many years of intense suffering, which ended in death. He was married to Rebecca Bowman, of Rockingham County, Va., in 1869. To this union three daughters were born, who survive him. He moved to Topeka, Kans., in 1870, where he and his wife united with the Church of Christ there. He then moved to Versailles, Morgan Co., Mo., where his wife died in 1873. In 1876 he was married to Nancy Katharine Garber, of Augusta Co., Va. To this union were born seven sons and one daughter. One child died at the age of six years. The others, with their mother, survive him. The deceased resided in Missouri forty years. In February, 1911, he moved to Lordsburg, Cal. His long siege of intense suffering was borne very patiently. Services in the Lordsburg church, by Eld. E. Forney, assisted by Eld. J. H. Graybill, pastor in the Evergreen cemetery, at Lordsburg.—Grace Hileman Miller, Lordsburg, Cal.

Roberts, Sister Hazel Virg, of Pittsburgh, Pa., died Sept. 16, 1911, of valvular heart trouble, at the home of her sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and ...rs. John Witt, aged 21 years and 8 months. Sister Roberts came to Pittsburgh about three weeks before her death, and had been bedfast for over a week. She had been suffering more or less from heart failure for the past fifteen years. The deceased was a member of the Church of the Brethren and was always active in church and Sunday-school work. She is survived by her mother, stepfather and four sisters. Services at the Walnut Grove house by Bro. J. H. Cassady, assisted by Bro. D. U. Evans.—Ada M. Beeghly, 724 Thomas Ave., Johnstown, Pa.

Sharp, Homer, died in Wenatchee, Wash., Aug. 28, 1911, aged 13 years and 11 days. He was a faithful little Sunday-school worker, although he was in very delicate health. Services by Eld. J. J. Fihrun.—Vinnie Sellers, R. D. 4, Wenatchee, Wash.

Toney, Eld. William Smith, son of James and Sarah Toney, born in Union County, Ind., Aug. 19, 1837, died Sept. 26, 1911, July 25, 1871, he was married to Sister Sarah Hall, and united with the Church of the Brethren in 1875, and were baptized by Joel McCarthy. Bro. Toney was ordained to the ministry, in which capacity he served faithfully until death. Two children preceded him in death; also his parents, nine brothers and sisters. He leaves his wife and four children, who mourn the loss of a loving husband and father. Services at his late home near Walton, Ind., by Brethren David Dilling and the writer.—G. B. Heeter, Burnetts Creek, Ind.

Weidman, Bro. John, died at Hatfield, Pa., Sept. 14, 1911, aged 59 years, 10 months and 9 days. He was preceded in death by his first wife, and is survived by his second wife and eight children. ceived, and one has been added to our number by baptism.—Anna Myers, Centralia, Wash., Oct. 7.

North Yakima.—The District Meeting, held at this place Sept. 14 and 15, was largely attended by those who had the pleasure of listening to three sermons given by Bro. D. L. Miller on the three evenings during our meeting. Several of the ministers remained with us over Sunday, and gave us some excellent talks, from which we received much help. The church was full at all of these meetings, and we regret that we could not continue longer. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings are doing well, and have been a live-wire for the Master's work. Last Sunday, Oct. 1, our church met with the Sunnyside congregation for a Union Rally-day and Christian Workers' Meeting. We have a Ladies' Aid Society, which meets every week and is taking an active part in the work.—Ruth Replogle, 762 E. Yakima Avenue, N. Yakima, Wash., Oct. 7.

Olympia.—On Saturday evening, Sept. 30, we enjoyed a very interesting missionary meeting at the church, consisting of recitations, select readings and appropriate songs. On Sunday morning Bro. I. L. Myers, of Centralia, Wash., delivered a good discourse on "Our Continual Need of Christ." Tuesday evening, Oct. 3, we convened in the home of Elders Silvernail and Woods were present. After the necessary business of the council was disposed of, Bro. Woods announced their purpose in being with us,—that of holding an ordination. Brethren W. C. Lehman and C. A. Wagner were advanced to the eldership. On Tuesday evening, Oct. 10, we had a consecration meeting, prior to a series of meetings to begin this evening, with Bro. A. Hutchins conducting the services.—Cuddie Wagner, Olympia, Wash., Oct. 9.

Sunnyside.—We held our love feast Sept. 30, Brethren Geo. E. Wise and Jesse Hollinger from the Yakima church, were with us. Eld. Enoch Faw, of Pasco, Wash., officiated. On Sunday morning we met at 9 a. m. for our Sunday-school Convention, of the Yakima and Sunnyside congregations. At 6 P. M. a Christian Workers' meeting was rendered. Some good talks were given, both morning and evening. We were glad to have with us so many of the brethren and sisters from Yakima, and also enjoyed to have Eld. D. L. Miller with us Sept. 14 to 18. He preached three interesting and helpful and attentive congregations.—Mrs. M. E. Oswalt, Sunnyside, Wash., Oct. 4.

Tekoa.—Sister Sadie Miller was with us Oct. 7 and 8, and gave us three talks at the church; also held one meeting on Sunday at four o'clock in the street which was a large crowd and good attention. This was Sister Miller's first street meeting in America, but everybody was pleased with it. The meetings at the church were well attended and enjoyed by all. An offering of $11.30 was given for the Lord's mission. The Tekoa church is anxiously loking forward to Dec. 3, when Bro. Jesse C. Carl, of Portland, Oregon, will be with us in a series of meetings.—R. P. Hiner, R. 2, Tekoa, Wash., Oct. 11.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Bean Settlement.—Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, at 3:30 P. M., to be preceded by a series of meetings. Eld. Albert Arnold will preach for us.—Mrs. J. S. Harlingten, W. Va., Oct. 1.

Beaver Run.—Bro. J. J. Shaffer came to this church Sept. 28, and continued holding meetings until Oct. 8. These meetings were full of interest. He preached the Word with power, and his services were much appreciated. Five were baptized and one reclaimed. Two are a husband and his wife; the others are young people. Oct. 7 we had a love feast, full of interest, and a children's meeting on the 8th. Sister Lucy Mosher, of Chicago, who with her husband, went to France as a missionary in November, addressed the children's meeting.—S. G. Arnold, Burlington, W. Va., Oct. 11.

Bluefield.—Our churchhouse was dedicated Oct. 1. Eld. F. S. Miller, of Roanoke, Va., delivered the dedicatory sermon at 11 A. M., to an attentive audience of 250 people. Bro. Miller continued his meetings throughout the following week, closing Sunday night, Oct. 8, with the accession of one member, which is very encouraging, as our membership is quite small at this place.—On Monday, at 10 A. M., we applicants, with a number of others, met in our home for a short service, after which we boarded a car for Graham, Va., two miles west, where baptism was administered in the Bluestone River. The three have been faithful attendants at Sunday-school for the past two years. We greatly appreciate this beautiful churchhouse, as we now feel at home in our place of worship. Bro. Miller's earnest sermons were indeed a feast to the soul. The attendance was very good, and the attention excellent.—Irene A. Boone, Bluefield, W. Va., Oct. 9.

Pine.—Bro. Ezra Pike, of Egion, W. Va., commenced a series of meetings at the White Pine church Sept. 21, and we held our love feast on the 23rd. Three were baptized on Saturday. The meetings continued until Oct. 1. Four came out on the Lord's table, one of them was reclaimed, and two were also baptized. We had good meetings, which were enjoyed by all. Sister Lucy Furgiti and sister were with us on Saturday and the District Meeting, which was held Oct. 1, in the Knobley congregation.—Robert A. Rinker, Furgittsville, W. Va., Oct. 11.

Sandy Creek.—Sept. 30 we met in council at the Salem house. Eld. Jeremiah Thomas presided. Bro. Replogle was also with us. Considerable business came before the meeting. Brethren Joshua Knox and the writer were elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. H. S. Replogle, of Elderton, Pa., began a series of meetings here Sept. 23, which closed with the love feast Oct. 7. Eleven were born into the kingdom and two reclaimed. We had a very enjoyable feast. About 150 surrounded the Lord's tables.—Jas. M. Thomas, Clifton Mills, W. Va., Oct. 12.

THE CURSE OF DRINK

BY ELTON R. SHAW

If you want to see the liquor traffic in its true light, as portrayed in story, incidents, illustrations, pointed paragraphs, poetry and song by more than seventy men and women in various walks and professions in life, read this book. It will make clear to you, as no other book yet written or compiled could do, the economic, political and social ills growing out of the sale and use of intoxicants. It contains many true stories of drink's awful tragedies and gives in brief and pointed paragraphs the pithy utterances of many men and women who have put their lives into the struggle for the overthrow of a giant wrong. The matter in the book is conveniently classified, making it easy to refer to any phase of the subject desired. It is a book that will appeal to all classes of people. A copy of it should find a place in every home.

The size of the book is 6-1/2x8-1/4 inches. It contains 544 pages besides the halftone illustrations and is printed on good paper, in clear type.

Price per copy, cloth, $1.75; half morocco, $2.50.

AROUND THE WORLD

A Notable Gathering.

At the recent International Prohibition Conference held at The Hague, Holland, thirty-nine countries were represented. Most encouraging were the reports made of the growth of temperance sentiment, and the enactment of prohibition legislation. The Conference unanimously agreed on a memorial, addressed to all governments, asking suppression of the liquor traffic and also proposing an international convention, by which further plans to that end are to be perfected. The world-wide progress of the temperance cause is a matter of profound gratification. If the next several decades show the same degree of advancement as has been manifest during the past several years, there will be a most remarkable and substantial gain for temperance everywhere.

Will People Ever Learn?

The Federal Court at Sioux City, Iowa, has just rendered a decision in the famous physical damage suit against the Modern Woodmen of America lodge, after the case had gone from court to court since 1908. The plaintiff, Julius Deel, claimed to have sustained a severe sprain of the spine and many painful cuts, bruises and lacerations, while being initiated into the order, above referred to, at Spirit Lake, Iowa. By the final verdict of Judge Henry T. Reed, the lodge will have to pay $1,000 for the injuries inflicted. This, while not in any way compensating for the actual losses sustained by Mr. Deel, reveals at least one phase of lodge activity, and how the court regards it. But why should courts of last sense and fair knowledge uphold and foster such organizations?

Cuban Lotteries be Ruled Out.

In the interest of morality and the general welfare of the people, the Cuban Government is about to discontinue the national lottery schemes, carried on for some time under the special sanction of the authorities. It would have been far better for the young island republic if that species of gambling had never been started. While $3,300,000 has been added to Cuba's revenues, it has been wrung from the people at the expense of demoralization and misery. No nation can prosper by draining the very life blood of her citizens, and corrupting their moral integrity. Sad to say, there are still some persons in our own country who proudly boast of the great revenues derived by our Government from the manufacture and sale of intoxicants, losing sight of the fact that it is but a sowing that is sure to bring a harvest of woe.

Awakening Sentiment for Right.

While the Brethren Have shown commendable zeal in petitioning for an early ratification of the pending peace treaties with England and France, it is still more encouraging to note that other bodies are also falling into line and are making themselves felt more emphatically. For the first time in its history, the Bible Conference that annually meets at Winona Lake, Ind., and which is attended by over 6,000 church people, gave an entire day to the subject of peace and arbitration, and the addresses by noted peace advocates will doubtless have a far-reaching effect. The Society of Friends is also taking a determined stand for peace, as was shown at several of their recent yearly meetings, in various parts of the country. Upon the whole, there is a greater interest shown in peace promulgation than ever before. We may well "thank God and take courage,"—not forgetting to continue our most vigilant efforts.

Will History Repeat Itself?

That the coal-fields of Great Britain will be exhausted in not more than one hundred and seventy-five years, was the authoritative statement of Sir William Ramsay in a recent address before the British Association, and upon this fact he bases his forecast of "national decay and misery for the people of the British Isles." At present Britannia still "rules the waves." As the Phenicians, the Venetians, and the Flemish, were once the great trading nations of their age, so the world's traffic is now being swayed by Great Britain, whose merchant fleet alone is larger than all others combined. An interesting question is opened by the British scientist, in suggesting that, with a failing coal supply, there will be a consequent decay of the greatest realm that ever existed, and that the scepter of the seas,—for years so proudly wielded by Great Britain,—may have to be transferred to some other power. Any one who has studied the successive rise and fall of earth's greatest nations, can not help but be impressed by the mutability of all things terrestrial. Only the Ruler of the Universe knows what the future may hold in store for the world's nations. It is reassuring to every devout Christian, however, that amid the ascendencies and decays of empires, he can be sure of his final and everlasting home, "a building of God, not made with hands, eternal in the heavens."

Turkey's Debt to American Missions.

In studying the educational achievements of the Ottoman Empire, the leading factor is found in the never-failing efforts of the American missionaries. They are educating representatives of all the various races composing the motley Turkish Empire. Every community is thus influenced to some extent, for no student leaves an American Mission school without bearing an impress of real progress, and this, in turn, is bound to affect the family and the neighborhood, and all with whom he may happen to come in contact. This influence has been as leaven,—quietly working out a great change for the better. To the credit of the missionaries be it said that they have never worked against the existing Government. They have inculcated principles of righteousness, and it has not been without effect. The several Christian hospitals,—the only ones in the Turkish dominions,—are lights in a dark place.

Christianity versus Race Prejudices.

More and more, as mankind learns the better and higher truths of the Sacred Record, do race prejudices weaken and finally disappear. That happy time of complete harmony has not yet come, but we can truly rejoice that substantial progress is being made. At latest reports the conditions in Belgium's Congo dependency have so far improved that former scenes of torture and mutilation of the unhappy natives are tolerated no longer. It is to be regretted, however, that the strong nations of Europe are still struggling over a proper division of the available coast country of Africa, in order that they may enrich themselves by the natural products, and exploit the poor blacks, who, by their would-be lords and masters, are supposed to have no rights which the white man is bound to respect. If God "hath made of one blood all the nations of earth," why should there be any race prejudice, and why the unwillingness to accord to any the fairness of "Golden Rule" principles?

The Handwriting on the Wall.

Whatever may be the varying opinions of the general public regarding the granting of the ballot to the gentler sex, there is no hesitancy on the part of the liquor interests to define their position on the matter. Some of the leading spirits of the saloon element have been anxiously peering into the future, and in the light of the recent election in California they see a message of unusual significance. It does not require a Daniel, either, to render a trustworthy interpretation. They are well aware that California's decision, in granting franchise privileges to women, bids fair to be followed by similar action in other States that have not already done so, and the eventual result is evident to all. For years woman has suffered because of the bitter woe and ignominy that the liquor traffic has imposed upon her. We may rest assured that wherever an opportunity may be given to woman to break the shackles that have so long and unjustly fettered her, she will do so. There is not the least doubt of her determination to be active in every good work.

The Japanese Farmer.

The greatest strength of any nation is doubtless found in its agricultural resources, and while the people of the United States are peculiarly blessed in this respect, one is made to wonder how the Japanese farmer, in spite of most untoward circumstances, manages to do as well as he does. His acreage is small indeed, but from the few acres at his command he succeeds in extracting a greater amount of produce than any other farmer in the world. True, his income is only small, but his wants are few, and he would be well satisfied with his lot, were he well rid of the oppresive money-lender who for long years has managed to retain his grip on the little holdings. This constantly increasing and intolerable burden is getting to be the gravest economic problem facing the Japanese Government. It can not afford to have the farmers dispossessed of their land, and a plan is now being developed by which the Government will assume responsibility for the most serious cases, stop the usurious interest, and arrange for easy payments of the indebtedness. In this commendable provision for its people, Japan is setting a noble example for the larger and more enlightened nations of the world,—a provision of practical benevolence that others might well imitate.

The Unknown Treasure.

The underground vaults of the Cathedral at Oporto were recently searched by agents of the Portuguese Government, with a view of making a correct inventory of all church property. Unexpectedly they stumbled upon a great amount of treasure, the property of ancient friars, most of which even the church authorities had lost sight of. The chests discovered are filled with gold ingots and plates, gold ornaments studded with costly rubies, and altar furniture of pure gold,—all dating back to the time when Portugal was a rich, colonial power, and when its clergy was living at ease,—"rich and increased in goods." The hidden treasure will be taken charge of by the Government and devoted to charitable and educational purposes. Great and abounding treasures, amounting to large sums in the aggregate, are at times hoarded by the Lord's people of today, forgetful of the fact that they are but stewards of the Master's bounty. What will be their answer in the final day of reckoning?

Co-partnership as a Labor Trouble Solution.

British economists, after exhaustive investigations of the labor situation, are finding themselves confronted by an industrial system which divides those engaged in the production of wealth into two armies, "usually in a state of armed neutrality" toward each other. Such a deplorable relation is condemned as unworthy of the enlightenment and humanity of the age. Co-partnership,—the profit-sharing principle,—is declared to be applicable in some form to nearly every industry in which labor is employed. By the proposed system the worker is to receive, in addition to the standard wages of the trade, a share in the profit of the business or economy of production, eventually giving him the rights and responsibilities of a shareholder. Men so employed, it is readily seen, cease to be mere wage earners and become vitally concerned in the success of the business. It is obvious to all that such a plan would conclusively and forever settle the every-day labor troubles, because it is based on the never-failing principles of equity enjoined by the great Master Teacher.

Invasion of Oriental Religions.

While American churches are spending multiplied millions in the evangelization of heathen lands, one would hardly expect that emissaries from the lands beyond the sea should invade our shores for the express purpose of exploiting their various fallacious systems of religion. And yet, such is the case. Ever since the so-called "Parliament of Religions," at the World's Fair in Chicago, the various Oriental cults have been strengthened in the idea that their systems of religion are fully equal to the Christian religion, and it is said that then and there they determined to carry an aggressive propaganda of their cults into the western lands. Already the tinkling bell may be heard from Buddhist and Brahman temples in various cities, and Vedanta societies are being organized in even the smaller towns. We are told that "high society women," especially, are giving heed to the seductive teachings of Oriental mysticisms. Paul's warning to Timothy as to false teachers who would "take captive silly women," would seem to be quite applicable to these latter days, when Oriental teachers are seemingly "subverting the faith of many."

Flooding Africa's Great Desert.

At present the most intense interest prevails in the city of Paris, by reason of the daring proposal of Prof. Etchegoyen, a distinguished scientist, who declares that France should lose no time in converting the Desert of Sahara into an inland sea. He calls attention to the fact that about a quarter of the entire desert is well below sea level, and that a fifty-mile canal to the north coast of Africa, would afford a ready means of creating an inland sea about the size of the Mediterranean. While the promotor of the enterprise points out that the salutary results, thereby achieved, would be far-reaching. All the arid regions, now surrounding the desert, and even those parts of the Sahara itself, which are above the level of the sea, would become fertile as a result. Everywhere the present sterility is caused solely by a lack of needed moisture. Important commercial advantages, afforded by the ready access of steamers from all parts of the globe, would also be gained. It is significant that the genius of the same nation that has already given to commerce the great Suez Canal, and later on planned the Panama Canal, should now come forward with a conception so stupendous and momentous as virtually to change the map of the African continent, and add substantially to the world's resources. Such an achievement, if carried out as planned, will be another evidence of man's God-given power.

A Promise.

BY D. F. M. SOURS.

The tranquil west, in fleece and gold
And purple, joy and fire,
Thrilled my glad heart, like echoes far
Of the celestial choir.
I had no care, I had no pang
For my tomorrow's food,
For all the hues of eventide
Seemed singing, "God is good!"

Toil all the day had been my lot,
And now, when evening fell,
Tired body, but reposeful heart,
The story full would tell.
The while I thrilled beneath the psalm
The glad west sang to me,
For, sure, from all the fear of want
My happy heart was free.

But why? I hadn't anything
Of wealth or earthly store:
I had a little paper check
I earned the day before—
A bit of paper,—was that all?
And what was that to me,
That from the sense of want and care
My glad heart should be free?

Ah! well I know the sturdy name
Sure written on the same;
And well I know the bank account
Behind that sturdy name.
And when that paper goes to bank—
The only claim of mine—
Before my happy eyes of faith
The yellow gold will shine.

Then be it so. God's promise stands
That I have been redeemed!
I take the Master at his word,
And as the glory streamed
Adown the ages full of joy—
I claim—I claim my Lord,
I bow in homage at his feet—
And take him at his word.

So be it then. The promise says
That all my need shall be Supplied by his exhaustless store
If I his child will be.
I take it. Ah! the riches mine!—
My check—face-value true—
I have no care; my Father owns
The house of vaulted blue.

What the Word Says.

BY EDWARD FRANTZ.

No. 1.—You Must Do It Yourself (Philpp. 2: 12, 13).

"So then, my beloved, even as ye have always obeyed, not as in my presence only, but now much more in my absence, work out your own salvation with fear and trembling; for it is God who worketh in you both to will and to work, for his good pleasure."

THE desire to get what the Word says on the subject, exactly what the Word says, when a question of Scripture teaching is involved, is a very worthy one. And so we are naturally a little shy of lengthy explanations and learned interpretations. Why not take it just as it reads? Very good. But how does it read?

Pronounce the words of the text distinctly and in proper order, and then you will have it? Not always. "Why are you scratching your head?" said the teacher. "Because nobody else knows where it itches," said the boy. Did the boy answer the teacher's question? He answered a question the teacher might have asked in exactly the same words, but not the question she really did ask. It was a case of mistaken emphasis. For the same words, you see, may be employed to say quite different things.

Take the familiar words of Paul, "Work out your own salvation," quoted above. Place the emphasis on the first word, and it is easy to find in this text a kind of antidote to other texts of Paul which seem to disparage work in connection with salvation. You know, faith and grace are mighty words in Paul's soteriology. "Not of works," he even says. Now, some of us never were very fond of these faith and grace texts anyway, so we turn with eagerness to a text like this to show that, after all, Paul teaches that it is work that brings salvation.

What a pity it is that our anxiety for the truth should lead us thus to misrepresent the great apostle. —the more so since this anxiety is so needless, for Paul has plenty to say about the necessity of work of good deeds, in connection with salvation and the Christian life. He says much more, in fact, than about faith and grace. But this is not what he says in the text we are considering. To put the stress upon the word "work" here, is to do Paul wrong.

Some would avoid the mistake by transferring the emphasis to the next word "out." Work your salvation out instead of trying to working it in. You can not get salvation in by working it in, but when you do once have it in, by the gospel method, you can, and should, work it out. You should give expression to it in deeds of righteousness and love.

Beautiful thought, isn't it? And quite true to the teaching of the Apostle Paul elsewhere. But this is not what he says in these words. He is not discussing the relation between salvation and good works. He is dealing with a different subject.

Perhaps Paul says, "Work out your own salvation," instead of working out the salvation of somebody else. Maybe the Philippians were too much concerned about the salvation of others and Paul is urging them to look out for themselves. Such an exhortation from the apostle would surprise us a little, and yet it is true that one who would work effectually for the salvation of others must first be saved himself, so that the idea is not necessarily absurd, or to be regarded as entirely out of the possibilities. But is this what Paul says here? O no, not at all. He is thinking of something else.

Then it must be that "salvation" is the word to receive the stress. "Work out you own salvation," instead of working out your financial fortune, possibly, —a call to make spiritual, rather than material, well-being the chief concern and object of endeavor.

Another beautiful and exceedingly practical lesson, —thoroughly in harmony with the teaching of Paul and of Scripture generally. The only objection to it, in the present instance, is that, in the light of our context, it is impossible to think that this was in the apostle's mind when he used these words. It is not what Paul says here, and we are seeking what the Word says, you know,—just what the Word says.

But we have exhausted the possibilities, have we not? Let us try again.

Notice that the first word, "work," is an imperative and that, as is usually done, the subject is omitted. It is to this omitted "you" that the emphasis properly belongs. But as we can not emphasize a word that is not pronounced at all, the deficiency is remedied by the use of the word "own." That is, the "own" serves the purpose of emphasizing the omitted subject, "You." So we may properly read, "Work out your own salvation," if we are careful to remember that the thought stands in contrast, not with working out the salvation of somebody else, but with having somebody else to work out your salvation for you.

Imagine a son who has long depended upon his father for his support, now having attained his majority, and ready to go out into the world to battle for himself. "Now make your own living," the father says, not meaning, of course, that the son must make his own living instead of making a living for others, but that he must make his own living instead of depending on his father to make it for him.

So here Paul tells the Philippians to work out their own salvation and not to depend upon him. He had been much with the Philippians in former years and, no doubt, they had learned to lean heavily upon him. Now he was confined at Rome. They could not have his inspiring personal leadership. They must work out their own salvation. That this is the apostle's thought, is clearly shown by the reference to his absence, in the words which immediately precede.

And this task they can take up with confidence, even though "with fear and trembling," not the disheartening fear of dread and terror, but the stimulating fear of careful concern; with confidence, "for it is God who worketh in you." After all, the work which the Philippians had to do was not their own. It was God who would work through them if they would but respond to the Divine initiative.

What a message the Word has for us here, in these great words of the great apostle! Strong leaders may help us much, at certain times and within certain limits, but in the final analysis, every man is the architect of his own spiritual fortune. Do not depend upon somebody else. Do it yourself. You must work out your own salvation. But what of that, when the infinite resources of the infinite God are at your call? It is God who worketh in you, if you let him.

Yes, brother, you do well to ask what the Word says,—just what the Word says.

Despising the Church.

BY EZRA FLORY.

"Despise ye the church of God" (1 Cor. 11: 22)?

THIS is one of the great questions still. The church is the body of Christ and the church life is his life. To despise the church is to despise Christ, and yet there may still be many who despise her without realizing their position.

The church is an untold blessing to the world. It calls men to a higher and nobler life and strengthens them for time and for eternity. The church is a living testimony to the existence of Christ. We do not find the church in the Old Testament. It could not have come from the Jews themselves. The first opposition to the church was from the Jews,—Judaism. There is nothing in the history of the world that would lead us to believe any such thing as the church. The highest sentiment of civilization was in Athens. Here, when Paul preached his sermon at Mars' Hill, and as he spoke of the resurrection and the foundation principles of the church, they laughed at him. Neither was the church the result of the Romans, for they who lived in that day tried hard to put it out of existence. There is but one answer as to the origin of the church. It is the body of Christ. It was chosen in him before the foundation of the world.

For the church martyrs gladly gave up their lives. Paul, one of the best born men of his day, gave up all, became poor, worked with his own hands for a living, and endured most bitter persecution at the same time. Listen to the account in 2 Cor. 11: 24-28, "Of the Jews five times received I forty stripes save one. Thrice was I beaten with rods, once was I stoned, thrice I suffered shipwreck (and we know of another time, Acts 27), a night and a day have I been in the deep; in journeyings often, in perils of rivers, in perils of robbers, in perils from my countrymen, in perils from the Gentiles, in perils in the city, in perils in the wilderness, in perils in the sea, in perils among false brethren; in labor and in travail, in watchings often, in hunger and thirst, in fastings often, in cold and nakedness. Besides those things that are without, there is that which presseth upon me daily, anxiety for all the churches." He did all this because he had seen Christ and had become part of that body of which Christ is the head and for which Christ died (Eph. 5: 25).

Because of what the church has done and is doing, we should not despise it. No amount of wickedness can ever overcome it, and no amount of darkness can ever overshadow it. It is founded upon a rock and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The history of the Dark Ages alone ought to settle this point. Look at the growth of the church! It began with One. Soon there were twelve more, then seventy. Later we read of one hundred and twenty, then three thousand, then five thousand. By the third century it was literally upon the throne.

But there are still other ways in which men may despise the church of Christ than by open opposition and rebellion.

First,—one may put disrespect upon a character without saying a single word. The shrug of the shoulders, the wink of the eye, the assenting smile, often speak volumes,—far more than words or pen.

Second,—when the lives of professors do not, in every way, illustrate and enforce the truth of God (John 16: 8). Here is a stranger who asks for credit at a store and gets it because the merchant in that place has never been deceived by the members living there, but always found them truthful. Again; the church is injured when men can point out flaws that are not imaginary ones. If we fail to do the work of Christ—love, sympathy, prayers, patience,—we injure the church in the estimation of the world, for we have a mission here.

When there is lack of decorum or respect for the house of worship, when there is faction, or envy, or strife, there is certain injury to the church. Before we can go to the prisoner, the sick, the thirsty, the naked (Matt. 25:35), we must have the Spirit of Christ, and if we do not go, we injure the church for which he died.

May we have the spirit of those who were all things to all men, that they might by all means lead them to Christ. If we fail in this spirit we injure the church in the estimation of the world.

District Meeting of Southern Illinois.

BY I. D. HECKMAN.

THE District Meeting of Southern Illinois was held in the Pleasant Hill congregation, Girard, Ill.

The different churches were well represented. A central location in the District and favorable weather added largely to the attendance.

The Girard Brethren were well prepared to care for all, and every one was accorded a splendid welcome. The privilege of accepting a nominal price for meals was made use of for the first time in our District, and seemed to work satisfactorily.

The first services were begun on Tuesday. The Elders' Meeting was in session all day. In the afternoon Bro. Chas. Walters preached a very acceptable sermon. The Missionary Meeting followed in the evening. Addresses were made by the workers in the field,—Brethren J. W. Harshbarger, M. L. Hahn, Urias Blough, Otis Stutsman and J. W. Lear. The reports of work done, the needs of the present, and the outlook for the future, made an interesting meeting. An offering of $100 was given for the work.

The following morning District Meeting organized by electing Eld. J. W. Lear, Moderator; Eld D. J. Blickenstaff, Reading Clerk; I. D. Heckman, Secretary.

On roll call, forty-seven delegates responded. Three churches were not represented. The delegate body seemed to understand their duty, as displayed by the intelligent handling of the work before them. It was noticeable that a majority of them were of the laity. Twenty-six were laymembers, seven of them sisters. Of the remainder twelve were elders; eight second degree ministers; one, a first degree minister.

Reports were given by the Mission Board, District Trustees, Treasurer, Sunday-school Secretary and the following committees: Ministerial Distribution, Bible Institute, Child Rescue, and Temperance. Vacancies were filled on the different committees as follows: G. W. Sensenbaugh, Mission Board; S. S. Brubaker, District Trustee; I. D. Heckman, Ministerial Distribution; Chas. Gibson, Temperance; E. H. Brubaker, Bible Institute; E. J. Stauffer, District Treasurer.

A protest was sent to the President of the United States for the attitude of the high officials of our government toward the Brewers' Congress in Chicago, Oct. 12-22. Upon recommendation of Mission Board it was decided to raise $2,500 for missionary purposes for the ensuing year. An action favoring holding Annual Meeting at Winona Lake, Ind., whenever held in central territory, was passed. A change was made in the time of holding District Meeting. Hereafter it will convene the last Wednesday of August in each year.

The needs of Bethany Bible School were presented, and a committee appointed to solicit our District, to help our dear brethren there in advancing the Lord's work. Brethren J. H. Brubaker, D. J. Blickenstaff and Otis Stutsman were chosen. One church asked to be disorganized and one paper, relating to the care of dependent members, was passed. No papers are sent to Annual Conference.

Elder J. W. Lear will represent this District on Standing Committee, with Eld. D. J. Blickenstaff as alternate. Committee on Credentials for next year are Brethren Abraham Lind, E. H. Brubaker and Harry Leedy. Eld. J. E. Miller, of Northern Illinois, was present and assisted in the meeting.

Thus a very pleasant and profitable day was passed. The evening service was given to the Ministerial Meeting. The presence of the Holy Spirit was manifest, and all felt that the work of the Lord was strengthened. Next year we meet with the Oakley church, near Cerro Gordo, the last week in August.

Cerro Gordo, Ill.

One in Christ.

BY S. N. M'CANN.

"Holy Father, keep them in thy name which thou hast given me, that they may be one, even as we are" (John 17: 11).

THE ground of union is not based upon what human agent brought the light to the sinner, and started him upon the way of life but upon the acceptance of the light through the agency of the Holy Spirit acting with the human instrument. Neither is the ground of union based upon the complete knowledge and assimilation of all the truth, but upon faith in Christ, and a willingness to follow the truth as fast as the light comes, "For the words which thou gavest unto me I have given unto them; and they received them, and know of a truth that I came forth from thee and they believed that thou didst send me" (John 17: 8). "I have given them thy word; and the world hated them, because they were not of the world, even as I am not of the world" (John 17: 14). "If any man willeth to do his will, he shall know of the teaching, whether it is of God, or whether I speak from myself. He that speaketh from himself seeketh his own glory; but he that seeketh the glory of him that sent him, the same is true and no unrighteousness is in him" (John 7: 17-18).

The reception of the truth, or at least to will, to determine, to receive it, is the ground upon which union with Christ and his people is based. This is the ground that separates from the world, and unites the believer in fellowship with Jesus. The believer may not see the whole truth but he sees Jesus as Lord and Master, believes him, wills to obey him as fast as the truth is clear, and opportunity can be made to practice the growing truth.

Every such believer, who follows Christ in baptism, according to Mark 16: 16, Matt. 28: 19-20, and Acts 2: 38-42, receives the promise of the gift of the Holy Spirit and comes into fellowship with Christ, and should not be refused fellowship with God's people because the human instrument that led him to the light happens not to follow all the truth. Jesus did not allow his disciples to manifest a spirit like this when he was with them (Luke 9: 49-50). If no one can have fellowship with Jesus and with God's people until he receives all the light, or until he receives it by a specific, ordained line of the ministry, then the essential to Christian fellowship is not found in the relation sustained by the penitent, believing soul, moved by the Holy Spirit to a full reception of Christ in baptism. The essential does not lie in the specific human instrument but in any human agency that God may see fit to use, to lead a soul to acceptance and fellowship with him. The ground of acceptance is belief in Jesus and a full surrender to God in baptism according to the Word. This is the essential ground of union, of federation for believers; it is the thing for which Jesus prayed. If we can not receive into fellowship a soul who believes in Jesus, who has fully surrendered to Christ in gospel baptism, and is anxious for a closer walk as the light is revealed, we are apt to kill the Spirit by our tithe of mint and rue, and omit weightier matters of gospel fellowship.

To receive an individual into church fellowship who has complied with the essential elements of pardon,—namely faith, repentance and gospel baptism,—is not to sanction all that the human instrument, or minister, who baptizes him, may teach or practice. When that minister puts himself in the same relation to the truth as the one whom he has been instrumental in leading to the truth, then we can have union with him also, and not before. When the gospel ground of union has been complied with, we have no right to forbid union. This is what Jesus prayed for and what we should pray and labor for. To refuse to receive into fellowship when the essential ground of union is complied with, is not good, and cannot forward the highest interest of Christ's kingdom. Any human instrument, used of God in baptizing a penitent, submissive believer according to the Word, is baptizing him into Christ (Gal. 3: 27). If the individual is born of the water and of the Spirit, a babe in Christ, he will grow, and if in the growth new light leads him to seek church affiliation with us, shall we say "No"? The individual has been led by the Spirit into Christ and the human agent, used of God to baptize him, has not performed a ceremony for us but for Christ. If we accept the individual who has complied with gospel conditions of pardon, we do not thereby accept the human agent who led him to Christ. The individual should receive fellowship, but the agent should not, and can not, until he complies with the Gospel.

If essential conditions to pardon and fellowship would hinge on the mere ceremony of form in baptism, then all who complied with the form would, of necessity, be entitled to membership with all its privileges. The essential condition to gospel baptism and pardon is a penitent, believing, surrendered heart and will. When such ask for fellowship, they should receive a welcome. To receive a person who has been baptized into Christ by another minister, does not imply, logically or in any other way, that we must receive his ministration in the Church of the Brethren, any more than the same is implied when we use the translation of the Bible, that other ministers have made, or when we use a good book that other ministers have written. Let us be consistent!

Bridgewater, Va.

District and Ministerial Meetings of Southern Iowa.

BY J. H. BROWER.

WEDNESDAY, Oct. 4, was a most beautiful day, with a cloudless sky, and a cool, bracing wind from the Northwest. About sixty members, from the sister churches, by rail and team, were ushered into the commodious homes of the brethren and sisters of the English River congregation, awaiting the communion services of the evening. Among the number was Bro. I. B. Trout, of Lanark, Ill. About two hundred and thirty-five members surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. I. B. Trout officiated.

Eight o'clock, the next day, was set for the opening of the Sunday-school Meeting, which proved to be none too early, as there were fully two hundred present at the organization of the meeting. Later in the day there were over three hundred on the ground. Some came with great, open hearts, hungering for the Bread of Life that would fall within their reach. Others came with a full measure, heaped up, pressed down, and running over, ready to feed and inspire greater activities in the various departments of the Master's vineyard.

As soon as the discussions opened, a conclusion was readily reached by all that the Sunday-school is a powerful instrument to the salvation of the souls of our boys and girls. This being the case, a keen feeling was inspired that, as the men and women of the future church, the spirituality of the church will be no higher than we implant into the children now.

Many other fields were surveyed,—such as the relations existing between the teacher, the pupil, and the lesson, the value of illustrations, and the necessity of efficient officers and teachers.

At one o'clock in the afternoon the organization of the Ministerial Meeting was effected, after which such problems as the following were considered: "The Object of a Sermon," "The Relation Existing Between the Preacher and the Audience," "The Sisters' Mission in the Church," "Why Are so Many of the Brethren's Children Lost to the Church?"

At six P. M. several Christian Workers' topics were profitably discussed. In all of these meetings Brethren Moses Deardorff and I. B. Trout rendered valuable assistance.

In the evening Bro. I. B. Trout preached an inspiring missionary sermon, after which an offering of nearly one thousand dollars in pledges and cash was taken, to be used in the mission field of the District. Two young men volunteered to dedicate their lives on the altar of sacrifice.

The business session came off Friday. The organization consisted of Bro. H. C. N. Coffman, Moderator; Sister Cora Brower, Reading Clerk; Bro. J. H. Brower, Writing Clerk. The business of the day was then pushed forward in full force. Steps were taken to start a Child Rescue and Home-finding Society. The regular annual business was next adjusted, and put on a new footing, more fully to carry out the work of the coming year.

The meeting was then closed by devotional exercises, after which the parting hand was given, and many turned their faces homeward, feeling that another meeting of Southern Iowa was ready to go into the annals of history. Many were the seeds sown that, at some future time, shall burst forth into new realities. Many were the sweet fellowships enjoyed, and when the parting time came, many were loath to leave the place.

District Meeting of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado.

BY BYRON TALHELM.

On Thursday morning, Oct. 5, the members from various parts of the District of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado assembled in the Belleville church for the Ministerial Meeting. The officers of the meeting were Eld. T. E. George, Moderator; Bro. O. H. Feiler, Reading Clerk; the writer, Writing Clerk. A number of live topics were discussed with enthusiasm. Among others were, "The Minister's Conduct in the Pulpit," "The Unheeded Calls for Evangelists," "Personal Work in Revivals." The topic on "Tobacco" brought out some of the strongest arguments against the use of the weed that we ever heard in a public speech. In the evening Bro. A. C. Daggett delivered a sermon on the subject, "Our Best for God."

Friday morning, at eight o'clock, twenty-one delegates from fourteen churches met for the work of the District Conference. Eld. D. A. Crist was elected Moderator, and Bro. O. H. Feiler, Reading Clerk,—the Writing Clerk holding over. Considerable business was transacted. The work among the colored people in Denver received due attention. Property has been purchased for the "Sheridan Home," as it is called, near the city. When paid for, the Home will be self-supporting. The outlook is very hopeful. The leading feature of the work is the religious and industrial training.

One of their ministers, Bro. C. C. Spencer, was present, and created much interest and sympathy for the work. If all could only know of the great sacrifice and consecration of these people, our hearts and purses would surely open to them. In addition to the work among the colored people, over $2,000 was spent in District Mission work. Bro. T. P. Oxley, of Quinter, was elected Missionary Educational Secretary.

In the evening a missionary program was rendered, after which Bro. Galen B. Royer gave an excellent address on China and India. An offering of $65 was taken.

On Saturday the Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meetings were held. Both of these meetings were alive with interest and enthusiasm. Bro. Spencer preached in the evening.

Sunday morning dawned clear and bright. The children were not forgotten. Instead of the regular Sunday-school a number of good talks were given, after which Bro. E. M. Studebaker, of McPherson, delivered a splendid sermon from Rom. 10: 14. Bro. O. H. Feiler preached in the afternoon, and Bro. D. A. Crist in the evening. Three came out on the Lord's side at the evening service.

Much credit for the success of these meetings is due Eld. E. D. Steward, the faithful shepherd of the Belleville church, with a membership of eighty workers. The management was complete in every detail. Everybody felt welcome and enjoyed the services. There was not a ripple of any kind to mar our pleasure during the entire time. Thus closed one of the most spiritual and uplifting District Meetings we ever attended.

Climbing a Steep Grade.

BY JAMES M. NEFF.

When we came to Springville, nearly a year ago, our nearest railroad point was Porterville, eighteen miles below. Then our products, such as wood, posts, apples, etc., had to be taken down by wagon, and the hogs and cattle were driven down afoot, while we were dependent upon the teams and wagons to bring up all our imported supplies. It usually meant at least a two-days' trip, the teamster, as a rule, spending one night on the ground or on the hay in the wagon yard, and eating several meals along the road.

But all this has now been changed. Construction of a railroad has been completed to Springville and it now does much of the work formerly done by wagon. This change, however, has by no means eliminated the teamster; it has simply changed his road. Now that the railroad has facilitated the matter of getting to market the products of this hill and mountain country, the wagons are going farther back, bringing down these products and delivering them to the railroad here for shipment to the various markets of the valley.

And now, that I have joined the band of teamsters, I recently made a trip in which I think I passed over some of the steepest roads I ever saw covered by a team and wagon. For miles there is not a level spot in the road long enough for a wagon to stand on. Much of the road was so steep that a good team can not draw an empty wagon more than a few paces at a time without stopping to rest. Every time these stops are made the wagon must be held by the brake or "chock block." I thought the old donkey had developed my patience to about where I wanted it. When he gets on one of these very steep places he reduces his pace to a point where you can just see or feel that he is moving, but he can keep it up, and if you tell him to, he will, and I can stand that better than standing still, pitying the panting horses and longing to be at the top of the mountain.

It took a full day to reach my destination. When I got out of the wagon and moved about, I found my breath coming with increased difficulty in the light air of that high altitude. Then, too, that mountain air was so cold and chill that I was unable to keep comfortable even in my overcoat. I was obliged to move slowly, but it was not long till I had the team unhitched and made comfortable, when I hurriedly munched a cold supper, unfolded my bed, spread it in the bottom of the wagon and sought protection from the chill air by going to bed. As I lay looking up at the stars I saw there increased reason for thankfulness that I was yet alive.

I had gone up for a load of clapboards, split shingles, you know, that are rived out of the giant pines of the mountains. Here they are called "shakes," and many of them are used in the valley below for roofing pump houses and other outbuildings.

The next morning,—the team fed and breakfast over,—by the assistance of willing helpers the load was soon on, and I was ready to start down the mountain. It only takes about half as long to come down as to go up, but in order to avoid serious accident it is important to see that everything about the brake, the wagon and the harness is secure; and then, as additional precaution, most teamsters chop down a tree, chain it to the rear of the wagon and drag it behind, the size of the tree varying with the size of the load to be taken down.

Coming down about a mile, I reached the steepest part of the road and stopped to get my tree. A small oak stood close by the road. I had a suspicion that it was rather light for my purpose, but to fell a larger one and get it to the wagon seemed beyond my strength, so I decided to take the oak. I had hit a few strokes and then hung over my ax handle, panting for breath with which to make another stroke. Just then a cattle man, accompanied by his three sons, rode up. They had started out to round up their cattle and bring them out of the mountains before the snows arrive. He knew me, and took in the situation at once.

"Good morning, Mr. Neff. Still on the road, are you?"

"O yes."

"Getting you a tree, are you?"

"Yes, started to."

"That's too small to do much good, ain't it?"

"Perhaps a larger one would be better."

With that he turned in his saddle and glanced up the mountain to some trees that were so far above the road that it would have been no small task for me to as much as climb to them.

"Up there," said he, "are some that will do pretty well. Better have two. Boys, jump down and cut those trees for Mr. Neff."

The young men seemed glad to do it, and the ease and speed with which they cut down those trees, rolled them down into the road and chained them to my wagon made them appear like young giants in my eyes. I thanked them heartily and we parted. I did not say all I felt, for the very good reason that such acts of kindness produce feelings too deep for language to express.

I plan on making a similar trip in a few days. And you wonder, perhaps, how I'll get my tree. I don't know. In fact there are a good many things I don't know.

But how came I to be a teamster? Well, it was this way. Wife and I came into these hills last fall in the hope of finding such a climate as we wanted, and of being able at least to make a living. To this latter end we have both worked beyond our strength, but with meagre strength and little experience and everything new and unimproved we have utterly failed, and have been growing poorer all the time. My strength is not sufficient any more to follow the plow, so I have leased my little patch of grain land to a neighbor. A teamster in these mountains has a rough, hard life, but I can sit on the wagon and hold the reins when I can't do much else, and if the Lord will continue to send an angel now and then, to help me over the hard places, I think I'll get on pretty well.

Sometimes I think of the four little girls we have to rear and educate and then of the prospect of having nothing visible to depend upon with which to accomplish all this except the labor of our own weak hands, and from this viewpoint it looks as if there is another very real sense in which I am climbing a steep grade.

But am I presuming that I am the only one who has troubles? No. Thousands of you, perhaps, have greater ones, and fewer things to be thankful for. And to tell you these things for the mere purpose of bothering you with my troubles would be cruel and selfish. I have something else to tell you. Listen! I have been on steep grades before. It isn't the first time that I needed a tree that I couldn't cut. I have been in all sorts of troubles, "and out of them all the Lord hath delivered me." Out of the present situation I do not just now see the way, but I am nevertheless happy in the belief that there is a way. The Lord has helped me out of my troubles; he will help you out of yours. It would be showing the worst ingratitude to forget the past and worry about the present. Let us look hopefully to the future!

To Pastors and Bishops That Have No Charges.

BY JOHN S. CLARK.

"The harvest truly is great but the laborers are few. Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest that he would send forth laborers into his harvest" (Luke 10: 2).

I have four places in mind just now, to which, I am praying the Lord of the harvest to send some of his laborers.

1. Altamont congregation, a small body of the Lord's children, is without a pastor or bishop. A good country; the churchhouse is two and one-half miles from a nice little town in which the county high school is located. These dear members would surely appreciate the services of some earnest preacher or elder that would locate with them. Who will come? Correspond with W. H. Hamsher, Labette, Kans., or C. L. Morrison, Altamont, Kans., or the writer.

The next place I wish to speak of is Altoona, Kans., in Wilson County. Here is another small body of the Lord's workers. Their place of worship is in Altoona, a nice little town, which has a glass plant, a brick plant, etc. A very good farming country is around it. Here is a good field of labor. There is one minister, two deacons and about twenty-eight members. They need a resident elder who would be able to watch, as it were, for their souls, and they, too, would gladly welcome some of you to come into their midst. Who will come here? Who will answer, "Here am I, Lord; send me"? You can write to F. E. Button, R. D., Altoona, Kans., and he will gladly reply.

The next place is Chanute, Kans. This is an arm of the Neosho congregation. They have a small house of worship in town. Here are about sixteen members and two ministers, but both ministers are so situated that it is almost impossible for them to do very much for the church. They would be truly glad for some good, consecrated bishop or minister to move in their midst. Here is a good field to work in. A town in the gas and oil belt. A population of about 12,000,—perhaps more. There is a glass plant, smelters, brick plants, refineries and railroad shops. The town is surrounded by a good farming country. Here is an urgent need of a consecrated worker. Elders and ministers, you that want to do something for your Lord, will you not come? Write to J. H. Hallaway, Chanute, Kans.

I wish to call your attention again to the congregation at Galesburg, known as the Neosho church. This is the oldest congregation in Southeastern Kansas. They have a house of worship about three miles from Galesburg, seven or eight miles from Erie, the county seat. Here is a good country for farming and stock raising. A nice body of members reside there, who would be glad to have some good elder help them. At present the Mission Board has a man here, but I do not know how long they expect to keep him here. The board and also the members would be glad for some of you elders to come and help them. They need you. In some places there are as high as four elders in one congregation, and some of you complain because you do not get a chance to exercise. Now, here is your chance. Will you come? At present I have the oversight of all these places, but it is impossible for me to care for them as they should be cared for, and I want to appeal to you, dear laborers, to come to these points and investigate, and allow the spirit of the Lord to stir you up as it did King Cyrus (Ezra 1:1). May you be made willing to do something for the Lord in these places! Will you come and help with the harvest? Souls are dying, some of whom, by God's help, you might save. Do you realize what one soul is worth? If so, come and help us!

The Fundamental Sin.

BY PAUL MOHLER.

DID you ever stop to think of what is the fundamental sin, the sin without which there could be no other sin? Is there some sin that, if you could but overcome it, all other sins would disappear? "Oh yes," you say, "it is disobedience." But there, I think, you are wrong, for disobedience itself may spring from something else more fundamental.

Let us look at the account of the first sin and see if it throws any light on the subject. I think all will agree this is the typical sin, containing all the elements of sin. Have you ever noticed the nature of the temptation? At that time, man was a being of exalted dignity. He was commissioned by God to rule his whole creation. He was in fact more like God himself than like the puny, degenerate beings we find ourselves to be. Only one thing was kept back from him,—the one tree in the garden. Man was not given the privilege of penetrating the great mysteries of the moral universe and deciding for himself what is or is not good. God kept that prerogative unto himself. God must always say what is good and what is evil, and all creation must be governed accordingly. God's universe is governed by moral laws,—not physical alone. He must be supreme in that as in the physical, or else confusion must prevail. To aspire to be equal with God in that, would take the ambition of Lucifer himself.

When the serpent came to the woman to tempt her, this was the point of attack. He appealed to her ambition, to be free from all restrictions, to be her own judge of what is good and what is evil. I certainly think he must have reminded her of her exalted dignity, and convinced her of the absurdity of such a being as she allowing even God to decide for her what was good and what was evil in the world.

When that ambition seized her, she looked and saw that the tree was good for food, and that it was a delight to the eyes, and that the tree was to be desired to make one wise. She undoubtedly used the best of her judgment in the matter, and it must not be assumed that she was lacking in any quality given to man today. I dare say that the wisest men today, depending upon their own judgment to guide them, make mistakes as inexcusable. No, it was not only the primitive man that was on trial, it was the ability of the human race to judge in matters of moral conduct. When Eve used the best judgment at her command,—decided that that fruit was good for her,—she proved conclusively that human judgment is too weak to grapple with great moral questions.

With this ambition of these first creatures "in the image of God," I like to contrast the humility of him "who, existing in the form of God, counted not the being on an equality with God a thing to be grasped but emptied himself, taking the form of a servant, being made in the likeness of men; and being found in fashion as a man, he humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death, yea, the death of the cross" (Philpp. 2:6-8, Am. Rev.)

The glory of Christ is this humility, this perfect obedience to God in everything. Again and again he asserts that he does nothing of himself, that even the words that he says are not of himself but that it is the Father working and speaking through him. "Wherefore also God highly exalted him, and gave unto him the name which is above every name, that in the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven and things on earth, and things under the earth." Of course he did. God could afford to put such an one in authority in his universe,—one who is true to every word of God.

Is not, then, the ambition to be one's own moral arbiter the fundamental sin? Let us see. God has said, "It is wrong to kill." A man says, "God is mistaken; under certain circumstances killing is justifiable. This man has injured me; he deserves to die; it is right for me to kill him." That man's exercise of his own judgment, instead of listening to the voice of God, has opened the way for murder. And so it is with every other sin. God has spoken on all questions of human conduct. If men would all do as did our Lord, when tempted,—turn to the Word of God to see what God would have him do, there would be no sin at all, for everybody would do God's will even as Jesus did. The fundamental sin must therefore be this Satanic ambition to "be as God, knowing good and evil."

What, then, is the way of escape from this fundamental sin? By grasping the fundamental virtue, humility. If this mind is in you, which was in Christ Jesus, who, existing in the form of God, humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death. If we have not the Spirit of Christ, we are none of his. If we have his spirit, we will seek earnestly, as he did, to know the will of God; then do it.

The Departure of Bro. W. S. Toney.

BY GORMAN E. HEETER.

WITH uncovered head one feels like bowing with sacred respect to him who, from days of youth to age of crowning gray, linked his life and anchored his hope in Christ. Passing through the toil of years with such pronounced success, brought more to him, in many ways, than what was sought. In the social and temporal, as well as in the spiritual life, abounding success characterized the career of our beloved brother, Eld. W. S. Toney, of the Upper Deer Creek church, Ind., who passed to his reward Sept. 25, 1911.

In his day he saw the frenzied attempts of men to gain fame and fortune. Some were caught and carried into the snare of the tempter, by which their holy profession was lowered, and the gems of grace became secondary. Through all this, and much beside, Bro. Toney stood faithfully, respecting the trust imposed upon him. He was truly a minister for Christ to a world in need. As a husband and father in the home, as a neighbor and friend to the needy, as a minister and elder in the Lord's vineyard, he had but one theme and thought,—to enhance the church and her mission on earth among men. From this he never turned aside.

While he traveled through many States and territories, he was making acquaintances, gathering material and noting conditions. Then, invariably, he summed up the result of his investigations by saying: "The greatest need is to know the Book."

Bro. Toney was much consulted in his neighborhood, as to best methods of road-building, drainage construction, horticulture, and the production of cereals. He led the Brethren's Tri-County Fire Insurance Company to a financial success, being its secretary for many years.

When families were broken by the hand of death, he was asked to administer the estates. In all these varied lines of work there was no day too stormy or cold, nor was the night too dark and gloomy to attend to his duty. When wanted in the home of the sick or dying, he willingly went. These calls were many, from far and near.

Bro. Toney was a man of cheery, kind disposition, able to impart strength and life wherever he went. His wife and children were a hearty support in all his work, and they feel keenly their loss. As he bade them farewell, at the age of seventy-four years, it was indeed a sore bereavement. The community as well as the Brotherhood will miss this grand specimen of Christian manhood.

MINISTERIAL AND EDUCATIONAL MEETINGS OF NORTHERN INDIANA.

The meetings were held in the Springfield congregation near Wawaka, Ind., Oct. 4. Eld. Manly Deeter was chosen Moderator, and Eld. J. H. Schrock, Secretary. The sermon on the evening of Oct. 3, upon "Shepherding the Flock," brought out the importance of the work of the elder, and how he should take heed unto himself and to the flock. A well-prepared address on "Practical Hints to Young Ministers" showed that the Bible furnishes the best hints, and that, as a result of proper self-development, the ministers become spiritual or godly. Their work is to preach the Word. A stirring address on "The Country Church: (a) What It Has Accomplished; (b) the Outlook; (c) the Need," showed that the early country churches pushed out in every direction, but that at present a great many of the country houses are abandoned and many more are on the verge of closing. As a remedy it was urged that there be less emigration to the cities, especially among the ministers. "The Deacon and His Work" was discussed, because his work is so closely related to that of the ministry. Among other things it was said that deacons should stand as the elder's cabinet. A splendid paper on "Parental Devotion" was read by a sister, to be offered to the Gospel Messenger. Many very good suggestions were given on "How to Make Our Council Meetings More Instructive and Edifying." A place was given on the program for the "Temperance Work of Northern Indiana." Much enthusiasm was shown on the subject. "The Laity's Ideal Minister" was pictured by some of the deacons and laity. Upon the subject of "The Need of Distinctive Doctrinal Sermons," it was urged that all of the Bible doctrines be more effectually taught,—not all in one sermon, but an earnest, clear and careful presentation of each doctrine, giving just what God says about it. "Perils of our American Schools," and "Northern Indiana's Interest in Our School," emphasized the need of patronizing our church schools. Thus the day passed as a continuous feast of good things. The program was rendered as arranged, with but one speaker absent. Every moment for general discussion was improved by some speaker. J. H. Schrock.

THE ROUND TABLE

Chicago Sunday-school Extension.

BY AUGUST BECK.

SEPTEMBER, 1911, was rally month, here at the Sunday-school Extension. The church was beautifully decorated with wild flowers by helpful workers in God's vineyard. Brethren M. R. Myers and D. W. Shock addressed both the children and the older ones on several Sunday mornings. Everybody was interested and much profited by those splendid addresses, and especially the little ones, who never before had such a treat. Every word seemed so plain, and yet so rich in thought.

On Sunday morning, as Bro. Myers went into the basement, he noticed the work of the primary class, in charge of Sister Hintz, and was much impressed. The sight was so touching that he resolved to have the whole congregation enjoy it. So the little ones were marched up into the church, and arranged on the pulpit platform. Those dear little tots went through their songs and exercises with a fervor and self-possession that might well put us older ones to shame. They never thought of how they looked, or what this one or that one thought of them. Straight from the heart came every word, every movement.

When they had finished, Bro. Myers asked a little girl in the intermediate department, who only six months before had been baptized, to lead the congregation in prayer. It was touching to hear the child's voice offering up its simple prayer to our Heavenly Father, and it brought tears to the eyes of more than one of the older members.

The circulating picture gallery, used in the work here, is a new idea, to arouse the children's interest in the work, and to increase our attendance. Twenty-five large pictures, beautifully framed (purchased by brethren who clubbed together in order to help in the good work), are hung upon our church walls. Each pupil who brings in a new member for the Sunday-school class gets a picture to take home, and to keep two weeks. At the end of that time it can be exchanged for another, and so on. Already eleven new pupils have come in this last month, and eleven pictures are thus making their rounds. One little fellow, who very much liked to have a picture, stood up when those who had brought new pupils were asked to stand. "And whom did you bring, little boy?" asked the Sunday-school superintendent. "I brought myself," promptly answered the boy.

Work of the Brethren in the South.

BY F. M. WHITE.

SINCE my last article in the MESSENGER, perhaps many have wondered if I am still here. Well, I am still at work. We think more has been accomplished this summer than ever before. In addition to sending out the MESSENGER, as referred to in my last article, many copies have been sent me after having been read, and these I have given out chiefly to the colored people. Now they are calling for preaching, and our District Mission Board is endeavoring to prepare a way for it. Our Sunday-school has a home department, and much reading is being done by means of it. While fifty copies of the MESSENGER are being sent to this vicinity each week, we could use more to very good advantage, but are unable to furnish them ourselves. The "County Sunday-school Association" employed Bro. Glen Petcher to travel over a large part of our county and work up Sunday-schools. By this means the people are getting acquainted with us, and our doctrine is placed within the reach of people who never knew about us, so that, eventually, much good may be done.

The time of our love feast was set for Sept. 30, but after all the preparations were made it rained, so we had to postpone it, and we then had it on Sunday evening. Twenty-three brethren and sisters participated in the services, and all seemed to enjoy themselves, although the weather was bad. No visiting brethren were present, as we are so far away from the other churches, and the Brethren do not visit us much, but we hope to have things better in the future. At our District Meeting Bro. A. E. Nead, of Limestone, Tenn., was appointed as elder in charge at this place, and he will spend some time with us this winter. We are expecting others also. We have made arrangements for a brother to go to Citronelle, where two members are living, to encourage the work there. The Sunday-school here gives one Sunday's collection to bear the expenses of the Citronelle work. Our Brethren are also endeavoring to build a churchhouse in Wayne County, Miss., where we have a mission point. We hope much good may be done and God's name glorified!

"You Didn't Speak to Me."

BY C. A. BRALLIER.

THESE were the words spoken to me, not long since, by a Sunday-school scholar who was chiding me for having slighted her. She said, "You looked straight at me and didn't speak to me."

It happened upon a crowded street, and I could not recall of having consciously done so, but be that as it may, one thing is certain, that this individual noticed it, and if she would have been as easily and deeply hurt by it as some people are, she might have been lost to the Sunday-school.

Destinies often turn upon just such small pivots. How careful teachers, superintendents and pastors should be, to watch themselves along the line of simple courtesy! Not only should they be courteous to their own scholars and those who come under their charge, but to the world at large. Indeed, all Christians should make it a point to be courteous at all times. "Love doth not behave itself unseemly" (1 Cor. 13:5).

How many souls may be going to destruction simply because you or I "did not speak to them."

The world expects something from you and me. She needs it, and wants it. The soul you meet upon the street may be down-hearted, discouraged and baffled in its efforts to solve the problem of life, and your smile and "Good morning," or "How do you do?" may be the best tonic to their burdened heart. They will know, at least, that you are interested in them, and that they are not alone in life. Be interested in others. —"Love seeketh not her own."

May not our condemnation read, "You didn't speak to me!? "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not unto me" (Matt. 25:45). Paul says we are "stewards of the manifold grace of God." Christ must speak through your lips and mine, that all may be drawn to his loving arms.

The Power of Love.

BY IDA M. HELM.

IT is easy to love those who are congenial and those who love us. A beautiful spirit is attractive. We need not wonder why we love beautiful things. But why do our hearts go out to those whose actions are repellent, and who may be classed as enemies? Why do we long to love everybody? Why is it that we are so eager to help carry the message of salvation to all people? It is because we have the love of God in our hearts, and we can not do otherwise.

It is said of Archbishop Cranmer: "If you would be sure to have Cranmer do you a good turn, you must do him some ill one," for though he loved to do good to all, yet especially he would watch for an opportunity to do good to such as had wronged him.

We are so slow to see what power is hidden in love. We may think we have developed much in the power of love, but we fall far short of the ideal Christ set before us, if we simply do our enemies no harm, for we are using only a tiny fraction of the power of love. While Christ was suffering the most cruel tortures man can inflict on his fellow-men, he prayed: "Father, forgive them," and he willingly gave his life for them. He says: "But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you; that ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven" (Matt. 5:44, 45).

Ashland, Ohio.

BOTH the sin and the suicide of many men is their abnormal desire to occupy positions too large for their faculties. Nature never sets a chickadee on goose eggs, nor does it appoint elephants to build ant hills. Men are assured of health, happiness and victory only as they are in their own true place, for which nature has fitted them. He who seeks to go higher up will find himself in a false position, and, by an overworking of his powers, will break them with the bankruptcy of the business, and fall to a plane as far below his level as he formerly was above it.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Worth-While Women.

1 Peter 3: 1-6.

For Sunday Evening, November 5, 1911.

I. Sarah for Obedience.—"Even as Sarah obeyed Abraham, calling him lord" (v. 6; Gen. 18: 12). By faith she went with him from Ur, "not knowing whither he went." Nothing is said about her passion for outward adornment; much is said of her reverence for her husband. Sarah is the mother of all believing daughters, "as long as ye do well"—believe. Ye cannot believe longer than ye obey.

II. Martha for Service.—"Received him" kindly, hospitably, "into her house" (Luke 10: 38). It was now dangerous to entertain him so near Jerusalem; but Martha regarded not the danger, the labor nor the expense to entertain both Jesus and his disciples. How can we spend what we have better than in Christ's service?

III. Dorcas for Almsdeeds (Acts 9: 36-39).—Dorcas was "full of almsdeeds" (v. 36). She was praised not only for the alms which she gave, but for the deeds she did. They who will not do a charitable deed because they are poor, would not give a charitable gift if they were rich.

IV. Mary for Worship (John 12: 1-3).—"Anointed the feet,"—a mark of the most profound reverence. She "poured it" (Mark 14: 3) with her own hands, which she might have ordered a servant to do. Hers was a condescending, a worshipful love.

V. The Mother of Jesus for Spirituality.—"She kept all . . . in her heart" (Luke 2: 9, 51),—"pondered them in her heart." She made them the matter of her private meditations. She said little; "pondered" much—a mark of deep spirituality. We do well to ponder much upon what Jesus said and did. Though we may be very ordinary people, we can all be faithful.

PRAYER MEETING

Do You Let God Plan Your Life?

Jer. 10: 23; Prov. 3: 1-16.

For Week Beginning November 5, 1911.

1. Forget Not God's Law.—Man's common failing is forgetfulness of God's law, and this failure causes much of the individual misfortune and public injustice. No man ever went astray who followed the law of the Lord. The injunction is of supreme importance, therefore, is "Forget not" (James 1: 22-25).

2. Do It With Your Whole Heart.—"Let thy heart keep my commandments." The emphasis is on the word "heart." Not an intellectual keeping of the divine statutes but a heart allegiance, a love-inspired, obedient in all things (Psa. 9: 1; 119: 10, 69, 145).

3. Gracious Manifestations of a God-Planned Life.—"Let not kindness and truth forsake thee." Kindness to bless others,—truth to bless ourselves and honor God. Let them be so deeply impressed upon our heart that both kindness and truth may become a second nature to us (Rom. 12: 10; Philpp. 4: 8).

4. Three Important Conditions: "Trust, Lean, Acknowledge."—It is not enough to do kind acts; it is not sufficient to speak truthfully at all times. We may do all that and yet fall short. "Trust in Jehovah with all thy heart, and lean not upon thine own understanding. In all thy ways acknowledge him." Full trust is to be given to Jehovah. No leaning upon our own wisdom,—it is but a broken reed! More confidence in God, less in self! Still more, "acknowledge him." Not merely at stated times of worship, but in business, in our pleasures, in "all our ways." That means the whole life (Rom. 12: 1, 2).

5. Blessed Rewards.—"Length of days, years of life, peace." God bestows gracious gifts upon the devoted believer. "So shalt thou find favor and good understanding in the sight of God and man." Kindness to man will win the good favor of man; truth toward God will win his approval (1 John 3: 1, 2).

HOME AND FAMILY

War.

BY BERTON BRALEY.

War—and the tramp of the troops once more,
The blare of bugles, the cannons' roar.
The waving banners, the swing and sway
Of men that march to the bitter fray.
Where glory beckons, and honor calls
And brave men batter the fortress walls.
War—that summons the soul of Rome,
While the women weep with their babes at home.

War—and the smiling fields are black
Where fire and battle have left their track.
War—and the brave blood running red,
And the sunken ships and the host of dead.
War—with its wake of wrong and wrath,
With famine and misery in its path.
War that has wakened, long asleep,
While the children wait and the women weep.

War—red war in the world again,
War with its trail of broken men.
War that gorges itself in truth
On the land's best strength and finest youth.
And all for the sake of a barren land
And a cluster of huts on the desert sand.
The sultan battles the might of Rome
And women weep with their babes at home.

The Mother's Duty as to the Reading Matter of the Home.

BY MRS. M. R. WEAVER.

One of the great duties of the mother, relative to the reading matter of the home, is to guide the child in the development of a desire for the right kind of reading. The "Wise Man" says, "Train up a child in the way he should go: and when he is old, he will not depart from it." In this scripture Solomon speaks for all ages and for all people. It is a principle recognized by all. The early home training goes far to make up the ideal for the child, and the ideal once formed, is harder to change and reshape,—if wrong, —than to start right from the first. This applies to the reading matter placed in the hands of the child, as much so as to any other phase of child training. The child will read only that which interests him, and for which he has a desire.

The desire for the right kind of reading may be acquired. It is the same as any other habits and desires which become fixed in our lives. "As the twig is bent, so the tree is inclined." Allow a child to acquire the habit of reading light, trashy literature, and he will always have this desire, even when he becomes older. Much depends on the kind of books kept before the child and the example of the parents set before their children. If the mother is given to reading novels, and spends her time in that way, she will produce and develop a generation of novel readers. If the mother neglects her children, others will influence them. If she pays no attention to them, but allows them to make their own selections, they will be governed largely by what others are reading and what they hear others tell of the books they have read, which will usually be some cheap, trashy, thrilling story, of positive and permanent injury to the child. Thus it is very important that the mother read good books herself and keep such before her children.

First impressions largely make up a child's ideal. The organ of sight bears a larger influence on the first impressions formed in the mind of the child than any other organ of sense. That which it sees it remembers. As an illustration I give the following: A little boy, two years old, was taken to the circus by his papa. The next day the little fellow was seen going through some very strange antics, and when questioned why he was doing so, his answer was, "Why, the elephant did that way." He had seen and remembered the actions of the elephant.

Brightly-colored pictures attract the attention of children, and influence largely the first impressions. A small child reads more out of a brightly-colored picture than most people suppose. A few weeks ago my husband was going to the store, when, just a block from our home, he saw two small boys emerge from behind a house. Each was equipped with a big knife. These knives they had whittled out of wood, and strapped to their side. A toy gun represented a revolver. Each had a handkerchief tied over the lower part of his face, in regular burglar style, and each carried an old flashlight in his hand. As my husband watched them, they slipped up to a window and tried to pry it open. Of course, the window was that of their own home, and they were only at play, but the stealth of movement, the crouching position, the manner in which they carried their guns, the exactness with which they had the handkerchiefs fixed over their faces, and the way they used the flashlight,—every move bearing the mark of old, experienced burglars,—raises the question, Where did those small boys learn all of this? They could be no better trained, so far as method of operation was concerned, after months of actual experience.

Of course, we know they did not receieve their knowledge from such a source. Whence, then, did they receive it? They got it from some cheap "Diamond Dick" burglar story, with its brightly-colored pictures. They had read the story and studied the pictures till they became fixed in their mind. Adding the stimuli received through the power of imagination, these pictures became so real that they could carry them out with exactness in their actions.

To show the extent of the impression those stories and pictures had made on the minds of those two boys, and to prove that their whole soul was in that operation, I will yet add that my husband was never noticed as he slipped up behind them. He caught each of the boys by the coat collar with a sharp demand, "What are you fellows doing here?" The impression formed in their mind was such as to cause them to look as sheepish and guilty as any one can look who is caught when actually engaged in burglary. Seeing, then, the result of such stories and pictures, it surely is the duty of every mother to take care that none such ever comes into her home.

Another evil that has been tolerated already too long, by many mothers, is that of allowing magazines with large, brightly-colored fashion plates to come into the home, and lie around where all have access to them. The children can not help but see them, and as they look upon them, a deep-rooted desire is formed for just such clothing, and when the child is old enough, this desire is put into practice.

Another great evil is that of displaying the large, flashy calendars, with all the fine feathers and frills, pictured in such profusion. Generally they are so placed that the child can feast upon them all the day and a part of the night. As the child looks upon that picture, a deep admiration for it is formed, and with it a desire and resolution that some day it is going to dress just like that picture on the calendar.

Then there are the gorgeous calendars, advertising the fine, rich flavor of some cigar. The boy looks upon the picture and thinks how nice and manly the young man looks, and then, too, it says the flavor is so mild that he determines when older, to smoke the King George brand of cigars. If you must advertise cigars and tobaccos, advertise the evil effects they are having on humanity, and do not display the lying advertisements on the calendars of the day. If you do not want your children doing these things, destroy these magazines and calendars. If all would do this, there would possibly be a greater fire than that on the streets of ancient Ephesus.

See to it that good books are read. It is not sufficient merely to keep bad books away, but the right kind of books must be provided. Some parents spend so much time in telling their children that they must not do this or that thing, or that they must not read this or that book, that they do not find time to tell them what they should do and read. The children get the idea that there is nothing they can do, and that this world is a wilderness of "Don'ts." There is nothing to stimulate their ambitions in the right direction by this kind of training. It is the duty of the mother, therefore, not only to keep bad books away from her children but to see that good ones are provided, and that the child is encouraged to read them, and to read them carefully. In reading books it is like in our eating,—it is not always quantity that nourishes, but proper assimilation.

There is an old adage something like this: "A man is known by the company he keeps." The same is true and will apply to the books, and we can well say, "A man is known by the books he keeps." Let me see a person's library and I will tell you much of the general character of that person. If he has many book on mechanics I know he is of a mechanical turn. If he has many religious books, I know he is religiously inclined. The books a person keeps largely indicate the desires and nature of the person. Seeing, then, that books and reading matter are such a prominent factor in the life of each individual, surely it is a great duty the mother has, to guide the child in the development of a desire for the right kind of reading, and to safeguard the home against the invasion of any books or reading matter that will be detrimental or destructive to the development of a strong Christian character in her children.

To Our Sisters' Aid Societies.

I wish to make known the needs of our Colored Home. As winter approaches, we are especially in need of shoes and clothing for boys and girls from six to fourteen years old. A number of comforters and quilts for full-sized beds are very much needed.

Certainly this is a noble and worthy cause, if you consider that there are 10,000 of the negro race in Denver alone, to say nothing of our other large cities and the Southland.

Every effort is being put forth to train the boys and girls for mission work among their own race. In these children there is certainly a wonderful possibility of improving the race.

The District of Northwestern Kansas and Northeastern Colorado has awakened to this possibility, and has placed the children under the most favorable surroundings.

The home is located on a thirty-acre irrigated garden tract, within driving distance of the Denver City market. Here the boys and girls get industrial training in connection with the intellectual and spiritual, and at the same time help to support themselves.

The children are being schooled at the home. Already we have a young sister attending Bethany Bible School, preparing for effective mission work among her race. At present we have thirty inmates,—all we can accommodate in the cramped quarters we have. Many applications have to be refused until sufficient funds are raised to erect the much-needed buildings. Receipt of clothing will be acknowledged. Address us as below.

The Day of Life.

BY EDGAR M. HOFFER.

The sun nears the western horizon. Soon the sun will set beyond the hills, and night will be upon us. So man reaches old age. His eyes are dim; he uses a cane; his steps are feeble, and he realizes that soon he must pass away. The frosts of winter are seen on his brow, and the snows of advancing age are heavy upon him. He sees the setting sun of his life. As he thinks of bygone years, he muses, Was it a life well spent? If so, he can rejoice, and praise his Master. If he lived in sin throughout his day, all looks dark and dreary before him.

Such is life! We start out in the morning, bright and cheerful, but soon we reach our best days, and encroach upon old age. We live a while in the world, are active, enjoy the duties of life, and then we pass to our long home, and the place that once knew us, will know us no more forever. After all, life is but a very brief day, a journey to the tomb! However pleasant life may be to us, we will never pass this way again! Life is short; eternity is endless! Let us strive to be more like Christ! Those who bear the cross of Christ here below, will wear the crown above. Think and meditate on these things!

OCT. 17 Bro. J. H. Cassady was engaged in a revival meeting at Roaring Springs, Pa., with a promising outlook.

A FRUITFUL series of meetings at Summit Mills, Pa., conducted by Bro. D. M. Adams, closed with nine accessions to the church.

THE District Meeting of Western Colorado and Utah, to be held in the Mount Garfield church, Colo., is announced for Dec. 1.

BRO. ISAAC MILLER, of North Dakota, changes his address from Zion to York, with the purpose of locating at the latter place soon.

BRO. F. C. MCCUNE is doing some effectual revival work at Vermillion, Kans. When last heard from, there were twelve conversions.

BRO. A. C. SNOWBERGER and wife have cast their lot with the members at El Centro, Cal., where their labors will be very much appreciated.

BRO. L. T. HOLSINGER devoted three weeks to evangelistic work in the Mineral Creek church, Mo., and five persons were brought into the fold.

BRO. I. S. LONG and wife, of India, reached New York on Friday, Oct. 20, and left at once for Port Republic, Va. They report a pleasant voyage.

BRO. J. F. APPELMAN is assisting the Lower Deer Creek church, Ind., in a series of meetings, and finds a warm and earnest cooperation upon the part of the members.

BRO. I. S. LONG, of India, at this time is probably engaged in a series of meetings at Roanoke, Va., it having been announced that the meetings would begin last Sunday.

SISTER ELLA BRUBAKER, late of India, spent last Lord's Day in Elgin, and on Monday called, with her bright little babe, at the MESSENGER sanctum. She is spending some months in Bethany Bible School.

AFTER Nov. 5 Bro. Jacob Witmore, of Portland, Texas, should be addressed at El Centro, Cal., R. D. 2, BOX 23. He and Sister Witmore are to remain in California until May, 1912, and then go to McPherson, Kans.

THE little band of believers at Springdale, Ark.,—who may be reached by addressing Bro. Henry Sheets, R. D. 2, of that place,—being too poor to build a meetinghouse, have decided to purchase a tent in which to hold their religious services. We further understand that the Brethren have no minister near Springdale. Here is an opportunity for some one to locate where he can do a good work.

BRO. D. L. MILLER, writing from Limestone, Tenn., says that he is having a delightful time with the Brethren in that part of the South. He finds them wholesouled, kind and hospitable, and is to have something to say about his trip in future issues.

THE Bible, Missionary and Sunday-school Institute of Western Pennsylvania, to be held in the Roxbury church, West Johnstown, Pa., Dec. 4 to 9, promises to be a most interesting gathering. As soon as space can be found for it, the program will be given in our columns.

ON page 676, this issue, Bro. John Clark calls attention to a number of points in Kansas where ministers would be appreciated. We have scores of preachers who ought to be seeking fields of this sort. Godly men who respond to such calls may rest assured that their labors will be appreciated.

THE Sunday-school Convention for Idaho, to be held at Twin Falls, is announced for Nov. 10, 11 and 12. The excellent program arranged for the occasion reached us too late for this issue, and since the next paper, the doctrinal issue, is to be taken up mainly with special matter, there is a bare possibility that we can not publish the program in time for the convention.

BRO. A. W. ROSS, of India, has addressed an appeal to the Botetourt Memorial Missionary church in Roanoke County, Va., in which he deals with the conditions in his field of labor, and also sets forth a possible method of assisting his people in India. The appeal, eight large pages, may be had for distribution without further cost, by addressing the General Mission Board, Elgin, Ill.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE has an advertisement on page 687, this issue, that should receive the attention of those interested in our educational work. And, by the way, the college is one of our most prosperous schools, and deserves the hearty support of the Brethren. We should like to see all of the Brethren schools represented in our advertising department. For them we quote especially low rates.

MIDDLE IOWA, at her late District Meeting, set on foot a movement that has for its object the assisting of prospective missionaries for foreign fields, to procure the necessary education fitting them for their work. All money advanced to such missionaries is to be secured by promissory notes, to be canceled whenever the missionaries are duly accepted by the General Mission Board. Should one, who has been thus assisted, change his purpose, or can not be used by the Board, the notes against him may be collected.

WE hear of a Sunday-school that was considerably disturbed because of complaints laid in by a non-Sunday-school worker. It would appear that the party did not attend the school, took no part whatever in its work, and yet he wanted to have the privilege of saying how the school should be run. There may be instances when some attention should be given to complaints coming from such a source, but too frequently non-working critics are a hindrance to the cause in which they try to appear interested. Instead of standing off and finding fault with others, they should first enter into the work themselves, become familiar with it; then they will be in a position to claim some consideration for their complaints.

LAST week the Baptists of Illinois held their State Convention in Elgin. There were probably 500 delegates in attendance, and considerable business received attention. Most of the sessions were taken up with addresses, resolutions, hearing reports and considering the work of committees. Mission and temperance came in for their share of attention. The Baptists, at their conventions, do not discuss church questions. With them all questions relating to doctrine, church polity and discipline are regarded as settled. A pressure of office work prevented us from attending any of the session. A few of the ministers, who are acquainted with our people called at the House and were shown through the establishment.

BRO. S. S. NEHER, of Twin Falls, Idaho, Sunday-school Secretary for the State, says that our people are doing their utmost to bring the Sunday-school work in his District up to the highest standard possible. He is now holding from two to five meetings each Lord's Day, with a view of getting everything in the best practicable working condition. He is looking forward to the approaching Sunday-school Convention with a good deal of interest.

NOT more than half of those who send the names of newly-elected ministers, to be entered in the list in the Almanac, think to give the address of such ministers. This makes it necessary for us to write a hundred or more letters during the year, solely for the purpose of ascertaining the addresses of newly-chosen preachers. We wish our correspondents would be a little more thoughtful and always be sure to send the addresses with the names of new ministers.

A CABLEGRAM from Tientsin, China, dated Oct. 19, informs us of the safe arrival of our late missionaries in that port, and also assures of their good health. The message further stated that, on account of the unsettled conditions in China the United States Consul has advised the withdrawal of all missionaries from the interior. Acting under this advice Bro. Crumpacker and the missionary sisters had left their field of labor, and came to Tientsin, where they will remain until the trouble subsides. From this we learn that all of the Brethren missionaries, including those recently sent, are at Tientsin, where they will have the necessary protection and care. Regarding the safety of our missionaries there would appear to be no occasion for any alarm whatever.

LAST Sunday morning we had the privilege of worshiping with the Brethren at Bethany Bible School, Chicago, and addressing a large and very interesting audience, made up mainly of students from various parts of the Brotherhood. The attendance at this time is over 200, and a number of other students are to come later. The managers tell us that just how to provide even class room for all those desiring to enter Bethany, is the real problem they are endeavoring to solve, and that a new building is the only way they see out of it. They are planning to erect another building just as soon as the money for the purpose can be secured. One seldom meets a finer body of young members than may be seen at Bethany this year. They are not only intelligent and zealous, but they seem to be well rooted and grounded in the principles of the Church of the Brethren, and come here to secure a better working knowledge of the Bible. Scores of them are preachers and preachers' wives, and in the course of a few years their influence is going to be felt in many sections of the Brotherhood. Bro. Wieand has resumed teaching in a limited way, and in due time hopes fully to regain his health.

PROF. J. W. MCGARVEY, of Lexington, Ky., widely known to many of our readers, died a few days ago. As the President of the Disciple Bible School of his city, it is recorded he helped to educate and prepare a thousand preachers for the pulpit. The London Times once said that he was probably the ripest Bible scholar in the world. One thing sure, no man living understood the teachings of the Disciple church better than did Prof. McGarvey. He was not only a teacher, but a writer, and has left a number of valuable books, dealing principally with Bible questions. He will be remembered by hundreds of our older readers as the author of a series of articles, published in the Brethren at Work, over thirty years ago, giving an account of his travels in Palestine. These articles not only greatly interested our people, but to many they proved decidedly helpful. Mr. McGarvey never took very kindly to the claims of the Brethren, especially did he criticise our position regarding the religious rite of feet-washing, but we do not know that, in his writing, he ever went into a thorough consideration of the subject. And while he criticised us, much that he wrote will prove helpful to us in defending and explaining most of our doctrinal points.

The doctrinal issue is to appear next week, and will probably attract more attention than any doctrinal number ever put out by the House. For general use, where they will do good, we are printing 15,000 extra copies. This issue will contain twenty pages, and nearly all the doctrinal points of the church will be treated, and some of them illustrated.

Bro. Jas. A. Sell, of Hollidaysburg, Pa., is planning to spend the winter in the Middle States in evangelistic work. He begins a series of meetings at Cedar Rapids, Iowa, Nov. 8. Those desiring his services will do well to write to him at an early date. His eyesight has greatly improved, and it is thought that several months in the field will be good for him, as well as for the churches that he may visit. His wife will accompany him.

Improving Council Meetings.

It will be well for our people everywhere to learn the art of shortening their council meetings by having less to do, and by seeking better methods of disposing of the business requiring attention. An all-day council meeting may be edifying to the few, but it does not appeal to most of the members. To start with, the official board should have its matters in shape before the hour of opening the services. The elder who presides should have a list of all the business in time to study the character of it, and arrange the different items in the order in which they are to be considered. Each item of business should be carefully presented, so it may be understood from the start. Long speeches should be discouraged, and early motions favored. When it is evident that the members know what they want, give them an early opportunity so to decide, and then be ready to move on to the next item. Under no circumstances should harsh or unbecoming language be tolerated. Members who can not speak kindly and becomingly in a council meeting, can help along with matters by keeping quiet, and letting others do the talking. If the presiding officer is discreet, he will make few speeches, and not be found trying to get everything decided his own way. He will show fully as much respect for the opinion of others as he does for his own. The secret of success in a council meeting is to keep things moving, and make haste by disposing of matters briefly, but in the best possible manner. Much attention should be given to the spirit of the meeting, for the character of such gatherings should be in keeping with the high spiritual claims of the church. The members ought to be at their best spiritually,—considerate, polite and courteous. Each one ought to go from a council meeting feeling that he has been helped; that he has helped others, and that to the church, as a body, the meeting was a spiritual uplift.

The Application of Prophecy.

For nearly thirty years we have been engaged in active editorial work, and in the management of religious journals we have had more experience, at short range, than falls to the lot of most religious editors. We have handled manuscript from writers that may be numbered by the thousands. Some of them were well educated, while the mental training of others was sadly neglected. Our manner of disposing of the manuscripts received, from year to year, has proven satisfactory to the greater part of our people; but there is one class of writers that we have never been able to please.

We refer to the class that would have every live question disposed of by their rule of interpreting prophecy. If a little war cloud arises in the Old World, they immediately call our attention to the Scripture applying, as they say, to that particular case. When the cloud disappears, they keep quiet about the application of prophecy. Earthquakes of much severity come in for their share of prophecy. When everything in Palestine runs smoothly, we may expect to be reminded of this, that and the other scripture which tells about the return of the Jews. There are prophecies applying to nearly all the leading occurrences that might be named. At one time a certain prophecy was made to apply to the steam car, and later to the electric car, but now seems to fit the automobile best. If there should be a period of general peace among the nations, then we are reminded of the prophecy referring to peace and safety, to be followed by sudden destruction. Should the Catholics become a little active, our attention is called to the domineering influence of the "man of sin." Every important strike in labor circles gives occasion for the application of special prophecy.

Now, the Good Book is full of prophecies, but we have seen so many failures in human attempts to explain them, that we have become just a little bit cautious about what we print on the subject. We may tell the news about this, that and the other thing, but we do not look around for some special prophecy applying to a given case. Right here is where we fail to please a few people. Possibly we may be just a little too neglectful of prophecy; but, somehow, it occurs to us that if we do our full duty towards God and our fellow-men, the good Lord will take care of the prophecies and help his chosen people to see them clearly when once fulfilled. We shall do well to study prophecy; to study the warnings associated with them, but it is useless to try to rush their fulfillment. They must have their time for fulfillment, and this is known to the Lord; it is hidden from men.

"Dead and Didn't Know It."

Recently one of our evangelists wrote me of the congregation in which he was conducting meetings, saying, "They are dead and don't know it." Why, of course it is this way, if they are dead. You would not expect them to know they are dead, would you? It is nothing strange, as the remark would imply. When people are dead, they are dead,—unconscious of it, without knowledge of it. It is sad, but true. It is bad to be dead, and to be dead and not know it, makes it doubly bad,—a double calamity. But so it is. When a church is dead to its mission it is dead to church life, dead to all to which it should be alive, "dead and don't know it." If a church might be dead, and at the same time be keenly conscious of its condition, it would not seem more than half as bad. But to be dead and at the same time to be under the delusion that we are alive,—well, that's the greatest of all ills.

In the address to the Seven Churches of Asia, Revelation, second and third chapters, the church at Laodicea is described as being lukewarm,—neither cold nor hot. They were not quite alive and yet not quite dead. It was a dreadful condition. The Lord prefers people either cold or hot; and these were neither, they nauseated him, and he said he would spew them out of his mouth. And yet they thought they were rich, increased with goods and need of nothing; while "they were wretched, and miserable, and poor, and blind and naked." They didn't know it. They flattered themselves, thinking they needed nothing, while they needed everything. They were not dead,—only half dead,—lukewarm,—but they were in the grossest ignorance as to their real condition. The angel most sharply rebuked their ignorance, or rather their boast of self-sufficiency, and urged them to buy of him gold tried in the fire that they might be rich. In this lay their only hope. Their eyes then would be opened.

The church of Sardis was, by the angel, declared to be dead. Her members had a name that they lived, but it was false; they were dead. The angel said but little more. He made the call to repentance, and urged that the things that remain, that is, those not yet fully dead, be strengthened. Beyond this, he said but little. He was talking to a dead church.

Apart from the evangelist's judgment, in this particular case, what may be said, in general, of the congregations of the Church of the Brethren? If an angel from heaven were sent to state, to each congregation, its real condition, as in the case of the Seven Churches of Asia, what might be expected? What could be expected? Five of the Seven Churches of Asia were rebuked, some of them very severely. The church at Ephesus had lost her first love, Pergamos had gone after Balaam and, like Thyatira, was living in fornication, and eating meats offered to idols, Laodicea was lukewarm, puffed up in her own imaginary wealth, while Sardis was dead. The angel commended, without rebuke, only Smyrna and Philadelphia. The showing is bad. Two out of seven commended; five out of seven rebuked,—one with the sentence of death written over it.

If the condition of the Seven Churches of Asia forecasted the future, it is alarming. On this basis there are hundreds of our churches dead while they live. They have a name that they live, having a standing among the people, their names published abroad under glaring headlines, feeling easy themselves, being favored that they had attained unto great things; while, in reality, God has written over them the sentence of death. "Dead and don't know it." Dreadful; it is indeed a dreadful condition, if we could only make ourselves believe it so.

Whatever may be said of the Seven Churches of Asia and their forecasting conditions, there is not the least doubt that there are dead members in all the congregations,—in some of them a high proportion of the membership, and in other cases practically all the membership is dead. Stagnation and death! No business doing. Nothing can be expected of the dead. Only living men and women do things. Nothing can be expected of either dead individuals or dead churches.

Now what shall be done? What can be done? Only one thing. The call to repentance ought to go thundering throughout all the churches. If that fails, then the case is lost, so far as we are able. Evangelists and pastors, able to stir the dead, are needed for this Herculean task; they are needed for the outsider, but more, no doubt, for the insider. The churches need to be shaken from center to circumference; and it will take mighty men of God to do it. The occasion requires men with tongues of fire and with the power of Paul. And if the ministry of men fails to do the work, let us pray for providential visitations, such as will awake us from slumber and death, and will open our eyes to the meaning of life and its awful responsibilities, that we may do the will of God in establishing his kingdom in the midst of this sinful and adulterous generation. The time is short; there is much to be done and it behooves us all to be up and doing. Let us understand, for once at least, that there is no time to waste. All to the front, and let the shout go down the line. "Go forward!" H. C. E.

So It Will Be.

Because the exact time of the second coming of the Son of Man,—of Jesus Christ,—is known to the Father only, therefore it was the mind of God that his people should continue in the great work of preaching the Gospel of salvation, and laboring to save souls until Jesus comes. There is no need of any special preparation for such an event, as the ever-active child of God is always ready, no matter when Jesus comes. Christ would say to us: "Be ye therefore ready also; for the Son of man cometh at an hour when ye think not." Because of this fact it should not seem strange to us if men and women, at the time of his coming, should be found eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, etc. This is what not only sinners are doing, but good Christians are also doing the same thing. Hence these predictions, of themselves, should not be taken as evidence that the world, at that time, should be especially wicked.

The first reason which may be given to prove that the world is gradually growing better is the fact that it has been prophetically said of God's Word, which was to be heralded forth unto all the nations and peoples, that it shall not return unto him void or empty, but it shall accomplish that unto which it has been sent, and we know and believe that God sent not his Word to destroy, but to save the world. And as it was sent for the purpose of saving the world from the power and effects of sin, there can be no other power able to frustrate God's purposes. Therefore, as a conclusion, we must believe, that, ultimately, the world will be taken for Christ.

This is also in harmony with the vision of the prophet, when he saw the small stone hewn out of the mountain, and saw it rolling and growing in size, as it rolled, until it filled the whole earth, thus representing the gradual, enlarging kingdom of Jesus Christ, until it would cover the face of the earth as the waters cover the sea. In this faith many of our Brethren pray for the coming of the universal reign of Christ. Isaiah, in his visions, saw a good time coming, after the Word of the Lord had been sent forth. He declared that it should accomplish that which he pleased, and it should prosper in the thing whereunto he had sent it. "Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shall come up the myrtle tree: and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

Again, from this same prophet, we have reiterated these beautiful and encouraging sayings, in reference to the Christ and the nature and glory of his power, as a result of his coming into the world: "The wolf also shall dwell with the lamb, and the leopard shall lie down with the kid; and the calf and the young lion and the fatling together; and a little child shall lead them. . . . They shall not hurt nor destroy in all my holy mountain: for the earth shall be full of the knowledge of the Lord, as the waters cover the sea."

All these things seem to point toward not only a growing church, but a time when the world will be filled with the character and spirit of his coming and ever-growing kingdom.

Again, not only have we the idea of a growing force or power, predicted by the old prophets, but also by the Christ himself, as we have it set forth in parable and teaching. In the parable of the mustard seed the Lord turns away from the discouraging results growing out of his coming into a world of sin, to save it, and goes on to show that the small movement, already started in the world by his coming, would grow and continue to grow until it would become an acknowledged power unto which men would flee as a place of refuge. Even sinners awakened to their lost and unsaved condition, would seek lodgment and safety within its protecting branches. Here we have the kingdom of Christ presented in its smallest seed form, but it began growing and continued to grow until, comparatively, it became quite large,—so large that it became a place of refuge for the needy, as the shadow of a great rock in the midst of the burning desert.

When, during our travels in the East, we came down from Damascus towards Jerusalem, the noonday sun was exceedingly hot, as there were no trees beneath whose branches we could seek shelter. We were made to feel what it meant to be in the desert land without shade or water; but as we made a turn around a hill, we saw ahead of us a great rock, and to it we went for shade. There we found several men who had, before us, found refuge in the shadow of the rock. It seemed to us a godsend, and as we enjoyed the cooling and refreshing shadow, we were made to think of the Psalmist where he says: "Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I." So, as the birds fled for shelter to the mustard tree, so the church of Jesus Christ will grow to be the sure place of refuge to the children of men, as they learn, by the teaching of the Word, to seek after God.

Again, "The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole lump was leavened." While some would make a personal application of this parable, it must be evident that it has a broader interpretation, as we study it in its true setting. The Christ was not speaking of his kingdom, as coming into the personal lives of men and women, but of his kingdom as it would grow in number, strength and power in the world, until the force and effect of his Spirit would be felt and be made manifest in, at least, the large majority of the people; or, comparatively speaking, till the whole lump or world would be leavened. This thought harmonizes with the intent and spirit of the great commission: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." What for? To condemn the world? No, not that. Jesus says: "I came not to condemn the world, but to save it." It seems to us that if it is God's purpose to condemn the world, he could do it quite as well by leaving it to continue in the darkness of sin. As Jesus Christ is the embodiment of his Word, and he says that his Word shall not return unto him void, or empty of fruit, we must come to the conclusion that it was not only the purpose of God that hearing of his Word should be a saving power, but that his purpose will prevail to the salvation of souls, and that righteousness shall prevail and cover the earth as the waters cover the sea.

We seem to believe this as a church, or why do we send missionaries to foreign lands? And why should our brethren and sisters make the great sacrifice which they do in forsaking their home land, their church associations, their fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters and friends, if only to go there to enhance the condemnation of the poor, ignorant heathen, who are already sufficiently condemned? These are all thoughts that we must take into consideration as we look into this very important subject. All missionaries make the sacrifice, and go to foreign lands with their minds and hearts filled and burning with a passion for souls, and our heart says: God bless them in this Christ-like desire and purpose.

We close with the thought of what God is doing for the salvation of the world, by opening the doors to almost every known foreign and heathen land. It is a time of opening doors to the Gospel of Jesus Christ, so that he can well say: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature," "and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world." He has promised to be with us, abundantly to bless us in every effort made to save his children from the condemnation and power of sin. May Christ help us to save ourselves by trying to save others! H. B. B.

The Life Everlasting.

We are asked for our opinion of Marie Corelli's late book, "The Life Everlasting," with George H. Doran Company, New York, publishers; net, $1.50. We do not often take the time to read fiction, but we could hardly help reading this book, after getting a good start in it. The author is a fine writer, and her pen pictures are sometimes marvelous. One goes a good ways to find better English, and easier reading. Here and there, as the story runs, may be found some splendid lessons and not a few practical hints, but, as a rule, the story is made up largely of the improbable, impossible and unreal. Running all through the book is the doctrine of transmigration, and that is what is meant by the title. It may be well to dream dreams and see visions far in advance of the attainments of even the more cultured, but in this instance the vision is wholly of the impractical. Besides, the doctrine of transmigration can be sustained neither by the Bible, nature or reason, and any vision that rests upon the the theory can never benefit society. Then, should it so happen that two soulmates could come together as husband and wife, as set forth in the story, they would never be of any value to humanity. After all, the book is interesting, even fascinating, but when one has read it, he is made to think of only the improbable and the impossible, and he can not feel that there is anything in the story of the fascinating and gifted writer that is of value to him, unless he should be more fully established in the belief that if one lives right, thinks right, and becomes the complete master of himself, he need seldom be sick, and ought not to make many mistakes or experience any failures.

Living Above Party Lines.

There always have been, and always will be, parties in the church. In the time of the apostles there were those who stood, as they thought, for Paul, while others argued for Apollos. We find little parties of this sort and others in the church today. Sometimes the party condition affects only the local congregation, then, again, it may affect a whole State District, and occasionally the Brotherhood at large. Members take sides, and wherever located they will be found working for their representative sides. Fortunate, however, is the man who need never be classed with a party in the church. He stands for the church and her principles, and moves forward in his work as though there were no parties. Should he be the shepherd of the flock, he will be found feeding all his Master's sheep, regardless of their little differences. While he may know that parties exist, and that the members of his charge are practically in two groups, he is too sensible a man to cast his lot with one group to the neglect of the other. The tendency of his methods will be to make the members of his flock all one in Christ Jesus. He labors for the unity for which the Master prayed. Not all elders, ministers and pastors seem to be able to steer clear of partyism in the church, but this is what Jesus would have them do. In fact, he would have all his faithful followers throw their influence against discords and schism in the body of Christ.

Depends on Her Bible.

One of our patrons writes us that she reads her Bible, and does not have to depend wholly on the preacher for what she, as a Christian woman, should know. She gets much help from the sermons she hears, but her knowledge of the Word of God enables her to appropriate, to her own personal good, the great truths that come from the pulpit. It would be well if we had more women who make the Written Word the man of their counsel. It would be a pleasure to preach to a congregation, largely made up of this class. Then, too, the members who are well informed in the Scriptures, should be our most helpful church workers. They ought to do good work in the Sunday-school, as well as in the prayer meeting. They ought to be the best of church standbys, such as may be relied upon to help maintain New Testament principles, and to aid in the conversion of others. Their understanding of the Gospel should enable them to do all this and even more, otherwise their knowledge is of little value to the church. The more one knows about the will of his Heavenly Father, the more he ought to be able to do for the cause he represents.

The Care of Young Members.

The Brethren Teachers' Monthly contains a splendid editorial on "Taking Care of the Young Members." It ought to be read by every Sunday-school worker in the Brotherhood. This paragraph deserves special attention:

> We are inclined to believe that the Sunday-school can do more in the way of helping to take care of the young members than many of us have ever thought it could. In fact it is one of the largest factors in this work, if it will but do its duty. In the first place, every Sunday-school teacher ought to inculcate a spirit of love and of loyalty to the church in the hearts of his pupils. This can be done by frequently and properly dropping a word in favor of the church and what she stands for. In other words, talk the church up, talk it up in no uncertain tones, either. The teacher who loves the church as Christ loved it, will be very sure to lead his class into this same love. In the next place, every teacher ought to teach carefully and positively the doctrines of the New Testament. There are too many teachers who cringe at the idea of doctrine. They do not like it, they do not like to teach it, consequently the pupils in their classes have nothing to which to anchor themselves intelligently.

The Automatic Method.

The United Brethren, says the Christian Conservator, have an automatic method of disposing of members who unite with secret societies. It is simply self-operating, and is described as follows:

> We hold that a person cannot be a member of a secret society and a member of the United Brethren church at the same time. He may be a member of a secret society and be counted as a member of the church, but not actually a member. The Discipline declares: "Any member or preacher who shall connect himself with a secret combination shall be regarded as having withdrawn from the church." This works automatically. If any person who is a member of this church joins a secret society, he is thereby regarded as having withdrawn from the church and can only be retained and considered as a member upon the condition that he sever his connection with such combination. No individual can become a member of the church who is a member of a secret society unless he severs his connection with the secret society. He may answer the questions for membership and be enrolled on the class book but is barred from membership in the church if he is a member of a secret society.

NORTHERN INDIANA.

The District Conference of Northern Indiana for 1911. was held in the Springfield church, near Wawaka, Thursday, Oct. 5. The meeting was called to order by the organization conducted by the retiring officers, Elders Manly Deeter, Frank Kreider and John W. Kitson. The delegates chose as Moderator, Eld. David Metzler; Reading Clerk, Lafayette Steele; Writing Clerk, M. Clyde Horst.

Most of the business was of a local character and significance. There are no papers for the General Conference. It was decided to coöperate with adjoining Districts we hold the General Conference in the same central place, such as Winona Lake. This was done in response to the action taken by Northern Illinois and Wisconsin. It was decided that sisters may belong to the Women's Christian Temperance Union, provided they maintain the principles of the Brotherhood, and do not neglect their church duties. Next year the District is to have a temperance meeting in connection with the Sunday-school Convention. More local Sunday-school Meetings are also provided for.

Elders David Metzler and William R. Deeter were elected to serve on Standing Committee for the Conference of 1912, at York, Pa. Elders J. H. Schrock and Eli L. Heestand are the alternates.

COVINGTON, OHIO.

Among our recent visitors, we were glad to welcome Dr. E. R. Miller and his wife, of Harrisonburg, Va. They spent a few days in Covington and attended our church services. The doctor gave an address on "The Christian Warfare." It was most helpful and inspiring to the workers here. It was broad in its scope, dealing with our duty in regard to intemperance and other evils of our day. He urged the need of every church member doing his individual work, of our taking a full share of responsibility instead of leaving the pastor to carry it all. His striking illustrations made the lesson most impressive. Our members greatly appreciated his address.

We had long looked forward to our love feast. It was held on Saturday evening, beginning at half-past 6 o'clock. Eld. John Heckman preached for us on Thursday and Friday evenings. The rain kept some of our people from attending these most helpful services. Eld. John Heckman officiated at our love feast. We were glad for the help of Elders Jacob Coppock and John Gump, and their words of encouragement linger with us. Bro. D. O. Cottrell, of Chicago, and Bro. Samuel Gump, of North Manchester, were also with us. The happy faces surrounding the table were an eloquent testimony to the joy we found in this service. Some said, "It was the best love feast we ever attended." On Sunday, Bro. Heckman preached twice to our large audience. He spoke in the morning on the love of God, as shown in his dealings with us, on the need of trust when passing under the rod,—a sermon full of comfort for troubled souls. In the evening his subject was, "Why I Love My Church." If space permitted we should like to share this helpful sermon with you.

One has been baptized since our last report. Our pastor, Bro. Geo. W. Flory, will be with us for some weeks to come and all are trying to assist him in his most arduous and responsible duties here.

DISTRICT MEETINGS OF MIDDLE INDIANA.

The Annual District Meetings of Middle Indiana were held in the Huntington City church Oct. 10-12. The meetings were well attended and a lively interest manifested in them all. The Sunday-school Day showed that this work is increasing. During the past year 143 were brought into the church from the ranks of the Sunday-school. The evening of the 10th was given to the Mission Board. They were able to make a fine report. Many were brought to Christ through the preaching of the faithful missionary evangelists. Two new churches are to be organized soon at mission points. The District Meeting also showed its confidence in the work of the Board by raising the quota for home missions from eighty cents to $1.00 per member.

The Ministerial Day, Oct. 11, was very pleasant and profitable, yet it was made solemn by the knowledge that during the past year five of our elders have passed to the great beyond. In the evening was the annual Educational Meeting. Eld. S. S. Blough, dean of the Bible School of Manchester College, gave the principal address. It was an able discourse and was listened to by a very large crowd of interested people. The educational sentiment is growing rapidly and is showing substantial fruits.

The District Meeting convened Oct. 12, with the following organization: Moderator, Frank Fisher; Reading Clerk, A. G. Crosswhite; Writing Clerk, Otho Winger. All business passed off pleasantly. One paper was sent to the Annual Conference. Much time was taken up with the reports of the various boards and committees,—thus showing that the District is doing active work along various lines. Brethren Frank Fisher and A. L. Wright will represent the District on the Standing Committee, while Brethren A. G. Crosswhite and G. E. Swihart are alternates.

During the meetings we were pleased to have the presence and assistance of the following brethren: Eld. D. C. Flory, of Virginia; Eld. D. W. Shock, of North Dakota; Eld. John Arnold, of Illinois; Eld. J. W. Kitson of Northern Indiana, Eld. J. H. Wright, of Southern Indiana, and Landis Kreider, of Cuba. The next District Conference will be held at Flora, Ind. Otho Winger, Writing Clerk.

THE WORK AT VYARA, INDIA.

Famine Conditions.

No doubt many are wondering about famine conditions here in India. We are glad to report that generally conditions are good within the entire field of our India Mission, save only in Dimjhuver. But north of our field, from Baroda on, there have been only a few inches of rain during the whole season, consequently there is famine in those parts. Cattle by the hundreds and thousands are being brought to these parts. Many of them sold, while others are hoping to save at least a portion of their flock. Laborers are migrating to other parts in search of work and, as yet, the condition of the people is fairly good. But the poor will, in time, suffer greatly and famine help will be needed, no doubt. Next week the Gujerat Conference will meet, take steps for famine relief in hand, and organize a united effort, in case there is a necessity.

A Favorable Outlook.

The work in this District is very hopeful, and we continually praise the Lord for his goodness and guidance. About two weeks ago I baptized two, and yesterday six more. Others are waiting, and it looks now as though we are on the verge of seeing the people come into the church in larger numbers. Vyara is the first of the common people on the Chakdara side to come to Christ. He was soon influential in leading others of his former village, and now it looks as though large numbers of that village will become Christians. In other villages are applicants also. The foundation is being laid and once the people see that Christianity is a practical religion,—one that really frees both soul and body,—there will be a large turning to the Lord, and we believe that the day is not far distant.

Making Ourselves Felt.

Because of the Government educational system, which in itself is good, if turned in the right channels, it is quite necessary for us to conduct a boarding school for preparing much needed workers under Christian influences. The caste people have become considerably alarmed at our activities of late,—not that we were idle before, but the results of our labors were not so manifest to them till now, and it is the talk throughout that the people are all turning to Christianity. Would that it were true!

The Enemies' Plotting.

But they have not been idle either. The two schools we started, in the villages close here, had tough times for a few days. But the prospects are good now. When the children began to come into the boarding school in some numbers, the Parsee liquor seller, the money-lender, and others, got together and plotted a story which would frighten the people. They told them that on Thursday last would be their last chance to see their children, since Sahib would that night dump them into a car and take them away. In their ignorance they never stopped to think, but, believing it to be possible, came running for their children. Remember, most of them are still not Christians. When the fathers came, we were able to instruct them better. Despite success, had these plots matured, as came, then our efforts were in vain. Nothing that we could say would affect them the least bit. They took them, but, as we expected, it was only a day or so till they began to return. Some, from another village, remained; others have since come. Others have entered from the same village, and the good work goes on. But the event has impressed us with the great need for work among the women. Hard work, but most necessary. To this end a girls' boarding school is also required.

More Room Needed.

All these years our number here has been small. Now, that there are a larger number of people here, our workers and others are much more joyful, and the interest in the work is growing. A pressing need now with us is a room large enough for worship. We ought to arrange to call all the Christians of the District together, from far and near, at least once a month, but our present meeting room is so small that it is out of the question to afford room for all. Many of them are weak and ignorant, and it will do them good to meet from time to time with those of other villages.

Parsee Oppression.

In almost every village is a Parsee. Most of them are shrewd, and work the people in such a way as to better their own condition. Often they resort to grave oppression and beating. Not long since the Parsee of a certain village went the rounds of the village, threw money into the door-ways of the houses of the people and wrote down the names of those to whom he had given the money. One man, being busy in his own field, refused to go. The Parsee came on his horse and began to beat the poor fellow. Several villagers were near by, and snatched the Parsee's whip away from him. The villagers, fearing the outcome, went to our worker at Chakdara, and he came with them to Vyara. Today the facts of the case were laid before the Chief Magistrate, and an investigation is being made.

Practical Assistance Needed.

In this same way is much of this large, aboriginal population oppressed, and in need of some one who can help them to get free from those who are living at their expense. This need will be met by Christianity and its ideals, and the influence on the mass of the people will be great. May God guide and direct this work to his own glory and praise, is our every prayer!

A. W. Ross.

Vyara, Surat District, Sept. 20.

THE ROCKFORD CHURCH.

It has been my privilege to spend a fortnight with the church at Rockford, Ill., and it seems to me worth while to write of some things I found there and some lessons learned.

I am sure that there are many of our members living in the country, who are, like I myself have been, really ignorant of the nature of the work our city pastors have to do, and the amount of good they really do. I wish more of them could enjoy the experience that has just been mine.

For a number of years, the work of Rockford has been under the control of the District Mission Board, with Bro. P. R. Keltner and wife in charge. Now it is an organized church, with Bro. Keltner as pastor. With Brother and Sister Keltner, Sister Grace Swartz is working, all three of them giving their entire time to the work. Some one may wonder what they all find to do. Well, if you were there awhile, you would soon find out. I can assure you that the work of a really successful city pastor is no sinecure. If you think that the thing needed in the city is a great preacher, you are certainly mistaken. The thing the city people need and appreciate is a man who will be a real brother to them, who will visit in their homes, will sympathize with them in both their joys and their sorrows, will give them wise and friendly counsel, and help them to help themselves. That is what the workers in Rockford have been, and, as a result, the people of that section of the city have more confidence in our workers than in any others, so much so that members of other churches having pastors on whom they might call, come to Bro. Keltner instead. While I was there, he was asked to visit a sick lady, whose pastor was in easy reach and might just as easily have been called. He is asked quite frequently to solemnize marriages, and to conduct funerals for the people of the neighborhood. Sometimes they even ask him to baptize their babies, but he draws the line at that.

The members of the church, too, have the same spirit, and I am sure that the name over the door of the church, "The Brethren Church," means something to those people that they appreciate.

And now you want to know, What of the growth of the church, and the kind of life the members live? Well, considering the number of members the Rockford church has, the attendance of other people is something remarkable, and they are a splendid class of working people, too. Those who have been added to the church in the past, as well as those who came in during these meetings, are showing a faithfulness that puts to shame the unfaithfulness of so many country members. Some of them have had a great deal to face in coming into the church and adopting her distinctive principles, but they have done it with the very noblest spirit, and not in sorrow, but in joy.

There is no great rush of people into the Rockford church, but there is a steady growth. People are being interested, taught, and helped by the daily work of the members and the special workers there. Then, when a revival meeting is held, there are always a few that are ready for church membership. This makes a steady, healthy growth.

I am glad for my two weeks there; I feel that I have learned much from Bro. Keltner that will be a help to me in my own field of labor, and I certainly did enjoy the work and association there with the members and others. May God bless the Rockford church and her faithful workers! Paul Mohler.

DEATH OF ELD. S. A. SHAVER.

Eld. Samuel A. Shaver died at his home, south of Mauertown, Va., Oct. 12, 1911, aged 82 years, 6 months and 28 days. He had been in declining health for the past two years, and was taken very ill on Wednesday evening, being unconscious from that time until death. His wife preceded him just two months and seven days. He was a minister in the Church of the Brethren for fifty-one years. He united with the church in 1860, and sixty days later was elected to the ministry. In 1876 he was ordained to the eldership. He did a great deal of church work from 1860 to 1892, traveling mostly on horseback. He was a faithful church worker to the end, being at church services Sunday, Oct. 8. On the day before he died he gave directions for the preparation of the love feast, to be held on the 14th, although he himself was too feeble to assist in the work.

Bro. Shaver was a son of Eld. Geo. Shaver, one of the charter members of the Church of the Brethren of Virginia. He selected as the text for his funeral sermon 2 Kings 4: 26, "It is well." During his ministry he preached in eight different States, and was called upon to officiate at funerals far and near. He baptized many, and performed hundreds of marriage ceremonies. He also helped to settle many church difficulties. He had charge of several churches for some years, at different places in the valley. He rode forty miles on horseback, some years ago, to preach a funeral service, and the next morning, at sunrise, was astride of his horse for another twenty-mile journey, to do the Master's work. It seemed it was never too cold, hot or stormy to keep him from service and fill his appointments.

During his eldership he installed ten ministers to the office of elder. He was respected by all who knew him. He was a deep student of the Bible, and few could explain its truths better than he. He was ever ready to lend a helping hand to his fellow-men, and is not known to have had one enemy. He will be sorely missed in the church and in the community where he lived. He is survived by two sisters.' Services were conducted at the Valley Pike church by Eld. J. Carson Miller, of Timberville, Va. He was a worthy citizen and his life was filled with deeds. He was truly the "Grand Old Man" of Shenandoah.—Copied mainly from the Harrisonburg Daily News of Oct. 13

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARKANSAS

Springdale.—Our church met in council Oct. 14. Our elder, Bro. W. S. Watts, of Brentwood, Ark., presided. We were few in number, but the Spirit of Christ was with us. On account of sickness we decided to hold two love feasts.—Nov. 18, at the Silent Grove schoolhouse, three miles northwest of Bidwell; and near Bro. Henry Hoover's home; also on Nov. 19, at Bro. Isaiah Plant's home, seven miles southeast of Springdale. Those who wish to be with us will be met at the depot, by notifying either of the parties mentioned. We also decided to purchase a tent to use in our evangelistic work, as we are not able to build a churchhouse. We invite members, especially ministers, who wish to change their location, to visit our country. Our nearest railroad station is Springdale, 7 away. He preaches for us every third Sunday; also on Saturday and Sunday night. We appreciate his services very much, but still hope for a minister to locate among us.—Viola M. Wheeler, Star Route, Springdale, Ark., Oct. 17.

CALIFORNIA

Empire.—The District Meeting of Northern California was held in the Empire church. The meeting was well attended by the members and sisters from the surrounding churches. The meetings were very interesting and helpful to all present. Oct. 9 Sister Blanche Baker came to us and gave us with her graphic three much appreciated lectures on Palestine.—Myrtle M. Julian, R. D. 3, Box 213, Modesto, Cal., Oct. 16.

Fruitvale.—We held our council Sept. 30. Our elder, Bro. M. E. Arnold, presided. One letter was read, and the elder's wife was appointed to represent our church at District Meeting, held at the Empire church, Cal. She was also sent as a delegate for our Sunday-school. At this meeting she will visit her mother near Modesto, whom she has not seen for three years.—Bro. B. F. Wolfe, who has been sick for our foothills, and appears to be much pleased with our country. For the sake of our little church at Fruitvale, we hope he will find a desirable place among us. He is right at home in the Sunday-school and among the young people. A few weeks ago, by request of her husband, Sister Alice Myers preached a farewell sermon. She spoke of the way the people lived in Noah's time; the present time; and the coming of the Son of man shall come. Sister Alice was Messenger correspondent from Fruitvale. She has been a faithful and good essays for the Christian Workers' Meeting, and is active in all lines of church work, although her health is not very strong. Are the well and strong in the church doing more than that? If not, why not?—Bro. B. Webster, Bangor, Cal., Oct. 12.

CANADA

Ethmunt.—I am now located in Saskatchewan. We have organized a Sabbath-school with twenty scholars. We have preaching services every two weeks. Oct. 1 after bad our Sunday-school children's meeting at my home, on Sec. 23, township 14, range 24, west of the principal meridian. We had a very enjoyable day. The nearest church to us is that of Bro. Andrew Hollinger, of Milden, south of us. There are only four members living here, and we are twenty miles apart.—D. Wolfe Ethmunt, Sask. Can., Oct. 14.

COLORADO

Denver.—The Denver church has been without a pastor since Eld. C. E. Wolf left us, Oct. 4, but that did not prevent the members from having services. Oct. 8, after bad our school, we discussed the matter how best to assist our pastor, how to increase the attendance, etc. Some very good suggestions were offered, one of which I wish to mention. Sister Elrod gave his experience of how he and his wife started a Sunday-school in Kansas, in a community where there was only ones who professed religion. At times things looked very dark, but by loyalty and perseverance they succeeded, and there is now a large congregation at that place. I believe that work at mission points should be carried on largely to suit surrounding conditions, and that, in order to increase our attendance, we should use all lawful means. Loyalty is a great thing, and if we, as members, were more loyal, much better results could be obtained. Sociability is also good. While many of our members, perhaps, are acquainted with one another, still we could improve in many ways. Oct. 15 we had together. F. Wolfe was with us and gave us a short talk. Eld. L. F. Love, who has been of great service to the Denver church, is expected to return shortly, and will assist us in the work. Bro. John Robinson, who is to be our pastor, will be with us about Nov. 1.—H. F. Caylor, 165 South Clarkson St., Denver, Colo., Oct. 20.

Flagler.—I have charge of a mission point eighteen miles from the church. Last spring I held a series of meetings and baptized two. One was sixty-five years old. Others are counting the cost.—L. J. Redding, Flagler, Colo., Oct. 13.

Grand Junction.—Oct. 1 the Grand Junction church ordered an excellent program at the country house. The purpose of this program was to increase our interest in Mission love for every line of missionary work, and greater activity in the Mission work. Oct. 8 we had our love feast at the Mission, with over 150 present. We are pleased with the efforts that are being put forth by the various denominations of the city to keep Grand Junction dry. The Brethren have always been strictly a temperance people in every way, but especially in the sense of prohibition.—Mrs. Ida M. West Main St., Grand Junction, Colo., Oct. 13.

Rockyford.—Our church met in council Sept. 7. Eld. David Hamm presided, Brethren G. Nevinger and Henry Talhelm were elected delegates to our District Meeting. Bro. Ray Peltier was appointed solicitor for the Brethren Publishing House. Our love feast will be held Dec. 2.—Clara Walker Miller, Rockyford, Colo., Oct. 13.

IDAHO

Weiser.—Sister Sadie Miller was with us Sept. 24 and 25. She gave us some very interesting talks, which were enjoyed by all present. The collection for the India Mission was $14. May we have more visits of this kind.—Mrs. Lizzie Stuber Miller.—Malinda Russell, 414 E. Commercial St., Weiser, Idaho, Oct. 11.

ILLINOIS

Batavia.—Sept. 24 was our rally day. A very interesting program was given. Sept. 27 Miss Chinese Woman—Moy Way and Moy Quang,—from Chicago, gave inspiring talks both morning and evening. The collection for our Mission school is quite encouraging. Our church met in council Oct. 6. Our elder, James M. Moore, presided, and at the time the church was organized. Officers were elected. All business was disposed of in a satisfactory manner. Oct. 15 the Union Christian Workers' Meeting, of Northern Illinois and Southern Wisconsin, was held at this place. The main topics for discussion were Sunday-school Work and the Social Side of the Social Activity of the Christian Workers' Society. Eld. I. B. Trout preached for us in the morning and evening. Oct. 22 our love feast will be held Nov. 12.—Anna Eshelman, 137 Church Street, Batavia, Ill., Oct. 17.

Hickory Grove.—We have just closed our series of meetings which began Oct. 1. We had one week consecration services prior to the meetings. Our pastor, Eld. J. H. Moherman, did the preaching. We had large crowds each evening. Two souls put on Christ in baptism, and there are four applicants. Our aged brother, Jacob Delp, was with us Oct. 15.—Anna Pierbaker, R. R. 3, Box 113, Mansfield, Ill., Oct. 19.

Mansfield.—Bro. J. F. Burton closed a two weeks' series of meetings Sept. 8. One was baptized and two others will be in the near future. Our council meeting was held Sept. 23. The annual visit was reported, and the church was found to be in a good condition. One young man was baptized Sept. 10.—John J. Swartz, Mansfield, Ill., Oct. 14.

INDIANA

Bachelor Run.—Our church met in council today at the Flora house. The committee reported further arrangements for the dividing of the church territory. Their work was in five different districts, and the report of all was given as a whole, and the committee was relieved of their duty. The reparation of the church was left to the congregation. The annual church visit was reported, and Bro. J. W. Norris, of Louisville, was to have charge of the meeting. Sister Norris will begin a series of meetings at the country house tonight. We have one applicant for baptism.—Mattie Welty, Flora, Ind., Oct. 14.

Beaver Dam.—Oct. 1 our little band commenced a series of meetings with Bro. William Eikenberry, of Ft. Wayne, Ind. On account of the continued wet weather the farmers have been unable to gather their crops. It rained nearly every night and, consequently, the congregations were small. Our meetings closed Oct. 8. We had no conversions. Bro. Lampin's sermons were strong and highly spiritual. We held our love feast on Saturday, Oct. 7, with Bro. Lampin officiating. A few of the neighboring ministers, Bro. Jesse Beechler Leckrone, Markley and Byerly were among the ministers present.—Lydia A. Miller, R. R. 2, Box 21.

Goshen (West Side).—Bro. Walter Warstler, of Goshen, began a few days' meetings in the evening at the Methodist schoolhouse, in the suburbs of Goshen, Sept. 24. Nine put on Christ in baptism. Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa, came to labor with us Oct. 8. We are in the midst of a series of meeting. Four have thus far decided for Christ. One has been baptized.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, R. R. 6, Box 100, Goshen, Ind., Oct. 14.

Huntington.—Our love feast was held Oct. 7. Four young ministers and our former elder, Bro. J. H. Wright, were with us. Bro. Lewis Shively, of Roann, Ind., preached our Sunday-school. Bro. Wright preached an excellent sermon. At the close of the meeting he sang a very inspiring song, of his own composition.—Mrs. Ella Wright, Brick Church, R. R. 1, Grover L. Wine will soon preach his farewell sermon, and bid us adieu.—Lizzie Brick, Huntington, Ind., Oct. 14.

La Porte.—Oct. 14 we had our love feast. It was a very spiritual meeting. The Spirit of God was manifested. Visitors enjoyed the privileges of breaking the bread and passing the cup. On the following day election was held and Bro. J. W. Snyder was called to the deacon's office. Our love feasts were duly installed. The Sunday-school hour was improved with very interesting talks on the lesson.—Mrs. Ella M. Swartz, and Sisters F. W. Lammedee and Anna Peterson. The sermon was preached by Bro. Peter Forney.—Merchant, R. R. 9, Box 124, La Porte, Ind., Oct. 16.

Palestine.—Bro. J. W. Norris, of the Landess church, 1nd., began services here Sept. 19 and continued two weeks. Sister Nora Ross, of the Spring Creek church, conducted the song services. Sept. 24 our love feast was held. The attendance was not so large, but the attention was excellent. The fairy weather favored the meeting. Our social meeting and attendance not being so good as it would have been otherwise. We all enjoyed the singing. Many visitors were present.—Sarah Bridge, R. D. 1, Reynolds, Ind., Oct. 19.

Somerset (Vernon house).—On the evening of Oct. 5 Bro. J. A. Miller and wife, of Stockport, Ind., were with us. Bro. Miller declared a very able discourse, which was much appreciated. The house was filled with attentive listeners.—Oma M. Rife, R. D. 2, Converse, Ind., Oct. 16.

Wabash.—Bro. Lewis Shively, of Roann, Ind., was with us from other congregations. Eleven ministers were here besides the elder in charge. Two were elected and officiated. On Sunday morning the brethren gave us some good talks, which we listened to with interest.—Lulu Crumrine, Wabash, Ind., Oct. 14.

IOWA

Fairview church met in council Oct. 14, with Eld. C. G. Ogden presiding. We decided to have our love feast Oct. 28, at 2 P. M. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized, with Bro. Lon W. Price as president and Sister Susie Ogden as secretary. We closed a very interesting series of meetings Sept. 17, conducted by Bro. J. W. Lear, who proclaimed the Gospel very powerfully. While there were no accessions, the members were inspired to greater activity in the Master's work, and good impressions were made on others.—Jno. H. Price, R. R. 3, Unionville, Iowa, Oct. 14.

Prairie City.—Our church enjoyed a real spiritual ten days' series of meetings, held by Bro. Galen B. Royer. Much good work was done, and we are glad to report 14 for membership, also a forceful missionary sermon on Wednesday evening of our District Meeting, which was held with us Oct. 5, and was inspired. This meeting will long be remembered. When an invitation was given, fourteen responded to the fold, which caused the church to rejoice. Bro. Deardorff remained with us one day, at which time a young man came out on the Lord's side. He was taken into the church Wednesday, and went on his way rejoicing.—Jennie Alexander, R. D. 1, Monroe, Iowa, Oct. 16.

Waterloo.—Since our last report we have had three accessions to the church by baptism. We feel that there has been a quickening in all lines of church work. Just before the opening of school, Bro. Roy Dilling, of Bethany Bible School, Chicago, conducted a two weeks' term of singing in our church; also one term in the country church. At the close he had a concert consisting of selections from both schools in the city church. We enjoyed this very much. Five classes in our Sunday-school are using graded work. It is certainly a great improvement. Our love feast was held Oct. 14. Bro. Zuck, of Clarence, Missouri, was with us. Bro. Zuck is one encouraging church on Sunday forenoon, and in the evening he preaches at the Mission. Both services were greatly appreciated.—Lizzie A. Witter, 1002 Randolph St., Waterloo, Iowa, Oct. 19.

KANSAS

Pretonia church met in council Sept. 29. Eld. E. B. Joyce presided. Our aged brother, Eld. A. Hutchison, was chosen delegate to District Meeting; Bro. E. E. Joyce, alternate. Sister Hutchison delegate to Southeastern Kansas Christian Workers' Meeting; Bro. J. N. Miller, alternate. Brethren A. Hutchison and J. E. Studebaker were chosen as a local temperance committee. Bro. C. D. Hilton is to begin a series of meetings for us Nov. 5, to be followed by a love feast Nov. 11.—Mrs. Ella E. Studebaker, Pretonia, Kans., Oct. 17.

Lanark.—We expect to hold a series of evangelistic services six miles south of the city. The meetings will begin during the first part of November, and we hope to have Bro. Hilton for a definite time. They will be conducted by Eld. Moses Beardorf, Eld. Wade, Isaac Michael Keller, Larned, Kans., Oct. 18.

Maple Grove.—Lizzie Smith, a young lady, was baptized. Two letters of membership were also received.—Minnie D. Beeghly, R. R. 2, Hutchinson, Kans., Oct. 17.

Siste Creek.—Our council met at the Conway Springs church Friday. Much business was disposed of. One was received by letter. We will begin a series of meetings Nov. 5. We will close with a love feast. This was the time for the election of officers for the coming year. Eld. Jacob Beahm, who we postponed that work till some future time. Bro. Arthur Sherard was elected secretary of missions.—J. J. Bowser, Conway Springs, Kans., Oct. 14.

Vermillion.—Eleven persons have put on Christ in baptism at this place, and one by the waters of the river. Almost persuaded. The meetings are now in progress, conducted by Bro. P. E. McCune.—A. J. Culp, Bushong, Kans., Oct. 19.

MARYLAND

Bear Creek.—This congregation met in council Sept. 12 with Eld. Amos Hoover presiding. The church selected Bro. I. W. Abernathy as elder in charge for the coming year. Bro. I. W. Abernathy is a deep student of the Bible, and preached seven very interesting sermons. Oct. 7 was the day set for the ordination of Bro. Warren Myers, of this congregation. While the weather was very unpleasant, the attendance was large, and the services were very much enjoyed. Bro. I. W. Abernathy remained among us and preached three inspiring sermons.—William A. Spiker, Accident, Md., Oct. 16.

Maple Grove.—We closed our series of meetings Oct. 8 with a love feast. Eld. Amos Hoover, of Accident, Md., was very inspiring sermons. Three came out on the Lord's side and were received by baptism. Bro. Charles Bender, of Pinto, Maryland, visited us.—Mrs. Ida Miller, Md., Oct. 14.

Ridgely church met in council Oct. 11. Our elder, Bro. S. K. Pike, presided. We decided to use the "Kingdom Songs" in part of our services. Our series of meetings will begin with Eld. Jesse Ebbert, and he will be with us, the Lord willing, will be Dec. 16. Bro. T. F. Imler was chosen as our elder. Bro. T. F. Imler was chosen delegate to the Christian Workers' Meeting; Sister Alice Brumbaugh, secretary. Bro. A. C. Pyle was chosen delegate to the Sunday-school Meeting; Emma Ziegler, secretary. Bro. D. S. Stayer was reelected as the solicitor for the Brethren's Visitor. Church reelected treasurer. Nov. 19 we will hold a temperance meeting. There will be morning and evening sessions.—Deborah King, Ridgely, Md., Oct. 16.

Welty.—Our love feast, held at this place Oct. 7, was well attended, and the spirit of worship was with us, making it very much strengthened. One young sister was baptized after the examination. Our series of meetings will be conducted by Bro. Adam Hollinger, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., began a series of meetings, to continue two weeks.—Susanna M. Newcomer, R. D. 4, Smithsburg, Md., Oct. 14.

MICHIGAN

Beaverton church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. Wm. Neff, presided. The existing brethren elected five members to be in love and union at this place. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, and the brethren expended to be present at the meeting. We expect to hold a singing school in the near future. The church decided to build sheds on our church lot. As the few scattered members live so far apart for the preaching services, the church decided to send a minister there every four weeks. Bro. Neff spoke in the forenoon.—Kate Patterson, Beaverton, Mich., Oct. 7.

Covert church met in council Oct. 14. Elders Geo. E. Stone and C. L. Wilkins were with us. Eld. Stone was reelected as our elder for one year. Bro. Percy Hoffman was advanced to the eldership and, with his wife, duly installed. We intend to have a series of meetings this winter, if arrangements can be made.—Cora Carter, R. R. 1, Lacon, Mich., Oct. 29.

Mentor.—We met in council Sept. 23, with our elder, Bro. J. M. Lair, presiding. Sept. 30 we held our love feast, beginning at 2 P. M. About sixty members communed. Elders Frank Gilbert and J. M. Lair were present. The latter officiated. Bro. Gilbert preached for us on Sunday forenoon, and Bro. Lair in the evening.—Rose Weiler, Copemish, Mich., Oct. 14.

MINNESOTA

Morrill.—We met in council Oct. 7, with the home elder, Bro. Jesse Wise, presiding. Our love feast will be held at 2 P. M. We also rejoice over another one coming out on the Lord's side, since our last report.—Ora Carter, Foley, Minn., Oct. 13.

MISSOURI.

Berry Schoolhouse.—I commenced a series of meetings at this place Oct. 8, with a good attendance and the very best of attention. This is a mission point of the Leeton church. The Brethren have been preaching here for a number of years. This is the fourth series of meetings I have conducted at this place.—Moses Cruea, 1405 Eastern Avenue, Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 14.

NEBRASKA.

Logan Grove church held a two weeks' meeting beginning Sept. 9, conducted by Eld. Levi Snell, of Cambridge, Nebr. We feel encouraged in the work at this place, although none were added to our number. We had our love feast Sept. 23. The meetings closed with a good attendance.—Ingabee Andrews, Gandy, Nebr., Oct. 14.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Bowdon Valley church met in council Oct. 14, with Eld. McCann presiding. We had a good meeting. It was decided to call our church the Bowdon Valley church.—Mrs. Arthur Price, Shaley, N. Dak., Oct. 20.

Ray church met in council Oct. 7, with our elder, Bro. J. G. Wagaman, in charge. Considerable business was transacted. Bro. O. W. Gordon was reelected Sunday-school superintendent for the coming year. Bro. N. Schechtner, of Willston, N. Dak., was with us. The following Sunday Bro. Keiner preached for us at 12 M. Since our last report five more souls have been born into the kingdom through baptism.—T. G. Gordon, Wheelock, N. Dak., Oct. 14.

OHIO.

North Star.—We held our love feast Oct. 7, Bro. Henry Baker officiated. Brethren S. Z. Smith, Joseph Groff, F. P. Snyder and Eld. Chas. Wise were also present for the purpose of the sacred emblems for the first time. Eld. Abram Brumbaugh officiated. Other ministers present were Brethren U. R. McCorkle, C. Bryan, Ezra Nolbrandt and Eld. Jacob and Edwin Royer. Three of the ministers present were brethren who were born and raised in this church and are now serving the Master in other fields of labor. Bro. Joseph Studebaker, of Bethel, conducted the meeting. On the following morning a children's meeting was held, conducted by Bro. McCorkle, which was valuable lessons were given to old and young. After the children's meeting a collection of over $8 was taken in behalf of the temperance cause. Bro. McCorkle gave a very helpful instructive address on this evening. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely. The attendance for the third quarter averaged 104.—Kathryn M. Royer, R. D. 49, Union City, Ind., Oct. 12.

OKLAHOMA.

Red River church met in council Sept. 28. Four letters of membership were granted, among which were those of Brother and Sister A. G. Fillmore, who recently moved to California. Brother Fillmore is an active minister in the part of Oklahoma. Bro. Fillmore has had continuous oversight of this church since he organized it, and we feel that his help and counsel, as the work here is somewhat difficult and the members scattered. There is still a debt resting on our churchhouse, and arrangements were made to meet the amount due.—Gay Nill, Hollister, Okla., Oct. 16.

OREGON.

Mohawk Valley.—Our church met in council Oct. 6, with our elder, Bro. H. H. Keim, of Newberg, Oregon, presiding. Our love feast will be held Nov. 5. Bro. Keim will be with us at our love feast, and we expect him to remain with us a few days. We had a grand rest and refreshment season and up our cemetery and church grounds. The writer was appointed church correspondent and agreed to write church notes. We had a good council meeting. Bro. Keim gave us good advice. He remained with us from Oct. 5 to 8, and preached four good sermons for us. One brother was baptized a short time ago. Our dear sister, Nancy Bahr, of Eugene, Oregon, was with us in our council meeting, as we are her church home. Sister here, Sister Bahr has offered to the Mission Board a house and a lot and paid a half of ground for the church as a home for a minister. We should be very glad to have a good minister locate with us. This is a fine healthful location, also with good water and pure mountain air. This home is close to our churchhouse. Who will come and help us?—Sarah Bricker, Mabel, Oregon, Oct. 16.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Fairview church met in council Aug. 31. Our elder, Bro. Hiram Hilbish, presiding. Two letters of membership in love were received. Our children's meeting, Sept. 16, was well attended. Many valuable lessons were given by Sister Elizabeth Amos Hottenstein, Hiram Gibble and Linnaeus Longenecker. The meeting was brought inspiringly to a close, and we all feel that we were sitting together in heavenly places in Christ Jesus.—Elmer H. Heisey, R. D. 3, Manheim, Pa., Oct. 18.

Lost Creek church met in council Sept. 29, preparatory to our love feast, Oct. 7. Eld. Wiley Lehman, of Mt. Pleasant, Falkenstein, of Elizabethtown, Pa., was with us and the same evening began a series of meetings, which continued one week, closing with a love feast on the following Saturday evening. The next day he preached to a large concourse of people. After the morning service we took up a collection of $18.22 for missionary purposes. We also took up a collection for the poor on the evening communion. Eld. Wiley Falkenstein officiated at the love feast. He preached eleven inspiring sermons. Two were received by baptism, Bro. Harvey R. D. 2, Box 80, Mifflintown, Pa., Oct. 3.

Lower Conemaugh.—An enjoyable love feast was held in the Mohler meetinghouse, of this congregation Oct. 14 and 15. Members of like precious faith from other congregations communed with us. A large number of spectators were also present also. The visiting ministers present were Bro. B. F. Lightner, of Martinsburg, Pa., Bro. Daniel Hoffman, of Maugansville, Md., Bro. D. H. Wilder, of Harrisburg, Pa., Bro. W. G. Gnagey, of Mount Springs, Pa., and Bro. Jacob Hoover, of Dillsburg, Pa. Bro. Cook did not speak, but gave the opportunity to the other ministers present to occupy the time with earnest exhortations. Bro. Lightner officiated. One certificate of membership was received. Bro. Wilder, of New Windsor, Md., had four of a series of meetings, to be held at Mechanicsburg, Pa., beginning Feb. 3, 1912.—Clarence E. Long, Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 21.

Quemahoning.—Bro. Quincy Holsopple and wife spent several days visiting among the members of the Stpesville church. He gave us a talk on Sunday morning, Oct. 8 on "Problems of the Missionary on the Field," and in the evening he preached on the subject: "The True Motive for Living a Christian Life." An offering of $12.15 was taken for their benefit.—Mrs. W. H. Blough, Boswell, Pa., Oct. 12.

Red Bank.—A ten days' revival held in this church, beginning Sept. 30 and closing Oct. 9, resulted in seven for the church. Seven were received by baptism and two were reclaimed. We were assisted by Bro. P. J. Blough, of Hooversville, Pa. Our love feast was held on Saturday evening, Oct. 7. Bro. Blough officiated. Our church has been much strengthened spiritually, as well as numerically, as a result of the good messages delivered by Bro. Blough.—L. R. Holsinger, R. D. 5, New Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 17.

Shade Creek.—Our church met in council Oct. 3, in the Daisytown house. Eld. D. M. Adams, presided, assisted by Eld. Peter Knavel. Three letters of membership were granted and six were received. Bro. D. M. Adams, who has served us so diligently as pastor for two years, has accepted a call from another congregation. His resignation came as a surprise to many. During Bro. Adams's pastoral work in our congregation it has been brought to a highly commendable place. Our love feast was held in the Daisytown house, Oct. 5. Eld. Peter Knavel officiated. A large number of members communed.—Mrs. Lovie Lee Cook, R. D. 1, Box 24, Central Lewis, Pa., Oct. 17.

Stony Creek.—The Annville Sunday-school held a children's meeting Oct. 8. Brethren S. A. Hottenstein and H. K. Obet addressed the children. Bro. Hottenstein delivered the children's meeting Oct. 15. Brethren Nathan Martin and R. W. Schlosser spoke in the evening meeting. Bro. Martin, one of our faithful ministers, was in Montgomery County, recently, where he spent some time in the evangelistic field.—Edgar A. Hoffer, Schaefferstown, Pa., Oct. 18.

Summit Mills congregation convened in council Oct. 5, with Eld. D. Engle presiding. Our revival meeting, conducted by Bro. David M. Adams, closed Oct. 16, with a large congregation present. Bro. Adams is a faithful worker. Bro. Adams delivered thirteen very instructive, inspiring sermons. He labored diligently and prayerfully and was greatly blessed in its purity and simplicity. The church was greatly edified and many deeply united in love through his faithful efforts. Bro. Adams has won many friends in this part of the Master's vineyard, and we appreciated his stay among us. As a result of his labors and the prayers of God's people, seven were received by baptism. One of the most significant and deeply spiritual meetings ever held in the history of the church of this congregation was held, Oct. 15. Bro. Adams officiated. About 150 members communed. Bro. Jacob Hoover, of Johnstown, Pa., was present; also many brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations. Bro. Hoover gave a talk. Letter of membership has been received.—Olive M. Saylor, Stoystown, Pa., Oct. 21.

Upper Cumberland church held her love feast at the Huntsdale church Sept. 30 and Oct. 1. We had a very pleasant and spiritual time. Ministers present: Brethren Jacob Hollinger, were Lemuel Fouch, A. M. Hollinger, Jacob Hollinger and Israel Wolfe. Bro. Jacob Hollinger officiated. Bro. Wolfe remained with us two weeks, conducting a series of meetings. The best of interest was manifested by members, and he very richly fed with spiritual food by our dear brother, who labored so earnestly for the salvation of souls. On Sunday afternoon, Oct. 1, seven were added to the fold of Christ by baptism. One more awaits the rites of baptism.—A. J. Hollinger, R. D. 2, Box 24, Boiling Springs, Pa.

Woodbury.—Our love feast, was a means of grace to all. About 150 members communed. Eld. D. M. Gnagey, of Mt. A. Stayer, and Bro. Abram Replogle were the visiting ministers. Abram Replogle was reelected to the ministry. He was held for a minister and three deacons, which resulted in calling Bro. Abram Replogle and Bro. Jacob Replogle, Joseph Frederick, Nelson Guyer and Andrew Smith to the office of deacon. The deacons were duly installed, after the Sunday morning, Oct. 15, by Eld. D. M. Gnagey. Bro. began a series of meetings in the Holsinger house Oct. 14.—J. Stayer, R. D. 1, Woodbury, Pa., Oct. 12.

TENNESSEE.

Limestone.—Having been called to the Walnut Grove church, I, in company with Bro. Hendricks, left here Oct. 13, and at their love feast, I left home on Friday and arrived at Taylor's Valley on Saturday, in time for preaching at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M. a church service was held, and Brethren S. E. Lewis and Frank Hendricks were present. The members were glad in their wives duly installed. After that a love feast was engaged in. On Sunday morning much interest was taken in the Sunday-school. Preaching as held from 11 A. M. to 12:30, and at 11 A. M. and 7 P. M. we had preaching services, which closed with a good day. All were in attendance and much interest was manifested. This church has been under the care of Eld. J. C. Moyers, who, with his cowokers, has done well, as the church seems to be alive in their work. Eld. J. C. Moyers preached a series of meetings, and by rail about fifty miles from any organized church, except Bristol.—P. D. Reed, Limestone, Tenn., Oct. 18.

Milwee.—Our love feast was held Oct. 7. Eld. Clark officiated. Thirty-two surrounded the Lord's table. It was an inspiring feeling. Bro. Wimmer preached in the English order prevailed during the entire meeting. Bro. Clark preached two good sermons. Bro. Wimmer preached a good sermon one in the evening.—J. W. Dinsmore, Surgoinsville, Tenn., Oct. 20.

TEXAS.

Bethel church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. J. Wilmore, presiding. Eld. J. Wimmer was with us. This meeting was followed by a love feast with Bro. Wimore officiating. Bro. Wimmer preached a good sermon. Two members as being in the faith, and in love and union. With the consent of the congregation, we took no ordination at this time. Bro. Geo. Wales, with his wife, was ordained to the eldership. Bro. Wimmer tendered his resignation as our presiding elder. Bro. Wimmer has been with us for three years as our housekeeper. We will now have preaching each Sunday evening.—Mrs. Ida Wales, Box 1, Bethel, Texas, Sunday-School Workers' Meeting and the forenoon preaching services. Bro. J. A. Miller, of Bethel, was with us and did good by giving us special lessons from the Book of Revelation. He will be with us till Nov. 1. Bro. Miller is one of our faithful workers and his talks on the Book of Revelation are very instructive.—Lee Daddiman, R. D. 1, Kendry, Texas, Oct. 20.

VIRGINIA.

Elk Run.—The members of the Belle Valley Mission, of the Elk Run congregation, met in church council at the Craigville house, Saturday, Oct. 14, at 2 P. M. Eld. D. M. Zimmerman presided. The annual visit was made by Brethren C. H. Bowman, Jacob Wine and Wm. Wine, and reports were visited. Six members were missed on account of absence. Church work was encouraged. The home of the congregation, Va., gave us a very interesting talk on "Pluralism of Authority."—Edna Layman, R. D. 1, Catawba, Va., Oct. 16.

Roanoke City.—We held our love feast Oct. 14, with a good attendance. Brethren Moherman and Oberholtzer, of Daleville, were with us and participated in the services, which was a very refreshing talk for us. The feast was much enjoyed, and did us much good. On Sunday Bro. Moherman preached for us, giving us another feast of good things. We expect Bro. I. S. Long, of India, to be with us on Sunday, Oct. 29, to conduct a two weeks' series of meetings. Bro. J. A. Hoover has been conducting a singing class for the last five or six weeks, which has been well attended.—Homer E. Trout, Vinton, Va., Oct. 18.

WASHINGTON.

North Yakima.—On the evenings of Oct. 12 and 13 we were given two splendid talks by Sister Sadie Miller. The attendance was good and all were deeply interested in hearing her. A collection was taken for mission work. Our love feast will be held Nov. 4 at 2 P. M.—Amy Eshelman, Dayle, 762 East Yakima Ave., North Yakima, Wash., Oct. 19.

Tacoma.—Our church met in council on the Saturday evening, Bro. Fitz, of Seattle, Wash., officiated. Fifty-five members surrounded the Lord's table. Quite a number of our friends witnessed the impressive service. On Sunday evening the series of meetings closed. Bro. A. Hutchings preached fourteen inspiring sermons. The members were much encouraged and edified. A number who are still outside.—Elsie Garman, 818 South Fiftieth Street, Tacoma, Wash., Oct. 12.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Allegheny Chapel.—Our church met in council Sept. 1, at 10 A. M. Some business was transacted, and five letters of membership were granted. Bro. Jacob Gnirk presided. Our love feast was held Sept. 2, Bro. Gnirk officiating. Our surrounded the Lord's table. Bro. John Glick officiated. Bro. John Glick, of Bridgewater College, spent part of the vacation with us. He preached a number of excellent sermons, and did quite a good deal of house-to-house visiting. There persons united with the church, and we think several others are counting for the Master. Bro. John Glick may return some time with us next year.—Chas. Spencer, Bartow, W. Va., Oct. 18.

FALLEN ASLEEP

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord."

Bowman, Bro. L. B., died Sept. 23, 1911, in the bounds of the Thousand Oak congregation, Va., aged 69 years, 8 months and 13 days. He united with the church some years ago, and lived a consistent member. About four years ago he partly lost the use of his limbs, and was almost helpless until his death. Services by the writer.—B. W. Neff, Quicksburg, Va.

Calvert, Bro. Griffith, born in Maple City, Greene Co., Pa., fell asleep in Christ, April, 1911, aged 81 years, 4 months and 9 days. He was married to Mary Walker. They spent sixty-seven years in married life together. To this union were born three daughters and one son. Bro. Calvert was a member of the Church of the Brethren for a number of years. He united with the church in his youth, and was a faithful member of the church and was anointed. He is survived by his parents, four children and fifteen grandchildren. Services at the Branch house by Bro. A. S. Thomas, assisted by Bro. J. W. Lewis. Interment in the cemetery near Aleppo.—R. Miller, R. D. 3, Bridgewater, Va.

Fike, Joseph Franklin, son of Bro. Hearley and Sister Myrtle Fike, born Oct. 11, 1907, died of diphtheria, Oct. 5, 1911, aged 4 years, 1 month and 24 days. He was sick only a short and three brothers. His mother preceded him just two weeks ago. His grandmother died only a few days previous to the Maple Spring cemetery. Following the doctor's advice, funeral services were deferred.—Pearl A. Hamsteed, Eglon, W. Va.

Fitzwater, Bro. Jacob, died Sept. 17, 1911, at Pitzwater, died at her home, Port Providence, Montgomery Co., Pa., Sept. 15, 1911, aged 71 years, 6 months and 15 days. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren for many years. She was preceded in death by Jacob Fitzwater, Upper Providence, and a great temperance worker. She is survived by her husband and one daughter, Mrs. Annie Hoover, with whom she made her home. All the children were present at the house by Eld. J. T. Myers and Bro. C. F. McKee. Interment in the Greentree cemetery.—Frances P. Famous, R. D. 1, Phoenixville, Pa.

Fox, Sister Caroline, born in Hancock County, Ohio, Aug. 16, 1849, died in Bethel Township, Fulton County, Ohio, of a complication of diseases, Sept. 18, 1911, aged 62 years and 21 days. She was married to Jacob Fox, Jan. 1, 1874. Sister Cox united with the Church of the Brethren in her youth, and lived a faithful member until her death. She had an abiding faith in God, and was anointed a few days before her death. Services by the writer.—I. L. Berkey, R. D. 1, Goshen, Ind.

Gangue, Sister Martha Jane, nee Ladd, born in Pike County, Ill., Jan. 7, 1847, died at her home in Mt. Carmel, Ill., aged 64 years, 9 months and 19 days. She was married to Eld. William Gangue, Dec. 25, 1867. To this union were born nine children, two daughters and one son. Services by Bro. M. Flory, assisted by Eld. J. S. Brubaker. Interment in Mt. Carmel cemetery.—Mamie Gibson, Girard, Ill.

Hoover, Sister Susanna, wife of Bro. C. P. and Sister Emma E. Hoover, born Feb. 13, 1910, died Oct. 11, 1911, of heart trouble, aged 1 year, 7 months and 28 days. She was apparently well on the day of her death. Funeral services by the writer, at Shoal's Point M. E. church, south. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Mrs. Ella Hoover, R. D. 1, Box 24, Delaney, Fruitland, Md.

Killian, Sister Elizabeth, wife of Christian Killian, born in Germany, Oct. 23, 1845, died in the bounds of the Pine Creek congregation, Ill., Sept. 6, 1911, aged 65 years, 10 months and 13 days. At the age of one and a half years she came with her parents to this country, locating in Ogle County. In 1866 they came to Elkhart County, Ind., where she united in marriage to Christian Killian July 2, 1866. To this union twelve children were born, seven of whom died in the spirit world. Two sons and one daughter live in Oregon, the rest reside in Illinois. In the year 1874 she, with her family, united with the German Reformed church, but Oct. 26, 1902, during a series of meetings conducted by the writer, she united with the Church of the Brethren, and remained faithful until her death. She is survived by her husband, ten children, two sisters and one brother. Short services were held at the house by Eld. Jacob Hildebrand, and the funeral services proper at Nappanee, Ind., by the writer, assisted by Jacob Hildebrand.—Daniel Wysong, Nappanee, Ind.

King, Bro. D. M., born in Miffin County, Pa., Dec. 29, 1839, died Sept. 21, 1911, in the bounds of the Sidney church, Ohio, aged 71 years, 8 months and 22 days. In 1860 he moved with his parents to Sidney, Ohio, and located on the farm where he died. On the 19th of May, 1864, he was joined in wedlock to Miss Leah Kauffman, of Sidney, Ohio, formerly of Pennsylvania. To this union one son and seven daughters were born. Two preceded him in

CORRECTIONS.

In the Conference offering, at the close of the World-wide report, under "Unclassified," are two items, $10 and $5, for which the names or notation accompanied these donations, but we discover that they should be credited to Franklin Grove congregation, Northern Illinois, and Bell Branch congregation, Middle Indiana, respectively.

In the Conference offering credits were given to the Chicago Sunday-school Extension Society Ohio, for the amount $20.25, credited to Springfield congregation, Southern Ohio, and Eastern District of Ohio, and the amount, $66.43, should be credited to Pleasant Valley Creek congregation instead of Springfield.

In the Conference offering, World-wide, under Northeastern Kansas, the $25 credited to Chippewa congregation should have been credited to Appanoose congregation.

We have been a misunderstanding, been crediting the donations from the Eastern Shore of Maryland to the Ephrata congregation. These donations should have been credited to Eastern Pennsylvania.

Under totals of India Mission in August Visiter the amount of Correction should be $133.11 as per $949.49. This should have been $166.38, and India mission receipts must therefore be reduced accordingly.

Carrying forward of August the General Mission Board sent out 112,405 pages of tracts.

DEATHS.

their childhood. Six survive him. Almost a half century ago he united with sister's boys and sorrow of the past five years he was afflicted with hay fever and asthma. To evade suffering he spent two months each fall for five years in the northern part of Michigan. Upon his arrival there, two years ago, Aug. 15, he experienced a peculiarly serious attack. He returned once and Aug. 26, 1909, was affected by a paralytic stroke on his left side, which disabled him almost entirely. For the past eight months he was confined to his bed. Sept. 19 he had another stroke, which resulted in his death. Fifteen years he served as elder in Church of the Brethren. Six months later he was elected to the ministry, and was also appointed to the eldership. He ever adorned his Christian profession and served faithfully in both offices, especially until about two years ago, when he resigned, because of his physical condition. Services by the writer at his home. Text, 2 Sam. 3: 38.—S. Z. Smith, Milford, Ind.

Kinsey, Bro. Noah, born on the old homestead near Salem, Montgomery Co., Ohio, Oct. 25, 1834, died Sept. 28, 1911, aged 76 years, 11 months and 3 days. He was the son of Jacob and Susan Kinsey. March 18, 1858, he was married to Elizabeth Miller. To them were born two sons and six daughters. One son preceded him in death. For nearly half a century he was a member of the Church of the Brethren. He leaves a sorrowing wife, one son and six daughters. Services at Shiloh Springs church. Interment near by. Text, Ps. 121: 7.—A. A. Bookwalter, R. D. 1, Trotwood, Ohio.

Miller, Mrs. Joseph, died in the bounds of the Osceola church, Ind., Oct. 8, 1911, aged 79 years. Buried in the Osceola cemetery. Text, Rev. 14: 13.—Mrs. Lucy Swihart, Wakarusa, Ind.

Miller, Bro. David K., born near Gettysburg, Darke County, Ohio, May 23, 1836, died Oct. 2, 1911, in the bounds of the Turkey Creek congregation, Kosciusko Co., Ind., aged 76 years, 4 months and 9 days. He was married to Catherine Myers, also of Gettysburg, Ohio, Nov. 18, 1860. To this union seven sons and five daughters were born. All of these grew to maturity. Two have died. In the spring of 1861 they moved to Kosciusko County, Ind., where he lived for a short time, when he and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren. He leaves a family of five sons, four daughters, two brothers and two sisters. Services at the home church, by the undersigned, assisted by Brethren Joseph Hartsough and P. W. Stuckman. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Daniel Wysong, Nappanee, Ind.

Miller, Isaac D., son of B. F. and Sister Lina Miller, born Jan. 11, 1911, died of cholera infantum, near Weyers Cave, Va., Sept. 21, 1911, aged 8 months and 10 days. He leaves his parents, two brothers and one sister. Services at the Pleasant Valley church by Eld. D. C. Flory, assisted by Eld. B. D. Miller. Text, 2 Sam. 12. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Ruth E. Williams, Mount Sidney, Va.

Miller, Sister Barbara, wife of Joseph A. Miller (deceased), born in Rockingham County, Va., Nov. 14, 1825, died at the home of her son, Bro. A. J. Miller, Timberville, Va., in the bounds of the Bangerville congregation, Augusta Co., Va., Oct. 2, 1911, after four days' illness of hemorrhage of the lungs, aged 82 years, 10 months and 8 days. She was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for more than three years. She was the oldest daughter of Eld. John Wine. She is survived by one son, A. J. Miller, and three of her children, one brother, Eld. Geo. W. Wine, and three sisters. Her husband, who was a faithful minister for a number of years, preceded her in death. Funeral discourse, which was called from Oklahoma, and arrived twenty-four hours after her departure, by Eld. Jacob Garber.—Bangerville by Elders H. G. Miller and A. S. Thomas. Interment in the cemetery near by. Text, Heb. 4: 9.—Minnie M. Miller, R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va.

Holt, Mary A., widow of the late Jonas Nolt, born June 27, 1831, died at her home, 507 North Lime St., Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 3, 1911, aged 80 years, 3 months and 6 days. Her death was due to old age. She was a member for many years of the Church of the Brethren for over fifty years. She leaves two sons and two daughters to mourn their loss. Interment in the cemetery in the adjoining cemetery. Services by the writer.—H. B. Yoder, 843 Charlotte St., Lancaster, Pa.

Rusbaum, Bro. John, born in Ashland County, Ohio, April 21, 1832, died in the bounds of the Yellow Creek congregation, Elkhart Co., Ind., Sept. 28, 1911, aged 79 years, 5 months and 7 days. When in his seventeenth year his parents moved to Elkhart County, Ind., where he lived the rest of his life. To this union were born six sons and seven daughters. His wife and six children preceded him in death. Seven sons and four daughters survive him. He was a kind, loving Christian father. Soon after his marriage he united with the church of the Brethren. He served as deacon for many years, and was called to the ministry in 1885. He was advanced to the second degree of the ministry in 1885, and ordained to the eldership in 1891. He was a strong advocate of the doctrines of the Bible, as taught by the church of his choice. The church keenly feels the loss of a faithful minister.—Irvin Miller, R. D. 5, Goshen, Ind.

Price, Bro. Christian, born Sept. 14, 1829, in Pennsylvania, died in the bounds of the Maple Spring congregation, at Thomas, W. Va., Sept. 24, 1911, aged 82 years and 10 months. He was united in marriage to Harriet Hamlin in 1852. To this union nine children were born. He leaves a wife and five children. He was a member of the church of the Brethren for sixteen years. Services at Thomas, W. Va., by the undersigned. Text, Rev. 14: 13. Interment in the cemetery near by.—Albert S. Arnold, Eglon, W. Va.

Packer, Bro. Nelson, son of William and Sarah Packer, born near Sidney, Ohio, in 1846, died Oct. 6, 1911, aged 61 years, 10 months and 6 days. He became a member of the Brethren church fifteen years ago. He was very regular in his Sunday-school class, and at all the church services, until about one year ago, when his health began to fail. He was a man of firm convictions in the doctrines of our Lord and Savior. The anointing service was a very impressive occasion at the close of his life. Services in the Church of the Brethren by the writer. Text, Job. 7: 1. The deceased has lost a friend.—S. Z. Smith, Sidney, Ohio.

Repogle, Sister Mary Jane, wife of Bro. David Repogle, died in the bounds of the Fairview church, at Drab, Pa., Aug. 12, 1911, aged 68 years, 3 months and 11 days. She united with the Brethren church in her youth and remained faithful till death. She leaves her husband, two sons and four daughters. Services by Bro. W. J. Hollinger, assisted by Bro. J. H. Brumbaugh. Text, Rev. 22: 5. Interment in Shelly's cemetery.—J. B. Snoverger, Shellytown, Pa.

When he was a young man in his early fifties, he moved to Allen county, Iowa, where he resided continually until his death. May 12, 1864, he was married to Sister Susan Pettit, who preceded him March 6, 1911. This union was blessed with seven children. Two of them died while young. The others are all married and were present at the funeral. Early in life Bro. Ruth united with the Lutheran church, but later united with the Church of the Brethren, and lived a faithful life to the end. Services at the church, east of South English, by the undersigned. Text, Psa. 46: 1, after which his remains were laid beside his companion.—Peter Brower, South English, Iowa.

Shrock, Bro. Manoe, born in Seneca County, Ohio, died Oct. 1, 1911, in the home of his daughter, Lovina Mowery, Ind., aged 66 years and 9 days. His wife preceded him in 1895. His two daughters survive. He was a member of the Church of the Brethren. Services at the Pleasant Valley house.—J. H. Brumbaugh, Middlebury, Ind.

Snowden, Richard, born Sept. 17, 1839, died Oct. 6, 1911, aged 72 years, 1 month and 19 days. He was united in May, 1858 he was married to Mary E. Yancy. To this union two sons and two daughters were born. His wife died in 1870. May 6, 1908, he was married to Elizabeth Lee, who with his four children and two brothers survives him. He was a kind husband and father, and a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren.—Mary T. Martin, R. D. 17, Atlanta, Ind.

Solenberger, Bro. Israel, died of heart trouble, at Boiling Springs, Pa., Sept. 28, 1911, aged 68 years, 4 months and 5 days. He was a very faithful member of the church for many years. He was in every delicate health for several years. He is survived by his wife, one son and two daughters. Services at the church in Boiling Springs by the writer, assisted by Brethren Adam Hollinger and A. K. Hollinger. Interment at Baker's church.—Harvey Lehman, Pa.—Henry Beelman, Dillsburg, Pa.

Stover, Sister Sophia, born in Rockingham County, Va., Dec. 26, 1853, died of paralysis, in the bounds of the Lower Stillwater church, Montgomery Co., Ohio, Sept. 27, 1911, aged 57 years, 9 months and 1 day. She was the daughter of Noah and Polly Price, and came to Ohio with her parents in early childhood. On Dec. 7, 1876, she was married to John Sterne. To them were born two sons. One of them died in infancy. She was for many years a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren. She is survived by her sorrowing husband and a son, with his wife and daughter, also seven brothers and two sisters. Services at the Lower Stillwater church by Eld. D. M. Garber and the writer. Text, Heb. 4: 9. Interment in Bookwalter, Trotwood, Ohio.

Thomas, Sister Sallie, nee Garber, widow of Bro. Adam Thomas, died at the home of her son, Bro. John Thomas, near Bridgewater, Va., Sept. 26, 1911, aged about 82 years. She is survived by one daughter and three sons, also many sisters and one brother. Services at the Bridgewater Church of the Brethren by Elders S. D. Bright and S. J. Bowman.—Ira Fry, Bridgewater, Va.

Thomas, Sister Elizabeth K., wife of Bro. John N. Thomas, and daughter of William G. and Margaret E. Brower, born in Washington County, Va., died in Pasadena, Cal., Oct. 1, 1911, aged 44 years, 2 months and 16 days. She was a member of the Nazarene church until about three and a half years before her death, when she united with the Church of the Brethren. She was engaged in the Orphans' Training School in Pasadena for years. Through the pleading of a little orphan girl she was constrained to adopt her while still connected with the school. Later Bro. Thomas became the father of his first companion by death, leaving him with two little sons, whom he placed in the training school. Here Bro. Thomas and Sister Elizabeth became acquainted and were married. A little over two months before her death, a second little girl was born to them. About ten days before her death she was informed by her physician that she would have to undergo an operation. She called for the anointing and requested us to pray for her recovery, but at the same time expressed her willingness to be submissive to His Father's will. An hour later she was taken to the hospital and had the operation performed, but died from the shock. Leaving our dear brother with five motherless children, from three different mothers, to care for. Services in the home in Pasadena by the writer, assisted by the Brethren.—H. H. Taylor, 720 E. Villa St., Pasadena, Cal.

Waggoner, Sister Franklin, son of Bro. Luther and Sister Mary Elizabeth Wampler, born May 27, 1909, died of dysentery, Sept. 24, 1911, near Meyers Cave, Va., aged 2 years, 3 months and 3 days. He leaves his parents, one sister and one brother. Services at the Pleasant Valley church, by Bro. Christian Long, assisted by Bro. S. D. Miller. Text, 2 Kings 24: 26. Interment in the adjoining cemetery.—Ruth E. Williams, Mount Crawford, Va.

White, Sister Sadie A., nee Phillippi, born in Somerset County, Pa., April 15, 1877, died at her home in Morrill, Kans., Oct. 8, 1911, aged 34 years, 4 months and 23 days. Feb. 14, 1895, she was united in marriage to G. B. White. To this union seven children were born. Two of them preceded her. She was married until the eternal day for 16 years, seven years, and lived a devoted Christian life. She leaves her husband, four sons and one daughter; also her parents, two sisters and two brothers. Services by the Brethren at Morrill, Kans. Services were also held at Navarre, Kans., at which place interment was made.—C. B. Smith, Morrill, Kans.

Younse, Little Dorthy Marie, only daughter of Brother Vernon and Sister Ida Younce, born Dec. 12, 1906, at Syracuse, Ind., died of membranous croup at her home in Goshen, Ind., Sept. 9, 1911, aged 4 years, 8 months and 28 days. She leaves her parents and one brother. The services were private. Interment in the cemetery near by; prayer by Bro. Will Hess.—Mrs. Osie Brumbaugh, Goshen, Ind.

LORDSBURG COLLEGE

The only school on the Pacific coast owned and controlled by the Church of the Brethren.

A school where Brethren's children may receive competent instruction in our environment, favorable to the church, and free from the snares and allurements of the city.

The Lordsburg congregation numbers over three hundred members. There are no saloons or resorts in the town. Health and climatic conditions are ideal.—and both the strong and weak are made stronger by escaping the rigors of the northern winters. Write for free illustrated booklet.

Bible, academic, commercial, music, and elocutionary courses are offered. Expenses reasonable. Tuition in Bible department free to all.

DAYBREAK
IN THE DARK CONTINENT

By WILSON S. NAYLOR

As a mission field, ripe for the harvest, Africa is now attracting unusual attention. This fact makes this book especially timely. No one is better fitted than the author of this volume to furnish a comprehensive treatment of the theme. His travels in Africa have been quite extensive. It is an excellent book for mission study classes. It contains many interesting pen sketches, chronological and statistical tables, charts and maps, a two-page map, with key and a concise index. It will do any one good to read it. We all ought to know more about the conditions of our fellow beings in heathen lands. This book is a great eye opener. 200 pages, cloth 50c.

Mr. World and Miss Church-Member

A Twentieth Century Allegory.

By Rev. W. S. Harris.

It is a forcible allegory, somewhat after the style of Pilgrim's Progress, but in no sense an imitation of it. Pastors and workers, it is the book that you should get for your son and daughter, and at the same time read it yourself. You will be stronger for the church after having read it. It illustrates vividly how Satan lures the church member, with the world, to the pure Gospel, till finally he is lost forever.

Illustrated by 18 full-page drawings, the work of Paul J. Krafft.

First Steps for Little Feet

By Charles Foster.

This book has been prepared to give to children their first lessons in the Bible. It is printed in such clear, easy words, and filled with such clearness and simplicity the purpose is to lead them by faith that little ones of five and six years of age can understand and learn from it. Bible stories are presented and the little hearers are carried along through the Gospels—being made familiar with the chief incidents of CHRIST'S CARE FOR EARTH. A list of questions is printed at the close of each story, the answers which may be of great assistance to the teacher. The book is filled with beautiful pictures in tints, with colored frontispiece and 148 illustrations. Printed with large clear type. Substantially bound in cloth.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED

Springville.—Since our last report two have been baptized. Oct. 15 our Sunday-school held a children's meeting, which was well attended. Bro. H. B. Brubaker, Brooklyn Sunday-school Secretary, was with us and gave an interesting talk. Bro. John Herr, of Myerstown, also gave good instruction. His subject was "They Set Traps to Catch Men." He told the young people how the traps are operated.—Aaron R. Gibbel, R. D. 2, Ephrata, Pa., Oct. 17.

Heimsburg.—Oct. 15 Bro. Peter Houk, of Peru, Ind., delivered two spiritual sermons. Oct. 16 we had a love feast at the residence of one of our members. Eight partook of the sacrament of the Lord. We were all comforted and spiritually. Quite a number assembled at the feast, which was somewhat new to most of them. This part of the country is point, but we expect to build a church here in the near future.—Lucian Harden, Heimsburg, Ind., Oct. 17.

Sand Ridge.—Our love feast will be held Nov. 4, at 4 P. M. Sand Ridge church is three miles south of Hamler, Ohio. Bro. C. A. Wright, of Postoria, Ohio, did the writing in the midst of a revival here.—Joel A. Vanci, Hamler, Ohio, Oct. 19.

Mineral Point.—Bro. L. T. Holsinger came to us and labored most earnestly in a series of meetings for three weeks. Five souls in all were baptized, and the members were all encouraged to do more and better work for the Master.—Elpha Campbell, Leeton, Mo., Oct. 21.

Good Spring Itinerary in Western Pennsylvania.—Roxbury house, West Johnstown congregation, Thursday evening, Nov. 2; Johnstown congregation, Friday evening, Nov. 3; Middle Creek congregation, Saturday evening, Nov. 4; Brotherton, Brumbaugh Valley congregation, Sunday morning, Nov. 5; Hooversville, Quemahoning congregation, Sunday evening, Nov. 5; Stony Spring, Quemahoning congregation, Monday evening, Nov. 6; Scalp Level, Shade Creek congregation, Tuesday evening, Nov. 7; Walnut Grove, Conemaugh congregation, Wednesday evening, Nov. 8.—William M. Howe, Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 21.

Portland.—We held our love feast Oct. 7. Forty members were present. Two visiting ministers, Henry Brubaker and S. P. Yoder, both of Newberg, Oregon, were with us. Bro. Brubaker officiated at the communion services, and also preached two good sermons on Sunday. Sister Lyda Miller was our helper in the mission work, has returned to her home in Indiana. Bro. David Boegly and family have left us to return to their former home in Minnesota, which leaves us in need of helpers to carry on the Lord's work.—Nellie Carl, 1126 Albina Ave., Portland, Oregon, Oct. 19.

Crowson church met in council Oct. 7, at which time Bro. A. M. Bachor was chosen Messenger, and the writer for the church correspondent. We held our love feast Oct. 14. Our elder, Bro. C. E. Davis, presided. Twenty-three members communed. The church was well filled with spectators, and the best of interest and attention was manifested. We had breakfast at the church the next morning, at which time at least seventy-five members partook of the meal. After that we had short services by Brethren Daniel Sinsher, a brother whose wife has long been a member, was baptized recently, making valuable added to our number within the last two years. We have lost three by death and two by letter, during the present year. Our membership now numbers thirty-one.—Tessgarden, R. D. 1, Box 93, Lawrenceburg, Tenn., Oct. 17.

Kansas Items.—Since our last report we have had two more applicants await baptism. At our council on Thursday evening we had with us Eld. H. F. Crist, who officiated in forwarding of Bro. Frank Hilton to the second degree of the ministry. We are having considerable typhoid fever in our vicinity of the South Side Mission. Nov. 13 we expect to begin revival meetings at the mission.—I. H. Crist, 12 North Ferree St., Parsons, City, Kans., Oct. 19.

Beaver Dam.—Our love feast, held Oct. 14, was largely attended. Quite a number of sisters from Union Grove congregation were present. The feast was a spiritual one. The week previous to our feast we were made to rejoice when three sisters made the good confession and were buried with Christ in baptism.—Edna A. Dotterer, Union Bridge, Md., Oct. 22.

Johnstown.—Bro. J. Zeigler, of Pittsburgh, began a series of meetings in the Walnut Grove house, laboring earnestly for two weeks. The church received much spiritual strength, as the Word was preached with power. Two were added to the church by baptism. Our pastor, Bro. Wm. M. Howe, preached for us one week prior to our love feast. As a result of his efforts, two were baptized. We held our love feast Oct. 1. Bro. E. B. Young officiated. On the 8th inst. Bro. Bro. W. F. Spidle, of Richland Center, Pa., will commence a series of meetings at the Locust Grove house, near R. D. Siegfried, 724 Thomas Ave., Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 18.

Lordsburg.—On Lord's Day of last week Bro. Harvey Snell, our District Sunday-school Secretary, was here, and gave us a Sunday-school missionary talk during the forenoon hour. He occupied the pulpit during the preaching services.—Grace H. Miller, Lordsburg, Cal., Oct. 17.

South Los Angeles.—We met in council Sept. 8. Our elder, Bro. William Trostle, presided. Brethren William H. Wertenbaker and N. J. Brubaker were elected delegates to District Meeting. Bro. S. G. Geyer, of San Dimas, Cal., will begin revival meetings Oct. 29. A very interesting rally day program was rendered by the Sunday-school on Sunday morning, Oct. 8. The Christian Workers also had a special meeting in the evening.—Clara B. Custer, 1336 East Forty-sixth St., Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 14.

Springville.—We held a Harvest Meeting the latter part of August, and on Sept. 17, at the Quakertown house, we held a Harvest Meeting in the forenoon. At these two meetings collections were taken, amounting to $42.44, which was equally divided between St. Luke's Hospital, at Bethlehem, Pa., and the Brethren Children's Aid Society of Eastern Pennsylvania. A Sunday-school meeting was also held at Quakertown in the afternoon of Sept. 17, which was well attended by a number of members from adjoining congregations, who took part in the discussions of the various topics of the occasion. Oct. 7 we held our council at the Springfield house. Considerable business was disposed of. We are planning to hold our first love feast in the new church at Quakertown, Pa., Nov. 11, at 2 P. M. Sunday-school and preaching services are generally well attended. At a series of meetings, held in June by Bro. W. F. Spidle, there received by baptism, and one by letter.—J. W. Longacre, Springfield, Pa., Oct. 13.

Bear Creek.—Our church met in council Oct. 14. Bro. W. S. Cook was ordained as elder for another year. We decided to hold our love feast Nov. 2, at 4 P. M. We will have one week's series of meetings previous to the feast. We would be glad if some of the ministering brethren in Oklahoma or Kansas would come and help us. We are struggling with the band of fifteen or twenty members, and would appreciate the help of visiting brethren. Address the writer, and let us see that all who wish to come will be met at Garber or Lawrence, Okla.—Nettie Stine, Garber, Okla., Oct. 19.

FLASHLIGHTS FROM REAL LIFE

BY JOHN T. DALE.

Those who have read any of the author's other books will want to read this one. The sketches and incidents given are real flashlights thrown upon things which are worth revealing. The author in his preface says: "Some of the sketches are based on facts which have come within the personal knowledge of the author, others are founded on incidents which have come under the observation of others, but they are all typical of the ever-changing experiences and situations of life, as the grand panorama of existence moves onward."

Following are a few subjects taken from the table of contents:

Advice to Young Men
The Boy Hero
Dangers of City Life
The Father's Example
The Gullible Girl
The Professor's Advice
Rightly Married
The Smoker's Peril
The Young Lawyer's Downfall

The Book contains 205 pages. Bound in cloth.

FIGHTING THE TRAFFIC IN YOUNG GIRLS

BY ERNEST A. BELL

Undoubtless the reading of this book will be a revelation to many. The fact that young girls have been and are being sold and made slaves for immoral purposes is not as yet generally known. This vile traffic has been but recently fully exposed, in this book the facts and horrors of it have been compiled. It tells also of the fight that is being waged against this iniquitous business. Many a young girl who has in times past disappeared never to return became the victim of such as make it their business to buy and sell innocent girls.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

If you have boys and girls you want to know about the pitfalls that are set for them and be able to prevent their being entrapped. Everyone who is interested in the welfare of the rising generations should read this book. To be forewarned is to be forearmed. This book will do it. It also contains much helpful advice to fathers, mothers, sons and daughters.

The book contains over 500 pages, also 32 half-tone engravings, and can be had in either cloth binding, $1.50, or half morocco, $2.00.

WE WANT AGENTS EVERYWHERE

to sell this book. It is a ready seller, and we have a special proposition to make to you. Write us for terms. There is money in it for you and great good to be accomplished in behalf of the girls and boys in city and country.

Is There a God?

By Edward Frantz.

WHAT if there is not? Did you ever think of that? Suppose, for half a minute, we take counsel of our doubts, and say, like the fool of Scripture, that there is no God. Then what?

Well, first, here is this great world-machine running along smoothly and constantly, with nobody running it. Nobody started it and nobody keeps it going. Try to imagine a running engine with no mechanic, no engineer responsible for its existence and operation. Put in as many belts and wheels and other engines as you like; your mind will inevitably demand a will,—an engineer,—as its final explanation. Here is a universe of worlds, full of machines and forces infinitely more intricate and powerful than any ever operated by human wills. And all this with no controlling mind, with no impelling will! The point is not that everything must have a cause, but that everything must have, as its final cause, intelligence, —volition.

Experience teaches us that the only force which contains within itself the cause of its own activities, is mind force. Put into the evolution of the universe all the secondary causes that you please, tertiary and quaternary too, and so on, without limit, and you find no place on which your own little mind can rest, until you rest it in the One Great Mind,—the Supreme Intelligence.

Another strange thing: Here is a whole universe of unthought thoughts. Did you ever hear of such things? What else would you call them? We seem scarcely to have begun to understand the wonders of our world. Earth, sea and sky are full of hidden secrets. One by one their meaning is unlocked to the patient, toiling investigator. Geologist, astronomer, and physicist are constantly amazed at the new disclosures for promoting human welfare, the new beauties that fill the soul with reverence and awe. And yet, these wonderful and awe-compelling thoughts were never thought before! Not merely never planned, mind you, but never even conceived.

The mind of the investigator is the first that ever saw them. And what are these that have been searched out, in comparison with the unnumbered myriads of thought-harmonies which are still unknown to man? Truths and harmonies adapted to engage and satisfy the highest powers of thought and feeling! And yet no mind, no MIND, has ever compassed them!

But, stranger still, and sadder too, human nature turns out to be a lie. Belief in a Higher Power and desire for harmonious relations with that Power, are practically universal. From lowest savagery to highest culture the religious feeling is planted deep down in the soul. Instinctively men worship God, or fear him, and yet there is no object worthy of their worship or their fear. Our love of justice is a mockery, for the millions wronged in the unequal struggle of the world, who look for final justice to the Great Dispenser, are doomed to disappointment. The testimony of millions of the most devout of all the ages, must be counted as the great delusion of the world. The universal heart of man cries out for divine communion, and there is no answer to that cry. Whence these hopes and fears and longings but to mock us,—that were indeed "The Riddle of the Universe."

And does this path look good to you, my reader? Then take it. Do you find this answer to our question more satisfying to your mind, your conscience, and your heart, than the Christian answer, the Bible answer? Then take it. "As for me and my house, we will serve the Lord."

Lordsburg, Cal.

Our Creed.

By David M. Adams.

There is inwrought with the very texture of man's existence a religious instinct, an innate religious sense which more or less affects him and influences his life. The thought that there is a superior power, —a supreme Being,—instinctively and irresistibly thrusts itself upon his mind. To cultivate, develop and direct this native Godwardness, and to make it a primary and fundamental element of true happiness and eternal salvation, our Heavenly Father has, "at sundry times and in divers manners," communicated his will to man.

The two preëminent presentations which have come from the Deity, and which were given at different times and for a people living under different dispensations, are commonly referred to as the Law and the Gospel. The former was delivered through Moses and the prophets, and the latter through Jesus Christ and his commissioned apostles.

Space will not permit me to discuss at length whether we must make between these two covenants. Suffice it to say that "Christ is the end of the law for righteousness to every one that believeth" (Rom. 10: 4). The whole Mosaic system ended at the cross (Rom. 6: 14; 7: 4, 6; Gal. 3: 23-26).

The New Testament, of which Christ "is the Mediator," is the only divinely-authorized creed of the Christian church. In faith and practice and in the exercise of her functions she must be governed by it alone. By it we shall be judged (John 12: 48; Rom. 2: 16) and not by the principles or declarations of any creed formulated by uninspired men. Its great truths and principles have been fixed by a power absolutely independent of human opinions and ecclesiastical enactment.

THE GREAT COMMISSION

Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you: and, lo, I am with you alway, even unto the end of the world. Amen.—Matt. 28: 19, 20.

A BAPTISMAL SCENE.

The baptismal scene represented above is in perfect accord with Mark 1: 9, 10, where we read that "Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan. And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened." It is also in keeping with the incident mentioned in Acts 8: 28, 29, where we are told that both Philip and the eunuch "went down into the water," and Philip baptized the eunuch. Then we are told further: "And when they were come up out of the water." The going down into and the coming up out of the water show that baptism, in New Testament times, was performed by immersion. The applicant, seen in the picture, has already confessed that Jesus is the Christ, and pledged himself to a life of faithfulness. And now, while in a kneeling posture, he is to be baptized "into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost" (Matt. 28: 19). This is the way Jesus told his apostles to baptize those who would accept him in faith, and would repent of their sins. One dip at the mentioning of each name of the Trinity completes the baptism. Though requiring three actions, it is regarded as one baptism, being one in the sense that the Father, Son and Holy Spirit are one. This manner of administering the sacred rite comes down to us as the apostolic method, and for hundreds of years, following the introduction of Christianity, it was the only form of baptism known to the churches of Christendom. It is the one form of baptism acknowledged to be valid by all the leading Christian denominations of earth. Some of them may question the validity of single immersion, sprinkling and pouring, but the validity of the threefold immersion, represented in our illustration, is unchallenged.

The Gospel Proclamation.

"Go preach my Gospel," saith the Lord.
"Bid the whole world my grace receive;
He shall be saved who trusts my Word;
He be condemned who don't believe."

LIFE OF ELDER R. H. MILLER. The. By Otho Winger. $1.00

A truly great and good man's life is a perpetual benediction to the world. While he lives he makes a record. After he leaves this sphere of activities his record, impressed upon the minds and hearts of men, and passed on from generation to generation, does inestimable good. During the latter part of the nineteenth century, Elder Miller's life was interwoven in the affairs of the Church of the Brethren. He was a strong debater, a powerful preacher, and a great leader. The author of this has done a worthy service in gathering into a volume, in such graphic detail, so much valuable information concerning our beloved brother's earthly career. It is a book full of gratification and encouragement for the old, and of education and inspiration for the young. 249 pages, bound in cloth. Title stamped on back and cover in white foil. Illustrations in a good variety.

COMMENTARY, THE NEW TESTAMENT. By Lewis W. Teeter. Cloth, $1.02

The commentary contains the entire text of the New Testament in both versions with reference and marginal readings, several maps and a key interpreting the meanings and pronunciation of the proper names. The notes are brief, impartial and explanatina. It stands in the defense of the most apparent meaning of the text. It is a practical family reference book. One volume.

ONESIMUS, THE RUNAWAY SLAVE. By H. B. Brumbaugh. 75c

A charming story based upon the epistle of Paul to Philemon. It is historical and biographical, and is set forth in a fascinating style, portraying interesting phase of Eastern life and the condition of Roman society at the time when the epistle was written. Interesting and elevating in character. 189 pages, bound in cloth, with gold side title.

LORD OUR RIGHTEOUSNESS, THE. By Elder S. N. McCann. $1.00

The fourth edition of this little book that has enjoyed a long run. Ever since the third edition was exhausted we have been receiving orders that could not be supplied. The new volume is bound in beautiful cloth, printed on good stock, and is in every respect a much better book than former editions. The book is a testimony in the earnest, thoughtful work of the author.

OLIVE BRANCH OF PEACE AND GOOD WILL TO MEN, THE. By F. Dilsaver and D. Hays. 75c

An Anti-War History of the Brethren and Mennonites, the peace people of the South during the Civil War of 1861-1865. From the Preface of Book:

"Upon the whole, the subject in publishing this little volume especially as it relates to a Civil War in three-fold aim, to give a true and faithful record of the sufferings and experiencies of these two denominations.

"Second, to testify to God's goodness in protecting them.

"Third, to strengthen the faith of Christians who may yet be required to suffer persecution for the sake of Christ and his Gospel of good will to men." Illustrated. 332 pages. Cloth with side title in gold stamp.

TRINE IMMERSION AS THE APOSTOLIC FORM OF CHRISTIAN BAPTISM. By Eld. James Quinter. 75c

The author brings to bear a wealth of testimony to prove that trine immersion is the form of baptism commanded by Christ and that until the close of the twelfth century it was the prevailing practice of the Church.

Profuse and varied history, church records, writings of the Church Fathers, and a careful analysis of the "Great Commission" lend weight to this scholarly presentation of the subject. Bound in cloth. 367 pages.

MODERN PARABLES AND PARABLES, OR MORAL TRUTH IN A NUTSHELL. By W. S. Harris. 85c

ITS PURPOSE—The object of this book is to teach morality, honesty, and to correct social evils. A timely book. It touches modern society in almost every point. ITS POWER—Of the first degree of power, parables are the strongest and clearest, as truths presented so impress the mind as to remain. ETERNAL VERITIES, THE. By D. L. Miller. 75c

On Christian evidences. The author has gathered many proofs of the truth of the Bible and the reader of this volume will have his faith confirmed and his hope strengthened. Several excellent illustrations add to the interest and this will be found to be one of the most helpful books D. L. Miller has written. 215 pages. Bound in cloth.

MATTHEW HENRY'S COMMENTARY ON THE BIBLE. Six volumes cloth, $7.95, Express Extra; half leather, $9.95, Express Extra.

It is surprising that, in this labor-saving and time-saving age, the ever popular Matthew Henry's Commentary has not before been issued in convenient volumes. Two features of this new edition call for special attention: First, the moderate size of the volumes; second, the large size of the type (larger than in any previous edition). Other features are the excellent printing and substantial binding.

"There is nothing to be compared with old Matthew Henry's Commentary for pungent and practical applications of the teachings of the text."—The Sunday School Times.

Large 8vo. A new large type edition. Six volumes in a box.

WAR VERSUS PEACE. By Jacob Funk. 75c

A treatise on war; its causes, horrors and cost; and peace; its history and means of advancement. A timely book when the subject of international peace is so prominently before the people of the leading nations of the world. The author evinces a comprehensive grasp of the subject in hand and presents it in clear and forcible style. Every man, woman and child should be an influence in the interest of peace, and this book will do much to stay do the ravages of war. But to do this it is necessary to be intelligent on the subject. This little volume supplies the information on the main points concerning the things he ought to know. 178 pages, bound in cloth.

HISTORY OF THE BRETHREN. By M. G. Brumbaugh.
Cloth, $1.75; Full morocco, $2.75

This is written in the most valuable early records, and gives a list of many early members in Europe and America with biographical sketches of pioneers, analyzes the doctrines and customs of Alexander Mack's church in Schwarzenau in forming the Brethren church, and contains a description of the Ephrata Society movement. Profusely illustrated with the engravings. The work is authentic, thoroughly reliable and intensely interesting. Is well printed in clear type and substantially bound in cloth.

ANNUAL MEETING REPORT. 25c

The Conference of 1911, held at St. Joseph, Missouri, considered many things that are of vital importance to every member of the Church of the Brethren. The Annual Report contains, besides a complete record of the proceedings of the Conference proper, the addresses given at the Educational, Missionary and Ministerial Meetings—which were masterpieces. It also contains a list of the delegates by States and a complete index.

CLOSE COMMUNION. By Landon West. 5c

This book was issued in 1888 and enjoyed a large sale. While the present supply lasts we will be glad to furnish this able discussion of Close Communion at above named price. Part I consists of eight chapters devoted to "Reasons against Communion." Part II consists of twelve chapters in which are presented "Reasons against Open Communion." The reasoning is logical, clear and convincing. Bound in cloth.

LETTERS TO THE YOUNG. By Mrs. D. L. Miller. 65c

These letters tell in a very entertaining way what the writer has seen during her visits in the Old World. They describe life in Germany, Denmark, Sweden, and Palestine. These letters lead young people in the path in which they should go, and so to a life that ought to be found in all our homes and in our Sunday-school libraries. 252 pages, cloth, illustrated.

LITERARY ACTIVITY OF THE BRETHREN IN THE EIGHTEENTH CENTURY. By John S. Flory, Ph. D. $1.25

An intensely interesting volume dealing with the history of Education, Literature and Literary Endeavor in the Church during the first century of its existence as a denomination. Owing to the careful and conscientious research on the part of the author, this book will be referred to as an authority on the subject for years to come. The introduction by Eld. D. L. Miller. Contains 335 pages. Substantially bound in cloth.

TOUCHING INCIDENTS AND REMARKABLE ANSWERS TO PRAYER. By S. R. Shaw. Large edition, 240 pages, cloth, 75c

"It is simply wonderful and no one can read the book without having his faith in prayer greatly strengthened."—Western Christian Advocate.

SCARLET LINE, THE. By Elizabeth D. Rosenberger. 30c

This little book represents "Aunt Dorothy" telling Bible stories in simple language to children as they are gathered around her, asking questions. A very interesting and instructive book for children. The aim of the author is to teach the children to learn to love the Bible. Bound in cloth. Decorated cover design. 180 pages.

INDIA: A PROBLEM. By W. B. Stover, our first missionary to India. Cloth, 90c; Morocco, $1.25

A work setting forth the plain facts as to the conditions as they actually exist in India today. It is beautifully illustrated and contains 344 pages.

LIFE AND SERMONS OF ELDER JAMES QUINTER. By Mary N. Quinter. $1.00

This book should prove helpful to thousands of our readers who knew little of Bro. Quinter as editor, preacher and educator.

The book contains his pages, terse, clear, printed on excellent paper. The frontispiece is a splendid likeness of Eld. Quinter and adds much to the appearance and value of the publication.

The introduction is written by Eld. B. F. Haughey. Besides the interesting sketch of Bro. Quinter's life, the book takes account of the funeral services and numerous tributes of respect from his co-workers.

Part Two contains some forty of Brother Quinter's choicest sermons, delivered here and there throughout the Brotherhood.

The binding is an attractive one in which back and side titles are stamped in white foil.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series / Vol. 60.) Elgin, Ill., November 4, 1911. No. 44.

THE ROUND TABLE

The Week of Prayer.

Jan. 7 to 13, inclusive, has been designated as a week of special prayer by the Evangelical Alliance, hoping that all the various churches will seek to gain a special spiritual uplift by the effort put forth. While, of course, it is wholly optional with any congregation to comply with the suggestion made, it is probably true that none of us pray too much, and might well devote one week to special intercessions at a Throne of Grace. The further suggestion that there be "unhurried prayer," is probably most opportune in this age of feverish anxiety. Many of us, alas, do not give either sufficient time or thought to prayer. We do not "take time to be holy," as we should, by coming more frequently to the altar of consecration, nor do we linger as we might, in sweet communion with the Father.

Peculiar Insanity Among Indian Converts.

According to the "Bombay Guardian," several cases of insanity have recently appeared among native converts in India, and also among those who were about to become Christians. It is now authoritatively affirmed that members of their caste or family, in despair at their conversion, have surreptitiously given them an herb or drug which immediately and most fatally affects the brain. While definite and conclusive confirmation of this reprehensible practice has not yet been secured, there is doubtless much ground for the alleged charge, since the peculiar symptoms can in no other way be accounted for. The world over, Christianity has shown itself as the greatest and most benign preserver of mental and moral vigor, but in no way is it conducive to the sad results in evidence among the Indian converts.

Where Protestantism Falls Short.

The present, nation-wide evangelistic campaign is bringing out some surprising revelations as to church activity, and still more so the deplorable lack of spiritual vigor on the part of some. Compared with the Roman Catholics, the Protestant churches do not make a very good showing, so far as gaining their children for church membership is concerned. It is claimed that the great and sympathetic interest, taken by the Catholic Church in the home life of her parishioners, is an important means of gaining the children for the church and making them strong defenders of her teachings. Whatever objections we may have to the tenets of Romanism, we may well learn the lesson of greater efficiency in reaching out to the many children, and others, within the range of our church influences.

The Transforming Power.

The Haidas, at Massett, Queen Charlotte Islands, west of Alaska, are living examples of the marvelous power of the Gospel. Once they were the terror of the mainland coast and Vancouver Island, holding undisputed sway from Skagway, Alaska, to Victoria. On their approach to the coast, the Indians of the mainland would hurriedly retire to the interior, hiding in woods or mountain fastnesses. Contrasting the fierce Haida of some years ago with his successor of today, the change is surprising indeed. Instead of wielding the implements of war, he delights in his Bible and hymn book, and his life bears witness to the efficacy of the power that can make the fouliest cleave. Opponents of the Bible and Christianity may cavil and criticise, but they cannot controvert the remarkable instances of which the one above given is but one of many hundreds.

Possible Complications in the East.

The extremely critical situation in China is likely to be still further complicated by the possible participation of Japan, judging by the recent, seemingly well-authenticated report that 10,000 Japanese troops have reached Mukden, and,—it is asserted,—will come to the rescue of the dynasty. Already the statement has been made that Japan has resolved fully to protect her citizens residing in China, and should the upholding of the Manchu dynasty be imperative to this end, none of the western nations could reasonably object. Thus having proved themselves the preservers of the Chinese dynasty, the Japanese could well pose as the dictators of China's future policy,—a contingency not at all pleasing to the western nations. The "open door" and "equal opportunity" in China might be seriously threatened, in case Japan should obtain a foothold as outlined above.

Further Explorations at Jerusalem.

According to a recent report, a new archeological expedition has left Great Britain for Jerusalem, to continue further explorations on the site of ancient Zion, with the special aim of discovering various matters of interest pertaining to early Jewish history and especially the period embracing the reigns of David and Solomon. Captain Parker, brother of the Earl of Morley, is in charge, and has taken with him competent English workers, who will continue the work in the underground passages of Mount Orphel. This locality, whose hillside gardens are now supplying Jerusalem with vegetables, is supposed to be the site of ancient Zion. Possible discoveries on this historical site will be awaited with much interest.

Gratifying Progress of Temperance.

Teetotalers on the British Isles are reporting most encouraging progress in temperance sentiment and actual results in the fight against King Alcohol. Mr. T. P. O'Connor, widely known as an Irish member of the British Parliament and as a journalist, claims that the number of total abstainers in Great Britain, as shown by recent statistics, is enormous, and growing at an encouraging rate. "Twenty-five or thirty years ago," he says, "it was more than common to see members of Parliament come to the evening session intoxicated. Now intoxication is quite unknown. The real leaders of the nation are well known as absolute teetotalers." We wish that Mr. O'Connor's tribute to English lawmakers and leaders might be equally applicable to the prominent men of our own nation.

Threatened Expulsion of Russian Jews.

The Russian Government seems determined to visit persecution upon the Jews in almost the same spirit of fanatical hatred that one characteristic of the ages ago the Roman Inquisition. In vain have the influential Jews of the United States, Great Britain and Germany sent their fervent remonstrance to the Czar, for under date of Oct. 26 a most rigorous and arbitrary enactment has been passed. According to this, all Jews in certain provinces are subject to immediate expulsion, save in a few cases in which special privileges are being granted. Many of those affected by the decree, are in a most critical position, as the sudden removal prevents a satisfactory liquidation of their affairs. The worst feature of the case is that the Jews have affiliated themselves with the Russian state church. This shows the extremity to which the Jews have been driven by those who are posing as followers of the meek and loving Savior, and who boast of being "defenders of the faith."

The Canadian Sabbath.

We hear so much, nowadays, about the necessity of having an "open" Sabbath in modern cities, with street cars, places of amusement, etc., in full blast, that one is really surprised to learn that there are other ways of doing, and decidedly better, too. The editor of the "Nashville Christian Advocate" recently visited Toronto, Canada, and learned that there are ways of duly observing the day of rest, as yet unknown to the people of the United States. Walking along the streets on Sunday morning he did not find the least sign of business whatever. Every shop, saloon, news-stand, fruit-stand and restaurant was closed. Not a newspaper was sold, for Toronto manages to exist without a Sunday newspaper. It was a real Sabbath. Some might say that Toronto's Sunday is Puritanic, savoring of narrowmindedness, but be it remembered that the city is growing phenomenally,—the wonder of other cities. God blesses those who honor his Sabbath!

An Opportunity That Was Lost.

One of our exchanges relates the experience of a city congregation that, in course of time, found itself hemmed in by a foreign element. The changes incident to city life had largely depleted their ever-shifting membership by those of other nationalities, until the church was fairly in the center of an alien settlement. The question of the best disposal of the church property was duly considered, and finally it was decided to sell the property and give the proceeds to the foreign mission field. And not a soul in all that congregation ever realized that a splendid opportunity for foreign mission work, right at their very door, had been passed by, when it might have been so easily and advantageously improved. In this connection we are made to wonder how often, in various places of the Brotherhood, meetinghouses are abandoned, simply because the right sort of an effort has not been put forth to rekindle the fires on the Lord's altars. Often the most promising field is right at our doors, but we know it not.

Gain Amid Losses.

While the brutal savagery of war between Italy and Turkey is still being chronicled in the daily papers, another factor, unforeseen hitherto, is becoming quite apparent, and may, perhaps, largely compensate the Turks for the possible loss of Tripoli. Recent dispatches show that with the opening of hostilities the various elements of the Ottoman Empire, hitherto at variance, are rallying to the support of the country's interests. Even the most rebellious Arabs in Yemen have suspended hostilities against Turkey, entered into a truce, and are willing to help in the repulsion of the common enemy. It appears, therefore, that it, as a result, Turkey secures complete harmony and cooperation among her hitherto discordant elements, there is a distinct gain, even though there be the loss of the barren coast of Tripoli. How well it would be if the Lord's people, in every time of trouble or affliction, were to be drawn the closer together, to present a united front to the common enemy, ultimately to gain a glorious victory.

Conflicting Influences.

It is most deplorable that much of the prejudice shown against foreigners in China is due to the fact that too often the advent of the self-sacrificing and devoted missionary is followed by the arrival of the unscrupulous trader, the wily consular agent, and the menacing gunboat. A recent traveler in China, after commenting on the serious decline of a promising mission station in Chungking, is free to admit that the decadence set in with the arrival of the "Big Stick." The very properly asserts that "the whole gunboat idea is inconsistent with the claims of Christianity. That which prompts men to go forth into all lands, and preach the Gospel, is no excuse to follow it up with bullets and bayonets." The critic's ground is well taken. There is a conflict between our profession as Christians, and our practice as shown in our lives. We need not wonder if the unbelievers, in China and elsewhere, will turn a deaf ear to our most earnest appeals. The inconsistencies of so-called Christians are a most serious hindrance to missionary endeavors everywhere.

What One Minister Did.

Too often there is a great reluctance on the part of pastors to demand of their flock the degree of consistent living that fully conforms to the divine ideal. Not so with a Disciple minister in Waukegan, Ill. Finding many of his members hopelessly ensnared by card playing, dancing and theater going, he prevailed upon the loyal remnant of his membership to assist him in a much needed work of renovation. They did what they could for the erring members, but when gentle entreaty would not avail, sterner measures were made necessary. All this left the faithful minister with but one-third of his membership, and these have been decidedly discouraging to most pastors, but, having the courage of his convictions, he declares that with the consecrated remnant he will be ready to do something really worth while. One is made to wish that more of the "watchmen on the walls of Zion," seeing the alarming increase of worldliness, might be induced "to cry aloud and spare not." God's people should have neither time nor desire for the pleasures of this world. They should let their light shine, and practice what they preach.

Modern Progress in Palestine.

In Damascus,—ever memorable in connection with Bible history,—the spirit of the age has led to the establishing of a modern electric street railway, and there, as well as in Jerusalem, a complete telephone system has been installed. Still more remarkable is the fact that in the Holy City a sanitary board has been appointed by the Government. Hereafter the streets are to be properly cleaned, and the people are to observe the most rigid sanitary regulations,—an experience entirely new to the average dweller in the city. Upon the completion of several extensions to railway systems already in existence, it will be possible to travel by rail from Cairo to Jerusalem and several other points in the Holy Land. The water supply system of Jerusalem, now being installed, presents a most remarkable combination of modern technical skill with the still extant "Pools of Solomon." Pipes, running along the ancient aqueduct, carry the water to the city, distributing the same to all parts desired. The touch of modern progress is gradually permeating to the remotest bounds of the Holy Land, and many of the old, characteristic landmarks will soon be lost forever.

ESSAYS

Study to shew thyself approved unto God, a workman that needeth not to be ashamed, rightly dividing the Word of Truth.

The Life of Beauty.

If you can not write the story you can live it;
If you may not make the music, be the song.
If you can not paint the picture you can give it
Heart and soul the glowing canvas for the throng.

Sightless eyes shall see the colors in your action,
Ears grown deaf shall hear the anthem in your deed,
Hearts unlearned shall find and count the holy pages,
And the record of a life of beauty read.

The Old Testament and the New Testament.

BY S. Z. SHARP.

The Purpose of Each and Their Relation to Each Other.

THE Bible, as a whole, is the revelation of God to man. In form, it is written as history, law, poetry, and prophecy. It is the purpose of the Old Testament, by its history, to give an account of the creation of all things, the origin of man, his original state, his fall from the same, his degeneracy until, at the end of the antediluvian age, God saw fit to destroy the human race from the face of the earth, and to save righteous Noah and his family.

When mankind again inclined towards evil, God changed his mode of procedure with the human race by selecting one righteous man,—Abraham,—and his descendants,—the Israelites,—whom he educated to be a model for all other nations to imitate. The history of this nation, down to the New Testament era, is a history of God's wonderful, condescending care, mercy and forbearance on his part, and the determination of the Israelites to indulge in idolatry and sin of every kind. However, this history is embellished with the lives of many noble men and women, whose virtuous character and noble deeds shine as bright stars in the literary horizon of the world.

The purpose of the Law of the Old Testament was to teach man the righteousness of obedience and the sin of transgression. It is very elaborate in stating what was to be done or omitted, both in reference to God and to one's fellowman. Its system of sacrifices and atonements was to prepare God's people to understand the great sacrifice and atonement to be made by the Son of God as revealed in the New Testament.

The prophecy of the Old Testament served the double purpose of warning the people against committing sin, and foretelling the consequences, also, of the coming of the Redeemer of mankind, his character and work.

Another purpose of prophecy, in the Old Testament, is to prove the Divine Authorship of the Bible.

It is the purpose of both the Old Testament and the New, in a measure, to reveal to man God's character and attributes. To Moses he proclaimed himself as "a God, merciful and gracious, slow to anger and plenteous in loving-kindness, forgiving transgressions and sin" (Ex. 34: 6-7). "Righteousness and justice are the foundation of his throne" (Psa. 89: 14).

The purpose of the New Testament is to present clearly God's great scheme for the salvation of man, which was foreshadowed by the Old Testament. Its central figure is Christ upon the cross, to which the types and shadows of the Old Testament point, and from which all the blessings, promised in the New Testament flow, including eternal life and happiness.

The relation of the Old Testament to the New is that of a schoolmaster to his students (Gal. 3: 24). In the Old Testament we see the shadows, in the New, the realities. The Old records the types, the New, the antitypes, as shown by the following examples:

1. The beginning, or Alpha (Gen. 1: 1; John 1: 1) corresponds to the ending or Omega (Rev. 1: 8).

2. The earthly paradise (Gen. 2: 8) corresponds to the heavenly or "paradise of God" (Rev. 2: 7).

3. The fall of man (Gen. 2: 17; 3: 6-8) corresponds to his redemption (1 Cor. 18: 20-22).

4. The destruction by water (Gen. 6: 17) corresponds to the destruction by fire (2 Pet. 3: 7; 1 Cor. 3: 15).

5. The ark as a means of saving (Gen. 7: 5; Heb. 11: 7) corresponds to the church (1 Pet. 3: 21).

6. The covenant with Abraham (Gen. 22: 18) corresponds to that with Christ (Gal. 3: 16; Mark 16: 16).

FEET-WASHING AS A RELIGIOUS RITE.

On the evening before the time of the passover, Jesus met with his disciples in an upper room in Jerusalem. A supper had been prepared for the occasion. Before partaking of the supper, the Master washed and wiped the feet of his disciples. This he did by passing from one to the other. After the service was completed, and after resuming his place at the table, he said to them: "If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to wash one another's feet. For I have given you an example, that ye should do as I have done to you" (John 13: 14, 15). He thus instituted for his church the religious rite of feet-washing, which, while an external act, has a spiritual import, being a symbol of inward cleansing. This cleansing serves as a preparation for the Lord's supper, which, as a sacrament, comes next in order. The cut above shows how this religious rite may be observed in an assembly of the people of God. Those people believe that those who purpose to obey their Lord in all things, should do as he has commanded in John 13. Among the Brethren, in the United States, Canada, and elsewhere, there are hundreds of congregations, and all of them engage in the service, in a most orderly manner, once or twice a year. The service invariably takes place in the evening, and is very impressive. Following the sacrament of feet-washing is the Lord's supper. See next picture.

7. God's chosen people (Gen. 21: 5) corresponds to his elect (Gal. 3: 29.)

8. Moses, the leader and lawgiver (Isa. 55: 4), corresponds to our Leader and Lawgiver (Acts 3: 22-24).

9. The passover (Ex. 12: 5-9) corresponds to Christ, our passover (1 Cor. 5: 7).

10. Mt. Sinai and the law (Ex. 19: 16-20; Heb. 12: 21) correspond to Mt. Zion and the Gospel (Luke 24: 46-47).

Obedience Essential to Salvation.

BY EZRA FLORY.

In the exercise of the will, man rises above all God's creation, and by it obtains an independence even above his Maker (John 5: 40). But he does it at a risk fraught with tremendous consequences.

Order in God's creation is seen all about us. Violation of this arrangement brings its retribution. Violation of health's laws receives its punishment. It is so with every other of God's laws, whether temporal, moral, or spiritual. Life and death are set before us in his Son. Choosing allegiance to him will result in the building that will stand the test of wind and storm (Matt. 7). Neglect of him, or unfaithfulness to him, will result in the great calamity of the house built upon the sand. This obedience is not the mandate of an arbitrary sovereign, but a loyal compact with one whose only yearning is our highest welfare. Abraham saw this and obeyed, going out not knowing whither he went. Israel at Sinai said, "All the words which Jehovah hath spoken we will do and be obedient" (Ex. 24: 7). The way of obedience was Samuel's remedy against defeat (1 Sam. 7: 3; 15: 22).

There is a most pernicious notion that faith alone ("only believe") will save. That faith which does not result in obedience from the heart is not a Biblical faith. The Philippian jailer was baptized after washing the stripes on the lacerated backs of Paul and Silas; he took them into his house and showed them hospitality. In that profound book of Romans, which has so much to tell about faith, Paul is by no means silent in reference to obedience. In fact, the very introduction emphasizes "obedience of faith" among the other great expressions.

Christ learned obedience by the things he suffered (Heb. 5: 8) and has become the "Author of eternal salvation unto all them that obey him." He left us an example (hypogram) that we should follow in his steps (1 Pet. 2: 21; cf. John 13: 15). His obedience in baptism brought to him the anointing of the Spirit and the voice of approval from the Father (Matt. 3: 13-17). The Holy Spirit is given to all who obey him (Acts 5: 32). He that believeth on the Son hath eternal life; but he that obeyeth not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abideth on him (John 3: 36). Here faith and obedience are synonymous. Peter uses obedience as a characteristic of the saints (saved ones, 1 Pet. 1: 14), and "how shall we escape if we neglect so great a salvation" (Heb. 2: 3)? "None of those that were bidden shall taste of my supper" (Luke 14: 24).

The New Testament Conditions of Pardon.

BY S. S. BLOUGH.

God has established communion between himself and mankind under two covenants. These covenants are recorded in what is known to us as the Old and

New Testaments. In the Old Testament he has shown himself willing to pardon disobedience and transgression. Under the new covenant he is equally ready to pardon those who have sinned against him. Under both certain conditions were laid down. In accord with these conditions alone, could God's pardon be expected.

The word pardon is not found in the New Testament, but we find instead its synonyms, forgive and remit.

According to Heb. 9: 22, apart from shedding of blood there is no remission. The Old Covenant was ratified at Sinai by the blood of many victims. The blood of Christ, shed on the cross, ratifies the New or Christian Covenant. This blood, applied through faith and obedience, ratifies the covenant individually to each Christian.

The word translated remission means the letting them go as if they had not been committed,—the remission of their penalty. There are two parties concerned in obtaining pardon for sin, God and the individual,—the Divine side and the human side.

When man has gone into sin, God makes the first advances. He calls the individual. Because of his great love and mercy, God could not bear to see man go to perdition (John 3: 16). He therefore prepared a way of escape,—a way out of sin. This way was opened through the death of Jesus Christ, his Son.

Having prepared the way, he takes upon himself the work of calling sinners. Jesus says, in John 6: 44, "No man can come to me, except the Father that sent me draw him." And again, in John 16: 7-8, "I will send him (the Holy Spirit) unto you. And he, when he is come, will convict the world in respect of sin."

The Spirit works only through the knowledge a man possesses, hence the individual must hear the truth regarding sin and righteousness (Rom. 10: 17). "So belief cometh of hearing, and hearing by the word of Christ."

Having heard the truth, the Holy Spirit sends it into the heart, producing conviction. This is in accord with Acts 2: 37; 5: 33, and other passages where the truth preached by men, under Spirit-control, brought strong conviction.

God having now called through his Spirit, the individual is responsible in his sight, as to his spiritual condition. Hearing with the physical organ is now enlarged into obedience, causing the heart to turn to God in faith. This step is vital, for "without faith it is impossible to be well pleasing unto him" (Heb. 11: 6) and "being therefore justified by faith, we have peace with God through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 5: 1). "Verily, verily I say unto you, He that heareth my words and believeth him that sent me, hath eternal life" (John 5: 24). Faith in Jesus Christ, as a personal Savior, then, is a very necessary step. The believing, convicted soul, seeing its guilt, repents in deep sorrow, and turns from sin. The apostle Peter so understood when he told the convicted men on the day of Pentecost to repent. In Acts 13: 38, consequent upon the death and resurrection of the Lord Jesus, free and full forgiveness of sins was proclaimed to all that repent and believe the Gospel. This turning to God is the result of a changed mind.

A last act for the individual is baptism (Acts 2: 38; 22: 16). After turning from sin, the soul is going in the right direction, but past sins, though repented of and confessed, are not yet pardoned. Peter expressly tells the inquirers on Pentecost that after repentance they must be baptized into a state of pardoned sins, while in Acts 22: 16 Saul is told to be baptized and wash away his sins. While water does not cleanse from sin, yet baptism is necessary for forgiveness. When these requirements on the part of the individual, have been complied with, then God again acts and forgives. This mercy, which we receive through Christ, is no imperfect thing; it is full, entire, complete. All past transgressions are absolutely forgiven.

Having received this through a simple but living faith in Christ as our Divine Savior, God pours upon us the gift of the Holy Spirit. It is thought by some that this restricts God's privilege too much. Let such not forget that this is the method which he laid down, and according to this method he works ordinarily. If he wishes to change the rule for special occasions, that is his privilege, but to us he has promised no other way. Let men and women always fulfill the conditions!

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

After Jesus had washed the feet of his disciples, and had fully instructed them in regard to observing the ordinances, we find the twelve and the Master eating the supper that had been prepared for the occasion (John 13: 26). This meal was not the passover proper, but was eaten the evening before the regular time for the Jewish festival, and is called the Lord's supper. The word "supper" means a complete meal,—the evening meal. In Luke 22: 20 we read that Jesus passed "the cup after supper," showing that there was not only a supper, but that the cup was no part of the supper. As Jesus and his apostles ate a supper together, just after the feet-washing service, so are the people represented in our illustration, in imitation of the New Testament example, partaking of a sacred meal, designated as the Lord's supper. The meal is eaten in silence, and is characterized by great reverence and a high order of spirituality. The meal has its spiritual import and symbolizes that oneness of brotherly love that should characterize the humble and faithful followers of Christ. See the third picture.

Faith, Repentance and Baptism.

BY J. E. MILLER.

FAITH, repentance and baptism,—these three,—are so often found together that I may be pardoned for speaking of them in conjunction at this time. I had often read Paul's language, "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen," but somehow the thought was not clear to me until one day, in my study, I found that a good and literal translation might be, "Now faith is the prop (or support) of things hoped for, the proof (or test) of things not seen." Not so different from other translations but it meant more to me.

In the economy of grace faith has an important place. Without faith we can not please God (Heb. 11: 6). Faith is for the sinner. He needs to lay hold of some one who can support him. To the jailer the imprisoned apostles said, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16: 31). Faith is for the growing Christian. Luke 17: 5 reads, "Lord, increase our faith." Faith is for all Christians (1 John 3: 23). All need a support, a proof for that which they do not see. Not only in religion but in all matters of life we need faith. The men of big faith always accomplish big things. Even so did Jesus promise (Matt. 17: 20).

Faith is associated with repentance. "Repent and believe the gospel" (Mark 1: 15). Faith is associated with conversion. "And a great number believed and turned unto the Lord" (Acts 11: 21). Faith is associated with baptism. "If thou believest," said Philip to the Eunuch (Acts 8: 37). And because he believed, he was baptized. Faith is associated with salvation. "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved" (Acts 16: 31).

Faith has wonderful rewards for you and me. A first reward is hope (Gal. 5: 5). A second reward is joy and peace (Rom. 15: 13). A third reward is rest (Heb. 4: 3). A fourth reward is confidence (1 Peter 2: 6). A fifth reward is power (Luke 17: 6). A sixth reward is victory (1 John 5: 4, 5). And last, but not least, crowning all, is life, eternal life (John 3: 36). Surely, for the sinner, to bring him into a saved relation and for the saint, to keep him in a saved relation, faith has an all-important part. And though we are saved by faith (Rom. 5: 1), yet there is abundant room for repentance and baptism.

God commands all to repent (Acts 17: 30). John preached repentance (Matt. 3: 2). He insisted on the right kind of repentance (Matt. 3: 7, 8). Jesus preached repentance (Luke 13: 1-5). Read that passage carefully and you will see that he associates repentance with salvation. A part of his last message was that his disciples should preach repentance (Luke 24: 47). Repentance is a prerequisite to forgiveness (Luke 17: 3). There is a repentance that leads into sin and to death (Matt. 27: 3, 5). He had a sorrow but not the godly sorrow that works a saving repentance (2 Cor. 7: 10). The penitent thief of the cross was saved (Luke 23: 41-43).

In faith the sinner lays hold on the promises of God. In repentance he acknowledges his own unworthiness, and confesses his own sinfulness. And in this double process, of letting go of self and sin, and reaching out for God's grace, he has been brought, psychologically, where he is ready to do anything that may bring him the desired relief. To such Peter was preaching on the Day of Pentecost. They were told to repent, that their sins might be blotted out (Acts 3: 19). It is not so popular, perhaps, to preach repentance for the remission of sins, but that is what Peter did. Preachers who have stirred the world have always recognized the absolute necessity of repentance.

There is a third part to my subject,—baptism. To omit it in the case of the man who is aroused to believe, who is ready to repent, is not to treat him nor the Bible nor God right. Baptism is peculiar to the Christian church. John came and preached baptism (Luke 3: 3). He was sent to baptize (John 1: 33). He was sent with his baptism from heaven (Matt. 21: 25). He obeyed his injunction, and baptized for the remission of sins (Luke 3: 3; John 1: 26).

Jesus was baptized. It was a righteous act in him (Matt. 3: 15). Jesus either baptized or had his disciples baptize those who became his followers (John 4: 1, 2). He commanded baptism in his last words (Matt. 28: 19). He said that baptized believers should be saved (Mark 16: 16). All through the apostolic times we find the church preaching and practicing baptism for the remission of sins (Acts 2: 38; 22: 16).

Again, baptism is associated with the Holy Ghost and his reception into the lives of believers (Acts 19: 3; 2: 38). We get into Christ through baptism (Gal.

3: 27). Baptism brings us into fellowship with the church (1 Cor. 12: 13). Baptism is a saving act (Mark 16: 16).

A firm belief on Jesus Christ as a personal and divine Savior, a repentance that leads to a sorrow for sin, a renunciation of sin and a resolve to forsake sin, an obedience that leads one to follow Jesus in the act of baptism, and to comply with his command to be baptized, and a desire to be baptized for the purpose for which it was designed,—these three,—will produce a saved man who will walk in all of the Lord's ordinances.

God's Part and Man's Part in Salvation.

BY E. B. HOFF.

God created man in his own image, placed before him large opportunities and laid upon him great responsibilities. These man failed to appreciate, and chose rather to walk in open violation of the plan that God had so graciously planned for him.

God, in his infinite foresight and love, had plans by which he could get man back to himself again. It took many centuries of teaching to get him to understand and, in any large sense, to appreciate the plan of salvation that God ordained. The Law and the prophets and the never-failing chain of Divine Providences united to bring him up to where he would be ready for a complete revelation of God's plan. The great event of this Divine Revelation was the incarnation of his own Son, Jesus Christ.

It is not God's will that any should be lost but that all should be saved (1 Tim. 2: 4, 5). While this is his will, he does not, arbitrarily, violate man's will in the matter, but he leaves each one to choose for himself. "Whom he foreknew he foreordained to be conformed to the image of his Son, and whom he foreordained, he called, and whom he called he justified, and whom he justified he glorified" (Rom. 8: 29, 30).

In working out this wonderful plan God acts only as he gets a response from the individual. Many are called, but,—sadly,—few are chosen, because only a few respond (Matt. 22: 14).

For those who respond through faith, repentance and baptism, the atoning sacrifice of Christ avails for the remission of sins, and when God has given the Holy Spirit to the individual, as an indwelling monitor, the person has been justified, but there remains yet a great step for him. The indwelling Spirit has put his seal upon the person and becomes the earnest or surety of final redemption (Eph. 1: 13, 14 and 4: 30). But here, again, the Spirit does not act independent of a continual response, for if the person grieve or quench, or sin against, the Spirit, the covenant is broken and fails.

The life that intervenes between justification and the final climax of sanctification or glorification, is a life of cross-bearing service, but each act of this cross-bearing service in the Master's cause goes back spontaneously to the individual as a moral uplift, and thus, step by step, the person is transformed into the very image and glory of the Divine Master (2 Cor. 3: 17, 18).

In bringing into the world this plan of salvation God has spared no cost, for it has cost him his only begotten Son. Indeed, a priceless value! And this priceless value is to maintain for each individual, and God can reasonably expect that each person, as he comes to know this will, will respond, and if that response is not forthcoming and the person flatly refuses and turns down heaven's means of salvation, with all its eternal weight of glory, for him God has justly planned a state of condemnation.

When Christ came into this world, he brought to Jew and Gentile alike an opportunity which gives man no excuse for living a godless life. The very life and words of the Lord condemn the person who fails to accept it, but, on the other hand, for those who do accept it, there awaits a home of eternal glory in the presence of God (Matt. 25: 46).

Baptism for Believers Only.

BY CHAS. M. YEAROUT.

"He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved."

BELIEVING qualifies one for the service of God, for without faith no one can serve God in an acceptable way. "He that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him" (Heb. 2: 6). Baptism is for those who are capable of being taught, and able to choose for themselves, for the Great Commission stipulates that only those who are taught, be baptized. "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: TEACHING THEM to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you" (Matt. 28: 19, 20). It is impossible to teach infants to observe any of the church ordinances, therefore infant baptism was not intended nor included in the Great Commission, as given by Christ. Infants are not capable of being taught or of believing, nor are they able to chose for themselves, and consequently are not subjects for Christian baptism.

The eunuch said, "See here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God" (Acts 8: 36, 37). "But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women" (Acts 8: 12). It is quite clear that only those capable of believing or exercising faith were baptized in apostolic times, and this infants are incapable of doing, therefore there was no infant baptism in apostolic times.

The plan of salvation requires that a person be begotten by the Gospel,—the Word of God,—and there can be no spiritual birth prior to this (1 Cor. 4: 15; James 1: 18; 1 Peter 1: 23). The Word of God is the holy, heavenly seed, and possesses the germ of eternal life. When received into the heart, the child of God is begotten by it (Luke 8: 11, 15; Mark 4: 26).

To be baptized,—born of water, and of the Spirit,—is to bring the previously begotten child forth into the visible kingdom of Christ. But the spiritual embryo must be quickened prior to the birth, for there can be no birth without life preceding it. The infant can not receive the Word into its heart, consequently can not be begotten by the Word, hence is not quickened, and therefore is not a fit subject for baptism. To baptize an infant is of no more effect than to baptize a stick of wood. Infant baptism is not pleasing to God, because the infant has no faith, and "without faith it is IMPOSSIBLE to please God."

Instead of baptizing the infant, like the adult,—to bring it into church relationship,—Jesus says: "Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven" (Matt. 18: 3). Little children are fit subjects for the kingdom of heaven, as a result of the atonement made by Christ, and baptizing them does not affect nor change their relationship in the least, hence it is absolutely useless if not a mockery.

To baptize grown persons without faith does not affect nor change the relationship: for they are the same after baptism that they were before. In baptizing an unbeliever, the only change produced is that he goes down into the water a dry sinner, and comes up out of the water a wet sinner.

"Faith cometh by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God" (Rom. 10, 17). Does hearing the Word of God produce faith in infants? If not, then they are not included among those to whom the Gospel is to be preached, for if they are, and do not believe the Gospel, as preached, they certainly will be lost, for the Heavenly Master says: "Go ye into all the world, and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved; but he that believeth not shall be damned" (Mark 16: 15, 16). Are infants included among those to whom this Gospel shall be preached? Then they will be saved if they believe and are baptized, and they shall be condemned and lost if they do not believe. What think ye of baptizing unbelieving infants? We thank God that if children die in infancy they are saved without either faith or baptism.

Baptism,—the Mode.

BY G. A. SHAMBERGER.

THE attempt in this article will be to treat the subject so that the common reader may easily follow the writer. The baptismal field has been fully surveyed and we should be able to arrive at the truth. The Lord commanded the apostles to make disciples and do for them certain things. Among the rest they were to baptize the disciples made. Then, when we learn what the Lord meant when he said baptize, we have settled the question.

What the word-men say: "Baptizo—to immerse, immerge, submerge; in New Testament to wash, perform ablution, cleanse (Mark 7: 4; Luke 11-38); to immerse, baptize, administer the rite of baptism (Mark 1: 4), et al., with the accessory idea of obligation imposed."—Greenfield, with citations. A number of authors could be given but all lexicographers of any note agree with Greenfield.

In plain English, the word baptize means dip,—washing, moistening or staining may result. All other obtainable facts should sustain this definition if it is to be right. Acts 8: 36, "See here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized?" The element, then, is water. We can dip a person into water. This agrees with the definition. Remember, that the willing disciple is in the hands of the administrator. If the element were in his hands, possibilities would be different. We have agreement with the definition, in this particular. Dipping is in harmony with the places where baptism was given. Mark 1: 5, "And there went out unto him all the land of Judea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins." John 3: 23, "And John also was baptizing in Ænon near to Salim, because there was much water there; and they came, and were baptized."

These facts establish a strong probability that our definition is right. In course of time words came to have extended meanings. This is true in reference to the word "baptize." Webster: "Baptism, the application of water to a person as a sacrament or religious ceremony by which he is initiated into the visible church of Christ. This is usually performed by sprinkling or immersion." Usage determines the meanings of words. Why has usage sanctioned any definition of the word baptize, except dip? Notice the importance of this inquiry. When definitions were made, was it because the word as spoken by the Lord, had various meanings? Dupin's "Ecclesiastical History," Vol. 2, p. 136, quoting Strabo says, "The ceremonies of baptism have been increased by little and little. . . . That they may be baptized by dipping, sprinkling or plunging the infant in the water once or thrice." Neander's History, Vol. 1, p. 310, "In respect to the form of baptism it was in conformity with the original institution and the original import of the symbol, performed by immersion, as a sign of entire baptism into the Holy Spirit, of being entirely penetrated by the same. It was only with the sick, where the exigency required it, that any exception was made; and in this case baptism was administered by sprinkling."

The variations of usage, then, have not come about from the definition of the word baptize. The teachable must recognize the force of this truth. However, the USAGE of the early church,—those nearest the apostolic age, must forever settle the definition of the word baptize, as this word was intended to be understood by the Master. All other proof must pale before this. The facts of history are before us.

I introduce two men in one quotation. They have repeatedly searched the records,—J. W. Wilkes of the Disciples, and Jacob Ditzler of the Methodists. In the "Louisville Debate," p. 595, Mr. Wilkes says: "My friend said there were three immersions for 1,500 years. I must admit that there were three immersions for a long time. From the time of Tertullian, commencing with the third to about the fifteenth century, from which there was not, in many places, much variation." "Campbell and Rice Debate," p. 258, "Not only Mosheim, Neander, but all the historians, as well as Prof. Stuart, trace trine immersion to the times of the apostles,"—the testimony of A. Campbell. Emphasize the word ALL. "Edinburgh Encyclopedia," Art., Baptism, "Pouring or sprinkling was admitted only in cases of necessity." Perhaps no man has searched the baptismal question more fully than Dr. Wall. "History of Infant Baptism," Vol. 1, p. 592, he says, "The way of trine immersion, or plunging the head of the person three times into the water, was the general practice of all antiquity." "Encyclopedia Britannica," Art., Baptism, "The usual mode of performing the ceremony was by immersion." Seldom does history speak so clearly.

But the historical crown upon the law of definition, —usage,—in reference to this word "baptize" is the unbroken usage of the Greek church. Multiplied millions of Greeks, speaking and acting their own baptizo for 2,000 years, give a definition heard in every land, and upon that definition we may hapoily approach the judement seat. Well may A. Campbell say, "The Greek church has never given up the primitive practice." So say they all. Here we rest the case. It is clearly made out in the light of facts.

Baptism,—The Form.

BY B. F. KESLER.

OUR subject implies what we may affirm emphatically, there is but one form of Christian baptism. This is shown to be true:

1. By Its Universal Acceptance.—While there is, and may justly be, controversy about affusion and single immersion, for Christian baptism, trine immersion, or immersion into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost, is not a subject of controversy. It is settled.

True, in the mind of the uninformed, doubts may arise, but in the mind of the informed, trine immersion is too well established to admit of doubt or controversy.

This accounts for the fact that trine immersion is almost universally accepted as Christian baptism. So general is its acceptance, that perhaps nine out of very ten of the immersed part of Christendom today believe it to be valid, and have been so baptized in evidence of the fact.

When we take the trine act in affusion and immersion, the ratio is much larger,—perhaps fifteen to one,—so that the single act in baptism is so small, as compared with the trine act, that it places itself beyond the bounds of respectable controversy.

2. By the Law of Identity.—John the Baptist introduced the only form of Christian baptism into the world (Matt. 3: 5, 6). Jesus submitted to this one form (Matt. 3: 13-16).

Jesus placed his law behind this one form of baptism (Matt. 28: 19). This law demands baptism into each person of the Trinity,—Father, Son and Holy Spirit. Since John's and Christ's ministry overlapped (John 3: 22-24; 4: 1, 2) it follows that they baptized alike, or a question would have been raised between their disciples as to the difference, had there been any in the form.

Since Christ's law demands baptism into each person of the Trinity, it follows that John baptized into the three persons, or into names representing them. The Trinity being composed of three separate persons, requires an immersion into each separately, hence trine immersion.

3. By the Law for Baptism.—There is only one law for baptism, hence only "one baptism." To have more than one form of baptism, would necessitate more than one law for baptism. This one law for baptism (Matt. 28: 19), demands baptism into the name of the Father, and into the name of the Son, and into the name of the Holy Spirit. Such is the full construction of the law according to the laws and usages of language.

No one will question the possibility of baptizing into the name of the Father by one immersion, and into the name of the Son by one immersion, and into the name of the Holy Spirit by one immersion. Everybody knows that can be done. But how to baptize in-

THE COMMUNION SERVICE.

Quoting from the Revised Version, we have Paul in 1 Cor. 11: 25 saying: "In like manner also the cup after supper." By this we are to understand that the cup of communion was passed after eating the Lord's supper, hence it would appear that the loaf and cup are no part of this supper. On the memorable evening, before the trial and crucifixion of Jesus, he met with his chosen apostles and instituted three ordinances, or sacraments; first, the religious rite of feet-washing; second, the Lord's supper, and third, the communion, the last representing his broken body and shed blood. Concerning this service, Paul further says: "As often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come." The illustration on this page shows how the third sacrament is still observed, following the other two, in the order set forth in the New Testament. Over the bread a blessing has been pronounced. Taking a piece of bread in his hand, a brother breaks off a small bit, passes it to the one by the side of him, saying: "The bread which we break is the communion of the body of Christ." The process is repeated from one to the other until all are supplied. The sisters serve each other in the same manner. After this each one eats the bread which he or she has received. Then follows the cup in like manner, each one sipping as the cup is passed. All of this is attended with the greatest possible solemnity. A season of earnest prayer and the singing of a parting hymn closes the services of the evening. It will be observed that all the sisters have their heads covered. This is in perfect keeping with the instructions of Paul in 1 Cor. 11: 5-13. The bread is always passed to the communicants by the officiating ministers. It is sometimes held in the hand, and at other times passed in small trays. In our illustration trays are used.

to all three by one immersion is what nobody knows. It can not be done.

True, Father, Son and Holy Spirit are one, but this one is composed of the three persons. So three immersions are one baptism, but this one baptism is composed of three immersions.

Besides, we are to baptize into the "name," and their name is not one. Each has a separate name, distinct from the others, hence an immersion into each name, separate and distinct from the others, is required. This means an immersion into the name of the Father, and an immersion into the name of the Son, and an immersion into the name of the Holy Spirit; hence three immersions in one baptism.

4. By the Law of Analogy.—Try these analogous constructions:

Baptizing them (into) the name of the Father, and (into the name) of the Son, and (into the name) of the Holy Ghost. How many acts?

You welcome your friends, inviting them into the sitting-room, and into the dining-room, and into the parlor. How many acts of inviting?

Recite the commission, giving it in the language of Matthew (28: 19) and of Mark (16: 15, 16) and of Luke (24: 46, 47). How many acts of reciting?

Pilate made a superscription (Luke 23: 38), writing it "in letters of Greek, and Latin, and Hebrew." How many acts of writing?

You ask a friend to give you his signature, writing it in the book of Matthew, and of Mark, and of Luke. How many acts of writing?

"Men shall take witnesses in the cities of Judah, and in the cities of the mountains, and in the cities of the valley, and in the cities of the south" (Jer. 33: 44). How many depositions of witnesses?

Many more such analogous sentences might be given but let these suffice. Indeed, no sentence, strictly analogous with the commission, can be given that does not teach or require repetition of action, hence the commission, like all other similarly-constructed sentences, requires repetition of action,—as many repetitions as there are prepositional adjuncts or phrases.

In these sentences we have one welcoming but three invitings, one recitation but three recitings, one superscription but three writings, one signature but three writings, one evidence but three depositions. So, in baptism, we have one baptism but three immersions.

5. By the Law of Perpetuity.—John the Baptist introduced but one form of Christian baptism. Only one form of baptism was handed down to the Apostolic church. Only one form was handed down to the sub-apostolic church. No other form had an existence for over 300 years after Christ (see any standard historian who writes on the subject). No author (historian, theologian, or writer) has ever found the origin of trine immersion this side of Christ and the apostles. Unlike the corruptions and innovations introduced into the church in the ages past, trine immersion has withstood the powers of hell and of darkness, and has a chain of perpetuity, connecting it with him who said, "The gates of hell shall not prevail against it." There never has been a time, since the days of Christ and the apostles, when trine immersion did not exist, and was not recognized as Christian baptism and of Divine appointment.

The Gift of the Holy Spirit.

BY PAUL MOELLER.

IF you were to ask me by what power a man can live a Christian life, I should answer, "The Holy Spirit." It is by the Holy Spirit that one enters the kingdom of God (John 3: 5); that he worships God (John 4: 24; Philpp. 3: 3); prays to God acceptably (Rom. 8: 26; Eph. 6: 18); is instructed by God in the truth (John 14: 26; 16: 13; 1 Cor. 2: 6-16); overcomes the sinful desires of his body (Rom. 8: 13); is given his own special gift for serving God in the church (1 Cor. 12: 1, ff); and has power to witness for Christ before the world (Acts 1: 8). Without this power, none of these things are possible. How, then, can we secure it?

There is no better authority on this subject than Peter as he spoke by the Holy Spirit on the day of Pentecost (Acts 2: 1-42, Am. St. Revision). The circumstances under which he spoke should give especial weight to his instructions. Before him was a multitude of men whom he accused of the murder of his Lord,—the blackest crime he could have named. If he could tell them how to receive the Holy Spirit, he could tell any man. What sufficed for them will suffice for us. As he preached to them of the righteousness of Christ, and of their sin, and they saw the judgment due them, the Holy Spirit convicted them of the truth, even as the Lord had promised (John 16: 8). Being pricked in their hearts, they asked what they should do. Under the circumstances, Peter's answer is worthy of the closest attention.

He did not tell them to "believe," for they already believed. Neither did he tell them to be sorry, for they were already "pricked in their hearts." But he took them right from that point and told them to "repent," by which he meant all that Paul means in Rom. 6: 12-14,—a real turning from sin unto God and righteousness. Then he tells them, "Be baptized in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins; and YE SHALL RECEIVE THE GIFT OF THE HOLY SPIRIT."

Could he have made it clearer? I thank God for so definite a statement! And the best part of it is that everyone can do it, and the promise is to all. "For to you is the promise, and to your children, and to all that are afar off, even as many as the Lord our God shall call unto him" (v. 39).

But someone may say, "Sometimes the Holy Spirit comes before the baptism in water,—sometimes to men who were never baptized, Cornelius for example." That may be true; but did not Peter give the natural order? Of what real, permanent blessing could even the possession of the Holy Spirit be to a soul whose sin is still unpardoned? Nowhere is there any promise that the Holy Spirit can pardon sin. Cornelius seemed to know as much, for even after the splendid endowment of the Spirit, which he received, he was baptized. And so it should be today. Men who are guided by the Spirit are guided in harmony with the Word which the Spirit gave us,—never contrary; and the Word says, "Be baptized, every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ unto the remission of your sins."

My, brother, are you hungering for more of the Spirit? Be assured you may have it. Again and again were the apostles "filled with the Spirit," and so may you. Did not our Lord himself say, "If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him"?

Feet-Washing, a Religious Rite.

Jno. 13: 1-17.

BY J. W. LEAR.

THE text cited tells us that on the night of Jesus' betrayal, he washed his disciples' feet, as they were convened in an upper room in Jerusalem. Some very serious thoughts were in the mind of our Lord before he began the service, and the scene which followed could be nothing less than one of the gravest importance. His mind has taken a survey of affairs from the time he left the Father until his return. He was also much concerned about his disciples, and, knowing his time was short on the earth, was anxious fully to equip them for the service that they would be expected to render after his departure.

The burning and interesting question for us to consider, just now, is, Why did Jesus wash the disciples' feet when he realized that his time was so short with them upon the earth? We shall immediately look for his explanation, since he promised Peter he would make it plain to him later.

1. He tells them that he has given a memorial service. A memorial is anything that serves to keep in mind any person or event. He wanted them to remember the event of their Teacher and Lord washing their feet. So he said to them, "Ye ought to wash one another's feet." "Ye should do as I have done to you."

As we have memorial days, memorial shafts and monuments, to keep in remembrance men and events, so Jesus erected in this service a memorial unto himself, and who are we that we should disappoint our Lord by refusing to keep it in sacred memory?

2. The language clearly designates it as a symbolic service. A symbol is an emblem or representation of something else. The bread and the fruit of the vine are emblems of the body and blood of the Lord. In this instance he said: "I have given you an example." The significance of the word "example" is a type, a pattern.

The service of feet-washing is an emblem of cleansing, not for the unregenerate. Baptism is the symbol of regeneration, and is not to be repeated. The child of God, in his walk from the baptismal bath to the heavenly home, is encountering the pollutions of a sinful world, and needs continual cleansing. Jesus has, therefore, established a symbol which keeps this thought constantly in his mind. "He that is bathed, needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit."

The location of this service is just prior to the feast of love and the Eucharist. Beautiful for location! As much as to say, Before you observe the symbols of brotherly love and communion with your Lord, be ye clean. It stands as a symbol of warning, lest we eat and drink condemnation to our souls.

The symbols given by Christ are of heavenly origin, and no human being has a right to change them by substitution of material, by omission or inversion. To say that something else will answer the same purpose, would be a presumption bordering onto sacrilege. Our Lord selected symbols which would best teach the lessons he wanted, and we are firmly of the opinion that he was wise enough to select those that would teach these lessons in every generation until they have their fulfillment. To say that if Jesus were here now he would not exact the same things of us because of the change of conditions, is silly as well as sinful. It simply means that he was too short-sighted to establish religious rites which would meet the needs of man in every age. This at once puts the doubt upon his Divinity, and is nothing short of infidelity.

The power of the symbol is not in its strictly literal but in its sacramental observance. It is not for the cleansing of the feet, else would Judas have been clean. Neither does the symbol cleanse the soul, for then Judas would not have betrayed his Lord. But it perpetuates emblematically the thought of continual purification in order to acceptable service. Christ said to Peter, "If I wash thee not thou hast no part with me."

We should be very careful that we do not raise the symbol to the place of the thing symbolized. The feet-washing is not the end to be sought. No symbol is. Symbols are only means to assist us in attaining the results signified by them. To be satisfied with the form without realizing in the heart that for which it stands, is to be satisfied with the place that Judas occupied.

Jesus would have us understand that this service keeps in our memories the entire work of his incarnation. It symbolizes and emphasizes the importance of a clean and pure life. It is meant to help us lay hold of the spiritual virtues by giving us something tangible to help us understand and work them out in our lives.

Let us all pray the Lord fully to unfold this beautiful emblem to us and then give us a willing mind to perform it. He has promised a blessing to all who know and will then observe. Whatever else others may do and say, let us get the joy out of the service which our Lord placed there for us!

The Lord's Supper and the Communion.

BY OTHO WINGER.

THE Church of the Brethren believes that Jesus Christ, on the night of his betrayal, instituted three holy ordinances, to be observed by his church throughout all generations until he shall come again and claim the church as his bride. These ordinances are feet-washing, the Lord's supper or the love feast, and the holy communion of the bread and wine, representing the body and blood of Jesus.

The evidence is very clear that these three ordinances were established in the same evening, and in the order above named.

The question is at once asked: Was not this last supper the Jewish Passover? Answers:

1. It is true that the three synoptists, Matthew, Mark and Luke, speak of it as though it were the Passover (Matt. 26: 17; Mark 14: 12; Luke 22: 8) But Luke also calls it a supper (Luke 22: 20); John calls it a supper (John 13: 2, 4); and Paul calls it a supper (1 Cor. 11: 20). The word supper is a New Testament word applied to this meal, and nowhere is it applied to the Jewish Passover. Neither did the disciples ever call this meal the Passover after it was instituted.

2. A comparison of the Jewish Passover, as described and commanded in Ex. 12: 3-14, with the Lord's supper, as described in the Gospels, will show differences so great that one can not easily think them to be the same.

3. The record of the Lord's supper, given by St. John, can not be harmonized with the synoptists, if we understand that Jesus ate the Jewish Passover on the night of his betrayal. John 13: 1 says that it was before the feast of the passover that these ordinances were instituted. John 18: 28 shows us that, on the next morning after Jesus had eaten his supper, the Passover was yet to be eaten. See also John 19: 14. A careful study of the method of counting Jewish time, and harmonizing the account given by John with that of the synoptists, leads to the conviction that Jesus instituted his supper twenty-four hours before the regular Jewish Passover. With this conclusion agree such renowned church fathers as Justin Martyr, Irenæus, Tertullian, and Clement of Alexandria.

4. The paschal lamb of the Jewish Passover was evidently the type of Christ, "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world." See Hebrews 10: 1-12; 1 Cor. 5: 7. This being the case, the only proper time for the death of Christ, as the antitype of the paschal lamb was at the very time when that lamb was to be slain. The Passover was fulfilled in Christ's death, but the Lord's supper will not be fulfilled until the evening of this world (Luke 22: 18; Rev. 19: 7-9).

On the other hand, it has been urged that the bread and the wine constitute the Lord's supper. But this belief seems untenable in the light of several very plain facts:

1. The bread and the wine are nowhere called "supper," but they are given the name "communion" by Paul (1 Cor. 10: 16).

2. The Lord's supper and the communion are clearly shown to be two separate ordinances, not only by the synoptists, but also by Paul (1 Cor. 11: 25).

3. The typical and symbolic meaning of the two are different. The communion points back to Christ's death, while the Lord's supper points forward to the marriage supper of the Lamb (Matt. 26: 29; Rev. 19: 7-19).

4. The Greek terms referring to the Lord's supper in John 13: 2; 1 Cor. 11: 20, 25 and Jude 12, all indicate that it was a full meal.

Another question needs consideration. Are we commanded to continue the observance of the supper? While the answers to this question are somewhat indirect, they are no less conclusive:

1. The Lord's supper, in its institution, stands between feet-washing, which was definitely commanded (John 13: 14-15), and the communion, which Jesus says is absolutely essential to spiritual life (John 6: 53-58). It is not reasonable to think that the first and third of these ordinances were to be observed and the second neglected.

2. There is unquestionable evidence that the apostolic church observed this ordinance. In 1 Cor. 11: 17-34 Paul tries to correct some of the errors that had crept into the observance of this feast down at Corinth. 2 Peter 2: 13 and Jude 12 also mention these love feasts.

3. That love feasts were held during the early centuries of the Christian church can be proven from the writings of the early church fathers and from early paintings that represent the celebration of these feasts. The best modern church historians also agree, that the early church believed in and practiced this ordinance.

When we study further the symbolic and typical meaning of these three ordinances of the church, we can see the beauty and fitness of them all, when observed together. The feet-washing is a symbol of inward cleansing and of that humility and love that fits us for service (John 13: 10, 16). The love feast is a symbol of friendship, equality and unity. No ceremony is so expressive of these traits as that of eating together. These two rites of feet-washing and the Lord's supper prepare the membership to engage in the third ordinance,—the holy communion, or fellowship with our Lord and God. The great importance of preparing for this last rite, as given in 1 Cor. 11: 27-33, shows the need of the first two in leading up to the third.

Simplicity in Christian Attire.

BY P. B. KELTNER.

JESUS is being recognized more and more as the Son of God, and his life as being an example of sincere simplicity. His immediate followers, writing under the inspiration of the Father, distinctly taught the simple life. There is no uncertain sound in life or teaching. The teaching of the Bible is a separating from the vain, the pretentious, and that which only contributes to our carnal natures and desires. The spiritual mind and heart loathe that which is only display. The Lord's creation was pronounced by him as good, and any effort upon the part of man, to improve God's creation, is foolish and sinful. How silly and even hideous is much of the decoration and fashion that is placed upon the human body which the Lord has made! Just as though these fashions and fopperies would make an improvement on the Father's way.

Thinking, sober people, in and out of the churches, are becoming exceedingly tired of fashion and display. It looks as if the Evil One has run to the limit in fashionable attire. It is hard to think that there ever was a time, when the people went to greater excesses than they do now. Many of the fashionable displays, worn on the streets today, are a disgrace to the nobility of womanhood, and unfit to be seen in public. They are breeders of vice and crime, and most destructive to the purity of our youth.

It is no wonder that public sentiment is raising a warning voice. Many excellent editorials in leading newspapers of the land are coming out in no uncertain way against this growing evil. Can it be that a better day is dawning and that the teaching of the Man of Nazareth may yet be more respected? The great trouble is, that the flood gates, in so many of the churches, have been opened to unrestrained pride. Instead of teaching and living the simple life, which should be everywhere in evidence, there have arisen centers of display.

Nowhere, today, are pride and fashion more to be seen than in some of the churches that profess to be followers of the Lowly One. The world is needing a reform on this subject. Men of good judgment and unprejudiced minds are deploring the sad condition of Christendom on the vanities of human attire. No better opportunity was ever offered any body of Christian people than is offered to the Church of the Brethren. Our people have been unique, all through our history, in maintaining simplicity. It has given us power with God, and influence for good in the world. The church will have lost much of its prestige, should she compromise with the world on the dress question. Our simple life, and our ability to maintain it through the years, has ever been one of our strong fortresses. Many times we have been threatened. The dangerous enemy endeavors to invade our territory, and set up his kingdom of ruin. Thus far we have kept on the safe side. We believe in the church. Strong young men and women are rising up who are going to be a stay and a shield. They are fitting themselves for service. The church needs them.

The enemy is not imaginary, neither is plain dressing a myth. The queen of fashion is not dead. We shall need strong men and women to equip themselves to battle against the evil of fashionable attire. Too often has the enemy made inroads amongst us. We are not immune to the dangers of foolish, sinful extravagance in dress. Too many people are willing to bow to the ever-changing fashions of the day. How displeasing it must be to God, to see the inconsistencies we show. How foolish, to know that we, who are the Lord's called, and profess to be followers of the humble Jesus, should be constantly surging with the world. A comparison of 1 Tim. 2: 9-11 and 1 Peter 3: 3, 4, with the fashionable way of wearing the hair by many of the modern women, should convince the most skeptical. Surely, such distorted creations as many women present, in the dressing of the head,—putting it mildly,—is a plain violation of God's Word. The picture that Paul and Peter draw of a Christian woman, is with modest apparel, her hair and head dressed, not to attract the attention of the light and frivolous, but, instead, modestly and plainly adorned. Thus they are evidencing "a meek and quiet spirit."

The world is suffering for want of these living epistles of God's Word. Plain dressing appeals to the higher and spiritual nature. It is an example to youth, and a blessing to God and man, but the fashions of the day appeal to the light, the frivolous and the lewd. May God save the Church of the Brethren from the sin of fashion!

The Devotional Covering.

BY L. W. TEETER.

THE only direct teaching on this subject in the New Testament is found in 1 Cor. 11: 3-16 and had it not been for the lack of exercising good judgment, common-sense propriety, and religious decency, in the Corinthian church, even this had not been written.

It is fortunate, however, that this bit of inspired teaching exists, that decency and propriety, in the religious services of the present church, may be maintained.

This teaching recognizes the fact that the visible church on earth is always composed of the two classes,—the man and the woman (v. 11). It locates each class, showing their relation to each other, and the relation of both to Christ. It requires devout men to appear, in all religious services, without anything on their heads:

1. Because not to do so would dishonor Christ their Head (v. 4).

2. Because the man is the image and glory of God (v. 7).

3. Because the man is not of the woman (v. 8).

4. Because the man was not created for the woman (v. 9).

Man therefore, having no earthly superior, but being next to Christ (v. 3), his Heavenly Superior, he necessarily must appear in all religious services with bared head.

But the devout woman is required to have her head veiled with the artificial veil:

1. Because she has an earthly superior,—the man (v. 3).

2. Because if she veils not her head, she dishonors her earthly head,—the man (vs. 3, 5).

3. Because, if she veils not her head, she brings shame upon herself, as if she were a woman of ill-fame (vs. 5, 6).

4. Because she is the glory of the man (v. 7).

5. Because she was created for the man (vs. 9, 10).

6. Because in so doing she will preserve her purity and chastity inviolate (vs. 5, 6).

7. Because of the angels of God who are always present, especially in religious services, temptation, etc. (v. 10; Matt. 18: 10; John 1: 51; Heb. 1: 14).

8. Because "it is comely" for a woman to be veiled in devotional services (v. 13).

9. Because nature has provided a visible outward distinction for the woman, different from that of the man, in giving to her sex the glorious long hair, and thus she may appear different from the man (v. 15). Even so the artificial veil on her head makes her appear different from the man, in devotional services.

Besides the woman's long hair being her glory (v. 15), and she, with her long hair, being man's glory (v. 7), and man, her head, being God's image and glory (v. 7), if, therefore, the woman veils her head with the artificial veil, she will in the presence of the angels (v. 10), preserve her own personal respect, and her glorious, long hair; and honor the man whose glory she is, and who is the image and glory of God; and Christ, who is the Head of the man; and God, who is the Head of Christ.

In this way, the artificial veil on the woman's head brings her at once into perfect harmony with every character and agency on earth and in heaven, and makes her devotional services as acceptable to all of them, as those of the man are,—all, because she signifies, by her veil, her willingness to regard man as her earthly head, according to God's arrangement. So, her devotions go as directly to Christ and God, by the Holy Spirit, as do those of the man, with bared head.

Caution.—No one should confound the meaning of the word "covering," in verse 15, with the meaning of the root word "cover," in verses 5, 6, 7 and 13, as the word (Greek, peribolaion) has an entirely different meaning, and should be understood there to mean a tresse or mantle, as in Heb. 1: 12, where the same Greek word is translated vesture; whereas, in the verses cited, the word is kalupto, meaning to cover with a (kalumma—veil) veil of loose texture; heavy enough to be seen, but not so heavy as to be mistaken for a weather protection for the head. It is merely a sign, and should be in sight during devotions.

The Reward of the Faithful.

BY T. T. MYERS.

IF there were no other world beyond, it would pay to be a Christian in this world. The joys of the child of God here amply compensate for all the efforts to be a Christian. But to the Lord's faithful there are always better things to come. For them there is, in addition to a life of blessedness here, the life of infinite joy and glory in the world yonder. Paul states it splendidly when he says: "Godliness is profitable unto all things, having promise of the life that now is, and of that which is to come."

The earthly life of God's children terminates in a peaceful death. It is not a step into the dark. Their evening is light. They go out into the day. Death is the door that admits them into glory. The words of the Psalmist are sweet: "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints."

One of God's faithful ones was dying. The family stood around his bedside as he was passing out of this world into the other. One of the boys said, "Father, let us know, if you can, the moment this world closes, and the other opens." A few minutes later, a smile came upon his face. Not being able, any more, to speak, he raised and moved his thumb, to indicate that he saw yonder light.

The faithful ones have part in the glorious resurrection. "The dead in Christ shall rise first." "We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed." As we are best fitted, by a healthful body, to enjoy this world, so a suitable spiritual body will best fit us to enjoy the world of glory. The new body will be in keeping with the new order of things in which we are raised. It will be a body of incorruption, glory and power.

God's own will have heaven. The fact that they are given bodies suggests that heaven is a place. Wherever that place is, it is beautiful. Its magnif-

THE cause at Vannaberga, Sweden, is prospering. During the last twelve months eleven persons have been added to the church.

BRO. QUINCY HOLSOPPLE and wife, and Bro. John I. Kaylor and wife, left New York Oct. 28, for the mission field of India, and before the end of this week should be in London, where they change steamers for Bombay, which port they should reach the latter part of the month.

THE General Conference of the Church of the Brethren for 1912 will be held at York, Pa., beginning on Tuesday morning, June 4.

THE protracted meeting at Brooklyn, Iowa, conducted by Bro. John Robinson, closed with eight baptized and two awaiting the rite.

WORK has been commenced on the meetinghouse in Fresno, Cal., and the building is to be ready for services before the close of the year.

BRO. JOHN E. METZGER, our Field Agent, is again in Virginia, visiting the churches in the Shenandoah Valley, and also in Page and Prince William Counties.

BRO. J. L. GUTHRIE took charge of the little band of believers at Blue Creek, Ohio, in May. Since then twelve have been born into the kingdom and one reclaimed.

AS the fruits of a series of meetings at the Beaver Creek church, Md., conducted by Bro. Isaac Frantz, thirteen made the good confession and put on Christ in baptism.

SEVENTEEN were recently born into the kingdom during a protracted meeting at the Welty church, Md., conducted by Bro. Adam Hollinger. One was also restored to fellowship.

OUR correspondent at Ottawa, Kans., reports some glorious meetings, with a noticeable outpouring of the Spirit. Seven precious souls were added to the fold, while all the believers were greatly strengthened.

OCT. 27 Bro. D. L. Miller writes us from Jonesboro, Tenn., saying that he was en route to North Carolina, for the purpose of visiting several of the churches in that State. He is delighted with the trip, and says he is enjoying the Christian hospitality of the warmest-hearted people he ever met.

SISTER SADIE J. MILLER, under date of Oct. 23, writes us from Seattle, Wash., saying that she would sail the next day, that her steamer is a fine one, and that she had a nice place on the vessel. As stated in previous items, she is on her way to the mission fields in Western India, going via Japan, China and Calcutta.

WITHOUT further cost than asking for them, copies of this issue may be had for general distribution at mission points, and at other places where the paper will do good. Our District Mission Boards will probably make an extensive use of the issue. Those desiring copies should place their orders at an early date.

SINCE receiving the cablegram, published last week, no further news has reached us concerning the Brethren missionaries in China. They are probably still at Tien Tsin, awaiting the outcome of the rebellion. It now looks as though the reigning dynasty may fall and that a new government may be established. In the meantime our missionaries have proper protection.

SUNDAY, Oct. 22, on the eve of Bro. Quincy Holsopple and wife leaving Juniata College, Pa., for the India mission field, some impressive and appropriate services were held. There were songs and addresses, suited to the occasion, followed by earnest prayers and touching farewells. The services of the day were made a real spiritual uplift for the entire Huntingdon congregation.

WE are now closing up the different lists in the Brethren Almanac for 1912. The publication will contain a complete list of our ministers, the churches, with pastors and elders in charge, District Mission Boards, District Sunday-school Secretaries, and the District Temperance Committees. It will also contain some well-prepared biographical sketches, along with other matter of special interest.

BRO. T. A. ROBINSON, who writes us from Lock Box 137, Maxwell, Iowa, says that he starts on his western trip this week, planning to stop a short time at Denver, Colo., and then go on to Nampa, Idaho, where he may, for the present, be addressed. Since he has arranged to spend several months in the West, his services can be secured for revival meetings in most any part of Colorado, Idaho, Kansas or Nebraska.

WRITING from Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., Bro. C. H Shifer says there are now enough members in the southern part of the State to form an organization and he suggests that this organization be effected at Ft. Lauderdale.

A NUMBER of able doctrinal discourses were recently delivered in the Center church, Middle Creek congregation, Somerset Co., Pa., by Bro. Wm. H. Knepsnider, and as the fruits of the efforts put forth six conversions are reported.

THE regular price of the GOSPEL MESSENGER is $1.50 a year. All new subscribers who remit this sum at an early date will receive the paper from now until Jan. 1, 1913. This means the remainder of the present year free. Those desiring a copy of "Our Saturday Night" can add thirty-five cents, making the whole amount, to be remitted for the book and paper, $1.85. See special advertisement on the last page of this issue.

BRO. JOHN L. GARRISON, of 310 South Sacramento Boulevard, Chicago, Ill., was with us last Sunday evening and delivered, in the Christian Workers' Meeting, an interesting address on Temperance. As Bro. Garrison was once an employé in the Publishing House, and, as an active Sunday-school worker, was well and favorably known in West Elgin, his coming to our city, to deliver an address, was regarded with a little more than ordinary interest.

THE purpose of the pictures appearing in this issue is to illustrate our way of performing some of the New Testament sacraments. For years there has been a call for pictures of this character, and, so far as we recall, this is the first time that the ordinances named have been so fully illustrated in a weekly journal. We are sure that this feature of the special issue will be appreciated by those who desire to know more about our manner of observing the New Testament institutions.

SINCE this issue of the MESSENGER will fall into the hands of thousands who are not regular readers of the paper, we wish to call their attention to the special doctrinal articles. The object of these articles is to set forth the teachings of the Church of the Brethren on the subjects treated, and to enable the reading public to know more about our faith and practice. We ask a careful reading of the different articles, feeling assured that they will prove both interesting and instructive. A good summary of our plea, in the interest of the whole Gospel, will be found at the close of page 706, under the head of "THE GOSPEL MESSENGER."

OUR regular patrons will observe that this issue of the MESSENGER has a cover, and that three pages of this cover are filled mainly with House advertisements, while seventeen pages are devoted to illustrations and reading matter. We are wondering how many readers would like to have the paper continued, week after week, with a cover, and have three pages of this cover devoted to appropriate and reliable paid advertisements. The advertisements would fully pay the cost of the four extra pages, with a good surplus, and would thus enable us to give more reading matter each week. Any one having something to say about such a change can, on a separate sheet, address the House, and, if deemed advisable, the matter may be taken up and considered at the Annual Meeting.

WE have a letter from Bro. I. S. Long, dated at Port Republic, Va., in which he tells about the voyage of himself and family from Bombay, India, to New York. Generally speaking, the trip was a pleasant one. On account of the cholera conditions in Italy, his boat did not land its passengers at Naples, but our missionaries stopped at Messina, where a day and a night were spent amid the ruins of that once charming city. They sailed away from Messina at night, stopped at a few points on the Mediterranean, were in quarantine two days, and, after twelve days on the Atlantic, reached their native land. Their hearts were filled with joy on meeting their own people in Virginia, in which State they are to remain the greater part of the next twelve months, visiting among the churches, and securing some much-needed rest.

WRITING concerning the Brethren Home at Neffsville, Pa., opened one year ago, Bro. I. W. Taylor, the Manager, says that, while the institution started with thirty-one inmates, there are now seventy-two persons in the Home. This includes the Manager's family and the helpers. The oldest inmate, a sister, has ninety-three years to her credit, while the next oldest one, a brother, has seen ninety-two summers.

THIS year the sixtieth anniversary of the MESSENGER, and the publications preceding it, will take the place of the annual Thanksgiving number. For this special issue we have arranged for a number of interesting and instructive articles regarding the history, growth and influence of our publishing interest, along with some account of what has happened in the Brotherhood during the last sixty years. Possibly some of our patrons have a few things that they would like to say, in a very brief way. If so, we should hear from them at a very early date.

AFTER three weeks in Sweden, Bro. J. F. Graybill writes us, under date of Oct. 10, concerning his voyage from New York to Malmo, and the outlook for his new field of labor. He reports a pleasant voyage, and says that he is very favorably impressed with the members that he has so far met. In a note accompanying his article for the MESSENGER, to appear next week, he makes special mention of a love feast at Vannaberga, saying that he has often enjoyed larger feasts, but he never attended one where there seemed to be more union and love. He may be addressed at Husargatan No. 5, Malmo, Sweden.

Our Mission.

It was over two hundred years ago that the Brethren began their well-directed reformatory movement in Germany. At that time, so far as is known, there was no organized body of people who pretended to teach and obey the whole Gospel. All the Christian denominations, of course, regarded the Bible as the Word of God. They all accepted Jesus as the Christ, believed in the Holy Ghost, and quite generally accepted the doctrine of future rewards and punishment. Some taught faith in Jesus as a sufficient basis of salvation. Others added repentance and confession, while a few may have regarded baptism as one of the conditions of pardon. For baptism some sprinkled the water, others poured the water: a few immersed once, and some practiced trine immersion. Most denominations celebrated the death and suffering of the Master by use of the loaf and cup. A religious life was insisted upon, with prayer and attendance on the religious services, but cold and lifeless formalism predominated.

A few may have observed the religious rite of feet-washing, while the Lord's supper would seem to have been entirely dismissed. The Christian salutation,—the holy kiss,—had fallen into neglect, and very little was thought of having the sick saints call for the anointing at the hands of the elders of the church. The few, here and there, who did not believe in war, were severely persecuted. Few efforts were made to maintain New Testament simplicity, and little distinction between the church and the world could be noticed. The different religious persuasions had their human creeds and confessions of faith, and the stronger bodies persecuted the weaker ones.

It was out of this confused state of society that the Church of the Brethren arose. The few who were first in the movement settled on the New Testament as their rule of faith and practice, and entered into church relation with each other and their Master, by resolving to obey from the heart all things set forth in the Gospel. They set about restoring the apostolic order of worship and service, and soon had a church containing all of the ordinances named in the New Testament. In addition to faith, repentance, confession and baptism, as conditions of pardon, they adopted the apostolic order of trine immersion as their only form of baptism. Having started right, the ordinances naturally found their place in the church, and a very high order of spirituality and devotion was soon developed. Simplicity in attire, deportment and life were strongly emphasized, while a complete separation from the sins, follies and pleasures of the world was everywhere recognized as a marked characteristic.

The Brethren came upon the stage of action for the purpose of restoring primitive Christianity, and in the start pledged themselves to teach and put into practice the whole Gospel. This is still our mission. We not only believe in the all things set forth in the New Testament, but it is our mission to make the whole Gospel known to all the world. This includes those of our home land, as well as those of other lands. We are not here to compromise any Gospel principles, or to relax our efforts in the interest of the form of doctrine once delivered unto the saints. Ours is a well-defined mission. It is the whole Gospel for the whole world.

The Gospel for All the World.

The Duty of the Church to Send, and of Every Christian to Aid in Carrying the Gospel to Every Creature.

THE duty of the church to go, to teach and to preach the Gospel to all nations and to every creature is as clearly set forth and as strongly mandatory as are any of the commandments of our Lord Jesus Christ. The Great Commission makes it the duty of the church to baptize those taught, and we have magnified baptism until we are unwilling to receive any into church fellowship unless the rite be performed by one of our own authorized administrators. Suppose we should apply the same rule to those who refuse to go or to aid, to the extent of their ability, in sending those ready to go, would there not be a great commotion in some congregations?

"Go ye therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost." Before uttering these words Jesus gave his authority for the Commission: "All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth." He spoke as the God of the universe to the men who were to be his representatives on the earth,—the men who were to gather all believers, who had been taught and baptized into one fold, even into the church of Jesus Christ, against which the gates of hell shall never prevail.

The doctrines and the teachings of the Gospel of Christ have been committed to the church and she can only say, "I have done all things whatsoever thou hast commanded me," when she has used all the ability, all the means and all the strength she has been given of God in teaching and preaching the Gospel to all the nations of the earth. More than this will not be required of her, less will not reach the mark of our high calling in Christ Jesus.

The Church of the Brethren holds implicitly and strictly to the Word of God as its only creed, as its rule of faith and practice. It strenuously insists, and none too strongly, that every command of Christ is to be obeyed from the heart, that there are no nonessentials in what Christ tells us to do. Because of this position, taken at and held from the beginning, we may well ask ourselves, Have we and are we now obeying God's mandate, to the extent of our ability, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations"? Are we doing what we can to teach every creature, thus carrying the glad tidings of this great salvation to all the sons and daughters of Adam? If we are, then are we clear of the blood of all men; if not, doubtless some souls will be required at our hands in the day of all days.

If it is the church's duty to have the world evangelized, to teach all nations, it follows as night follows day that it is the duty of every child of God to aid in carrying the good news of salvation to every creature in the world. The church militant is made up of baptized believers in Christ, "called out of the world by the power of God, to a living faith in a crucified and risen Christ, made members one of another by the Spirit, and by that Spirit linked to Christ in heaven." If this definition of the church be accepted, then not a single member can shirk the responsibility resting upon him to assist, to the full extent of his ability, in either going to do the preaching, or in sending others if he can not go himself.

And this responsibility, resting upon church and individual membership alike, is an ever-present responsibility. We are to occupy until he comes. Because the Christian men and women obeyed the command to "go" and teach those who lived in their day and generation, in no way relieves us of the duty of preaching and teaching the Gospel to every creature in our day. The evangelization of the world now is the measure of our responsibility. Those who come after us must bear the responsibility when they fill our places. The responsibility that rested on those who preceded us is not our concern.

In this great trust, given to the church by Christ, every faithful member will have a part and will be found doing that part cheerfully, willingly and uncomplainingly. If he can not cross the ocean, he will be giving as God has prospered him, to send those who can go and are sent by the church. Thus each member of the body of Christ may have a lot and part in the going and sending, and each may receive a like reward.

The Outward.

MEN and women have long been trying to make the outside appearance a standard of judgment, and from this standard human character is estimated, rather than from the hidden or heart-man. This idea or principle of measuring or estimating human character has been cropping out through the lives of men and women all along down the ages, so that it was truly said by the prophet of God and the Christ: "For man looketh on the outward appearance, but the Lord looketh upon the heart," thus verifying the statement made, that the man standard for judgment is the outward seeing, while the Lord's standard is that of the heart. These two standards are clearly set forth by both the Old and the New Testament writers. The one weighs, measures, and judges by the leaves, the other by the fruits. When men want to misrepresent, deceive or defraud, they always try to do it through the outward.

Putting on an appearance seems to be the study of the world, and by it Satan accomplishes much of his deceptive work, because, in this way, under a false garb, deception is most readily and most easily practiced. Because the outward appearance has, by common consent, been made the standard test and measure, those who wish to deceive are the more active in using it to try to deceive their fellows. You see it used in all the trades and callings of life. Workers in wood, iron, leather, cloth, and in all other trades, cover up the defects in their material by putty, paint, varnish and gloss, so that they appear sound and all right, and on this appearance the goods and wares are judged and sold, often to the disappointment and loss of the buyer. Man judgeth by the outward appearance, and is thereby often deceived. The Lord judgeth from the inner man,—the heart,—and therefore is never deceived. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The value and character of trees are judged by the fruit they bear, and if this is true of the natural, it is still more true of the artificial.

There never was a time, in the history of the world, when so much deception was practiced, under the cloak of appearance, as there is being practiced in our present time and age. Never has it been made more evident that appearances, as shown on the outside, are deceptive. Men and women, of all classes seem to be studiously laboring, by outward appearance and profession, to deceive their fellows, so that we are made slow in judging anything or any person until we can, in some way, get an inside view or measure of them. It is because of this, too common experience, that we are penning these thoughts.

Only recently, while casting around in our mind for a subject on which we might give some profitable thoughts for our readers, a professor of religion came to us. His outward appearance was all that the Gospel demands; his professing was all right, but we caught a whiff of his breath which, though it came not from the heart, was inwardly enough to tell its own story. What it said was evidence enough to cause suspicion, and we were puzzled to know just how to measure him. He seemed to appreciate the fact that his breath was not what it should be, and so he explained. So we withheld our opinion because there was circumstantial evidence which told us that we might be mistaken. It made us willing to wait for the fruit that gives the unmistakable evidence, as the outward appearance may be just as deceptive in religion as it is in things made and done by men. Paul says: "For he is not a Jew which is one outwardly, but he is a Jew which is one inwardly." This is a very plain inference that there were Jews that tried to pass as such outwardly, who were not so inwardly, and that it was the inward testimony that determined their true character. The same holds true of the Christian. He is not a Christian who merely makes himself such outwardly. Every true child must show forth the inward testimony. This inward testimony can not well be hid or mistaken, because "as a man thinketh in his heart so is he." Having the inward change indelibly established in the soul, the growth, inward and outward, will be such as will fully harmonize therewith. Thus the inward life asserts itself in the outward life.

The thought which we are trying to establish as a Bible truth is that the outward appearance of men and women can not be accepted as a true standard for righteous judgment. The asserting of this position does not, in any way, argue against the fact that religious men should not have and maintain a proper and appropriate outward appearance. Paul would say that women,—and men too,—are to adorn themselves with modest apparel. "Adorn," as defined by Webster, means to embellish, to set of to advantage, to render pleasing or attractive. The Biblical interpretation of it would be, to dress tastefully, and in harmony with the spirit of the common religion of Jesus Christ, avoiding the aping after the ever-changing styles and foolish fashions of the world.

Let your outward appearance be the outgrowth of the Christ-life within you, and we are sure that you will enjoy greater peace of mind, as well as be of greater service to the Master in the activities of the church and her work. As you are to adorn yourself by wearing modest apparel, so strive to adorn the church of Jesus Christ by living the simple life. In other words, strive to get right with God, and then go forward, committing your all into his care, and he will give you the desire of your heart.

What Our General Mission Board Is Doing.

THE General Mission Board, under its present plan of operation, was appointed in 1884, under the name of "The General Church Erection and Missionary Committee," with Brethren Enoch Eby, Daniel Vaniman, D. L. Miller, C. P. Rowland and Samuel Riddlesbarger as the members thereof. The first regular meeting of the Committee was held at Mount Morris, Ill., June 13, 1884, when an organization was effected as follows: Chairman, Bro. Enoch Eby; Vice-chairman, Bro. Daniel Vaniman; Secretary and Treasurer, Bro. D. L. Miller. With the small amount of money at its disposal, the Committee began work at once, and to plan for larger things. Since then there has been a steady growth.

The first annual report of the Committee to the Annual Meeting, made in 1885, shows $3,807.37 as the total receipts for the year. This amount included $400, balance on hand from previous year, turned over by Bro. James Quinter, Treasurer of former Missionary Board. Of this amount $3,552.09 was spent in actual work during the year,—nearly all of it in the interest of the Danish Mission, which was the only foreign work supported by the Committee at this time.

Receipts for mission work for the first five years of the Committee's labors by the year is as follows:

1885,	$ 3,806.37
1886,	3,070.84
1887,	3,877.29
1888,	4,184.41
1889,	5,587.28
Total,	$20,526.19
Yearly average,	$ 4,105.23

Report of the General Mission Board to the Annual Meeting for 1911 shows $76,159.17 as the total receipts for the year. Expenditures were as follows: Through the World-wide Fund, $42,361.03; India, $27,002.52; China, $3,778.10; Church Extension, $4,140; Ministerial and Missionary Relief, $870. Total assets of the Board, including endowments, $708,614.31.

Receipts for mission work for the last five years by the year is as follows:

1907,	$66,960.89
1908,	67,642.63
1909, (including Bicentennial Collection),	87,049.79
1910,	69,922.67
1911,	76,159.17
Total,	$367,735.15
Yearly average,	$ 73,547.03

Of the twenty-seven years of the Board's history, the last five years, as compared with the first five, show a gain in totals of $34,208.96; and a gain in the yearly average of $69,441.80, which shows good growth, everything considered.

American missionaries in the foreign fields, including those home on furlough and those to go this fall, are as follows: India, 34; China, 12; Sweden, 2; France, 2; 50 in all, besides a number of the brethren of Denmark and Sweden who receive a partial support, Bro. Pellet and wife of France, and a goodly number of native workers in India. The Board is supporting no workers straight out in the United States. It pays $80 monthly toward the support of the work in Brooklyn. Besides this direct appropriation, the Board assisted the State Districts in their mission work to the extent of $10,590 last year, which shows that by no means does all the money coming into the Board's hands go across the waters.

It might be well to explain that the plan under which the Board operates, provides that it shall work only in territory not occupied by State Districts. Assistance can be given the Districts on application, as it was done last year, to the extent of the sum named. But the Districts are supposed to work their territory under their own management, just as the local churches are supposed to work their territory under their own management. As the District Mission Boards do not work in the territory of organized churches, so the General Board does not work in the territory of State Districts. This territory belongs to the District Mission Boards. The territory of the General Board lies beyond State District lines.

The Board desires volunteers as workers, but in some cases appointments are made. It is known, of course, that all workers go only on approval. In the matter of securing suitable workers, the Board has found one of its most difficult problems. As much of a difficulty as it is to engender the giving sentiment, it is still harder to find those who are willing to give themselves. With the large number of young people in the church, and many availing themselves of the advantage of the higher schools and colleges, the problem would be solved if the spirit of consecration would take a deeper hold upon us. In this is its only solution. May Jesus move upon us to give ourselves as he was moved upon to give himself!

Performing Duty While Well.

EVERY now and then some one asks for permission to prove to our readers that the penitent sinner, on his deathbed, may be saved without baptism. We fail to see how such a theory could apply to the MESSENGER readers. So far as we know, very few of them are on their deathbed. Most of them are in good health, and practically all of them are strong enough to believe in the Lord Jesus, repent of their sins and obey him in baptism. Why should these people be told that, in case of sudden sickness, they can be saved without being born of water? Since they are well enough, and strong enough to do all that Jesus has commanded them to do, why not teach them the great value of prompt obedience? Instead of telling them how to escape the judgment, in case of sickness, why not teach them to prepare to meet their God while they have strength to perform their duty? Instead of quoting all the verses in which faith is mentioned as a condition of salvation, why not also quote the passages in which those who would accept Christ are told to repent and to be baptized? The apostles did not go around over the country, telling men and women how they could slip into heaven without obeying the Gospel. They not only preached faith in Jesus, but they preached repentance and baptism as well. Not only so, but they insisted on those who would inherit eternal life, being faithful until death. Our policy is to tell everybody what the Lord would have them do, and to urge them to do it at once. We are not telling people that they can resist the power of the Word and the Holy Ghost for years, and then be saved without obedience, just because they happen to get sick. It is the duty of men and women to comply with the conditions of pardon while they have time and opportunity. Those who neglect their duty until it is too late, must rest assured that they will have to meet the Judge of all the earth in the condition in which they have lived. We should comfort and help the sick, but certainly we do not want to encourage well people to put off their duty until it is too late.

List of Elders and Pastors.

SOME of those who send information for the department of the "Brethren Almanac," headed, "Churches and Missions, with Pastors or Elders in Charge," fail to render the assistance that they should. It is the rule to have but one name to appear with each church or mission. The name may represent either the local pastor or the elder in charge. Some correspondents insist on sending the names of both the elder and the pastor, leaving it to our judgment which one to insert. This is not fair for the church, nor the elder, nor the pastor in question. The correspondent should insert one name only, and not ask us to make the selection. When there is a pastor and an elder, and both are resident officials, it may be best to give the name of the elder. If the church has a nonresident elder, and a resident pastor, then give the name of the pastor. The idea is to have some one to whom correspondence may be addressed, regarding the church and her work. It might be good if the elder and pastor of each congregation, where there happens to be a pastor, would settle this matter and furnish us with the information they desire published. This is a very important department of the Almanac, and the list of churches should not only be complete, but the list should be correct in every particular.

How the Spirit Leads.

WE learn from John 16: 13 that it is the mission of the Holy Spirit to guide the followers of Christ into all truth. This is not to be done independent of the Written Word, for we are further told that the Spirit shall bring all that Jesus taught to the remembrance of the faithful. The Spirit will lead where the Word of Truth directs and will never be found leading people in the opposite direction. To ascertain what the Holy Ghost would have us do we must search the Scriptures, for holy men not only spoke as they were moved by the Spirit, but they wrote as they were influenced by the Spirit. In this Written Word we will find the mind of the Spirit, and to the extent that we comply with the requirements of that which has been revealed in the Sacred Oracles, to that extent may we claim to be led and guided by the Spirit. The man who persists in disregarding the teachings of Christ and the apostles, is not under the influence of the Holy Ghost. He is not being led by the Spirit, for the Spirit never leads people that way. His mission, as stated, is to lead them into all truth, and he can be depended upon to do his full part in the saving of souls.

OUR CREED.

For this reason the New Testament is to be received as the only divinely-authorized summary or formula of the articles of Christian faith. All other creeds are human and post-apostolic. It is not till more than a century after the death of the apostle Paul, and only a little less than a century after the death of John, the beloved disciple, that we meet with any definite summaries of dogmatic belief in Christian literature, and even then there is no evidence that these summaries had any authoritative character. Even the so-called "Apostles' Creed" is the product of uninspired men. No authority places its origin farther back than the fifth century.

The New Testament has been sealed with the blood of the immaculate Son of God, and by the early churches it was held as the only rule of faith and conduct. It suffiiced in the days of primitive Christianity, why should churches of a later age want more? It contains the perfect law of Christian liberty, and woe to him that adds anything to it or subtracts anything from it (Rev. 22: 18, 19).

Then, again, I remark that in the New Testament matters of evangelical faith and doctrine are as plainly stated as it is possible to state them in the English language. There is nothing ambiguous about its statements or indefinite about its requirements. There is no room for doubt or uncertainty. Its propositions and commandments are clear, definite and exact.

No intelligent, rational creature will deny that what Paul says in 2 Tim. 3: 16, 17, about "all scripture" is true of the New Testament. If by it "the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works," then it follows, as a logical conclusion, that any other creed is superfluous.

Let us not confine ourselves to a few stated principles and doctrines, but let us regard the New Testament as our creed, accepting new light as it comes to us.

EDUCATION IN THE CHURCH OF THE BRETHREN.

The beginning of the educational activities of the Church of the Brethren dates back to the founding of Kishacoquillas Seminary in 1861, which marks the opening of a new era of growth in the church. In the autumn of the same year Bro. James Quinter, who was at that time assisting Eld. Kurtz in editing the Gospel Visitor, founded a Brethren high school at Vienna, Ohio. The school continued until 1864, when it closed, because of the disturbed condition of the country by reason of the Civil War.

For twenty years after this date education was in the experimental stage. Numerous attempts were made to found permanent colleges, most of which resulted in failures. During this period, however, that of Juniata College was founded at Huntingdon, Pa., and Rock River Seminary, at Mount Morris, Ill., passed from the Methodists into the hands of a few Brethren and became known as Mount Morris College. As the educational sentiment became more prevalent, efforts were made to provide educational advantages for our people in all sections of the country, and in less than ten years four other colleges were founded,—Bridgewater College at Bridgewater, Va., McPherson College at McPherson, Kans., Manchester College at North Manchester, Ind., and Lordsburg College at Lordsburg, Cal. Within the next decade four other educational institutions were founded in the East,—Daleville College at Daleville, Va., Blue Ridge College at Union Bridge, Md., Elizabethtown College at Elizabethtown, Pa., and Hebron Seminary at Brentsville, Va., which was later moved to Nokesville, Va. In 1905 Bethany Bible School was founded at Chicago, Ill.

This, now, gives us eleven schools and colleges that have been organized and recognized by the Church of the Brethren as church institutions. They are the auxiliaries of the church, and are operated for the purpose of increasing its working power. They all have one aim, which is service for the church, and their common purpose is to train efficient and effective workers for the various activities of the church. The attendance has been increasing from year to year, until at present all of them together have an enrollment of two thousand students per year.

Practically every organized church in the Brotherhood has, at some time, had some of its young men and young women attend one of the schools or colleges, and they carried a part of the inspiration, which they received, to their home congregations, and became active workers there.

Our schools stand for high ideals in home life, for orderly work in the church, and for a saving power in the world. They train splendid Sunday-school workers, able ministers and willing and devoted missionaries. Their aim is to give their students a larger conception of life, and to make them feel their responsibilities toward the world. Having awakened this sense of responsibility they seek to help the young men and women to be a power for good by directing them in getting a comprehensive knowledge of the Bible, and by assisting them in finding the place where they can apply that knowledge in the saving of the world. By the hearty cooperation of the men engaged in educational work, these institutions may each continue to grow as important factors in the development of the church, and the church will be supplied with an increased number of able workers, so that it may advance in its mission of the spread of the kingdom.

OUR TEMPERANCE WORK.

The position of the Church of the Brethren during past years, relative to the liquor traffic, has been, to say the least, a unique one. On the one hand she has, from the beginning, had a clear vision of the evil and the ruin left in the trail of this monster serpent. A clear conscience has been the result of her attitude toward it. She has very consistently aimed, at all times, not only safely to avoid the sting of it by a life of total abstinence, but also by keeping her garments clean from the filth and stench of the unclean thing by steering clear of it from a business point of view. If, at times, a member has aided in the manufacture, the sale, or the distribution of intoxicating liquors, it is the conscience of the guilty great evil by renting buildings for the manufacture or sale of such liquors, he has been promptly taken to account, and dealt with as a gross offender. "Touch not, taste not, handle not," has been the church's motto in a way known to some other creeds, but not to the history which they have made, are not able to boast.

On the other hand, seeing the dangers and the temptations which attend the career of him who enters the political arena, the Brethren, for the most part, have betated to allow a desire to serve God as advocate of temperance by law-making and law-enforcing methods. From time to time the Brethren have judiciously advised to keep out of politics, and not without apparent reason have they been sometimes advised to keep away from the polls altogether.

However, we have always had good brethren who believed that there are more ways than one to strengthen a righteous cause, and that we greatly err if we fail to cast our vote against the traffic in rum at the ballot-box. This sentiment grew until a few years ago a resolution was passed at the Annual Conference to create and maintain a General Temperance Committee, whose duty should be to awaken practical sentiment throughout the Brotherhood against the liquor traffic. The plan adopted included the delivery of temperance sermons and addresses in all our houses of worship, and the distribution of convincing and wholesome temperance literature among all people, with the hope of stirring men to work in all lawful ways for a cleaner, a saloonless land.

The General Committee publishes a quarterly "Temperance Bulletin" which appears from time to time in the Missionary Visitor (published by the Brethren Publishing House, Elgin, Ill.). Temperance Day is to receive a twofold reason for having this excellent missionary periodical visit them each week, for in the Bulletin, referred to above, will be found not only interesting and up-to-date information on temperance question, but helps and many practical hints for those desiring to arrange temperance programs.

It is evident that if any real good is done, it must be because the people have been reached with the vital truths and principles of temperance by the power of temperance. Therefore the good results of our work must depend on the quantity and the quality of the work, done in the local congregation. Accordingly the General Committee has planned that each District appoint a Temperance Committee whose duty it shall be to organize the District for aggressive work by having active Temperance Committees appointed by each local congregation. The General Committee will work through the District Committees, helping and inspiring them at all times, while the District Committee will keep in touch with the Local Committees, helping, inspiring and working through them continually. The General Committee will occasionally issue tracts and letters, containing general information. Or all information or helps must be obtained, however, by the Local Committees through the respective District Committees.

The General Committee plans and executes each year, at our Annual Conference, a temperance program for which many have been thankful. This Committee urges that the District Committee shall have the privilege of planning annually a similar program, to be executed at one of the District Conventions each year in the several Districts. The local Committees are also urged to arrange and execute programs of like character in all the churchhouses in the respective congregations. A cooperative, financial plan has just been devised, by which all Committees may be properly supplied with funds.

The District Committees will supply all local Committees at an early date with a general letter containing said plan.

Coöperation is planned for and prayed for along all lines. We believe God will bless us and direct us in all our work.

OUR SUNDAY-SCHOOL WORK.

In the onward march for the evangelization of the world, the Church of the Brethren has not been unmindful of the Sunday-school as a mighty factor in the good work. From time to time our General Conference has enacted measures to meet the needs of the hour. The plan, recently adopted, is the culmination of the thought and labor of these years and, in a measure, the product of many lives not closely identified with it. In brief, such has been the advancement that has brought to us the plan by which our Sunday-school endeavor may be advanced to the highest state of efficiency.

During this time there has developed among us a power for good which is the result of much few among us can measure. That by which we may clearly see, is glimpse is taken of its growth, and some of its accomplishments during the last ten years are here given.

Numerically, the Sunday-school has increased far more rapidly than the church. According to the general secretary's report, the enrollment has nearly doubled in this time. Ten years ago the number attending Sunday-school was only a few thousand more than one-half the church membership. Now the enrollment is fully twenty per cent more than the entire church. This showing should be gratifying to the greatest Sunday-school enthusiast among us.

In this connection it is but fitting to make mention of our Sunday-school literature. This has kept pace with the needs of the movement and at this time the series of lesson helps and periodicals for the different grades, sent out by the Brethren Publishing House, are a credit to be cause for which they stand.

In visible results, no other institution of the church can make as good showing. Of the additions to the church, four out of five come from its ranks. Nearly all of our ministers, elected at the present time, and other church officials chosen, are taken from the Sunday-school attendants. And one hundred per cent of our missionaries for the fields at home and for those abroad have upon them the stamp of the Sunday-school.

Furthermore, Sunday-schools have largely become our religious instructors and Bible interpreters. Our ministers seem to be rapidly becoming reconciled to this fact, for we do not hear as many discourses touching our distinctive doctrine as in former years. It is taken for granted that by virtue of the relationship existing between the true teacher and his pupil, he has a far better opportunity to implant these important Bible truths than is given the public rostrum. After the manner of the Great Teacher, he presents them one by one until the soul of the pupil is aglow with their radiance, wherefore we conclude that the Sunday-school is rightly termed "the great university for religious training and biblical instruction."

With the foregoing statements before us, it is plainly evident that no line of activity can be of greater importance than that of the Sunday-school, and we see more fully the wisdom of fostering it. And there is still need of greater vigilance in forwarding the movement. On the one hand there must be no uncertainty as to the work of the teachers before their classes. Speculative theories are of little good and sometimes hurtful. Doctrine, well founded on Bible teaching, should be presented to the learner.

Likewise, these facts argue that the work is susceptible of infinite development. Our present one hundred thousand should be doubled in the near future. Then it could be multiplied over and over again. The field is unlimited and the possibilities are vast. A firm reliance on the Lord, with a willingness on the part of each one, will make the conquest sure.

Our Sunday-schools should also be made still more fruitful to the church. In this short article only a hint can be given of the great loss sustained each year by withdrawals from its ranks. A record is kept of those brought into the church, but at present there is no way of finding out the number of boys and girls dropping out of our schools without a saving knowledge of Christ. Nevertheless, this loss is great and it is a cry for better service, much louder than the blood of Abel, and may it be an incentive to the whole church to arise to the full opportunity afforded by the Sunday-school.

How next door to devilish is that nature that will ignore a hundred good qualities in a man and fasten upon his lone weakness, like the flies that crawl all over an animal looking for a sore spot.

THE CHRISTIAN SALUTATION.

In many instances the terms "kiss" and "salutation" are synonymous terms and are used interchangeably. We turn to Webster's unabridged dictionary for definition of terms: "Kiss: A salute given with the lips; a common token of affection. Salute: (1) The act of expressing kind wishes or respect. Salutation, greeting.—South, Addison. (2) A kiss.—Roscommon."

Since the organization of the Church of the Brethren in Germany, in the year 1708, we have held this to be a sacred scriptural command, and the churches in America and in foreign countries have kept this rite inviolate both in social greetings and in connection with our love feasts or communion services. Our weakest argument for its observance is the one with which the civilized world is agreed.

Human nature is practically the same in every age and among all peoples, and it would, indeed, be an exception to the general rule, to explain a fonder expression of love and affection than the Spirit-electrified contact of human lips. The mother love is probably the most intense human love known, and neither shame nor scientific interference will ever abolish the simple practice of kissing her babe in ecstasies of delight, as long as it appreciates such fondness, nor will she fail to bend over its prostrate form after its sweet angelic form has been transferred to our Father's flower garden in the new Paradise.

What is true in this scene may be true in other circles, and finally culminate in Christian society,—the great brotherhood of Christ.

Next in importance is our historical argument, and as we quote: "The custom prevailed among the Jews, and doubtless came from the East, where it still obtains. It is adopted into the Christian churches, as a symbol of a higher fellowship than it had ever expressed before, was probably as immediate as it was natural. In this case the apostle's desire seems to be that, on receipt of his epistle, with its salutations, they should, in this manner, expressly testify their Christian affection. It afterward came to have a fixed place in the church service, immediately after the celebration of the supper, and continued long in use."—J. E. & B. Com.

Bengel, in commenting on this sacred institution which he insists was in connection with the Lord's Supper concludes thus: "In which all the dissensions of the Corinthians would be swallowed up."

Again, "the kiss of charity" is thus defined by high ecclesiastical authority: "A token of Christian fellowship in those days (Luke 7: 45; Acts 20: 37), as it is a common mode of salutation in many countries. The custom hence arose in the early church of passing the kiss through the congregation at the holy communion (Justin Martyr, Apology 1, 65; Apostolic Constitutions, 2, 57) the men kissing the men, and the women the women in the Lord. So in the Syrian church at this day the neighbor's right hand, and gives the salutation, 'Peace'."

The strongest argument is that derived from the Word of God, and so we let the Holy Scriptures speak for themselves:

1. "Salute one another with an holy kiss" (Rom. 16: 16).

2. "Greet ye one another with an holy kiss" (1 Cor. 16: 20).

3. "Greet one another with an holy kiss" (2 Cor. 13: 12).

4. "Greet all the brethren with an holy kiss" (1 Thess. 5: 26).

5. "Greet ye one another with a kiss of charity" Peter 5: 14).

In view of above findings it is indisputably true that this time-honored custom, so fully supported by the Holy Scriptures, should be faithfully and religiously observed by every Christian who loves a whole Gospel.

THE ANOINTING SERVICE.

When our Lord was among men, the sick and needy were constantly attracting his attention and help. It was this note of cheer to the helpless and suffering that made his words seem gracious to those who heard him (Luke 4: 22). Remembering this dominant note of the Lord's teaching and example, we would expect some provision in the Scriptures for the comfort and healing of the sick and afflicted. Therefore we are not surprised to find the teaching of the Apostle as found in James 5: 13-18.

Since the teaching is so direct and careful in its details, as well as in harmony with all Scriptural teaching in the means suggested, and since pardon for sins, saving and raising up the sick is promised to those who obey; it is little less than marvelous that modern Christianity has failed to emphasize, and has often ignored, this important privilege and duty of the saints.

The underlying truth in the teaching of this Scripture seems to be the very vital relation of the Lord to his children. "The Lord's portion is his people" (Deut. 32: 9). To Jesus has been given "all power in heaven and in earth" (Matt. 28: 18). "In him we live, and move, and have our being" (Acts 17: 28). We too often forget this Divine care and fellowship of our ever present Lord. This conditioned upon a recognition of this fellowship. Those requested to call seem to be only those "among you" of "my brethren" (James 1: 2). The anointing with oil must be "in the name of the Lord." Those "called for" are supposed to be "the stewards of God" (Titus 1: 17). The prayer is expected to be one of "faith" in the Lord. Finally the blessing is from him; "the Lord shall raise him up." It is not faith healing, nor a miracle, necessarily. It is the blessing of God promised to those who put themselves in the relation and way of blessing.

While many, indeed, can testify and praise his blessed name for the healing of their bodies, as well as other richer blessings, as a result of the anointing; yet it may not always mean for us good health. Are there "earthly vessels" (2 Cor. 4: 7), the tabernacle in which we live God, in speaking to us, addresses something higher than the body (Rom. 12: 1). Moreover, if we can glorify him more in frail and broken vessels, this is infinitely better than to have whole bodies that are used for sin (Matt. 5: 29, 30).

However, we should not forget that the most vigilant care should be given our bodies, for they are "the temples of the Holy Ghost" (1 Cor. 6: 19). They should be kept strong and clean for the use and glory of God. Since God has created them, he will be pleased to bless the means used for their healing, when according to his will. May this teaching of God in his Word be more and more emphasized in teaching and practice, and the faith be shall have. Put the first and best of our lives, both in sickness and health! Chas. D. Bonsack.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

ARIZONA.

Glendale.—We are grateful to God that our prayers for a minister have been answered. Bro. P. F. Durr left that no Lord was calling him to a larger field of labor, and so responded to the call. We are glad that we have been found to be a blessing to the church. Oct. 15 Bro. Durr preached two very inspiring sermons. We met in called council Oct. 17. Reports of the year were read and showed quite our total membership about forty. Several more letters are to be read next. Our Christian Workers' Meeting was reorganized with Sister Ella Durr as president; secretary-treasurer, Sister Lyda Fagg. Our Love Feast was held on the first Sunday in this year. Two delegates, Elders D. A. Norcross and Peter Forney, were elected and chosen to attend. Brethren, we hope to also have begun holding midweek prayer meetings. The writer was chosen as church correspondent. Oct. 22 Bro. W. P. Eyeland was with us and preached a sermon that did us all good. Those who want work can find plenty to do around Glendale. Ada Fagg, Glendale workers in his vineyard.—Ada Fagg, Glendale, Ariz., Oct. 21.

ARKANSAS.

Hardy.—Eight of us left here from Pennsylvania to this place, and we should like to know who is the nearest minister of the Brethren church, or which is the nearest organized church to us. We have no preacher, and our services are few. I expect to be here until spring, while the rest will remain. The people here are very friendly, and there are few show of our church. I have been distributing the Gospel Messenger here. I have been holding Sunday-school every Sunday with a fair attendance and the best of attention.—Eld. Wm. S. Ritchey, Hardy, Ark., Oct. 27.

St. Francis.—Our love feast was held Oct. 22, with Bro. W. T. Price officiating. There were only nine members and twelve of our friends present, on account of the rain and sickness. Bro. D. L. Burns was anointed just prior to the feast. Has decidedly been improving since the first morning. Bro. H. J. Lilly was with us, but had to return home on Sunday morning. Sister Price and myself have Sunday-school a talk and Bro. Price preached twice for us on Sunday.—Bro. G. Price, Wayne, Ark., Oct. 28.

CALIFORNIA.

Chico.—Our church met in council Sept. 29. Bro. Forney presided. He was also our representative at District Meeting, which convened in Kline congregation, Sept. 6, and Sunday-school Meeting. We expect to hold a series of meetings soon, which will be conducted by Bro. Forney and Bro. Bashor. Everything is progressing nicely at this place.—Bertha G. Kesler, Chico, Cal., Oct. 18.

Covina church met in council Oct. 19, with our elder, Bro. D. A. Norcross, presiding. Two papers were passed to District Meeting, and one was disposed of. Bro. Jesse Ikenberry of this church it was decided to advance Bro. Harvey Snell to the full charge of the church. Bro. Jesse Ikenberry, Bro. Harvey Snell, Sister, of Lordsburg, and Bro. J. S. Brubaker, of Glendora, contributed to the program in council meeting. Bro. Harvey Snell and we were chosen as our delegates to District Meeting, and Sister Ida Chamberlain and Sister Jennie Brubaker, alternates. A call was made for Sunday-school and Sunday-school Workers' Conference Meeting, to be held during the Holiday week. Visiting ministers present were Bro. Jesse Ikenberry, wife and son, and Brubaker, R. D. 1, Covina, Cal., Oct. 21.

Lordsburg.—Our church met in council with the elder in charge presiding. We were very much encouraged by the presence of Eld. A. C. Snowberger and wife, of Des Moines, Iowa, who have not yet received a regular call, but are open to a call. We feel that God has a work for them in this valley and we hope that they may see and hear the call. We still more workers will feel impressed to come to Imperial Valley and help us in this needy country. Eld. A. C. Snowberger was elected church treasurer, to fill the vacancy caused by Bro. Jesse Ikenberry's removal to Covina. Bro. Jesse Ikenberry and Sister Emma E. Platt were chosen to represent this church at District Meeting, and Bro. Harvey Snell and wife as alternates. Funds are coming in from various churches and friends to aid in the erection of our new church building. The work will be commenced when a definite location is decided upon. Bro. Snowberger delivered a helpful sermon on Sunday morning, and also led us in a half-hour's song service in the evening, before Christian Workers' Meeting. We expect Bro. Snell, of Covina, to be with us a week next Sunday, to help us in the interest of the Sunday-school.—Emma E. Platt, El Centro, Cal., Oct. 21.

Fresno.—The Brethren of Northern California, at District Meeting, gave the Mission Board permission to locate and build a church in this place. Brethren Hollinger and Hoff secured three lots at the corner of Harvey and Thesta Avenues. The Brethren in Fresno have begun excavating for a basement, and expect to have a building erected in about three or four weeks. There are now fourteen members located here. My wife and I shall soon leave Fresno, and will locate near Inyokern, Cal.—John H. Getz, 2219 Harvey Avenue, Fresno, Cal., Oct. 24.

Tropico.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Bro. G. G. Lahmer, of Los Angeles, Cal., closed Oct. 15. Bro. Lahmer gave us sixteen Gospel sermons. Oct. 15 three of our Sunday-school scholars were baptized. We feel that good was impressed in these meetings.—Lucinda Stutsman, Corner of Thirty and Sinclair Streets, Glendale, Cal., Oct. 26.

COLORADO.

First Grand Valley.—This congregation met in special council Oct. 17. Quite an amount of business was transacted. The meeting was called especially to arrange "for our District Meeting, held at the Palisade house on Thanksgiving Day. Our church selected Eld. J. H. Hoff and Bro. Frank Wagner to represent us at District Meeting . . . Our elder, Bro. H. H. Metzler, was appointed to solicit an homekeeper for the Grand Valley church, and Eld. A. A. Weaver, his assistant, was chosen to take charge of the work, until the close of the year.—D. M. Click, R. D. 2, Grand Junction, Colo., Oct. 25.

FLORIDA

Fort Lauderdale.—There are now about enough members in Southern Florida to form a new congregation. Those who have learn of any others, living near us, who may wish to unite with us, Fort Lauderdale, "The Gateway to the Everglades," is midway between Palm Beach and Miami and is, therefore, the best place for organization. There are several Brethren colonies forming near here, and we believe that other churches will soon be able to organize.—Attendance 225; the offering, $17.78. Bro. J. E. Miller, of Mount Morris, Ill., preached at 11 A. M. and 8 P. M. and all expressed a desire to hear him again.—Addie Arnold Zuck, Lanark, Ill., Oct. 23.

Panama City.—Our series of meetings began Oct. 7 and closed Oct. 22, after two weeks of earnest labor by Bro. J. M. Harshbarger. The members were greatly strengthened. Our love feast was held Oct. 21, conducted by Bro. Harshbarger officiated. On this evening an election for two deacons was held, resulting in the selection of Bro. Jesse Coleman and Albert Bryant, who, with their wives, were duly installed. On Sunday, Oct. 22, a basket dinner was spread and held at this place.—the Hudson and Oak Grove Sunday-school's meeting with us. On account of the inclement weather, none of the members from Hudson were able to attend the meeting. Others took up the topics and many good talks were given. Dinner was served at the close of the Sunday-school, and present. In the evening Bro. Harshbarger preached again. Bro. Harshbarger has been with us for a month, and has had been absent for a month.—Elsie Noffsinger, R. D. 2, Benson, Fla., Oct. 24.

Woodland church met in council Oct. 25. This was the first council held in our new churchhouse. Our elder, Bro. C. H. Bucher, presided. Bro. S. G. Bucher, of Woodland, Delaney is now all staked off into lots, and settle a few of them are sold. Bro. Bucher has charge of the Sunday-school. The building committee, Brethren N. Weber, G. Wheeley and G. H. Stambaugh, with Sunday-school superintendent, has secured a church, with its cemented basement, a fireplace for cooking, a furnace and light plant, all complete, cost $1,200. Also a large lot of lumber, paint, stoves, etc., was done by the Brethren and friends free of charge. The church decided to pay the expenses of the Sunday-school Meeting, 1912, and the place of location, taken by the school, is to go for missions. Bro. Thomas Hollinger, of Ashland, Ohio, is to be the Sunday-school Sunday-school. Bro. G. H. Stambaugh is the superintendent of the Woodland house.—Pansie B. Stambaugh, Sumsum, Ill., Oct. 28.

INDIANA.

Beech Grove.—We met in council Oct. 11, preparatory to our love feast. This was the time for our yearly election of officers. All the old officers were reelected. Eld. J. W. Rarick was chosen elder in charge. Our love feast was held Saturday evening we held our love feast. Several from other congregations were present. Bro. Rarick officiated, assisted by Brethren Martin, Henry Faddy, J. Greenbaker and Carl Rarick. The latter one was also anointed. He was called home on Wednesday night on account of sickness in his home. The home brethren continued the meetings until Tuesday night. Bro. Rarick returned and held the meetings till Sunday evening after the love feast. Two came out on the Lord's side and were buried with him by baptism. Unfortunately the photographs of the Spitle but are not ready yet.—Hattie Stull, R. D. 1, Ingalls, Ind., Oct. 23.

Huntington City.—Our church met in called council on the 24th, with Bro. D. M. Studebaker in the chair. Our elder, Bro. J. D. Mishler, of South Whitley, had been engaged in a series of meetings, could not be with us. The council was reported that Bro. Wise was the nearest of Bro. Lewis Wine and wife to take up the work in this city. The church unanimously concurred in the report. Bro. Lewis Wine and wife being present, they accepted the invitation of the church, and took up the work on Sunday night, Oct. 22 by preaching a first sermon for us. We feel that the church will be greatly strengthened and built up by these new members. We also had some success in securing Brother and Sister Wise. The District Meeting of Middle Indiana was held in the Huntington City church on Oct. 14. The attendance was very large, and the weather ideal, which made it a very pleasant and enjoyable meeting. Bro. Wise was present and assisted the brethren who never attended a District or Annual Meeting. We feel that God has a work for him and his wife, and we take interest in the prayers of the faithful for the upbuilding of the cause.—Ruth B. Bailey, 780 North Guilford St., Huntington, Ind., Oct. 26.

Ladora church met in communion services on Sunday evening, Oct. 15, with Bro. Jesse Ikenberry in charge. A good sermon in the morning. Eld. E. N. Goshorn conducted the evening services and Bro. Ikenberry, Bohn and Wise assisted. A large audience attended the services and gave close attention.—Anna Ellen Bohn, Ladora, Ind., Oct. 24.

Lower Deer Creek.—Our church met in council Oct. 21, preparatory to our love feast, to be held Oct. 28. We also had our quarterly council for November. Our elder, Bro. J. G. Stutsman, presided. Other ministers present were Brethren Dilling, Warren, Hostetter and Geo. L. Studebaker. One letter was reclaimed. Sunday-school officers were elected. Bro. Studebaker preached two instructive sermons on Sunday morning, and Bro. J. F. Appelman began a series of meetings on Sunday evening.—Sadie Hoff, Camden, Ind., Oct. 23.

Middle Fork.—Our church met in council Sept. 30. Bro. J. H. Wright was elected delegate to District Meeting. Oct. 21 we held our love feast at the Bethlehem church. On account of the inclement weather the attendance was not so large, but good interest was manifested by all.—Florence G. Replogle, Owasco, Ind., Oct. 25.

North Liberty.—We are now in the midst of a series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. Walter Warstler, of Goshen, Ind. Bro. Warstler holds forth the Word with power each evening. Saints are being strengthened, and sinners are being warned to flee the wrath to come.—Anna Peterson, North Liberty, Ind., Oct. 27.

Notice.—Experienced city missionary pastors, who are available, will correspond with me at once for further particulars.—John F. Shoemaker, Dis. Sec.-Treas., Shidler, Ind., Oct. 26.

Pleasant Hill.—Bro. S. S. Burger came to this church Oct. 3, continuing the meetings until Oct. 22. He preached sixteen powerful sermons, held one, for the unbelieving, and one each for the saving of souls. The church has been revived. We held our love feast on the close of the meeting. A large crowd surrounded the Lord's tables, the attendance being small on account of inclement weather. Bro. Burger is a man of interest and order prevailed.—Nellie Popple, Lantto, Ind., Oct. 24.

Ridge Schoolhouse.—Oct. 15 Bro. Hostand, of near Walkerton, Ind., came to us again. He spoke on "The Wrath to Come of Man." It was a soul-cheering sermon. As he is going to Ohio, to hold a series of meetings, he will not be with us Nov. 12. Bro. Frank Rupel, of the Pine Creek congregation, will serve the place.—Elizabeth Cartabel, Bremen, Ind., Oct. 27.

Salamonie.—Bro. M. Flory, of Girard, Ill., came to us Sept. 6, and preached for us three weeks. His preaching was very helpful, and the members are very much strengthened spiritually. Two confessions and attendance very good. Two more souls came out on the Lord's side and put on Christ in baptism. Our Sunday-school and Christian Workers' Meeting also are moving along nicely, with a very good interest.—Sarah A. Heaston, R. D. 5, Huntington, Ind., Oct. 24.

IOWA.

Beaver.—Bro. Harvey Royer, of Dallas Center, Iowa, was with us over Sab., and gave us two good sermons. Our Sunday-school is getting along nicely. We remembered the Chicago Sunday-school Extension by taking up a collection.—Belle Ruth, Beaver, Iowa, Oct. 6.

Brooklyn.—We held our love feast Oct. 1. The visiting ministers present were Bro. H. Long, of Des Moines, Iowa; Bro. Elmer Miller, of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, and Bro. John A. Robinson, of Indiana, Iowa. Bro. Robinson commenced Oct. 2, and began a series of meetings for us at that time, closing Oct. 22, with Bro. Miller to Robinson leading the song service, which added much to the interest of the meeting. Bro. Robinson preached the Gospel with convincing power. Eight were born into the kingdom while two of our members fell to rise. Meetings were well attended.—Dora Miller Heatwole, Brooklyn, Iowa, Oct. 24.

Des Moines.—Bro. John Heckman is now in the first week of our revival effort. The first few meetings have been well organized audiences of interested listeners. Last evening, at the close of our services, about nineteen men and boys met in the Sunday-school room and discussed baseball. The interesting way of the enthusiasm and impetus to Christian effort, resulting from the baseball league, was fully explained. Interest is growing in the campaign, recently conducted in our city. Seven active brethren were elected as our "Forward Movement committee." Each one is responsible, as chairman of a sub-committee, for some definite line of work. These appointments are: Membership, Boys' Work, Bible Study, Evangelism, Social Service, Mission and Inter Church Work. Our Sisters' Aid Society also was reorganized last evening. Sister Cora Wilson is the president, and Sister Naomi Shaw is secretary. Owing to high cost of living and scarcity of work, many members have left our community in Des Moines, even during the early winter. We will be glad to receive the Love Classes and Birthday Remembrance with Mrs. Cora Brubaker, 1655 East Grand Ave., in reference to offers for clothing, shoes, bedding, cash, etc.—Virgil Frantz, 1040 Lyon St., Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 25.

KANSAS.

Altoona.—Our congregation has just closed a very interesting series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Elder Campbell, Eld. C. A. Miller, of Westphalia, Kans. He preached the Word with power, and many were added to the church by baptism. On the evening of the 14th we had a very enjoyable love feast, at which time thirty-seven members communed. Oct. 15 Bro. E. E. Stewart was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Eld. W. H. Miller, of Independence, Kans., officiated.—Sadie Stewart, R. D. 2, Altoona, Kans., Oct. 24.

Chapman Creek.—Oct. 7 Bro. R. F. McCune came to us, and remained until the evening of Oct. 15, giving us a series of unprecedented sermons. While there were no accessions, this church has enjoyed a spiritual refreshing. On the 13th we held our love feast. Quite a number of the brethren and sisters were here from adjoining churches.—Mrs. Emma Correll, Abilene, Kans., Oct. 24.

Dorrance.—Our love feast will be held Nov. 25 instead of Nov. 4, as Eld. Jas. B. Stevens will have to be with his people Nov. 13, and close with a love feast on the 25th.—O. H. Feller, Dorrance, Kans., Oct. 24.

Independence.—We have Sunday-school every Sunday, with seven classes and a light preaching appointments here each month and two at Liberty. We also have a Christian Workers' Meeting, with Bro. Ray Corn as president. Each Wednesday evening our teacher-training class meets with Sister W. H. Miller is the teacher. This class is a wonderful help to all, especially to the young Sunday-school and church workers. We have prayer meeting every Thursday evening. Bro. Elmer Miller is to preach on Friday evening of each week during our series of meetings, beginning Oct. 29, to be conducted by Eld. C. A. Miller. The church has been by letter last Sunday night, making a total of seventy-six members. Our ministers and eight deacons. The Brethren Orphans' Home Society has planned two special collections in April and May, and the first will be held Nov. 11.—Pella Carson, R. D. 2, Box 8, Independence, Kans., Oct. 24.

Maple Grove.—Last Sunday two young ladies were baptized; we also received two letters.—Minnie D. Deeter, R. D. 1, Oronoque, Kans., Oct. 17.

Mankoo.—Our church met in special council Oct. 21, preparatory to our love feast, to be held Oct. 22. Eld. J. B. Hylton, of Bloom, Kans., gave a good talk. He is conducting a series of meetings, which commenced on the evening of Oct. 21. visiting brethren reported all the members to be in love and union. Bro. B. Delp, our delegate to the District Meeting, gave us brief remarks concerning the gathering, which were greatly appreciated.—E. E. Johnson, Asher, Kans., Oct. 24.

Ottawa.—Our church has recently closed a series of meetings, which ended with a love feast Oct. 21 and 22. We had a glorious outpouring of the Holy Ghost during these meetings. Each member seems to be greatly confirmed in the faith, and made more zealous for the church work. Seven were added to the church by baptism. Some of them are young in years; others are those who have long sought here but are now coming and faithfully. Our dear brother, R. A. Yoder, of Sabetha, Kans., who labored so earnestly for Christ, endeared himself greatly to the members of this church, and our prayers will follow him in his sincere efforts. Bro. Yoder officiated at our love feast, assisted by Brethren Chas. Shoemaker and W. B. Devilbiss. One hundred and twenty-six members communed. At the close of the Sunday-school, on the last Sunday, Superintendent Crist, of Kansas City, gave a simple, helpful talk to the children. Sister preached services on Sunday evening for the coming year and also a minister. Bro. P. E. Whitmer, who has served us so faithfully for the past two years, was re-elected as our elder, and Bro. John Throne was elected and installed into the ministry. We expect to continue our prayer meetings and song service, held in the church every Wednesday night.—Olive M. Wheeler, 722 Olive Street, Ottawa, Kans., Oct. 26.

Odessa.—Bro. Edwin Jarboe and wife of Red Cloud, Nebr., conducted a two weeks' series of meetings at this mission point, closing Oct. 22 with good interest and attendance. Seven came out on the Lord's side. Two were baptized on Sunday afternoon, and one was received by letter. Jarboe and wife visited in a different home each night. They made many friends while here. The members of the Salem Mission Sunday-school Block will preach for us each Sunday morning after Sunday-school.—Orie Swartz, R. D. 2, Mankato, Kans., Oct. 25.

Verdigris.—Our series of meetings, held Oct. 7 to 22, was a very spiritual meeting was enjoyed by all. About fifty members partook of the Lord's Supper, and a very interesting sermon on Sunday evening, following the love feast. Three were baptized before the meetings began, and two after, starting with much power, and the members all felt greatly strengthened.—Ella Gradwohl, R. D. 1, Box 24, Verdigris, Okla., Oct. 24.

Vermillion.—Bro. P. C. McCune commenced to preach for us Oct. 6, and closed the meetings Oct. 25. Sixteen dear souls came out on the Lord's side, and were buried in baptism with their wives. Many good impressions were made, and others are near the kingdom. Christians were built up in faith, and will continue the work with renewed vigor. Everybody enjoyed Bro. McCune's association. We were sorry to see him leave us. Our love feast will be Nov. 4, at 5 P. M.—Lizzie Hollenbaugh, Vermillion, Kans., Oct. 24.

Wichita church enjoyed a very spiritual communion service Oct. 22. The members were well represented. Some members from adjoining congregations were present to help us. Eld. S. Baker officiated. Bro. Baker is now located here as pastor of this church.—W. M. B. Hoff, 1020 North Emporia Street, Wichita, Kans., Oct. 25.

MARYLAND

Beaver Creek.—One of the most successful meetings for years was held in the Mt. Zion church, Eld. Isaac Frantz, of Polo, came to us Oct. 14, and remained over Sunday. He labored most earnestly, giving us nineteen gospel sermons, which brought forth much fruit. Seven came out on the Lord's. Thirteen were baptized. The best of interest and good attendance were manifest throughout. The meetings closed last night with two confessions and with the hope of souls new born the Kingdom. May the Lord richly bless our Bro. Frantz in his future labors, and may much truth continue to grow "deep in our hearts."—Katie S. Grossnickle, Boonsboro, Md., Oct. 26.

MICHIGAN.

New Haven.—We held our love feast Oct. 21. Eld. S. M. Smith preached for us at 10 A. M., and after dinner Eld. George Stone gave us a sermon, on election for a minister was then held, and Brethren Walter Wilson and Ira Swartzlander called to the work. In the evening eighty-five members surrounded the Lord's tables, and engaged in the sacred communion service. In the morning, after a very interesting Sunday-school session, Brethren Stone and Smith preached sermon from the text, "Freely ye have received, freely give." This Wilson and Swartzlander will be ordained to-morrow, although the weather was very inclement, we felt that we were greatly blessed.—Allie L. Emrick, R. D. 2, Middleton, Mich., Oct. 27.

MINNESOTA.

Deer Park.—Oct. 7 Bro. Jacob A. Myers, of Wineon, Minn., came to us, and began a series of meetings next day, which continued until Oct. 31. Owing to rainy weather the congregations were small, but the interest was good, and the meetings helpful. Five dear lambs came out on the Lord's side and were baptized. We had our love feast Saturday evening, Oct. 21. Twenty-eight communed. Bro. C. D. Reeves officiated.—Mrs. J. T. Bowser, R. F. D. 3, Barnum, Minn., Oct. 28.

MISSOURI.

Aurora.—On the evening of Oct. 18 Bro. Barnhart, of Carthage, Mo., and Bro. Leander Hylton, of Neosho, came to our home. The next day they spent in visiting the members of the place and getting acquainted with them. That night we gathered at the church and had a glorious time of meeting, conducted by Bro. Barnhart. The next day we met at the home of Bro. Hylton, and organized a church. Bro. Barnhart was our moderator. Two letters of membership were received. Bro. Barnhart preached for us during the following year. Brethren J. O. Younce and Edwin Harader were chosen to the ministry. Bro. Harader accepted and was duly installed. Bro. Barnhart gave us helpful, fatherly talk, exhorting admonishing us to be true and faithful to the doctrines and to the principles of the Church of the Brethren, and to his interest. In the evening we had a sermon by Bro. Leander Smith.—Gemma L. Pavlicek, Aurora, Mo., Oct. 22.

North St. Joseph Mission met in members' meeting on Saturday evening, Oct. 21. Bro. Wm. Hylton, of Bethany, Mo., being in attending to other business, he decided to hold our love feast Nov. 11, at 7:30 P. M.—D. Elmer Sell, 2305 North Seventh Street, St. Joseph, Mo., Oct. 24.

Shoal Creek.—As we could not secure a minister to begin our series of meetings Oct. 7, as we had anticipated, we decided to wait until Nov. 12. Bro. Leander Smith, of Nevada, Mo., will be with us to begin the meetings.—Virgil Arzabright, Fair View, Mo., Oct. 23.

NEBRASKA.

Arcadia church closed a two weeks' series of meetings on Sunday night. Eld. Geo. Mishler conducted the meetings and did some very efficient work, by which the membership was greatly strengthened. Bro. Mishler will be with us in April, with Bro. Mishler officiating, assisted by Bro. A. J. Nicker. Oct. 14 Bro. Mishler and wife were united in marriage.—Effie Hargerrow for an efficient brother. On Sunday evening we held an election for a minister, resulting in the choice of Bro. Wm. Hassemier, who, with his wife, was duly installed into office last night.—Bro. A. J. Nickey conducted the installation service.—J. J. Tanner, Arcadia, Nebr., Oct. 24.

Beatrice.—At our business meeting, held last Saturday afternoon, Bro. Hylton, our elder, reported the members to be in love and union and willing to work for the upbuilding of the church. Bro. Harry Hylton and Solliver Lair will begin a short series of meetings here. Our love feast will be held Nov. 5, at 2 P. M. We have recently had a furnace in our church, added a cement porch and steps, and will make other improvements soon. We enjoyed an excellent temperance address by Brother Hylton, of Elvira.—Elizabeth Ritter, Nebr., Oct. 24.

Bethel church met in council Oct. 13. A favorable report was given by the visiting brethren. Since our last report three members have been received by letter, and three church letters have been granted. Bro. A. D. Bollenberger preached for us each evening, Oct. 9 to 15. One young man was united with the church by baptism. Our love feast was held Oct. 14. Bro. Bollenberger officiated. Nearly all of our members were in attendance.—Anna Lichty, Carleton, Nebr., Oct. 23.

Pleasant View.—Our church met in council Oct. 21. Bro. W. J. Swigart, of Red Cloud, Nebr., and wife were baptized by the meeting.—Mrs. Joe Hawley, Republican City, Nebr., Oct. 24.

Silver Lake.—Bro. Ira Wagoner, of Red Cloud, Nebr., closed a two weeks' series of meetings here Oct. 22. Good seed was sown. Bro. Jesse Wagoner, of Red Cloud, Nebr., was with us at the same time and conducted the song services for a week. All was appreciated very much.—Anna Kindig, R. D. 1, Box 37, Roseland, Nebr., Oct. 28.

NEW MEXICO

Miami church met in council Oct. 7, prior to our love feast, held Oct. 14. Twenty-six members surrounded the tables of the Lord. We had a pleasant meeting. Bro. Levi Snell, of Oklahoma, was with us, and he was used in conducting a series of meetings at this place. He is giving us good sermons. Bro. Isaac Hylton, of Elvira, Kans., was also with us and gave an excellent sermon. In the evening of the same day Bro. Jacob Copper, of Dora, Okla., gave an illustrated talk on the Bible, which was much appreciated. Bro. Copper remained with us for Monday and Tuesday evenings, preaching each night. We are glad for brethren Snell and Copper, and several ministers be passing this way, we should be glad to have them give us a call.—Mahala Hylton, Miami, N. Mex., Oct. 17.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Carrington church met in council Oct. 7. Our elder, Bro. William Shumaker, was present. Letter was granted, and two letters were granted. Church officers were elected for the coming year. Oct. 8 we organized a Christian Workers' Meeting, to be held on Sunday afternoons.—Anna Kreps, Carrington, N. Dak., Oct. 28.

OHIO.

Bino Creek.—We took charge of this church May 1, and closed our work Oct. 19. During our stay here twelve were baptized and one reclaimed, with several applicants for the future. We leave the work in charge of Bro. L. H. Provant, who has been with us for a few days, and will start for Kansas, Ala., Nov. 1, to spend the winter in a mild climate.—J. L. Guthrie, Pleasant Hill, Ohio, Oct. 24.

Bremen.—The date of our love feast has been changed from Oct. 4 to Nov. 4 on account of the epidemic and scarlet fever in our town.—Levi Stroup, Bremen, Ohio.

Lexington.—Our church has been wonderfully revived and strengthened. We had our love feast Oct. 14. God's blessings were surely poured out upon us. The elders and ministers present were Eld. Jesse Minnich, Bro. Jas. C. Davidson, L. A. Bookwalter and Van B. Wright. Eld. Samuel Duvall officiated. Seventy-six were in the spirit of the feast. Several brethren and sisters of the adjoining churches were here to enjoy the occasion with us. We were glad to have Brethren Duvall, Dover, Ky., with us for the first time since he united with the church here. After Sunday morning services we went to the creek, where Eld. Duvall spoke in the presence of the ministry. Eld. Wm. Minnich officiating, and Bro. Harley Hayes and Bro. Ira Hayes were chosen for the ministry and deacon. Before the preaching services on Sunday evening an aged brother and sister were received, and the right hand of fellowship. Eld. L. A. Bookwalter preached a powerful sermon on Sunday evening.—Bessie Hayes, Temperance.—L. E. Ockerman, R. D. 3, Hillsboro, Ohio, Oct. 18.

Lima.—Our elder, Bro. O. A. Snider, visited a special council Oct. 21, when a series of meetings will be held Nov. 19. We will have an all-day meeting, beginning at 10:30 A. M. The visiting brethren will be a very welcome guest.—Della Lehman, Lima, Ohio, Oct. 24.

Logan.—Our church is completing its preparatory to our love feast, Oct. 28. Our elder, Bro. A. B. Horst, presiding. Four letters of membership were granted. Many members are interested in our Christian Workers' Meeting. The matter of putting a new roof on our church building was discussed at this council. A committee was elected to be attended to as soon as convenient. A temperance committee was appointed to arrange for a meeting in the near future. Bro. J. L. Kayler, and his wife, will sail for India, Oct. 28, the latter part of this month. At the end of the year I will be a report of the annual visit was good. Several of the members were found in a feeble condition, physically. We decided to send a letter to Bro. Kayler's wife, with an address where she is unable to leave her home. Bro. Royer was appointed to look after the matter of securing communion sets. Some of their talks were very interesting and instructive.—Flossie E. Mohr, R. D. 4, De Graff, Ohio, Oct. 26.

Mechanic Grove church met in council Oct. 18, with Bro. L. A. Bookwalter presiding. Eld. John Smith was with us and took part in the council deliberations. Eld. Samuel M. Lair commenced a series of meetings Oct. 6, and continued till Oct. 22. One was made willing to accept Christ. Bro. Hugh Clapper was elected to the ministry. Brethren Samuel Spangler, Sherwood, Ohio, Oct. 22.

Mohican.—In my letter for the Messenger of Oct. 21, where it reads "forty-five communicants surrounded the Lord's table," it should read "forty-five communicants."—Ella Hylton, Loma Leamon, R. D. 2, West Salem, Ohio, Oct. 25.

Pittsburg.—Our love feast was held Oct. 21. The attendance was large. Several visiting brethren were with us. We had a very spiritual meeting. On Sunday morning we held a children's meeting, conducted by Bro. Jeremiah Kelley. After the children's meeting, Bro. I. J. Rosenberger preached a very interesting sermon.—Lizzie Smith, Polk, R. D. 2, Box 113, Arcanum, Ohio, Oct. 23.

Woodland.—Our love feast was held Oct. 21. We had a very good meeting, and nearly all the surrounding churches were represented by their members. Bro. Jeremiah Kelley officiated. The room was filled with communicants. Bro. Eld. Shepler, of the Sugar Creek congregation, officiated. Other ministers present were Eld. Wm. Minnich, of Mechanic Grove; Minnichtown church, and Elders Fred Weimer, Murray and McFadden, of Sugar Creek congregation. Bro. Jeremiah Kelley spoke on Sunday and gave the Sunday-school a talk, after which he preached a good sermon.—Lizzie Brubaker, Wellersville, Ohio, Oct. 27.

OKLAHOMA.

Tribbey.—We met in council Oct. 21, with Bro. D. E. Cripe in charge. Elders H. Wolfe and J. Lehman being present, we were organized into a church. Brother Jacob Myers was elected to the ministry, and Bro. Leonard Troxel was elected deacon. Sister Kate Troxel was chosen clerk; Sister Flora Troxel, treasurer. Bro. D. E. Cripe, elder in charge.—Our letter correspondent—Wm. Troxel, R. D. 1, Tribbey, Okla., Oct. 27.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Alderson.—Oct. 14 Bro. J. B. Shidler, of Harleysville, Pa., came to visit at this place and preach for us. He gave us two inspiring sermons. We certainly enjoyed his association and the spiritual food he dealt out on Saturday and Sunday evenings. That was his first trip to this mission. We had a good attendance, considering the rainy weather. We should be glad to have Bro. Shidler come again. We extend our thanks to him icence surpasses the beauty of any city that has ever been built and the beauty of any landscape that has ever been seen. A dear father was out, one clear night, looking at the stars. He said, "I wonder on which one of the stars heaven is to be." Some think the future heaven will be on this earth. It matters not whether on this earth or on a distant planet, or elsewhere, heaven will be where Jesus is. A little lost boy was asked, "Where is your home, my boy?" He answered, "My home is where mother is." Jesus promised, "I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also."

The Reward of the Faithful.

I think the greatest delight in heaven will be to look into the face of Jesus. See how beautiful it is! See its tenderness and love! Think! He saved me. Hear him say, "Well done, good and faithful servant; enter into the joys of your Lord." Oh, we will want to be near him and praise him a long while.

Not only will we see Jesus but we will also see our loved ones. We will know each other over there. The joy of loved ones meeting here, after a long separation, is only a faint suggestion of the joy of meeting in the world of glory. Our Christian experiences here are only slight foretastes of the good things to come in the perfect world. It is written, "Eye hath not seen, nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, the things which God hath prepared for them that love him."

Heaven will be a place of spiritual exercise and development. Let us not be beguiled into the thought that heavenly rest is inactivity,—do nothing. Doing nothing would not accord with the active life that many of us have here in his service. We would not be happy in such a condition. It will be most delightful to us to continue our praise and worship and service in his presence. The joy that is begun here shall be perfected. Although there will be degrees of blessedness and honor, proportioned to the capacity and fidelity of each soul, each shall receive as great a measure as it can contain. The capacity will be all the while enlarging, but the joy will be full. The happiness will probably be as varied as the capabilities. The reason for so believing is, that unemployed powers are a source of discomfort, while normal activity always produces delight.

Enough is said of heaven in the Bible to make us want to gain it. It will be a perfect state of blessedness in a perfect place of beauty. To gain it is to gain all. To lose it is to lose all.

> "There is a blessed home
> Beyond this land of woe,
> Where trials never come,
> Nor tears of sorrow flow;
> Where faith is lost in sight,
> And patient hope is crowned,
> And everlasting light
> Its glory throws around."

Destiny of the Disobedient.

BY JESSE D. MOHLER.

THE refinements of modern civilization have made the forcible teaching of a future reckoning and severe judgment, as found in the Bible, seem out of date to many religious teachers. Some have even sought to show that it is inconsistent with Christ's mission of love and mercy, and not to be taken at face value. Men propose to know more of the future than God knew when the Word was written.

It is probable that the conditions, surrounding former generations, caused more severity of conscience, and allowed less joy and love than we now seek in our religious views; but that does not justify the leniency of thought, so common to those supposed to be our best thinkers.

In our conjectures of heaven and hell it should be kept in mind that we know nothing of either except as God has told us in his Word. Because we desire leniency, some would credit God with more love and mercy than was ever known before, and more yet to be shown. But I find him as positive today, in resisting evil, as when Jannes and Jambres withstood Moses (2 Tim. 3: 1-8; Ex. 7: 11).

Indeed, when we consider God's love to Israel in calling them forth as separately as he calls his church today, his promises of temporal blessings as great as the mind can comprehend, and his fulfillment of it all while they remained faithful, we think he loved an obedient Jew much as he does the Christian; and his temporal gifts then compared, in abundance, to the spiritual joys we now contemplate. Must it, then, not be true that the punishment of wayward Israel is but a warning of the awful destiny of him who rejects Christ and refuses to obey his commandments?

In business dealings most people buy more freely on credit than when paying cash. We risk the future. Safe business demands higher integrity in one who purchases on credit than of a cash customer. We may boast of our advancement over Israel,—the people who received the Mosaic law as an infant nation in its swaddling-clothes; but our advancement does not make us more precious to our Savior, if in rebellion to him. It makes us more responsible for disobedience.

Full recognition of the higher possibilities of the present age was given when God ceased to give temporal reward for good service, and failed to visit immediate punishment upon the sinful. There would be less sin, perhaps, if we now enjoyed more of the reward of righteousness, and bore the punishment for our transgressions daily; but the purpose of God, to make a chosen people with the possibilities of spiritual growth and expansion of joys in the glory world, would not thus be attained.

Regardless of the vain philosophies that would undo the doctrine of fiery punishment to the disobedient, the denunciations of sin and the warnings of woe to the unfaithful are as clear and strong today as when written. God is love, indeed, but that very love makes his will as inflexible against sin today as when his glory rested on Mt. Sinai. "It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God" (Heb. 10: 31).

The writer to the Hebrews understood that as the "word spoken by angels was stedfast, and every transgression and disobedience received a just recompense of reward," the Word of the Lord must be even more inviolate. Heb. 2: 2, 3, says, "How then shall we escape if we neglect so great salvation?"

As to the location of the future abode of the wicked, conjecture gives us many things. God has kept his counsel. The Savior's parable of Dives in hell teaches us that the sinful deeds done in the body will receive physical punishment to correspond (Luke 16: 23).

If we would lessen the teaching of fiery torment we must dim the glories of the New Jerusalem. If the word pictures of heaven come short of reality,—and we believe they do,—then let us know and teach that the torments of hell are even worse than the burning words of the Revelator could portray to the mind of man.

Why Christians Should Not Go to War.

BY JACOB FUNK.

THE greatest word in any age or language is love, and when Jesus Christ, the personification of God's love, came into the world to conquer and bring back a lost world to God, he came without blare of trumpet, sword of defense, or any other weapon of destruction. By precept and example he taught as one having authority, and twenty centuries of experience have proved to the world that Christ's method is the surest and safest to win men's hearts and save men's souls.

The belching forth of cannon, the deadly thrust of the sword, or the discharge of musketry, has never yet decided a single issue, permanently and definitely, nor shall it ever do so, unless it be to prove the folly of resorting to arms as a means of securing right and justice. The Christian's weapons are not carnal, but are mighty to the pulling down of strongholds, and when rightly used are the greatest power in the world. Hatred, vengeance and jealousy, and their synonyms, are the vocabulary of him who slays his fellow-men, be it in the company of a host, or in a hand-to-hand conflict, and the spirit is entirely antagonistic to the spirit of the Christian.

Love and mercy, peace and forgiveness are the vocabulary of the Christian, and of any one who desires to lift up his fellow-men, or advance the cause of right, but these words are strangers to him who slays and destroys. One of the last things the Master said to his disciples was: "Go ye" . . . "teach" . . . "baptize," and the method of teaching is, when your enemy hungers, feed him; when he thirsts, give him drink. By so doing you are using the key which shall unlock his heart and open his soul for the reception of the truth.

The Christian does not need to fight, for there is nothing gained by fighting that he does not already possess. Would he fight for freedom? Already he has and enjoys freedom that the world knows not of, and when all men and nations shall be made willing to have the Lord Jesus Christ make them free, war and its horrors shall be regarded as a relic of barbarism. Would he fight for riches? Sons of God are heirs of God and joint heirs with Jesus Christ, and no victory on the field of blood could possibly eclipse the riches of him who is a child of the King. Would he fight for honor? Simply to be a servant of the Most High God is honor enough to start the hosannahs of the angelic choir, and bring forth the crown of righteousness for him who has served well. Would he fight for power? The God who has commissioned him has also given to him the power to convert the whole world and bring it to Christ. There are no carnal weapons that the Christian can lawfully use, but he is not defenseless. The dove has no sharp claws or large beak with which to fight other birds, but it can fly straight up, which other birds can not do. And while the Christian is not to use weapons with which he might slay and destroy, he can go straight to a throne from which may come power and honor and glory. Even so may it be!

CORRESPONDENCE

"Write what thou seest, and send it unto the churches"

DISTRICT MEETING OF NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

I do not know who is to report our splendid District Meeting, but most of us had individual side-views,—hearing and seeing things too good to keep. While the Lord was pouring out his rich blessings upon the multitude, some drops fell even on me.

This year our Ministerial Meeting convened at Empire, Stanislaus County, five miles from Modesto, Oct. 5, followed by the District Meeting on the 6th, and the Sunday-school Meeting on the 7th. All were well attended, there being quite a representation from a distance. The large church was well filled at each session.

The spirit of the meetings was excellent. Considerable business was passed upon. Several advanced steps were taken on lines of mission work in the District, Sunday-school work, and looking toward the building of an Old Folks' Home.

The discussions were spirited, but carried, with its bubbling over, that humble and due deference to the brother of different views which always shows brotherly love and fellowship as a premium. This subordinating of individual opinions to the good of the greater number, in some way always reverts to the individual's greatest good. This is one of the playgrounds of genuine charity.

The Empire church is well equipped for work and is making use of its talent in a very commendable way. They are pushing out in all directions, giving the Word to the surrounding country, not alone through the ministry, but are organizing and maintaining several Sunday-schools.

The multitude was fed in the basement at fifteen cents per meal. We think this a wise measure. Such a large meeting would have been no light burden to a new congregation in a new country. By the present arrangement, the burden is carried by the many, and the meeting can be held in any of the mission churches.

Some visiting brethren were there, among them Brethren Frantz and England, of Lordsburg, and Brethren Cupp and Hite, from Oklahoma.

Empire is in a beautiful part of the San Joaquin Valley, and is, in the opinion of all I talked to, destined to become one of the most prosperous communities in the State. We believe it will become one of the strongholds of the church.

A call for Annual Meeting in 1913 was made, Fresno,—if I was not misinformed,—adheres to its offer, made now twice to our Standing Committee. This wide-awake city has a stick-to-it-iveness commensurate with its thrift, cleanliness and beauty. And if the meeting ever comes to Fresno, our Brethren will find her to be wholly worthy their confidence. J. Harman Stover.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord"

Barnhart, Isaac, son of Abraham and Annie Barnhart, born Dec. 5, 1834, died Oct. 2, 1911. April 9, 1884, he was married to Maria Angle. He united with the Brethren church Aug. 15, 1886, and was elected to the office of deacon July 30, 1894, which position he retained for a number of years. Deacon. Nov. 21, 1911, he was affected suddenly with a rupture, re struggled with it. He was taken to the Lutheran Hospital, Roanoke, Va., where operations were performed, but all in vain. Interment in the cemetery at Mt. Bethel church. Services by Bro. Rogers. The entire community mourns the loss of a loving friend.—H. W. Peters, Wertz, Va.

Bloom, Sister Susanna nee Stutzman, was born near Blough, born April 24, 1834, died of pneumonia, at her home in Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 18, 1911, aged 77 years, 5 months and 22 days. She leaves three daughters, two sisters and one brother, previous by the undersigned, Oct. 20, 1911 Bedford St. Johnstown, Pa.

Bradford, Sarah, nee Spacht, born in Somerset County, Pa., Dec. 27, 1823, died at her home in Hancock County, Ohio, Oct. 13, 1911, aged 87 years, 9 months and 16 days. At the age of 16 years she was married to Jacob Bradford. Seven children were born to this union. Five of them have died. After the death of Mr. Beaverman she was married to Mr. Abner Jones. This being at the time of the Civil War. Mr. Jones felt the call to enter the army, but never returned. Later Sister Sarah was married to William S. Bradford. Four children were born to this union, all of whom are living at the present time. Our sister had more than ordinary physical vitality, and this was of great value to her during her long life of suffering. She frequently stated, in her days of affliction, that if it had not been for the companionship of her Savior she could never have passed through all of her afflictions as she did. For fifty years she was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren. She held her membership in the Eagle Creek congregation, where she was always active in the various phases of church work. Services by her pastor, assisted by Noah Brasser, a minister in the Mennonite church. Text, 2 Tim. 4: 6-8.—Jesse J. Anglemyer, Williamstown, Ohio.

Metzler, Bro. John C., born in Bladensburg, Pa., Sept. 18, 1826, died of old age and a complication of diseases, Sept. 12, 1911, in the bounds of the Bethel church congregation, Kans., aged 84 years, 11 months and 24 days. When he was seven years old his parents moved to Henry County, Ind., locating in the Nettle Creek church, near Greensboro. In 1849, he was married to Christiana Ulrich. To them were born three children, one preceding the father. He is survived by his wife, four children and one sister. Bro. Metsker and wife united with the Church of the Brethren in early life, in the Nettle Creek congregation, Ind. In September, 1859, he came to Kansas, settling in Lawrence, where he lived until the time of his death. In 1861 he was ordained to the office of deacon in the above church in that capacity for fifty years, with credit to himself and the church, until, during the last few years, he was inactive on account of his health. In the Bismarck Grove District Meeting, in 1883, he served on the Committee of Arrangements as treasurer, and was the first district meeting at which he served in the same capacity. He was District Treasurer of Southeastern Kansas for four years, and a member of his home church (Washington Creek) as treasurer for thirty-one years. He was elected to Trustee of Bethel church at Curs Gordo, Ill. Interment in the Washington Creek cemetery.—H. W. Behrens, Lone Star, Kans.

Shawver, Sister Rebecca, nee Mohr, born Aug. 22, 1835, in Montgomery County, Ohio, died Sept. 27, 1911, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Ella Bowman, in Dayton, Ohio, aged 5 days. In early life she and her parents moved to Logan County, Ohio, and settled in the bounds of the Lick Creek congregation. March 12, 1861, she was married to Samuel Shawver, who preceded her to the spirit land Oct. 20, 1909. They were blessed with three song and two daughters, all of whom are living. Sister Shawver and her husband united with the church at Lick Creek in 1865, and lived faithful members of the Logan church until death. After the Shawvers moved to Bellefontaine, Ohio, they united with the Bellefontaine church, where she attended services regularly, however growing infirm, until about two years ago.—Jesse J. Miller.—Lucila Crim, Bellefontaine, Ohio.

Stoneberger, Bro. Aaron, born in Darke County, Ohio, June 27, 1834, died at Yorkshire, Darke Co., Ohio, Sept. 29, 1911, aged 77 years, 3 months and 2 days. Oct. 30, 1861, he was married to Miss Mary Ann Hoover. To this union were born three sons and one daughter. One son preceded his father about twenty-eight years ago. Bro. Stoneroek and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren in 1889. He was a consistent member until the Master called him home. During his last illness, of about six weeks, he suffered from partial paralysis, but bore it with Christian fortitude. He leaves his wife, two sons and one daughter. Services by Bro. A. Brumbaugh. Interment in the Old English cemetery.—H. C. Stoneberger, New Westens, Ohio.

Stottlemyer, Sister Henrietta, daughter of John C. and Barbara Hoover, born in Rockingham County, Va., Feb. 22, 1840, died Sept. 26, 1911, aged 66 years, 9 months and 22 days. March 8, 1860, she was united in marriage to Hiram Stottlemyer. To this union were born four sons and six daughters. Four daughters preceded her in death. In 1872 she and her husband united with the Church of the Brethren, in which faith she remained faithful. Services at the residence by Brethren Hoover, Norris and Shepherd. Interment in the Beach Grove cemetery.—Hattie Shull, R. R. 3, Rogers, Ind.

Swab, Fenton, infant son of Bro. H. A. and Sister Alice (Rossell) Swab, of Twin Falls, Idaho, born Oct. 6, 1911, died Oct. 7, 1911. It seemed hard to give up this child, as they have been married twelve years and it was their only child. "The Lord giveth and the Lord taketh away."—Minnie L. Mullins, Twin Falls, Idaho.

Thomas, Sister Sarah, died at the home of her son, Bro. Ira Thomas, in the Upper Deer Creek congregation, Sept. 26, 1911, aged 81 years, 8 months and 3 days. The deceased was the widow of the late Adam Thomas, and the last survivor of Bro. Joel Garber, deceased. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren at least sixty years, living a consistent Christian life. She was the mother of nine children, of whom five have preceded her. Three sons and one daughter survive. Her last sickness was confined to a few weeks. Her last sickness was endured with much patience. Services and interment in the Deer Creek Brethren church, conducted by writer and Bro. S. B. Zigler. Text, Psa. 17: 15.—S. I. Bowman, Harrisonburg, Va.

Walters, Bro. Geo. S., born in Germany, April 14, 1844, died in the bounds of the Center church congregation, Ind., Oct. 15, 1911, aged 67 years, 6 months and 29 days. He was united in marriage to Rosanna Bowser, Nov. 8, 1865. To this union were born eleven children. He was a faithful member of the Church of the Brethren for fifteen years. He leaves a wife and seven children, nine grandchildren and two sisters.—Amanda L. Newcomer, R. D. 1, Box 110, Nappanee, Ind.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Christian Serenity: How to Get It.

John 14: 1, 27; 16: 33.

For Sunday Evening, Nov. 12, 1911.

I. Make Peace with God.—(1) "Through our Lord Jesus Christ" (Rom. 5: 1). (2) "For he is our peace" (Eph. 2: 14). (3) "He was wounded for our transgressions" (Isa. 53: 5).

II. Peace Is Promised.—(1) "The Lord will bless his people with peace" (Psa. 29: 11). (2) And "keep him in perfect peace" (Isa. 26: 3). (3) "Peace which passeth all understanding" (Phil. 4: 7).

III. Seek Peace.—(1) "Depart from evil and seek peace" (Psa. 24: 14). (2) "Let the peace of God rule" (Col. 3: 15). (3) "Live peaceably with all men" (Rom. 12: 18; 14: 18).

IV. Peace Makes Peace.—(1) "Blessed are the peacemakers" (Matt. 5: 9). (2) "Follow after the things which make for peace" (Rom. 14: 19). (3) "The wisdom that is from above is peaceable" (James 3: 17).

V. How Promote Serenity?—(1) By prayer (Philip. 4: 6). (2) By implicit trust (Isa. 12: 2). (3) By Bible study (Psa. 119: 165; Prov. 3: 1, 2).

Assign the Following a Week in Advance: (1) What is it to have "peace with God" and "the peace of God"? Explain. (2) How may we get the peace of God? (3) Give an instance from the life of Christ showing his peace. (4) What does serenity accomplish for us? (5) How does peace differ from inactivity? (6) How can we develop the peace habit?

PRAYER MEETING

The Bank That Never Fails.

Matt. 6: 19-21.

For Week Ending November 12, 1911

I. The Insufficiency of Things Earthly.—This earth has no answer for the inward cry of the human race. The treasure of its countless mines only starves the soul that feeds upon it. With all the beauty that this earth presents to mortal gaze, it is "a land of darkness and of peace." When the longing that is within us cries out for God,—the Living God,—will the silver and gold of the everlasting hills satisfy us? No, this earth is not a safety deposit vault for an immortal soul. He who lays up treasure upon the earth will find, at last, that it is but a confusion and a snare (Prov. 11: 28; Eccl. 5: 10, 13).

2. Heaven Is the Soul's Treasure Vault.—With Christ Jesus as the "Great Banker" in charge of the vault keys, whatsoever is placed in his hands will be "kept," and nothing can be lost. The Psalmist once looked up to heaven and to the Great Warden, who is himself "the door," and he said, "He shall hide me in his pavilion; in the secret of his tabernacle shall he hide me." When the Lord takes care of our treasure, all is well. It will be eternally kept. "Then that thou hast given me I have kept," said Christ. We need never worry about our treasures when Jesus guards them (Psa. 91: 1-12).

3. Our Treasure in Heaven Means Our Heart There Too.—If our treasure is really in the "Bank that never fails," we will naturally be thinking about it. It will be in our holiest meditations, in our sincerest prayers. It will be in our thoughts when we walk by the way and when we lie down at night. Some day we will yearn, if we do not now, to go where our treasure is, and where our thoughts have long been. The laying up of the treasure means the laying up of the life in heaven. It means that we and the Guardian of our wealth are mutually and eternally interested in each other (1 Peter 1: 3-9).

and the Mission Board.—Mrs. Elizabeth V. Smith, R. D. 1, Box 59, Alderson, Pa., Oct. 24.

Ashland, Ohio.—We held a two weeks' series of meetings at the Welty church, conducted by Bro. Adam Hoffnagel, of Lewistown, Pa. He labored very zealously and prayerfully, and was always ready to help those who came to him for counsel. Oct. 22 seventeen young people were baptized, with them being members of the Sunday-school except two. Five of them are heads of families. The scene was a very impressive one, when the candidates for baptism came forward on Saturday evening to receive instructions prior to baptism. The congregation was restored to membership, making eighteen in all that were added to the church. Several are awaiting baptism in the near future. Sunday afternoon we held a temperance meeting at this place, in the interests of the Anti-saloon League.—Susan M. Newcomer, R. D. 1, Smithburg, Md., Oct. 23.

Center.—Bro. William Knopsnider came to us Sept. 16 and preached for us every week, closing Sept. 30. Attendance was very helpful and spiritual. The attendance was good, although we have many members, weather during the meetings. Six dear souls came out on the Lord's side during the helpful.—Mrs. Laura Saylor, R. D. 2, Rockwood, Pa., Oct. 23.

Huntington.—Oct. 7 we had a good meeting at our Sunday-school and church services. Bro. Quincy Holsopple and wife were with us and gave good talks, encouraging words and enthusiasm in mission work. We look forward with pleasure to our next visit, to be held Nov. 5, and also await with pleasure the coming of Brother and Sister Bowman, who expect to sail Dec. 5. We hope to have Bro. Galen B. Royer with us soon. The side meetings are conveniencing. We feel very encouraging ties we ought to grow in grace. Three have been baptized lately. We pray for a deeper spiritual life and more unselfishness of the charity that "thinketh no evil." Let us not be too busy to attend to the work of the church and Sunday-school. I find that where the Messenger is read, the interest in the church work is better.—Eleanor J. Brumbaugh, Huntingdon, Pa., Oct. 27.

Mingo.—Oct. 15 we closed a five weeks' meeting, assisted by the Skippack house, conducted by Bro. Samuel Witmer. The attendance and interest were good, and the results were on the Lord's side and was baptized Oct. 11. We also held our love feast on the same day, and had an enjoyable service. Quite a number of members were present from adjoining congregations, for which we were very glad. Nov. 25 we expect to begin a series of meetings in the Mingo house, to be conducted by Bro. Nathan Ebersole, Elizabeth B. Hunsberger, R. D. 1, Royersford, Pa., Oct. 25.

Montgomery.—Sept. 30 Eld. G. S. Hairigh began a series of meetings in this place, continuing till Oct. 17. He did some very able preaching. He also gave us a talk on Bible study one evening, on his trip to the Holy Land, which proved to be very interesting. The best of interest prevailed throughout the meetings, with an unusually large attendance. Four souls were made to feel their need of a Savior, and were baptized. Our love feast was held Oct. 15, and our council Oct. 14. We will relish to hear from us our elder for another year.—D. H. Berkey, Marion Center, Pa., Oct. 25.

Perry congregation met in council Sept. 23. One letter was granted. Our love feast was held Oct. 7, with Bro. Henry Beeman, of Dillsburg, Pa., and Bro. W. H. Miller, of Hanover, Pa., officiating with us. Bro. Beeman and Bro. Miller remained with us two weeks and preached a number of soul-inspiring sermons. Five precious souls put on Christ in baptism. We believe there are others who are considering the all-important step.—Allen J. Shumsker, Blain, Pa., Oct. 23.

Philadelphia (First Church of the Brethren, Dauphin Street, above Broad).—We held our quarterly council meeting Oct. 19, Bro. J. T. Myers, presided, assisted by our pastor, Bro. D. Webster Kline. Oct. 20 we held our special members' meeting, in order to revise our church directory. Many corrections were scattered throughout the city, and changing of addresses is continually taking place, it is difficult to keep in touch with all of them.—Mrs. Sallie B. Schnell, 1906 North Park Avenue, Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 24.

Red Bank.—Oct. 22, at the morning preaching services, one was restored to fellowship, making a total of thirty who have been received during the last nine months. We have combined with us the few faithful ones at this place, and the District Mission Board, I understand, intends to send a pastor to come to this field of labor, Feb. 1 of this year. A careful canvass of the community was made and the names of members were found. Twenty-four of them live in this immediate vicinity, and fourteen in other places, who claim membership here. The addition of thirty, increasing our number to sixty-eight, is a source of much encouragement.—I. B. Holsinger, R. D. 5, New Bethlehem, Pa., Oct. 29.

Upton.—Our church closed a series of meetings Oct. 15, conducted by Eld. Chas. Stearsman, one of our home ministers. The attendance and interest were good. While there were no immediate accessions into the church, very perceptible good was done the church was greatly strengthened. Bro. Steerman does not shun to declare the whole Gospel.—J. D. Wilson, R. D. 5, Greencastle, Pa., Oct. 23.

West Greentree.—We opened a series of meetings in Florin Oct. 7, and continued until Oct. 22. The attendance and interest were good. Bro. Levi Mohler, of Elizabethtown, had charge of the meetings. Oct. 26 and 27 we held our love feast at Ricems. We enjoyed a very spiritual feast. A number of ministering brethren were present. Many wholesome truths were presented by Bro. S. H. Hertzler.—Ida Hertzler, Elizabethtown, Pa.

York.—We held our semiannual love feast last Sunday. The feast was well attended, considering the very inclement weather all day. About 450 members surrounded the tables, which filled the entire house. Our friends occupied a few chairs, standing in the corners of the room, and filling the aisles. We hope that the time is not far distant, when we will be able to accommodate our friends on such occasions. The seating capacity of our church, in this end of the city, is about 700, but on such occasions we should be able to accommodate many more. Eld. Chas. D. Bonsack, of Bridgewater, Va., officiated. Quite a number of ministers and others were present from the adjoining congregations. Bro. Bonsack will hold a series of meetings in the S. S. Hershey, York, Pa., Oct. 19.

TENNESSEE.

New Hope.—Bro. D. L. Miller came to our place Oct. 22, and remained with us two days. He preached two inspiring sermons each day. Bro. Andrew Hale Lear also labored with us very much appreciated, and the church seems greatly strengthened and encouraged to "press on toward the mark." This is Bro. Miller's first visit to Tennessee, and we enjoyed the great privilege of meeting with this dear brother, about whom we have read for years. He has always pattied upon the life, truthfulness of the Bible.—Laura Saylor, Jonesboro, Tenn., Oct. 26.

VIRGINIA.

Christiansburg.—We held our love feast Oct. 14. About fifty-eight members surrounded the tables. Bro. W. E. Naff, of the Red Oak Grove church, officiated. Several brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations were present, but, owing to a number of love feasts being held on the same day, in adjoining congregations, many were not near as many present with us as would have been otherwise. On Sunday morning, at 10 o'clock, we met for song service, and at 10:30 Bro. J. S. Showalter, of Roanoke, preached an interesting sermon. One dear sister applied for baptism.—W. I. Hylton, Christiansburg, Va., Oct. 22.

Pleasant Valley (First District).—Our love feast, held Oct. 14, was a very spiritual one. About two hundred members surrounded the Lord's tables. Bro. Ananias Harman officiated. Other visiting brethren present were Bro. Reuben and Wallace Akers. Brethren Ananias Harman and Henry Reed did the preaching the Sunday following, to a large assembly.—Peter Wampler, R. D. 2, Floyd, Va., Oct. 26.

Trevilians.—Recently our little congregation has had great cause to rejoice, as in the call to the ministry of Bro. E. N. H. Beahm came to us for a ten days' series of meetings. As the result of the meetings, eight persons were baptized, and the members are much encouraged, especially have those been encouraged who have met with no church lately. At our love feast twenty-six members surrounded the tables. Twelve of this number had never commoned before, and eight of these had never been baptized. Several were there from Bro. W. A. Myers, who has been the only minister here since the death of Bro. Beahm's father, Eld. Nathan Beahm, presidency of Hebron Seminary. Many of us felt that the work would have to be dropped, since there was no other elected minister in the county. After Bro. Beahm had spent ten days in Louisa County, among these hospitable Southern people, and found that the work was encouraging, he decided to locate among us and take up the work which Bro. Myers had so successfully carried on heretofore. Today he is bringing his family here, and will occupy the same house which Bro. Myers and family have vacated, in having purchased the same of Bro. Myers. We ask the prayers of the faithful in behalf of this church.—Emma Whisler Glick, Trevilians, Va., Oct. 23.

Valley Pike.—After holding a series of meetings in this church, commencing Sept. 14, we had the pleasure of received into the church by baptism. The members of the church are much encouraged. Oct. 14 we had our love feast, a number of visiting ministers were present from other congregations. Bro. Minnie Smith, of Bridgewater, Va., was with us. Bro. Miller preached Eld. S. A. Shaver's funeral.—M. H. Copp, Mauertown, Va., Oct. 25.

WEST VIRGINIA.

Alleghany.—Bro. Ezra Fike came to the above-named place Oct. 8 and began a series of meetings, preaching each evening till the following Saturday, when we held our love feast. About fifty members communed, with Bro. Fike officiating. On Sunday morning he preached two soul-inspiring sermons for us, after which five persons came out on the Lord's side. There are in this place a few faithful members who have labored very earnestly in the cause of the Master. The church was strengthened and built up, and the ungodly were warned of their sinful ways.—Lillie C. Moore, Alleghany, W. Va., Oct. 24.

Maple Spring.—Oct. 7 we held our love feast. The attendance was good, although no unpleasant weather. About 150 surrounded the Lord's table. Bro. B. Arnold officiated. Several brethren and sisters from adjoining congregations were present, but we promised you more soul-stirring sermons for us, after which five persons came out on the Lord's side. There are in this place a few faithful members who have labored very earnestly in the cause of the Master. The church was strengthened and built up, and the ungodly were warned of their sinful ways.—Lillie C. Moore, Alleghany, W. Va., Oct. 24.

UNION CHURCH, INDIANA.

We met in members' meeting, preparatory to our love feast Oct. 7, Bro. S. P. Henricks presiding. The report of the business was very favorable and encouraging.

One letter of membership was granted.

Our love feast, on the evening of Oct. 14, was not largely attended because of the very inclement weather, but a more quiet and spiritual feast was never before enjoyed at our church.

Ministering brethren I. B. Wike, of Huntington, J. W. Grater, of South Bend, Daniel and Merrill Whitmer, of North Liberty, and Jacob Hilderbrand, of Tegarden, were with us. Bro. Wike officiated. On Sunday morning, after the usual season of worship and breakfast, the preaching-school convened promptly at 10 o'clock. There were 175 present at this service.

This was followed by ten-minute speeches by the brethren. The short time allotted the speakers caused them to condense their thoughts. This made each speech very spicy and interesting.

Our midweek prayer meeting is proving to be very helpful to both old and young, in the way of development in prayer and song. We expect to reorganize our Christian Workers' Meeting next Sunday evening.

We have organized our first Aid Society, with Sister Stella Morlock, President; Sister Susie Moore, Vice president; Sister H. O. Appelman, Secretary and Treasurer. The society will be known as "The Sisters' Union Aid Society." We expect to meet once each month and oftener if necessary. Each member to pay 10 cents per month into the treasury.

We are to receive $1 per day, when called upon to do a full day's work. Each sister is to furnish her own dinner, which will lighten the burden of the one who employs us. We expect to use the proceeds of this work to advance the Master's cause. May God add his blessings to the work!—A. Laura Appelman, Plymouth, Ind., Oct. 21.

The Gospel Messenger

A weekly religious journal, 16 large pages, is published in the interest of the Church of the Brethren, and is the only church paper published by the authority of the Conference. Price, $1.50 per annum.

It meets the needs of all heads for a return to the apostolic order of worship and practice.

It holds that the Bible is a divinely-inspired book, and recognizes the Testament as the only infallible rule of faith and practice for the people of God.

It also believes in the doctrine of the Trinity; teaches future rewards and punishment, and emphasizes the importance of a pure, holy and consistent life before God.

It maintains that only those who remain faithful until death will receive the eternal life.

That Faith, Repentance and Baptism are conditions of pardon, and hence of the remission of sins;

That Trine Immersion or dipping is the immediate three times-forward act of Christian Baptism;

That Feet-washing as enjoined in John 13, is a divine command to be observed by the church;

That the Lord's Supper is a church, and, in connection with the Communion, should be taken in the evening, or after the close of the day;

That the Salutation of the Holy Kiss, or Kiss of Charity, is binding upon the church of today;

That War and Retaliation are contrary to the spirit and self-denying requirements of the religion of Jesus;

That a Nonconformity to the world in daily walk, dress, customs and conversation is essential to true holiness and Christian piety.

It maintains that in public worship, or religious exercises, Christians should appear as directed in 1 Cor. 11: 4, 5, with oil in the name of the Lord.

In short, it is a vindicator of all that Christ and the Apostles have taught in word and deed, and aims, amid the conflicting theories and discords of modern Christendom, to point solid ground that all must concede to be infallibly safe. Send for sample copy. Address:

Kingdom Songs

Is the new song book for the Sunday-school, the Prayer Meeting, Christian Workers' Meeting and all kinds of religious services. It is now ready.

The need for a collection of hymns especially adapted to these services has been generally felt, for some time, throughout the Brotherhood. This need has been kept in mind in the preparation of this book. Many of the most popular copyrights by more than fifty of the best modern composers are found in this collection. The following names are a few of the composers: Gabriel, Excell, Kirkpatrick, Sweney, Doane, Lowry and Emery Showalter.

It is a peculiar fact, and at the same time a fortunate one for us, that we have been able to get together more of these pieces than any other publisher could have published in one book, because we are not regarded as competitors. So the book really contains the cream of all that is found in other books of a similar character. While a number of the selections have been published in other books there are also some which will make their first appearance in this book.

In the preparation of this collection the watchword was EXCELLENCE. Neither time, careful and prayerful thought nor money was spared in the effort to make it the best.

This is the book that will be used all over the Brotherhood in a short time; and so it should be, for it will thus become a great factor in promoting that unity of spiritual development which is so desirable.

The book is printed in both round and shaped notes, contains 320 pages, is bound in cloth, with appropriate cover design.

Price, per copy, postpaid,	$ .35

Inglenook ANNOUNCEMENT

We are pleased to announce that during the coming months Inglenook readers will have an opportunity to read a number of series of articles by eminent writers on topics that are of the deepest interest to everyone. A special effort has been made to procure the services of these writers, and we consider it very fortunate for the readers of the Inglenook that these articles will appear in its pages. Following are some of the things that will be printed:

A series of articles by Dr. O. H. Yereman on Colds, La Grippe and how to prevent them. These will be of practical value to all.

These will be followed by a series by Dr. F. R. Widdowson on Health and Hygiene, which will be equally valuable.

J. A. Clement will contribute a series of articles on Ideals for Young People, J. C. Flory a series on the Lord's Prayer, and A. E. Hedine a series on the Prohibition Question.

Other writers engaged to help boost the Inglenook are: H. M. Fogelsonger, John W. Wayland, Shepard King, J. C. Cason and E. L. Craik.

THIS IS A RARE TREAT, and one that not every magazine reader has the privilege of enjoying. We need not enlarge on the deep interest and intense practical value attached to these articles, for the writers and their subjects advertise themselves.

If you are a subscriber to the Inglenook, this feast is yours. If your time has expired or will expire in the near future, better renew before these articles begin. If you are not taking the Inglenook, we feel sure that you need not be persuaded that this reading will be many more times valuable to you than the price of the paper, which is $1.00 per year.

The Inglenook has shown remarkable growth recently along all lines. The subscription list has more than doubled in the past year. If you are not now on the list you will want to get in line and be one of the partakers of the good things that the Inglenook is giving to its readers. Fill out and send in the coupon on this page today and do not let a single issue slip by.

Sample copy sent upon request.

Here we give below a few testimonials concerning the Revised Inglenook Cook Book that have come to us from persons who have become owners of this book. Had we but space we could print hundreds more as full of praise for the book.

"I have examined the New Cook Book. I think it better than the old one, of which I have two. The recipes are simple and practical, and I verily think it the best of cook books. I like the idea of the blank pages at the close of the different divisions as some one sometimes wants to add a choice recipe, and this gives a chance to place it where it will be kept. Also I think the department 'For the Sick' grand. I am sure the book is worth much more to me than it costs to get it. I could not keep house without it."—Fannie Brower, Lenox, Iowa.

"Through your kindness I received one of your New Cook Books. I have had one of the first editions and thought it good but when I received this one and tested it I feel to say it would be hard to find its equal. I would not be without it at any cost. I will do all I can to get more to subscribe for the Inglenook so they can have the book."—Mrs. W. S. Rechard, Hagerstown, Md.

"I think the New Cook Book is a success. I thank you very much for it and will gladly recommend it and the Inglenook to my neighbors and friends. The recipes I have tried I have found all O. K. A cousin of mine when shown the book said, 'I am going to have one of those,' and has subscribed and received the book."—Ella E. Shildtz, New Philadelphia, Ohio.

"I am pleased to find that the New Inglenook Cook Book has given some place at the beginning of each division for a short discussion of the general principles of cookery. They are in harmony with those taught in the Domestic Science Department of the University of Chicago. I recommend it as a helpful guide to all housekeepers."—Mrs. Mary Flory Miller, University of Chicago.

It is not hard to determine what the quality of a book must be in order to bring such words of praise from those who have tried it. Not one derogatory word has ever been said about this book, that has come to our notice. It contains recipes, menus and home remedies. One lady says the last named department is worth as much as all the rest put together.

The only way it is possible to get this book is in connection with a year's subscription to the Inglenook. The paper is $1.00 per year, and the Cook Book goes as a premium for only 25c extra. It is worth $1.50 itself. Send us the coupon on this page, filled out, with $1.25, and it will bring the Inglenook and Cook Book to your home.

The above is a miniature reproduction of the front cover of the Revised Inglenook Cook Book. It is bound in white oilcloth and contains 416 pages. The oilcloth makes it waterproof and it is printed on stout paper so that it will not tear easily. The book is attractive in appearance as well as valuable in contents.

The Gospel Messenger

This should be a household word in every home. Every member of the Church of the Brethren ought to look to this paper as the one that brings information concerning world happenings, furnishes plenty of first-class literature in essays and poetry, contains an abundance of food for moral nourishment and keeps one vitally in touch with the inner workings and doctrines of the church he loves.

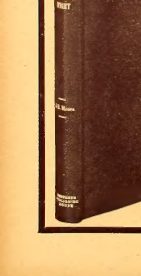
And not only members of the Church of the Brethren will be benefited by the reading of the Messenger, but others as well will find in it many things of interest and uplift.

NOTICE a few of the things that this paper contains each week

The first page is devoted to a review of latest current happenings throughout the world, things which every person should know. These events are written up in such a way as to set forth the good or evil results or influence they may have on the progress of the world, and thus the items become of added value to the reader.

In the department of poems and essays are found many rich thoughts well worth the reader's pondering upon. Men and women with broad intellect and a keen perception of the truth and right contribute to this department.

The two departments, "The Round Table" and "Home and Family," afford a wealth of other people's experiences and counsel that is sure to be a comfort and a blessing to everyone who reads.



Outlines of the Christian Workers' and Prayer Meeting topics are printed each week.

The editorial page is filled with notes of general interest to church members, and with articles by different members of the staff of editors, which is composed of some of the best thinking men in the church.

The General Mission Board has a page for reports, etc., of its work in the various fields.

The many correspondents from the churches over the Brotherhood each week contribute notes from their congregations that cannot but be of interest.

ALL IN ALL,—this weekly paper is one for which we feel sure no one will regret having spent $1.50.

OUR SATURDAY NIGHT

This has become a household word in many a home in the land. It is written by Eld. J. H. Moore, office editor of the Messenger, in his characteristic simple yet forceful style. Many of the chapters have appeared from time to time in the columns of the Messenger, and those who have read them or who know Brother Moore and his writings will surely appreciate having a copy of this volume.

It is a collection of the author's personal experiences, told for the purpose of illustrating some vital moral truth or lesson. It is the collection of the ripe fruit of a master mind. Such phrases as the following indicate how the book is valued and esteemed by those who have read it: "Interesting and instructive." "Food for various moods." "Good reading and will do good." "Good from beginning to end." "I am charmed with it." "Replete with warnings, citations, examples and good counsel."

Anything we might say in regard to the book would not add to these statements. They speak for themselves. Nothing of a different nature has ever come to our notice concerning the book.

BUT DO NOT FORGET that it is not for sale separately. It can be had only with a year's subscription to the Gospel Messenger. The Messenger is $1.50 per year, and the book goes for only 35c extra. You can not afford to miss this great chance.

THE GOSPEL MESSENGER

"SET FOR THE DEFENSE OF THE GOSPEL."—Phil. 1: 17.

Vol. 50. (Old Series Vol. 60.) Elgin, Ill., November 11, 1911. No. 45.

AROUND THE WORLD

Japan's Opposition to Missions.

The growing influence of Christian missions in Korea has aroused a decidedly antagonistic spirit on the part of the Japanese authorities, now in control of Korean affairs. They associate the anagchistic plotting against the life of the Japanese Emperor, some months ago, with the work of the missionaries in general, and serious restrictions have already been made to curb the influence of Christian endeavors. Consular representatives of western nations are now doing their best to correct the false impression entertained by the Japanese officials. As in the early apostolic days of the church, the foes of Christianity seek every avenue to hinder the progress of the Truth.

The Wonderful Book.

An aged lady at Stamford, Conn., who died recently, succeeded in reading the Blessed Book from cover to cover sixty times. At the early age of ten years she is said to have committed to memory several thousand verses of Scripture, and added to the goodly store as time went on. While many of the most profound scholars testify to the richness of the Bible as a literary volume, which no man can attest by experience to its precious worth, one is made to wonder why so many read hundreds of other books, and even the most trashy literature, to the utter neglect of the Bible! Of the "making of many books there is no end," but the Bible alone is of supreme importance. "Open thou mine eyes, that I may behold wondrous things out of thy law."

Papal Rule in Jerusalem.

Recent cable dispatches from Italy persistently assert that a temporal domain for the Pope is being sought in the city which the Founder of Christianity has made ever memorable by the leading incidents of his earthly life. Later reports, however, demonstrate that the plan fails to elicit the expected enthusiasm from either Jews or Catholics in this country. Italian newspapers are most insistent in claiming that the cession of Jerusalem and the Holy Land to Italy would be a fair reimbursement for the expense incurred in the war with Turkey over Tripoli. Without discussing the merits or propriety of such a claim, it is but fitting to express the hope that ere long the Land of Sacred Story may be under Christian rule, if such a plan can be brought about by fair and equitable means.

Christianity in Africa.

While much has been accomplished in the Dark Continent to win the benighted natives to a better life, one is almost overwhelmed by a contemplation of the vast field as yet untouched. The population of the continent is estimated at 175,000,000. Only 2,470 Protestant missionaries, with 13,089 native helpers, constitute the "little leaven" that is to permeate the "great lump" of heathenism. Latest reports give 527,000 adherents to the Christian faith, in addition to about 225,000 communicants. Nearly one hundred hospitals care for the sick and suffering, while sixteen printing presses are kept busy in providing helpful literature. The Bible is supplied in all the principal languages, which, in itself, is one of the greatest missionary agencies ever brought to the field. Supplemented by the faithful efforts of the missionary it becomes a fountain of life to all who are reached by its message.

Increasing Hostilities.

Despite the determined efforts of the Italian Government to prevent war reports from reaching the outside world, enough has become known to convince the unprejudiced observer that the struggle with Turkey is a most determined one, and bids fair to be prolonged for some time yet. Already the vast sum of $100,000,000 has been spent by Italy in the campaign, and many lives have been unnecessarily sacrificed to gratify the greed for territorial expansion. It is quite improbable that Italy will secure an early and undisturbed possession of the entire interior of Tripoli. The wild Arab mountain tribes are offering a most stubborn resistance to their would-be conquerors, and all contemplated colonization schemes will have to be deferred until the subjugation of these "Sons of the Desert" has been, at least measurably, accomplished. From all appearances, Italy has entered a struggle that, at best, will yield but uncertain and very unsatisfactory returns. As in many other wars, even the victor will be the loser in the end.

An Inspiration to Others.

Brief reference has been made, at times, to the commendable liberality of Dr. D. K. Pearsons, the Hinsdale, Ill., philanthropist, and his very opportune gifts to struggling American colleges, aggregating a total of over $6,000,000. At the advanced age of ninety-one he is still much interested in educational work. Recently he became impressed with the fact that his example to the young, in the long-continued use of tobacco, was not a commendable one in any way. He resolved to discontinue the filthy habit then and there. After an experience of some weeks, he finds his health much improved, and though the struggle was a most formidable one, he rejoices in the victory achieved. What Dr. Pearsons has done, in overcoming a bad habit, after having been in bondage for long continued years, should be an inspiration to thousands of others who have been addicted to the use of the filthy weed for, lo, these many years. It there be "first a willing mind," there is always a way to get rid of a debasing habit. "Cease to do evil, learn to do good."

Better Than Money.

Only recently an incident, in connection with the noted Astor-Force wedding ceremony, has come to light. According to good authority a certain minister was offered $10,000 to perform the ceremony, which he emphatically declined to do because of the violation of Christian principles involved, and because he preferred "the purer gold of a clear Christian conscience." Touched by the minister's nobility of purpose, a wealthy parishioner, wishing to show proper appreciation of such sturdy allegiance to conviction, offered him a check for $10,000. This gift, also,—though well meant,—was declined by the minister, on the ground that he "deserved no compensation for the performance of his manifest Christian duty." Such a nobility of thought, and utter disregard of the seductive power of gold, is so rare in these days of extreme commercialism and money greed, that one can hardly believe it to be true, and yet the facts in the case are amply authenticated. What a lesson it is to the thousands of today who,—like some in the days of Paul,—vainly imagine that "gain is godliness!"

Brahman Regard for the Bible.

From the columns of the "Indian Social Reformer" we learn that a gentleman from England recently made an exhaustive study of missions and resulting conditions, as seen in the various parts of India. To his utter surprise he learned that the good effects of missionary endeavor are not confined to the actual visible results, in the way of church accessions, but that, way down, in many a heart, there is a deep-seated and most salutary effect, though there is not as yet a public demonstration. Talking, one day, to a prominent Brahman gentleman, apparently an earnest adherent of that most unapproachable caste,—he said, "To what book do you naturally go, to find comfort in a time of great sorrow?" The Brahman gazed long and searchingly upon his questioner, but finally said: "Why, in those times the Bible is my only refuge." The way in which he uttered these words indicated his manifest and complete sincerity, and shows how even the highest caste of India is being gradually affected by the power of the Word. It also suggests the most important thought that many Christians of the homeland might get far more comfort out of the pages of the Sacred Volume than they often do.

World-Wide Conflicts.

To the student of the passing events of the days there is much to challenge earnest thought and concern. Dissatisfaction with past conditions seems to be rampant in the various countries of the world, and seeks expression in armed rebellions and other demonstrations. The recent troubles in the Manchu Empire, which have resulted in the "Flowery Kingdom" is but an illustration of the unrest pervading humanity everywhere. China follows Mexico, Persia, Turkey, Russia and Portugal in their armed struggles against all forms of tyranny and despotism. Even in countries where needed reforms may be brought about by the milder means of the ballot, there is a most noted manifestation of political insurgency. Conscious of long-existing wrongs, the people are rising in their might, and seek to gain what they consider their rights. Strange that, in all this turmoil and struggle, the many who profess Christ and claim to honor his teachings, seem to have utterly forgotten the sublime precepts of human brotherhood, which, as children of the Great Father above, should inspire them to a mutual recognition of their respective rights and privileges. "Behold, how good and how pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity!"

Efficiency Not Measured by Years.

The many recent examples of highest mental activity, despite advancing years, as shown by many prominent leaders of thought on both hemispheres, has aroused a great deal of comment. It may be of interest, in this connection, to note a recent utterance by Dr. Guy Potter Benton, in his inaugural address as president of the University of Vermont: "Since the beginning of the last century the limit of efficiency in men has been extended at least fifteen years. Men are at their best now, at the age of sixty-five and even beyond. The present is not, necessarily, the age of the young men only. It is the age of the prepared man,—the man of efficiency. Such a man heeds not the Retiring years." Dr. Benton has doubtless struck the keynote of real usefulness. No man needs to be "laid on the shelf" as long as, in the language of the Psalmist, "he brings forth fruit in old age." Fruit-bearing is the only test of real usefulness.

Prevention Better than Cure.

"The American Prison Association," which held its annual meeting at Omaha, Nebraska, last month, makes a special study of crime and its causes, and of criminals and their reform, and it is gratifying to know that their efforts are not without marked success. Beyond all question, wrong environment is a large factor in promoting criminal tendencies, and, unfortunately, conditions in many lines of employment are such that dishonesty is at a premium,—with crime as the natural outgrowth. It was shown that in many otherwise respectable business concerns, employees are tacitly encouraged to be dishonest and prevaricate, in order to make sales, and it was pointed out that such a schooling can not help but produce graduates in crime. When will people learn that it is far better so to arrange our industrial affairs and living conditions as to prevent crime, rather than, later on, to punish the unfortunate offender for his infraction of law? Truly, we have many things to learn yet, along this line, and yet there is no problem so intricate that it can not be solved by a diligent application of Bible principles.

Adventists Opposing Sunday Laws.

Precious as is the Lord's Day and its hallowed associations to all those who recognize it as the established day of praise and worship, it will not be ours in the future, nor can we leave it as a sacred heritage to our children, unless we guard, most jealously, its sanctity and legal recognition. The Seventh Day Adventists are now arranging for a series of conventions, to be held successively in various parts of the country, for the express purpose of moulding sentiment for the repeal of existing Sunday laws, and preventing the enactment of any further statutes along that line. It is said that ample means for this campaign and a most determined effort will enable the Adventist propagandists to secure thousands of signatures to their petitions, and that the proposed movement will be materially aided by the active support of Jews and Atheists. The duty of all, to whom the Lord's Day is a sacred season of rest and worship, is a most obvious one. We need to bestir ourselves and show our colors by word and action. In this case "eternal vigilance," only, will preserve the blessings of the Lord's Day.

Turkey Asks Intervention by the United States.

So grave are the barbarities recently inflicted upon the helpless Arab women and children, and other noncombatants, by the infuriated Italian soldiers, that, in the name of humanity, the Turkish Government, through its ambassador, is petitioning for the intervention of the United States, to stop the needless slaughter of those not directly concerned in the struggle. In confirmation of the touching plea, above referred to, is the united testimony of the American, British and German war correspondents. Filled with indignation at the wanton slaughter of defenseless women and children, they did not feel like remaining in the Italian camp, and are now adding the weight of their influence to the movement looking to an early cessation of these acts of cruelty. It is alleged that even the white flag, hitherto the symbol of inviolate safety during mingled engagements of all civilized nations, was disregarded by the frenzied Italian soldiers, who continued their work of carnage despite the mute appeal. Latest cable reports state that a "holy war" has been proclaimed by the Mohammedans, in consequence of the Tripoli massacre. This, if true, would be a most serious calamity, the consequences of which would be most far-reaching and deplorable. For the safety of Christian missions in the Ottoman Empire, it is to be hoped that such a crisis may be averted.

Be True to Him.

BY B. F. M. SOURS.

Be true to him when the day is bright,
For he is thy Lord and Love.
Be true to him 'neath the stars of night,
For day is with him above.

Be true to him when the tempest roars
And the dangers are thick around;
Be true to him when the hard rain pours
And drenched is the fissured ground.

Be true, for the tempest is his will,
That the happy birds may sing—
Like a weaver's under-threads of skill—
And the lovely flowers will spring.

Be true! It will fill your heart with song,
As the sunshine thrills the skies,
And your day will rise more glad, more strong,
With each hour a new surprise.

Be true! The Master looks down today
From the sunny skies on you,
And longs to keep you in joy's glad way,
And whispers to you, "Be true!"

The Rebaptism Question.

BY W. M. HOWE.

CERTAINLY the baptism of the twelve (Acts 19: 1-12) should throw some light on the question of rebaptism. Let us note points already rather clearly established.

1. The twelve were baptized, likely by Apollos, unto John's baptism. Regardless of his name, the administrator evidently was doing some imperfect work, which invalidated the baptism which he had administered.

2. These people, having been baptized by John's baptism, were evidently baptized by trine immersion. It appears therefore that there are those who have been baptized by trine immersion that should be rebaptized. But John's baptism was all right as far as it went.

3. They were, it appears, baptized in harmony with the Scriptural requirement,—for the remission of sins,—and yet for some cause they were rebaptized.

4. The very apparent reason why they were baptized again was because they had not been properly taught. They had not heard that the Holy Ghost was given (v. 2). They had not been properly directed to Jesus (v. 4). Baptism requires previous teaching and faith, such as the twelve had not received.

In the days of the apostles, when denominations were unknown, the church occasionally rebaptized some who were, as Christians, manifestly so deficient that Paul was pressed to inquire if they had received the Holy Ghost when they believed (R. V.). Remember that the unknown administrator and the twelve, and Paul as well, all belonged to the same body. The apostolic church, therefore, had even preachers and teachers that had not been perfectly taught and-who, therefore, failed in their teaching, and did work that had to be done over again. We are wondering if, in the best church on earth today, these conditions, to a degree, may not continue to exist.

We are not at all surprised, indeed, if from time to time one of our own number succeeds in putting up an apparently reasonable plea for rebaptism, and that good brethren sometimes yield to the plea and again administer the sacred ordinance. (May we hope that in all such cases ideal conditions exist the second time?) Nor would we be greatly surprised if in case some one like Paul should visit all of us, a few more would be made to think of it. "Are you a Christian" is a question frequently asked. But Paul had a way of probing deeper still when he would ask believers if, as yet, they had received the Holy Spirit.

And would it not be a good thing if we had more Pauls going from church to church today, if, indeed, they would leave in their trail more brethren and sisters filled with the Spirit of Christ, the spirit of humility, the spirit of missions, even if a few of us did think it good to go into the water again? Who would object?

When the twelve were properly taught concerning faith in Jesus, and concerning the Comforter he promised to send, they were "baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus." It really appears, after all, that in some sense these had been baptized in the name of John (I Cor. 1: 13). There are a few received today, into the church, who seem to have more faith in the evangelist who speaks so eloquently, than in the Savior of the world. It is probable, therefore, that the plea for rebaptism is sometimes well made. But when there is no reason for it, when people give good proof of having been well taught, as were the twelve the second time, when they are evidently bearing the fruits of the Spirit, and when they, therefore, are not easily convinced of the need of rebaptism by trine immersion (Paul easily convinced the twelve who evidently felt their need), then it does not appear that we should insist on baptizing them again. In the light of our history, to do more would appear as a mere piece of self-righteousness on our part, when there is nothing at stake but the credentials of the administrator. Paul never asked the twelve who performed the ordinance. With Paul it was a matter of right teaching rather than the right preacher.

Paul hardly classes baptism with the other ordinances, such as the communion, etc. (Heb. 6: 1, 2). He was thankful he did not baptize many of the Corinthians, who were likely baptized by his inferiors, yet he does not question the validity of their baptism or, at least, he does not decide against it (1 Cor. 1: 14). Jesus does not seem to class baptism with the other ordinances. He was baptized by an inferior. But what is more to the point, Jesus did not baptize at all (John 4: 2) though he washed the disciples' feet and took the lead in the communion services. Furthermore, who thinks that the church was established before Christ was even baptized, and yet John the Baptist baptized many before that time, whose baptism was never questioned in the least. They were taught to look for Christ and follow him, and, true to their teaching, they did look for him, and were never rebaptized.

The least in the kingdom of God is greater than John the Baptist, so says Jesus (Luke 7: 28). Was this John in the kingdom,—in the church? Yet his baptism stood. Again we say that there are reasons why we should not class baptism with the other ordinances. Having been begun and established before Jesus began his ministry, and by one who was not a member of the church, while the other ordinances were instituted by Christ himself, baptism seems to stand in a class by itself.

It is most evident to all that proper teaching is necessary,—some before baptism and more afterwards. (See the great commission where the teaching appears both before and after baptism.) We are glad that our committee on rebaptism have recognized this and that they therefore urge that we "be cautious in receiving others into the Church of the Brethren without rebaptism."

The River of Peace.

BY RICHARD ARNO DASSDORF.

"Then had thy peace been as a river" (Isa. 48: 18).

As often as I sing this beautiful hymn (402, "Brethren Hymnal") I feel like writing a few lines upon the blessing of peace. Very often, in our lives, we experience hours of sorrow, disappointment and weariness. It is then that the soul cries out for peace!

In the varied scenes of nature there is nothing more interesting than a river. If, with a sincere heart, we study the characteristics of a river, we can find in it much that leads to a better understanding of spiritual things.

Great rivers have their birthplace among the mountain heights. The Rhine and the Elbe, the most magnificent rivers of Europe in the purity of their blue floods and in the beauty of the scenery they traverse, are born in the loftiest heights, where snowclad summits mount skyward.

There is nothing in this world that is able to bestow true peace upon a human soul. True peace has its beginning in lonely and secret fellowship with God. Did not our blessed Savior go to the mountains at night to commune with his Father?

The river of peace in our soul can only be sustained by earnest prayer and a devout study of God's Word, just as a river is sustained by the rain and snow that add to its volume. If we trust our Heavenly Father and live in constant fellowship with him, our hearts will not be like a dried-up river bed, or an empty channel. If a river passes through a rough, mountainous country, it is all the more beautiful, romantic and interesting. The river of our peace must flow through its own God-ordained channel, walled in by the quietude of our own hearts.

There is nothing more beneficial and generous than a river. It sustains the trees and refreshes the horses, cattle and sheep, coming to it for drink. The cities, farm-houses and villages flourish upon its banks. How many of us are empty, because we are too selfish! How many are clanging cymbals only, because they have refused to cheer the sorrowful and broken-hearted! We must follow Jesus' footsteps if we want peace in our souls.

When we are first converted, we are babes in Christ, fed with the sincere milk of the Word. But we must grow, and growing only comes by activity,—work. No wonder there are so many stunted babes in Christ. They refuse to work in the church, and therefore we have so many unprofitable members in our ranks. A certain missionary described that kind of church members as follows: "The get-up-late-Sunday-morning Christians," or "the seldom-go-to-church Christians," or "the stay-at-home-from-prayer-meeting-and-Sunday-school Christians," or "the pay-as-little-as-possible Christians," or "the drink-a-little-wine Christians," or "the just-a-little-bit-crooked-in-business Christians," or "the run-around-to-other-churches Christians," or "the don't-want-to-do-anything Christians."

Do you belong to some of those named above? May God help us that we are none of them!

Song of Songs.

BY IAS. A. SELL.

SOLOMON was the author of one thousand and five songs, but only one was preserved. It would seem as though this was the choicest, as it is called "The Song of Songs," as much as to say, "the most excellent of songs." It is unlike any other part of the Bible, and is a peculiar piece of composition. It is regarded as divinely inspired. There is a great diversity of opinion as to its meaning, or as to its rules of interpretation. In selecting texts for a subject, ministers usually pass it by, and find enough to engage their attention on either side. But it is part of the Christian's Bible, and in the divine plan it has a purpose. As a poetical composition it is allowed by the best judges to be finished in the highest style of elegance and beauty. The following definition is perhaps the most plausible of all theories as to its real meaning:

"This song is a divine allegory in the form of a pastoral, which represents the reciprocal love between Christ and his church, under figures taken from the relation and affection which subsists between the bridegroom and his espoused bride; an emblem continually employed in Scripture. It has some reference to the state of the Jewish church, as waiting for the coming of the promised Messias; but it likewise accords to the reciprocal love between Christ and true believers in every age, and the communion which arises from it.

"In order properly to understand it, we must consider the Redeemer as loving and beloved of his church. The marriage contract is already ratified, but the completion of this blessed union is reserved for the heavenly state. Here on earth the believer loves and rejoices in an unseen Savior, and seeks his happiness from his spiritual presence. Christ manifests himself to him as he does not unto the world; and these visits are earnests and foretastes of heavenly joy. But they are interrupted, suspended or varied, on many accounts. They are often lost by negligence or sin, and can only be recovered by humble repentance and renewed diligence; yet the love on both sides remains unchanged, as to its principle, though varied in the expression of it. These things are represented in a sort of a dialogue, in which the church speaks of Christ, or to him, and he answers and addresses the church and the daughters of Jerusalem (who may represent such as are enquiring after this salvation) are frequently addressed, and reply. Thus the varying experiences and correspondent duties of the believer are dominated in a very animating and edifying manner."

If the above be accepted as its real meaning, it truly has some beautiful applications in the love and tender solicitude Christ has for his church. True, there are many things in it that are very difficult to us, both as to the literal meaning and the spiritual instruction intended by them. The interpretation must be according to the obvious meaning of the allegory, and not according to the modern notions of delicacy. If the poem is studied piously, in a spirit of humble devotion, it will reveal the very heart of Christ, and arouse in the worshiper an admiring, adoring and grateful love for him, such as no other part of the Bible inspires.

In the second chapter the bridegroom calls himself the "rose of Sharon and the lily of the valley." The rose, for beauty of color and richness of fragrance is the chief of all flowers. The lily adorns the lowly places and its beautiful tender whiteness makes it, above all flowers, the emblem of purity. There could not be a happier or more appropriate suggestiveness in selecting two things to represent the character of Christ. Like the rose he combines every excellency in the highest degree and brings delight and refreshment to the souls of his people. Like the lily, his purity is spotless, and by his coming in our nature, and being "meek and lowly in heart" and taking such a lively interest in the lost and outcasts of our race, he has truly adorned the lowly walks of life, and made it possible for us to be pure "even as he is pure."

In the eighth verse the beloved is spoken of as "coming leaping upon the mountains, skipping upon the hills." Christ's coming was promised in Eden. All the bloody sacrifice, from the bleeding lamb of Abel till the night of his crucifixion, proclaimed his coming. Men with prophetic vision saw and published it. While mountains and hills of difficulties were in the way, yet the devout never faltered. They saw him coming, leaping and skipping over all the barriers. Here was love, yes, love for the bride that counts no cost, that braves and surmounts all difficulties and annihilates distance. Willing sacrifices brought him "leaping and skipping" like the fleet-footed deer.

Then, to give another view of him, it is said in the ninth verse "that he standeth behind our walls, he looketh forth at the windows, showing himself through the lattice."

The wall, windows and lattice may refer to the types, shadows and ceremonies of the Old Dispensation. He stood behind them. He looked forth from them. He gave glimpses of himself through them. It also applies beautifully to his human nature. He stood behind it, looked forth through it and gave his people glimpses of his divinity through it.

The same is true of his doctrines. He stands behind them, looks out of them, and gives his people a glimpse of himself if they look into them.

From the figure of "mountains and hills" we may also get the idea of beauty, grandeur and sublimity. Beautiful thought! The doctrines of our Savior tower over and above everything else in the world, and there is nothing more sublime and beautiful.

The burden of this "Song of Songs" is Christ. He enters into all its cadences. He is set forth in all the loveliness of nature. All the beautiful things in nature are taken to represent him. It is ours to read, and to meditate upon it, that we may know more about him "whom to know aright is life eternal."

Christian Character Illustrated.

BY J. G. ROYER.

(Read Luke 18: 9-14.)

We have all heard the expression, "Big I and little you," and we all understand it to indicate a character trait which is not very estimable.

We find no capital "I" or "me" in the Lord's Prayer. But the Pharisee's prayer of thirty-four words mentions the name of God but once, while the capital "I" appears five times. "All these have I observed, —what lack I yet?" said a self-righteous young man to Jesus.

Really good people thank God for what he has done for them,—done in them and by them. They have no righteousness of their own. I may thank God that by his grace I am what I am,—the chief of sinners, saved by the blood of Christ, but I must not compare myself with others, or say to the lowest of sinners, "I am holier than thou." In every fallen one I must ever see myself as I should be, save for the grace of God. When David uttered the doom of sinners, he stooped and prayed, "Search me, O God, and know my heart; try me, and know my thoughts; and see if there be any wicked way in me, and lead me in the way' everlasting" (Psa. 139: 23).

How different from the Pharisee. He stood and prayed thus with himself, "God, I thank thee that I am not as other men are." His praying was a thanking, and his thanking a boasting, not of God, but of himself. At first he compares himself with all men, considering himself better than they. Then he speaks of some particular classes that are far below him as he sees himself (verse 11). Under the form of thanks he speaks of the bad things other men do, but of none of them does he plead guilty. His religion consisted in pretending to live a harmless, upright life by a regular observance of the external duties alone. His fault lay not in observing those external duties, but, in observing the form without the spirit underlying the form, and in making public profession of his own goodness and righteousness. He forgot that God looks into the heart, and finds wickedness there, when outside actions may be blameless.

The publican,—sad and heart-broken,—does not think much less speak, of any good in his life. He feels that he is a sinner, and shame and sorrow cause him to look down. We are told he "smote upon his breast" in self-reproach, and exclaimed, "God be merciful to me,"—I am a sinner and can not be saved but by thy atoning love and mercy. Of the spirit manifested by these two Jesus said, "Every one that exalteth himself"—boasts of his own goodness or looks in disdain upon another,—"shall be abased" —brought to shame. He shall see how God hates his self-righteousness. But "he that humbleth himself," —by confessing his sins and unworthiness and pleading for mercy, "shall be exalted,"—lifted up and made an heir of God. From sorrow he shall be admitted into the realms of praise. Self-denial and humility are pleasing to God, for then he can enter the heart and make it new.

Mt. Morris, Ill.

Northern Iowa, Minnesota and South Dakota.

BY J. E. SOUDERS.

THE District Conference of the above-named District convened with the Lewiston church, Minn., Oct. 3 to 6. A Ministerial, Sunday-school and Christian Workers' program was given in connection with the District Conference proper.

On Tuesday evening, Oct. 3, Eld. I. W. Brubaker, of the Grundy County church, gave a strong sermon on the "Privileges of the Christian," which served as an excellent preparation for the District Conference, which convened the next morning. Eld. J. E. Ralston, of Sheldon, Iowa, the retiring Moderator, called the meeting to order, and, after the usual devotional exercises, the following organization was approved by the delegates: Moderator, W. H. Lichty, Waterloo; Secretary, D. H. Keller, Winona; Reading Clerk, J. F. Souders, Preston, Minn. Four of the eighteen churches were not represented.

Much business came before the meeting, some of which called forth some lively discussions. There were two papers for Annual Meeting, only one of which passed the Conference, and will in due time appear in the GOSPEL MESSENGER. The reports from the Mission Board, Trustees of the Old People's Home, District evangelist, and Minneapolis Mission, were listened to with interest, and called forth some inquiries. These various reports are to appear in the printed Minutes, and it is to be hoped that they will not only be read but studied carefully.

The work of the District can not hope to succeed if little or no attention is paid to the efforts of those to whom responsible positions have been intrusted. I think it may be said that the reports in general indicate some progress, though not, perhaps, as much as we should all like to see. It was patent to all present that there is urgent need of the various forces of the District to get in closer touch. Nothing is so deadly to the progress of any work as a feeling of distrust, coupled with a lack of cooperation. An excellent way of getting rid of both is to mingle more frequently, by personal contact, with those having the work in charge.

At the close of the session the following persons were selected to look after the work for the coming year:

Member of Mission Board, T. L. Kimmel, Sheldon, Iowa. Trustee for Old Folks' Home, W. H. Lichty, Waterloo, Iowa. Sisters' Aid Society, Lizzie Broadwater, Eva Lichty, Maud Thompson. Trustee for Child Rescue Work, D. H. Keller, Winona, Minn. Member of Ministerial Committee, A. P. Blough, Waterloo, Iowa. Members of Standing Committee, J. F. Souders, Preston, Minn.

The sum of $1,500 was allowed for District Mission work. The meeting for 1912 is to be held with the Grundy County church, Iowa.

Wednesday evening, Oct. 4, Eld. J. Q. Goughnour, formerly of the Middle District of Iowa, but now of Slifer, Iowa, preached an excellent missionary sermon to a full house. His theme was, "Recording the Name of God, and the Blessings Accruing Therefrom." The address was pointed, practical and easy to be applied. The fact that Bro. Goughnour is himself engaged in "Recording the Name of God" in one of the outposts of the District and that a new church is nearing completion, gave added weight to his timely message.

Following the address a missionary offering was taken, amounting to $221.50.

Thursday morning, Oct. 5, the Ministerial Meeting convened and elected Bro. W. O. Tannreuther, Moderator, and Bro. Reeves, Reading Clerk. The various topics on the program were well and ably discussed. A new feature was a brief survey of the various churches by the elder or pastor in charge. A "Round Table" was conducted by Bro. Goughnour, but owing to a lack of time the various questions had to be passed over somewhat hastily.

Thursday evening a Christian Workers' program was conducted by Bro. F. E. Williams, of Worthington, followed by a talk on "Mission Work in India," by the writer.

Friday morning, Oct. 6, saw the beginning of a Red Letter Day in our District Sunday-school Conventions. It was, by common consent, the best Sunday-school Meeting we have had for many years, and those who went home previous to this meeting, lost the best of the wine. Sister Bertha Brunskill, of Minneapolis, was in the chair. After an interesting devotional service by Sister Brallier, Sister Eva Lichty, of Waterloo, gave a practical demonstration of methods to be employed in interesting the little folks. These methods included work in story-telling, pictures, objects, sand table, clay-modeling, paper cuttings, and motor activity. It was surprising, as well as interesting, to all how much may be accomplished along the above-mentioned lines by one prepared to do it. Bro. W. J. Barnhart then gave an excellent talk on "Training the Teacher," followed by a discussion on the question, "Will Our District Support Missionaries on the Foreign Field?" This question took a practical turn, and before it was dismissed there were four volunteers to support a native worker.

The spirit of the meeting was further crystallized by the appointment of a committee of three, through whom the various parties interested can work. Said committee to work with the General Mission Board. Committee: W. O. Tannreuther, Waterloo, Treasurer; J. F. Souders, Secretary. The District evangelist, when appointed, is to be the other member. All parties,—Sunday-schools and churches,—wishing to do something in this line, will please write the Secretary. Send your money to the Treasurer. At 4:30 P. M. the Convention adjourned.

The weather, throughout the whole Conference, was very rainy, and while a great deal of rain fell, it did not dampen the ardor of God's children who had gathered to do his work. Not a little of the success of the meeting was due to the generous-hearted people of the Lewiston church and vicinity. Those who were present went home, feeling encouraged to labor on in our respective fields until the Master says, "It is enough." During the meeting a telegram announced the death of a father in Minneapolis, whose four boys had, but a few days prior, been committed to the care of the Child Rescue Society of this District. Many hearts went home touched by the sad incident, and not only were hearts touched but kind Christian homes threw open their doors to these orphan children. Three of them are already in homes in the Root River church, and the fourth will probably be located here also. May God bless the Child Rescue work, and especially those whose hearts and homes have been opened to the unfortunate!

Our Voyage and Three Weeks in Sweden.

BY J. F. GRAYBILL.

After a very enjoyable voyage of twelve and one-half days, we are at our destination, Malmö. The sea was exceedingly calm, with the exception of two days, when we had a moderately high sea. People of experience pronounced it an exceptionally fine voyage. God has verified his promise to care for those who cast their cares upon him even on the great deep. The vessel was not crowded and the crew did all in their power to make the trip agreeable. We had a fine class of passengers on board,—all Scandinavians. Some had been in America a number of years and were either coming back to visit their friends, or to remain in Sweden. Others had been visiting in America a short while and were returning to their homes. Most of them could speak English.

There was no occasion for any one to become lonesome. After living together for twelve days, like a family, we became somewhat attached to each other, and were loath to leave the agreeable acquaintances, so recently formed, to enter a city of a hundred thousand,—all strangers,—and, with a few exceptions, speaking a language we can not understand nor speak.

Upon our arrival we found Malmö far beyond what we had anticipated. While there are some buildings dating back to the sixteenth century, and even earlier, most of them are well preserved, and many of them are giving way to magnificent modern buildings. Americans can feel quite well at home here, especially after they have learned the language.

It is very embarrassing to deal with people with whom you can not talk, but the Lord has again provided in this respect. We have one brother who has lived in America some years, and is at home on a visit. Two other members learned some English from Brother Royer, while he was here a year ago. With their help and the aid of an interpreter, occasionally, we get along fairly well.

We have engaged a teacher in the Swedish language. The study of the language is our first work, and occupies the greater part of our time. The spare time is used in getting acquainted with the members. By the grace of God we hope to be able to enter upon our work more fully ere many months pass into history.

We were favorably surprised concerning the work of our church in this country. Instead of finding a body of members in an indifferent and lukewarm state, —not indoctrinated in the faith once delivered to the saints and practiced by our beloved Brotherhood,— we find them well established, zealous learners and workers. Here are visible fruits of the labors of Brethren Hope, Vaniman, and others who have visited here.

The greetings of the members, the first Sunday we were in Sweden, abounded so heartily with "welcomes" that we could readily feel that all are glad for our coming to their aid, and that they are willing to rally to the work. The Spirit of the Lord was with us and the meeting was greatly enjoyed by all.

The love feast at Vannaberga, sixty miles from here, which it was our happy privilege to enjoy Oct. 8, was also a season of refreshing from the presence of the Lord. The work at this place, in charge of Brother Jonsson, is growing gradually. Eleven have been added to the fold within the last year. Bro. Jonsson is an energetic, zealous and faithful shepherd. Sixteen of these members have manifested their desire to join the "Scripture Memorizing League," introduced in the Messenger by Bro. McCann. These people enjoy the study of God's Word because they love its precious truths.

From what we have observed, I think we will greatly enjoy our appointed field of labor. We need the prayers of the church in the homeland for wisdom from above, so to direct the work that it may redound to the enlargement of Christ's kingdom on earth, and glorify our Father in heaven.

The Oath.

BY D. C. REBER.

An oath is a solemn declaration made with a reverent appeal to God for the truth of what is affirmed. In statutory law, an oath is an appeal, in verification of a statement made, to a superior sanction, in such a form as exposes the party, making the appeal, to indictment for perjury if the statement be false. In another sense, an oath is a blasphemous and frivolous use of the name of the Deity or of any sacred name or object by way of appeal, or as a profane exclamation.

In the law of Moses the oath had a necessary use (Ex. 22: 10, 11). Among the Hebrews two varieties of oath existed,—the one called Shebuah, which was simple and more common; the other was Allah, and was a self-invoked curse, which was more solemn. In the New Testament these appear as horkos and anathema. There were several forms of taking oaths.

In Old Testament religion man took an oath to God in making a covenant between man and man, or man and God. Instead of being forbidden, from a religious and moral point of view, the practice was incumbent and had the promise of blessing (Psa. 63: 11) but it was to be swearing by the true God, and was to be done in truth, and faithfully performed (Jer. 4: 2, 12, 16; Amos 8: 14). Swearing to the Lord and by Malcham is condemned in Zeph. 1: 5.

In Christ's time the scribes and Pharisees introduced arbitrary distinctions, which were destructive of the moral sense, and amounted to the profanation of God's name. Hence Christ denounced this abuse in Matt. 5: 33-37. The universal principle of Jesus, in the Sermon on the Mount, "Swear not at all," is repeated by the Apostle James in James 5: 12, saying, "My brethren, swear not by any oath," and is in harmony with the moral law or Decalogue, given by God to Moses on Mount Sinai in Ex. 20: 7.

Shall Christians take the oath? Although in Old Testament times the oath, properly made and carried out was sanctioned, yet in later times it became greatly abused, so that the practice, which ostensibly was to promote morality, was in fact injurious to morality. Christians are prohibited from taking the oath by Christ's plain command. Christians should not take the oath of profanity since this violates the third commandment of the Decalogue. To use an oath in some cases only, implies a claim to some license in departing from the truth at other times; hence man's speech is to be "Yea, yea, nay, nay; whatsoever is more cometh of evil." The laws of Christian America are such that Christians may affirm instead of swearing by kissing the Bible, or by the uplifted hand. In place of the oaths or covenants, taken in olden times, the Christians make a solemn promise or vow, pledging unfailing faithfulness to Christ, whose will is the supreme and absolute standard of conduct.

District Meeting of Northern California.

BY E. C. OVERHOLTZER.

Our District has just completed its fourth year. We met in the Empire congregation Oct. 5, 6 and 7, to review the past, and plan for the future. The first day was fully occupied with the discussion of ministerial problems; such as "Preparation of Sermons," "Pulpit Etiquette," "Influence of the Holy Spirit," "Higher Education of Our Children," "Expansion of District Mission Work," "Distribution of the Ministerial Force," and "The Minister's Attitude Toward Prohibition and Voting." The day's session closed with the interest at "high water mark," urgent appeals being made to continue the meeting for a further discussion of the last topic. The presence and help of visiting brethren from other Districts was appreciated, especially the evening sermons by Brethren Edward Frantz and W. F. England.

On the second day the District Meeting convened. Eld. S. F. Sanger, as Moderator, commended the excellent spirit of the meeting, and said that it compared most favorably with the District Meetings of the East. Considerable time was taken up in discussing the progress made in establishing the Old People's Home. Owing to the lack of funds very little has been done, but it seemed to be the general sentiment of the meeting that a thorough canvass of the District for funds should be made at once, and a site for the Home be secured.

The report of the Chico Mission was very encouraging, especially in the number of converts,—practically all from outside families. Bro. Hiram Forney, who has labored very earnestly in the work, especially in erecting the churchhouse, has consented to continue the work till spring, at least.

The Fresno Mission,—started only three months ago by Brother and Sister Getz, through the instrumentality of a Sunday-school,—has been hampered by the lack of a suitable building; hence the District Meeting sanctioned the purchase of a lot and the erection of a building adequate for present needs. In the meantime the Mission Board is endeavoring to secure a minister to devote his entire time to the work. During the meetings a collection of nearly $250 was taken for the Fresno building.

Our coming District Bible school will be held in the Oak Grove congregation, the week following Christmas, and the next District Meeting is to be held in the Raisin church.

The District of Northern California is still anxious and hopeful for the Annual Meeting, and so renewed her call for 1913. Eld. J. W. Deardorff will represent our District at the next Annual Meeting.

The third day of the session the Sunday-school and Missionary Meetings were held, and genuine enthusiasm, together with deep spirituality, prevailed from the beginning to the close. Each meeting seemed to be better than the previous ones, perhaps because our capacity for enjoyment increased.

The general topic of the meeting was "The Spirit of the Sunday-school," and this was emphasized in the discussion of each minor topic. Everyone seemed to imbibe the Sunday-school spirit, and thereby gained a larger view of its mission than ever before.

Bro. S. G. Hollinger will serve as District Sunday-school Secretary for the next three years, and it is now so arranged that he can spend considerable time among the schools. We now have fourteen Sunday-schools, twice the number we had three years ago. May we double this number in the next three years?

The Christian Warfare.

BY NETTIE C. WEYBRIGHT.

Uniting with the church by no means comprises all our duty to God and man. It is but an evidence that we have decided to leave sin and follow Christ. We owe our present position, as sons of God, to Christ our Savior. He has saved us that we might serve him, —not to live a life of idleness or ease,—not only to be ministered unto, but to minister. How gladly we should serve him because of all he has done for us! "And being made free from sin, ye became servants of righteousness,"—the most glorious service in the world. In this work in the Lord's vineyard, we must expect to encounter difficulties, to meet opposition.

Paul says of the Christian life on earth that it is a warfare. We have our own sinful natures to overcome. We are naturally carnal,—the good which we would, we do not; but the evil which we would not, that we do, for although we delight in the law of God, there is a different law warring against the law of our minds, making us captive to the law of sin. We must be watching constantly lest Satan overcome us. Self is our most obstinate enemy,—the one hardest to overcome.

Jesus says, "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross daily, and follow me." Our tendency so often is to avoid the cross. We enjoy the blessings and promises of the Bible, but shun its warnings and commandments. We forget that the cross is the way to the crown.

As Christians we must learn to meet and overcome the hard things in life. This vile world is not a friend to grace,—to help us on to God! We must deny ourselves of all ungodliness and worldly lusts, and strive for the things that are worth while.

In true obedience, Jesus has set us a blessed example. We are told that "Jesus humbled himself, becoming obedient even unto death." Then God "highly exalted him, and gave unto him a name which is above every name" (Philpp. 2:8, 9).

The work of the Lord is not one that may be taken up and laid down at will, but it is a life-service. While God gives us life, we should serve him,—not in a half-hearted, indifferent manner, but with our might as unto the Lord. "Wherefore, my beloved brethren, be ye stedfast, unmovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as ye know that your labor is not in vain in the Lord" (1 Cor. 15:58). God demands a striving. Satan does not grow weary in his efforts to entrap unwary feet. He delights in every victory over a Christian. "Be ye faithful unto death" is the message of God's Word. There is no stopping place.

The One who has saved us does not let us go unrewarded for our services, for God's Word holds for us sure promises. "To him that overcometh, to him will I give to eat of the tree of life, which is in the Paradise of God" (Rev. 2:7). "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee the crown of life" (Rev. 2:10). "If we endure, we shall also reign with him" (2 Tim. 2:12). Ours is, indeed, a most glorious inheritance, well worth striving for! God increase our courage, and grant us faith! He that has saved us is able to guard us from stumbling. "Finally, be strong in the Lord and in the power of his might" (Eph. 6:10).

Winter Evenings in the Country.

BY H. A. STAHL.

A GENERATION ago the long evenings were the brightest part of the twenty-four hours. Great logs of maple and hickory were laid across the andirons. Then the mighty flames surged up the wide-throated flue, and filled the room with a glare of light that made the home-dipped candles fade into insignificant paleness.

Around the table the family gathered with books. Father took the dear old family Bible, and perused its sacred pages, to learn the sweet lessons of love, while mother was knitting or sewing. The children roasted apples and ate nuts, and popped corn by the open fire. A rich air of good cheer and cozy comfort pervaded the room.

No outside attractions drew the young people away, unless for a moonlight sleigh-ride, a neighbor's quilting-party or a district "spelling bee," or a singing school. There was much solid reading in the family circle, and as a rule there was companionship in all literary matters. Individual taste could not always be gratified because of the paucity of books. What one member read, the others read. Dime novels, love stories, and trashy literature in general, found no place in the bygone home.

But in spite of the glamour of the fire-light and the stronger glamour that memory and association cast over the quiet evenings of thirty years ago, few are the wise people that would wish to return to those days. The better illumination that the modern lamp affords is suggestive of the brighter lives that the present gives to other things. The absence of the open fire we may be permitted to regret. It is true, no doubt, that freakish fashion removed it. But the many other advantages of today make the past seem narrow and confined. What a flood of literature has been poured out upon the world since the days of tallow candles! What revelations in science, what an unlocking of the mysteries of nature! What unsealing of musical fountains, and unveiling of the recesses of art!

To be sure, a noble literature was at the disposal of the last generation, if they had the means to possess it, but the free public library was an unknown boon. Now every town, that pretends to ordinary intelligence, has its library, large or small, or if it has not, it should and may have it. Indeed, in towns where none exists, there could not be a better winter's work than to organize one.

This introduction of libraries grants a greater range to individual taste in families, and, while it has its advantages, it has its compensating disadvantages.

Into even the country farmhouse cellar, the iron furnace has found its way, and the hot-air pipes, which radiate from this genial center, carry with them, to different parts of the house, the various members of the family. The daughter, with her novel, seeks the snug comfort of her warm bedroom. The boys with their magazines go to their own chambers, and the father and mother are left to the quiet sitting room. It is a pity to break up the unity of the family group in this way, unless the younger members are really engaged in serious study. If all read for recreation, books could easily be found which would entertain all, and, at the same time, revive the good old habit of reading aloud.

These long, quiet hours, when the world is wrapped in silence and cold, are just the time for cultivating the social graces of home. One may not be an artist, and yet, whether he will or not, he daily paints upon his memory pictures that will never fade. None of these are brighter and fairer than that of the home circle. The parents have their part to do, in making this picture complete. It lies in their power to choose the books that shall be read for profit and recreation.

In short, to make the long winter evenings pass as rapidly as possible, parents must have the grateful cooperation of the boys and girls, and the older sons and daughters. Such harmonious endeavor brings cheer, love, comfort and joy into the home. It attaches the children to the home so strongly that they love to be around the hearth. They are glad to spend the evenings with their parents, thus to enjoy the comfort of a true Christian home.

"Home, sweet home,
Be it ever so humble,
There is no place like home."

President Taft's Thanksgiving Proclamation.

THE people of this land having by long sanction and practice set apart toward the close of each passing year a day on which to cease from their labors and assemble for the purpose of giving praise to him who is the author of the blessings they have enjoyed, it is my duty, as chief executive, to designate at this time the day for the fulfillment of this devout purpose.

Our country has been signally favored in many ways. The round of the seasons has brought rich harvests. Our industries have thriven far beyond our domestic needs, the productions of our labor are daily finding enlarged markets abroad.

We have been free from the curses of pestilence, of famine, and of war. Our national counsels have furthered the cause of peace in other lands and the spirit of benevolence has brought us into closer touch with other peoples, to the strengthening of the bonds of fellowship and good will that links us to our comrades in the universal brotherhood of nations.

Strong in the sense of our own right and inspired by as strong a sense of the rights of others, we live in peace and harmony with the world. Rich in the priceless possession and abundant resources wherewith the unstinted bounty of God has endowed us, we are unselfishly glad when other peoples pass onward to prosperity and peace.

That the great privileges we enjoy may continue, and that each coming year may see our country more firmly established in the regard and esteem of our fellow nations, is the prayer that should arise in every thankful heart.

Wherefore, I, William Howard Taft, president of the United States of America, designate Thursday, the 30th of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and I earnestly call upon my countrymen and upon all that dwell under the flag of our beloved country then to meet in their accustomed places of worship to join in offering praise to Almighty God and devout thanks for the loving mercies he has given to us.

In witness thereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

Done at the city of Chicago this 30th day of October, in the year of Our Lord 1911, and of the independence of the United States of America the 136th.

By the President.
P. C. KNOX, Secretary of State.

OUR YOUNG PEOPLE:

Their Activities and the Outlook for the Future.

A prominent naval authority is quoted as saying that "the strength of a ship's armor is the strength of its arms,"—that no matter how strong its armor plate, without strong arms to go with it, it will soon be overcome. Applying the same words of wisdom to the church, no body of worshipers could possibly have a stronger armor than the Church of the Brethren. We have not only the gospel armor, but we have the whole armor. If it is a matter of argument no church in the world can put on a stronger argument than we, for we have the Gospel. Let all of the guns in the world be trained upon us, and after the last word is said, the Gospel still stands. But the strength and hope of the church is not in the Gospel we have to preach (though a matter of profound importance) but in the men to whose hands it is intrusted. To continue the figure, our strength is not in our armor plate but in the men behind it.

The rapid rate at which schools and colleges have sprung up in the Brotherhood during the last two decades, insures us that in training and preparation the young people of the Brethren are to be second to none. May I pause here to note, too, that this has not been an increase in the founding of educational institutions alone, but an almost phenomenal growth in the school spirit, and the patronage of schools? This will be clear to all when it is noted that during this increase of schools the older ones have held their own.

But the church will profit and prosper by an educated membership only in proportion as it educates along right lines, or better, perhaps, in proportion as the education is full and complete. Educational systems might be divided into three classes. The single H, double H, and three H, viz., of the heart, the head, and the hands. It is not boastful to say that the education afforded by Brethren schools has been as well balanced as that of any other schools in Christendom, though the next few years may see quite an awakening along industrial lines.

The devotional spirit of our young people is manifest by the commendably large per cent of them that are regular attendants at church services. From the viewpoint of the church man, what could be more promising than the splendid per cent of the students, in all of our schools, taking Bible work, and the further fact of the rapid growth of our most excellent Bethany Bible School, which means that a powerful army is specializing in Bible work for special usefulness in the church. In addition to this, the heroic manner in which the call of the Mission Board, for consecrated men and women to go into the foreign field, has been responded to, and the heroic manner in which our members are responding to the call wherever the church is making an appeal for additional helpers, speaks volumes for the life and vitality of the church's young people.

Never, in the history of Christianity, were there grander opportunities for young people than today! Never was there a greater need for a promulgation of the principles that are fundamental in our worship. I see, everywhere I look, open doors for our young people.

MILL CREEK CHURCH, ROCKINGHAM COUNTY, VIRGINIA.

Last night closed a series of meetings in the Mill Creek congregation of more than ordinary interest and power. Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., came to us three weeks ago, and began work with vigor and purpose. His sermons were pleasing and sweet, exhorting sinners to repentance from a sense of the love and goodness of God, and at the same time warning all, in the most urgent manner, to flee the wrath to come. The first few sermons, addressed especially to the church, were models of good judgment, searching power and Christian spirit. He came among us a stranger to us all, except one member of the congregation; but soon won his way completely into the hearts of all that heard him, and went away, after doing us a power of good, with the prayers of the congregation.

Besides preaching twenty-five sermons, he visited one hundred and five homes, some of them three or four times. The result of the meetings, in accessions to the church, is eleven baptized and others near, whom we hope to see come at an early date. H. C. Early.

THE ROUND TABLE

A Church in a Charming Valley.

BY J. HARMAN STOVER.

After several months at home, gathering in the summer's crops, we were called again to take the field in the interest of the Master.

Leaving home Sept. 22, we reached Williams Creek Valley, Oregon, one of the Cascade's beautiful valleys, where, nestled among the hills, we found less than a dozen families of Brethren occupying beautiful little farms, green with nourishing grasses, affording pasture for many valuable dairy cows.

Beautiful streams of the clearest water run across nearly every farm. By these their gardens, orchards, vineyards and alfalfa fields are watered. In short, I found a happy, and,—when compared to the "going to and fro" spirit of the present day,—a contented people.

The whole scene,—away from the outside noisy, wicked, busy world,—reminded me of what I had read of the Waldenses,—safe and secure in the Vaudois Valleys of Italy during the Dark Ages. The old-time chimney and wide-open fire-place, with its stout "back-stick," awakened visions of boyhood days and early memories,—sacred indeed.

But the best is that, in their domestic tranquility, owing to their isolation from a wicked world, they have not forgotten the Lord.

Services have ever been kept up in the Valley by the Brethren. Eld. George Hoxie has lived there thirty years. Some have been coming and going during the time.

Eld. J. C. Moomaw, of Eagle Point, moved into the neighborhood a year or two ago, and Bro. Teeter less than a year ago, at about which time the present congregation was organized, with Eld. Geo. Hoxie in charge.

Though organized only about a year, they have built a churchhouse 26x40,—a real neat, completely-finished and well-equipped house, practically paid for.

On Sunday, Sept. 24, the house was filled to its utmost seating capacity, with hearers giving perfect and, —what seemed to the one delivering the dedicatory sermon,—prayerful, inquiring attention.

A week's series of meetings was held, running over the following Sunday. On the last Sunday evening, at the close of the service, Eld. Hoxie, in the presence of a large audience, united in marriage two of the young people of the Sunday-school.

I believe that with careful shepherding and teaching there is an open door in the Williams Creek Valley for the Church of the Brethren.

True Witnesses.

BY IDA M. HELM.

"We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen" (John 3: 11).

What the world needs today is men and women who know the truth and who are willing to bear witness to what they know. We have plenty of talking and disputing, but what is needed is more plain, simple teaching of the priceless plan of salvation,—the doctrine taught by Jesus. Jesus and Paul, and all the holy men and women of old witnessed in their living every day to the things they learned of the Savior. They gave unmistakable witness of the things they knew of God. They did not hide their light under a bushel, but they put it on a candlestick, where all could see it.

To put "Rev." at the end of a man's name and "D. D." at the other end, is not witnessing for Christ. Some men who criticise the Bible have a long appendage of letters attached to the end of their name. "A faithful witness will not lie, but a false witness will utter lies" (Prov. 14: 5). A faithful witness is one tested, and found to be true and faithful. "Habitual truthfulness or lying will be evinced in witness-bearing." The way some men deal with portions of the Holy Scriptures, at the present time, is evidence of this fact. In order to make a good show in the flesh they will trifle with the highest truths in the Bible, and yet call themselves ministers of the Gospel. Things should be called by their right name. Paul tells us of some who, "by good words and fair speeches deceive the hearts of the simple." He says: "But there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the Gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other Gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed" (Gal. 1: 7, 8).

Let us bear the witness in example and precept to the truths taught in the Bible. Let us take for our motto, "We speak that we do know, and testify that we have seen."

The Brethren Home.

BY I. W. TAYLOR, SUPERINTENDENT.

About one year ago the new Home was occupied with thirty-one inmates. During the year thirty-six have been admitted, five passed to the home beyond, one was dismissed. At this date the family consists of seventy-two persons, including my family and hired help. Several others are expected to enter the Home ere long. One sister is past ninety-three years of age. One brother and one sister are past ninety-two years, ten are past eighty.

Religious services are held regularly in the Chapel. A love feast was held last spring. Another love feast is to be held Nov. 4.

At a meeting of the trustees, held in July, a request was sent to the churches of the District for donations, consisting of eatables and bedding. Aug. 15 and Oct. 17 were named as the days for receiving of such goods. Quite a liberal contribution was brought to the Home by many of the churches of the District. Several two-horse loads were brought from an adjoining county. Among the goods brought were apples, potatoes, sweet potatoes, apple-butter, canned fruit, dried fruit, flour, beets, etc. We also received a fine lot of bed comforts, quilts, sheets, etc., for which the trustees feel very grateful, and express their appreciation to the donors for their gifts, and especially for the kindly feeling and interest shown toward the Home. May the Lord abundantly bless such acts of Christian charity!

One man, not a member of the church, said, "Such a demonstration of brotherly love I never saw." It was a fulfillment of John 13: 35, "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples if ye have love one to another." "The Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad" (Psa. 126: 3).

In the Woods.

BY C. D. HYLTON.

No doubt our tenderest sympathies have been drawn out toward our dear brother, James M. Neff, as we read his articles, written while in the mountain forests of California in search of health.

But I wonder if some of us, who are enjoying better health, do not almost envy him in his ramblings in the woods. While we are in good health, there is something enchanting to us, to go among the tall oaks and listen to the music of the wind among the leaves of the trees. How charming to hear the rippling rivulets, as they rush down toward the valleys! Then, to have the consciousness that we are alone with God and nature!

When a boy, my father lived about one mile from the top of the Indian Ridge, in Floyd County, Va., when this territory was all in woods. When any special spiritual problem was to be solved, the secluded recesses of the woods afforded a sacred place of refuge. Here we could talk audibly to our Heavenly Father, with no fear of a human intruder. Here we felt to be alone with God. This was my early "closet," where I received much spiritual strength.

Prayer "closets" are more difficult to find in the city or in densely-populated territory, or even in a prairie country. Jesus went often into the mountain to pray, and it was holy ground. Even the disciples did not intrude while he was praying. John spent much of his time in the wilderness. Moses and Elijah were in the woods and there the angels came to them.

"Be Sure Your Sin Will Find You Out."

BY C. WALTER WARSTLER.

Some time ago a boy, who then was not yet eight years old, heard the minister repeat his text: "Be sure your sin will find you out." As the days rolled by, the little fellow, from time to time, could be heard repeating those striking words of the minister,—yea, of God. When his father and mother were engaged in Bible talks, those words would, in soft tones and in gentle manner flow from the lips of the little boy. Sometimes as he walked through a quiet room, those words would float out on the air, "Be sure your sin will find you out."

This little boy is looking forward to the time when he can and will make his mark in the world and church. Though young in years, he prays daily that he might become a better boy. When his father is away from home, engaged in God's service, the little boy prays for him.

May God bless and keep such boys for the future church and may there be many more who will take those words to heart, thereby cleansing both life and soul. Not only boys and girls but men and women should heed the warning.

CHRISTIAN WORKERS' TOPIC

Be "A Pattern of Good Works.

Titus 2: 7, 8.

For Sunday Evening, November 19, 1911.

Men give evidence of what they are by what they do. "What you are speaks so loud I cannot understand what you say."

I. Jesus did "Many Good Works" (John 10: 32).—(1) He "went about doing good" (Acts 10: 38). (2) We are to be "a pattern of good works" (Titus 2: 7).

II. Good Works Are Called,—(1) "Good fruits." (Jas. 3: 17). (2) "Labor of love" (Heb. 6: 10). (3) "Fruits of righteousness" (Philpp. 1: 11). (4) "Fruits meet for repentance" (Matt. 3: 8).

III. Christians Are,—(1) "Created . . . unto good works" (Eph. 2: 10). (2) To be "fruitful in every good work" (Col. 1: 10). (3) To "provoke . . . unto love and good works" (Heb. 10: 24). (4) To be "rich in good works" (1 Tim. 6: 18).

IV. We Are Exhorted,—(1) "To maintain good works" (Titus 3: 8, 14). (2) Because "herein is my Father glorified" (John 15: 8). (3) And "the doer of the work . . . blessed" (Jas. 1: 25). (4) The blessedness lies not in knowing, but in doing the will of God (John 13: 17).

Note.—(1) Jesus' words and works signified one and the same thing. (2) To become "rich in good works" (1 Tim. 6: 18) means more than to do one good act and then keep talking about it. Jesus says, Don't let the "left hand know."

PRAYER MEETING

Character Determines Destiny.

Micah 6: 8; Acts 10: 34, 35.

For Week Beginning November 19, 1911.

1. God Discerns Character.—Man's life is not left to chance or accident for an unerring and impartial Mind takes cognizance of all we do. The Judge of all the world makes due allowance for the various hindrances and perplexities that obstruct our pathway to greater attainments. Character is the inner life of righteousness that expresses itself in an outward shining that interprets Christ to all the world (Philipp. 2: 12-15).

2. The Power Within Us.—Not all are given the same spiritual gifts, but all have at least one talent, and that must be accounted for wisely and well. It is the wise steward of God's precious and manifold gifts that makes himself a man of influence and power (1 Peter 4: 10).

3. Our Aim in Life.—Nothing is more important than right ideals—noble aims. After all is said and done, the real purpose of our life is to do the will of God within our own sphere, thus eventually influencing others to better things. "Life is more serious than death, because it has within it the issues of eternity, and yet we are prone to regard it but lightly, spending our days largely in self-gratification. "This one thing I do," says Paul, and his sublime self-effacement led to glorious results (Philipp. 3: 13, 14).

4. The Larger Vision.—As Peter was given a vision of larger and more exalted gospel activity, so we, too, may get a broader outlook upon the great needs of humanity today. Thousands are perishing for lack of the personal soul-touch we may impart (Col. 3: 12-17).

HOME AND FAMILY

The Unseen Way.

SELECTED BY ANNA LESH.

With eager heart and will on fire
I fought to win my great desire;
Peace shall be mine," I said, but life
Grew bitter in the endless strife.

My soul was weary, and my pride
Was wounded deep; to heaven I cried,
"God grant me peace or I must die."
The dumb stars glittered no reply.

Broken at last, I bowed my head,
Forgetting all myself, and said,
"Whatever comes, his will be done,"
And in that moment peace was won.

In the Hospital Ward.

BY ELIZABETH D. ROSENBERGER.

IN the women's ward of the Stuart Hospital, many pale faces rested on the white pillows, many sad hearts were longing for a sight of baby faces, or thinking of the homes from which they had come. In this prison house of pain, a mother lay, hoping for returning health. She must go back to her boy who was a bit wild, and needed her to steady him. She was poor, and the two rooms she called home were bare and ugly when she was not there to brighten them. Oh, she must get stronger for Robert's sake! His father had been a good man, and Robert must be an honor to the father who was sleeping his last sleep in a lonely graveyard far away. She had traveled far before her weary feet faltered and stopped; then they brought her here.

There was not a breath of air stirring, and the afternoon sun lay in bars of light across the whitewashed walls, when, suddenly, unhappy memories, pleasant thoughts, longings and dreams were all forgotten as a little bird flew into the window and around the room. For some time it seemed bewildered by its surroundings and terrified by the fact that though it beat its wings as furiously as it would, against the clear panes of glass, it could get no farther. It would dart back and forth, and then fling itself, in an agony of fear, against the opposite walls. Eyes dimmed by long months of suffering, and others unnaturally brilliant, blazing with fever, all filled with wistful sympathy, and eagerly followed every movement of the little creature. At last, overcome by exhaustion, and perhaps losing his fear because of the quietness of the place, he dropped to the floor. A nurse came in, and one of the women told her where the bird lay. She tiptoed near and gently lifted it from the floor. Smoothing its ruffled plumage with caressing touch, she set him on the widow ledge outside. Every eye in the ward was fixed upon him as he stood there unconscious, at first, that his bondage was ended. All at once he seemed to feel that his imprisonment was over, and that no wall barred his progress. Then he plumed his wings for flight. Breaking into a wild, sweet melody he soared upward and was lost to view. Every heart thrilled in response to that farewell song of praise and triumph. To the mother he was heavensent. With the bird song were mingled the singing music of many pines and the rippling of shallow water in the pebbly brook. She caught the gleam of sun-flecked forest, and lingered there with those she loved.

When, some time later, the gray-haired physician entered, eager eyes looked wistfully into his for the hope and promise that his loving heart was so anxious to hold out to these suffering ones of earth. His shoulders were bowed with their burdens, for he went down into the chilly waters of distress with each patient, and they relied on him with a sublimity of faith, child-like and touching, as, with benignant touch on head or shoulder, he paused by each one for a word of consolation. It was but a step for many of them, across the threshold of time into the vast Forever. They were in the border-land even now, and the old physician murmured, "Other refuge have I none, hangs my helpless soul on thee," as he took the hand of a young wife whose hours were numbered.

A silence fell upon the ward as the western sky grew dark and threatening. Soon the gusts of rain beat against the many windows, and storm and wind ushered in the long October night. A few turned restlessly,—almost impatiently,—as if the elements without had influenced their overwrought nerves. Then the mother of Robert began in a low voice,

"I need thee every hour,
Most gracious Lord,
No tender voice like thine
Can peace afford."

Weak voices, tremulous with pain, joined in the song until, when they came to the second verse, most of the inmates were singing

"I need thee every hour,
In joy or pain,
Come quickly and abide
Or life is vain."

The peace of God was upon them once more. Tired eyelids drooped heavily and the angel of sleep came to them with healing power, but not until one aged saint repeated, "And God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes: and there shall be no more death, neither sorrow, nor crying, neither shall there be any more pain: for the former things are passed away."

The Lions' Den.

BY ELEANOR I. BRUMBAUGH.

LOOKING at a picture of Daniel in the den of lions, I was impressed anew with his trust in God, and with the way God kept the lions from tearing him up. In some of these pictures the lions are crouching in a corner. In others they are lying around almost asleep. In this picture they look furious, prowling around, and some of them seem to be roaring, while Daniel sits with clasped hands, and upturned face. It is not a distressed face, but looks like the face of one who trusts in God.

There is a great difference between a roaring lion and a sleeping lion. Whether the lions slept or roared, Daniel was kept all through that night. We wonder if he slept. It must have been a filthy place in which to spend a night. But Daniel would not notice that. He was, no doubt, praising God and thanking him over and over for his loving care. God could have caused those people to reconsider the decree and so change things that Daniel would not have been obliged to spend a night in such a place, but he did not do so. He sustained and kept him through it.

Sometimes we seem to be in a den of lions. Have you ever stopped at a hotel where the night was made hideous by drinking, and yelling, and cursing? You would not choose such a place if you knew it, but sometimes circumstances are such that one must spend a night in such a place. We almost fear to close the eyes in sleep. How wonderfully God has kept us through some such dreary nights! Why does he not put away all of this sin and evil, and make this world a nicer place for us? The people are not willing. The king tried to find some other way to dispose of Daniel, but his enemies wanted him to be put in the den.

The people want strong drink sold,—some of them do,—and so we are living in a place something like the den of lions. Even some, who claim to be Christians, indulge in this evil, and will not help to put it away. They look on the other side. What a pity! We are praying that God will so move upon them that they will soon be helpers on the right side of this question.

The lions roar and prowl around, trying to frighten the timid, but we will fear no evil, for God is with us. He is so directing affairs that by and by this world will be a better place to live. We see not yet all things put under but, little by little, it is being done, and the time is coming when righteousness shall reign.

We do well to use our influence on the side of right. Let us do all we can to hasten the better time. It is a great privilege to be used of God for this work, to be a part of his plan in working out the evil and helping to usher in the good.

Sounds of victory come from many places. There is consternation in the lions' dens. Those who contend for the saloon see the approach of their defeat. Some are giving up the business, because they know it is wrong. By all means let us continue to work and pray for temperance. God hears and helps. Let us trust in him, and wait on him, for he will some day deliver us from this great evil, and it may be sooner than some think.

God is the Ruler of all things, and all peoples and nations shall know that he has taken to himself the rule of all things. Christ would not have told us to pray, "Thy kingdom come," if there were no prospect of its being so. He would not have told us to pray, "Deliver us from evil," if it were not so to be. The kingdom is his, the power is his, and the glory is his, now and forever. Let us keep this in mind, and we shall go about our work with more courage.

We need not be so timid when we know that we are working on the right side. God promises wisdom and strength to us. Let us accept these, and go on in the blessed work. He is our Leader: we need not fear.

There are many ways of helping the Lord's work. Attend the church services. Some people think they have not time to go to prayer meeting, church meeting, a meeting of Sunday-school workers, etc., so they stay away. It is Satan that suggests you have not time, and he is pleased to have you believe it. In just such ways we are helping on the wrong side. We find time to do the things we want to do. Let us not be induced to stay away from the services of the church! They are helping to make this world better. Time is not lost that is spent in these services, but professing Christians do sometimes get to places where their time is worse than wasted.

Ask God to show you where to go, and what to do. Be very earnest about the asking, and he will show you just what to do, and where to go. He is keeping us through the night in the den of lions, and will bring us to the glorious day of liberty, and release us from this bondage. We are returning from our captivity.

Sometimes it seems a long and weary march, but if we are true to him, and determine to do the things that please him, he will bring us to the happy day that sees his promises fulfilled. The God of Daniel is the same unchangeable God today. Let us be glad that we belong to him, and that he is using us to help put away evil and promote good!

Huntingdon, Pa.

A lady principal of a Pittsburgh public school has established what she calls an "Opportunity Class" for pupils who, for any reason, are unable to keep up with their classes. Experience has taught her that there will always be some pupils who are tardy in development, and who require an unlimited amount of forbearance and help, in order that there may be continued effort and final success. The idea is a most practical one, and may be applied to excellent advantage in our church relations. While not all members can be equally strong and efficient in the Lord's work, let us remember the weak and backward ones in the fold,—a part of our duty that too often is sadly neglected. "We then that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak."

SISTERS' AID SOCIETIES

CARTHAGE, MO.—The following is a list of work done by our Sisters' Aid Society in this church from Oct. 1, 1910, to Oct. 1, 1911: Thirteen meetings were held, and the collection amounted to $20.82. We paid out $19.40, and donated fifty cents to the China sufferers. The work consists of piecing quilts and quilting them, tacking comforts, sewing carpet rags and making prayer coverings.—Sister Lowery, President; Sister Hottenstein, Secretary, elected in Oct. 14.

SOUTH BEND, IND.—The Sisters' Aid Society of the First Church of the Brethren closed a very successful summer's work by an all-day meeting at the home of Mother Sister Sister W. C. Miller, south of town. To this meeting all friends of the society were invited, and those attending were taken to the place of meeting in automobiles and a hay wagon. The work of the day was a regular session of the society, and the visitors contributed liberally to the treasury of the society. As the needs of winter come on, we are prepared to respond to any worthy call for help. Address all communications to Sister M. W. Kreighbaum, president of the society, 1092 Victoria Ave., and all money intended for the society to Sister Bartholow Kelley, Sec., South Bend, Ind., Oct. 17.

FREDERICK, MD.—Our Sisters' Aid Society of this city gives this as a report of our work since the year 1909: Cash received, including a few donations, $153.20; paid out, $120.84; balance on hand, $32.76. Though we are but few in number, we feel encouraged and will try to do more work in the future than we have done in the past. In this time we have made and disposed of 34 prayer coverings, 75 bonnets, 197 aprons, 27 aprons for children, 21 bottles of fruit, 6 comforts, 19 bonnet mops, 14 cushion tops, 7 darning bags, 15 quilts, and many other articles. We made $5 each year for Annual Meeting work and also $5 to the Brooklyn Mission. We give $25 per year for the support of our minister. We donated $20 for furnishing carpet in the primary department of our Sunday-school room, besides what we donated to the needy among us here at home. Our dear Sister Harshman has been kindly giving our Circle a meeting place in her home on East Fourteenth Street, and we much appreciate it. We truly say that she may be blessed for her hospitality. The work done by the needle is a great one indeed, and reminds us of the work that Dorcas did. Let us not become weary in well-doing.—Sisters R. E. Fahrney, Pres.; A. M. Bonet, Sec., 201 East Eighth St., Frederick, Md., Oct. 27.

☞All business and communications intended for the paper should be addressed to the BRETHREN PUBLISHING HOUSE, ELGIN, ILL., and not to any individual connected with it.

FIVE Sunday-school scholars recently received baptism at Reedley, Cal.

THE President's Thanksgiving Proclamation will be found on page 713, this issue.

BRO. HIRAM GIBBLE, of Pennsylvania, changes his address from Manheim to Lititz.

BRO. J. M. MOHLER is conducting a series of meetings in the Spring Grove congregation, Pa.

BRO. JOHN S. CLARK will represent Southeastern Kansas on the Standing Committee for 1912.

QUITE recently four were baptized in the Jacobs Creek congregation and three others await the rite.

THE series of meetings at Cottage Grove, Ind., conducted by Bro. Dorsey Hodgden, brought five into the fold.

FIVE accessions are reported at the Fairview church, Mo., where a series of meetings was held by Bro. S. E. Thompson.

THE new church at Indian Creek, Iowa, was dedicated Oct. 22, Bro. Moses Deardorff preaching the dedicatory sermon.

THE First District of Arkansas and Southeastern Missouri is to be represented on the Standing Committee by Bro. H. J. Lilly.

THE regular time for the Annual Meeting of 1913 will fall on May 13,—the earliest possible date for the meeting during the present century.

MIDDLE MISSOURI is sending one paper to the Annual Meeting. Bro. T. J. Simmons is to represent the District on the next Standing Committee.

BRO. W. E. WEST is holding a protracted meeting in the Big Creek church, Parkersburg, Ill. He is accompanied by his wife, father and mother.

A REVIVAL in the Washington Creek church, Kans., with Bro. E. F. Sherfy doing the preaching, closed with twelve conversions and one reclaimed.

WE are requested to state that Dec. 2, which by the way, falls on Saturday, is the date agreed upon for the dedication of the new church at Anderson, Ind.

BRO. JOEL SHERFY, of Tennessee, has located at Herndon, Fla., where a small body of members has collected, and secured homes in that genial clime.

AT the late District Meeting of Southwestern Kansas and Southern Colorado Bro. M. Keller was chosen a member of the Standing Committee for next year.

THE Word was held forth in a series of meetings at South Keokuk, Iowa, by Bro. Geo. Burgin, and eleven were added to the church by confession and baptism.

TWENTY-SIX souls have been born into the kingdom since the beginning of the series of meetings, conducted by Bro. C. S. Garber in the Turkey Creek church, Ind.

BRO. H. C. EARLY is now in a series of meetings at Ashland, Ohio, where he is to continue until the meeting of the General Mission Board at Elgin, week after next.

BRO. J. S. ZIMMERMAN devoted three weeks to evangelistic work at Goshen, West Side, Ind., and seven made the good confession and were added to the church.

THE GENERAL MISSION BOARD has under its control fifty missionaries. This means two in Denmark and Sweden, four in France, thirty-two in India, and twelve in China.

A SERIES of meetings at Oakland, Ohio, conducted by Bro. John Fidler, of Dayton, closed with seventeen accepting Christ and receiving baptism. One was restored to fellowship.

THE Annual Meeting for 1912, at York, Pa., is to be held in a tabernacle erected for the occasion, and the contract for the building, 200 feet long and 150 feet wide, has already been let.

OUR correspondent, writing from the Sangerville congregation, Va., reports a series of meetings at the Emmanuel house, conducted by Bro. I. W. Miller, at which seven were baptized.

AT present Bro. F. F. Sherfy is holding revival services in the Rockingham congregation, Mo., where he is to remain a few weeks. He finds a large and interesting body of members at Rockingham.

BRO. B. E. KESLER, of River Bend, Colo., writes us that enough orders have been received to justify the publishing of his Texas debate, and that in due time the book will be brought out. See notice on page 724.

THE new meetinghouse on the Western Ohio Traction Line, seven miles northeast of Lima, and three miles southwest of Beaverdam, Ohio, will be dedicated Sunday, Nov. 26, with Bro. H. C. Early conducting the services.

WHILE at the Mill Creek church, Rockingham Co., Va., Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., delivered twenty-five sermons, and as the fruits of the efforts put forth he had the pleasure of seeing eleven persons enter the fold.

BRO. CHAS. D. BONSACK, after taking a careful look over the Conference grounds for 1912, writes us that he is very much pleased with the location, and feels sure that we are to have all necessary conveniences for the Annual Meeting.

BRO. CHAS. A. MILLER, formerly of Westphalia, Kans., but now of 328 South Eighteenth Street, Independence, same State, has sold his farm, and will devote considerable of his time and attention to evangelistic work. Those interested can address him at Independence.

A SMALL body of members have located at Oneonta, Blount Co., Ala., a point about forty miles northeast of Birmingham, and Bro. D. H. Zigler, of Broadway, Va., is to go there the first of December, to hold a series of meetings. Possibly an organization may be effected soon.

THERE is plenty of demand for the doctrinal issue. One State District wants 1,000 copies, but may have to do with half that number. We should like to have enough papers to go around, so as to have the information concerning our faith and practice, circulated as widely as possible.

THE church at Meyersdale, Pa., has decided to secure and support a pastor who can give his entire time and attention to the needs of the large and growing congregation. An elder of experience and good pulpit ability is desired. For further particulars address Bro. J. M. Gnagy, Foreman of the Committee appointed to secure a pastor.

THOSE who insert in their reports of church news calls for money to build meetinghouses, or to carry on other lines of church work, will find these calls omitted in their printed reports, for the reason that permission for such calls, through the MESSENGER, must have the endorsement of the General Mission Board before they can appear in our columns.

AT the beginning of the year, Bro. L. H. Prowant, of Dupont, Ohio, expects to locate in the Blue Creek church, under the direction of the District Mission Board of Northwestern Ohio, and may then be addressed at Latty.

BRO. GEO. SHOEMAKER, of Woodlawn, Oregon, says that he can make use of a number of copies of the GOSPEL MESSENGER after our patrons are through with them. He means to distribute them where they will be read and appreciated.

FOR one week, prior to the feast at the East house, Pine Creek congregation, Ind., services were held each evening by Bro. Jacob Hildebrand, and nine were made willing to enter into covenant relation with Christ through the act of baptism.

BRO. D. L. MILLER and wife are to start to California the last week in November, with the intention of spending the winter on the coast. Bro. Miller is already booked for meetings at Empire, Long Beach, Glendora and a few other places.

BRO. I. N. H. BEAHM, while still interested in the Hebron Seminary, has located with the little band of members at Trevilians, Va., where his labors in the ministry will be appreciated. His health is by no means good, still he will be able to do an excellent work in his new field of labor.

THE article headed, "Fashion's Follies Versus Church Piety," published in the issue of Oct. 21, is being highly commended by our readers. A writer at Cherryvale, Kans., would like to have fifty copies in tract form to pass around among his friends. He thinks that if 10,000 copies should be circulated among the women of America, they would certainly do good.

BRO. I. B. TROUT spent last Lord's Day with the congregation at Middlebury, Ind., and delivered the dedication address at the new church. He reports a large attendance and good interest, and thinks that the building just completed is the best house, for the cost that he has seen in the Brotherhood. Bro. Eli L. Heestand, of Elkhart, followed with a series of meetings.

UNDER date of Oct. 6 Bro. B. F. Heckman writes us from Yokohama, Japan, saying that our missionaries to China had reached that harbor two days late, and for that reason would have to lay over some days, waiting for the next boat. With the exception of a few days, the sailing was over rough seas, though only one of the party was seasick. The children stood the rough sailing finely, and seemed to be enjoying the trip immensely. According to the cablegram, received two weeks ago, the party reached China thirteen days later.

THANKSGIVING falls on Thursday, Nov. 30, being the last day of the month. It is expected that religious services will be held in all of our churches, and that some good cause will be remembered on the occasion. A collection ought to be taken for some of the good works among us needing funds. We would call attention to the needs of the General Mission Board, the District Mission Boards, educational work, the MESSENGER Poor Fund, and in a special manner should the poor of the community be looked after. The Lord is greatly blessing our people; nearly all of them have enough, and thousands have plenty and to spare. Since the great Giver of all that is good has dealt bountifully with us, let us be liberal in responding to worthy calls.

A SHORT time ago we called attention to the advisability of members selling any jewelry they might happen to have in their possession and giving the proceeds to some worthy cause. What was said moved at least one reader of the MESSENGER, for he sent some long discarded gold rings, etc., which were turned over to the Mission Board, sold to a dealer in jewelry, and the money placed in the mission fund. We had stated that there might possibly be enough jewelry in the Brotherhood to fill a bushel basket. Our brother who leads out in the good example says that the basket should be passed around. A little more New Testament religion in the heart will let the jewelry slip off easily, and prove a blessing to those who give up the forbidden articles, as well as a help to some good cause.

The Los Angeles (California) Express, for Oct. 28 contains a good picture of the new Berean Bible School building, dedicated Monday, Oct. 30. The building is three stories high, and covers a space of 48 x 50 feet. A good write-up of the school and its purpose, along with the portraits of some of the workers, is also given.

When mentioning the work of Bro. S. S. Neher in Idaho, a few weeks ago, we should have referred to him as the Secretary of the Sunday-school Convention Program Committee, and not the Sunday-school secretary of the State. As Secretary of the Committee on Program, Bro. Neher is working up a splendid interest for the Sunday-school cause in his State.

Bro. A. J. Detrick, of Ripley, Okla., is preparing to go to Mexico the last of December, and would be pleased to have some of our members accompany him, with a view of recommending the country for homes and the opening up of some mission points. This will be his second trip. He thinks there are some fine opportunities in the Republic for those who wish to combine teaching with mission work. Thousands of children are without schooling.

One of our agents suggests that we urge all the Messenger patrons to pay their subscriptions at the time they are called on to renew for 1912. This, he says, would prove very helpful to the agent, and avoid some annoyances, as well as some inconveniences. The suggestion is a good one, and our patrons will do well to have the money for their paper ready, when called on by the agent for their community. Pay at once, and do not keep the agent waiting months for his money.

Under date of Oct. 25 Bro. Wm. M. Howe writes us that, in company with Bro. P. J. Blough, he was spending that day at the Mennonite Biannual Conference for the United States and Canada, held in a country church, three miles from Hollsopple, Pa. It began Oct. 24, and was to have closed on the 27th. There were present about sixty delegates from District Conferences. The entire attendance numbered less than one thousand, and the next meeting, in 1913, will go to Ohio. The visiting members and others get their breakfast where they lodge, and at noon and in the evening a free lunch is served on a large tent near the meetinghouse. Due respect for the occasion, and a high order of spirituality characterize these meetings.

A Separate People.

It is clearly taught in the New Testament that the Lord's people are a separate people, living apart from the sins and follies of the world. They are a called-out people,—called out from the world and urged to live the holy, consecrated and sanctified life. They are called out, because they have heeded the call to come out from the world "and be ye separate, . . . and touch not the unclean thing" (2 Cor. 6: 17). Then we are told that we are not of the world. Having been born of water and of the Spirit, we are not only new creatures in Christ Jesus, but belong to another kingdom.

Having also pledged ourselves to live faithful until death, we become wholly consecrated and dedicated to the Lord. We become his servants, and as such we serve him by living strictly in accordance with his will, both spiritually and temporally. Not only so, but we become holy unto the Lord. It is a full and complete surrender of soul, mind and body. This is done by faith and obedience on our part, and the inward working of grace upon the Lord's part. Men and women who thus yield themselves to the Master, as faithful and obedient children, are not only cleansed from sin by the atoning blood of Christ, but they are urged to go on to perfection, and live the true, holy life.

Those who live this life as they should, will not be found living, thinking and doing as the world does. They will be found living on a much higher spiritual plane, and shunning those things that have even the appearance of evil. With them it will not be how much they can trifle with the doubtful and questionable, and not sin; but how far they can keep away from the things that are looked upon as unbecoming the devout followers of the Master. Living thus will so emphasize the consecrated and separated life as to constrain others to recognize the fact that the servants of the Lord are truly a called-out people.

Among the Churches in East Tennessee and North Carolina.

For many years we have had a strong desire to visit the churches in Tennessee and North Carolina. A promise had been made to the Brethren here years ago, to spend some time in the South. The realization of the desire brings the fulfillment of the promise, and we are enjoying, very much indeed, the long-expected privilege of meeting with the members of this part of our Brotherhood.

The first stopping-place was at the historic old town of Jonesboro. Once, in territorial days, it was named as the capital of the proposed State of Franklin, composed of parts of the territory of Tennessee and North Carolina. State officials were elected, but the courts set aside the effort and the prospective State capital is now a quiet country town of fifteen hundred souls.

Near Jonesboro is the Knob Creek church. More than a hundred years ago our Brethren in Virginia, strong in their desire to spread the Gospel of Christ, pushed out into the wilds of Tennessee and organized the first congregation of the Brethren in the State. They were hardy pioneers and seem to have been far ahead of the present generation in enterprise. They grew and prospered, and many were added to the fold. At present Elders S. J. and D. B. Bowman are in charge of the Knob Creek church, of which something more will be said later.

Some twelve miles from Jonesboro is the Limestone church, organized in 1846. This church is noted as having furnished the Brotherhood with a number of noted ministers, among whom were Brethren John Nead, Solomon Garber, Daniel Brubaker, P. R. Wrightsman, John Lair, M. M. Bashore and J. B. Pence. All of these have finished their labors and are at rest.

In 1858 an election for minister was held in the Limestone church, at which Bro. Samuel Garber, then elder of the West Branch and Silver Creek churches of Northern Illinois, officiated. It was in the days when slavery was the burning question of the day. Bro. Garber was requested by an outsider to preach on the subject, "When shall the bound be made free?" It was understood that the subject referred to those bound by Satan in sin. In treating the subject Bro. Garber referred to human slavery in a mild way. The party who gave him the subject complained to Magistrate L. A. Markwood, and Bro. Garber was arrested and cited to appear in court on the following Saturday, to answer to the serious charge of inciting the slaves to insurrection.

The penalty affixed by law was a heavy fine and a long term of imprisonment. The prosecution urged a long term of imprisonment. The prosecution urged a heavy bond for Bro. Garber's appearance for trial. Bro. John Nead said to the judge: "Your honor, a bond is unnecessary. Bro. Garber will be here when required." The judge replied: "If Mr. Nead says the prisoner will be here on time, no bond will be required." In those days a brother's word was as good as a bond.

Excitement ran high. The slavery men were aroused, and they determined to prosecute Bro. Garber to the bitter end. The Brethren secured an advocate for the defense in the person of Lawyer Ferguson. The trial excited great interest both north and south. A large number of witnesses were examined on both sides, and the result was that Bro. Garber was found guilty, and assessed a fine and costs of five hundred dollars, but escaped imprisonment. All this for telling the truth and saying that human slavery was wrong. The money was paid, and it was stipulated that Bro. Garber should leave the State and not return again. The days of slavery, however, are gone and the memory of the resulting Civil War is rapidly passing from the memory of the living, as one by one the actors answer the last roll call.

In 1860 the Annual Meeting was held in the Limestone church. A brother who was there told how Bro. D. P. Saylor stood in the doorway of the church, on that occasion, and preached to the people inside and out, "for," said the brother, "the church was crowded and the front yard was full too."

Bishops P. D. Reed and Abram Nead, related to Peter Nead, are in charge of the Limestone church. A few days were spent in holding meetings with the Brethren in the old, historic church. These were much enjoyed and especially did we enjoy the association with the members. They are whole-hearted, kind, generous and hospitable. I have never had kinder treatment or more open-hearted hospitality shown me than by the Brethren and friends in the South.

Obeying from the Heart.

To "obey," in its inception, means to render service to others, because of obligation or indebtedness. We are to obey God because we are wonderfully indebted to him. Ever since man sinned, and lost his intimate fellowship with God, through disobedience, obedience has been the key that opens the door to his restoration and fellowship with the Father.

Obedience is prompted in three different ways,—through a sense of fear, through a feeling of duty and through love. We recognize this fact more fully by reverting to our own experiences, as they have come to us in our relations to, and associating with, our fellowmen. Obedience through a sense of fear is a sad thought, unnatural and demoralizing. It appeals to our lower passions, and always engenders a spirit of rebellion, as well as that of hypocrisy and deception.

The idea of arbitrary force being exercised by one man over another has always been resented, and has been the active cause of all the bad feeling, quarrelings, and wars, so sadly blighting human expectations, and destroying the social and religious associations and relations of life. The idea of force always has been, and always will be, repugnant to the human make-up and human intelligence. God did not make us in this way, and the more intelligence men and women have, the less they are inclined to be driven. They may be reasoned with, they may be led, they may be loved into obedience, but they will not be forced without mental and physical protest. When obedience is obtained through force, the idea of obedience is eliminated and it degrades the person who is thus made to serve.

Our first Brethren took this position very strongly and firmly, and it was on this position that they plead the unreasonableness of infant baptism. It is a forced service,—done independent of the wish and volition of the child. It is irrational. God wants voluntary, intelligent and loving service. Paul commends the Roman believers because they "obeyed from the heart" that form of doctrine which was delivered to them. It is heart service that the Lord wants from his loving children. In speaking of the scribes and Pharisees, he says: "This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth and honoreth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me." Jesus repeated to the young lawyer the commandment of his Father: "Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength." This is the kind of service that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit want,—a heart-love service.

We fear sometimes that ministers,—shepherds over the flock of God,—do not appreciate and teach this heart service as they should. The true shepherd does not drive, but leads his flock. He feeds, he loves, he leads. This is the gospel spirit—the Christ spirit. When we were yet a boy at home, on the farm, father had a flock of sheep. One fall evening, on the approach of a snowstorm, he sent the hired man out into the field to bring the sheep in to shelter. When he got to the field, instead of calling the sheep, as father always did, he got back of the flock and tried to drive them, shouting, "Shoo! Shoo!" and "shoo" they did, running and scattering in every direction, so much so that he could not do a thing with them; went home and told father that he could not get the sheep in. "They are as wild as deer." Father then went out to the gate of the field, and commenced calling, "Sheep, sheep, sheep." At once they lifted up their heads,— bleating. Then they ran to him, and followed him quickly, lovingly and safely to the sheltering fold. The trouble with the hired man was, he had never learned "Sheepology."

And so it may be with some of us, as leaders of the flock, over which the Lord has given us charge. We do more driving than we do leading. Were you ever "hired out"? Do you remember how much better you felt when your boss said: "Come, boys, let's go and bring in the hay," or, "Let us cut off the corn"? The manner of approach has much to do with our spirit of obedience, as an act of our own volition, whether it be physical, moral or spiritual. The request must come in a way and spirit that appeals to our manhood, and those who are given the right to exercise authority should always remember that all men and women have certain innate rights and prerogatives that ought to be respected.

A higher incentive to obedience is that of duty. We are all debtors in some sense or other, because of relations, circumstances and conditions. We owe our obedience to our parents, to our government, to the church and our God. While, under some conditions, it may not be in all our hearts to act out this obedience as cheerfully as we should, yet, through our sense of duty, obligation or debt, we refuse it. In other words, it is easier for us, and gives us more satisfaction to obey than to disobey; and we do it with a free will and voluntarily. We choose to do it, and therefore do no violence to our sense of right and manhood.

But the highest incentive to obedience is that which is done through a sense of love. We do it not only because we feel that it is right to do it, but because we love to do it. This is obeying from the heart. And this is the kind of obedience that our Heavenly Father seeks from us as his loving children. We obey our parents because we love them, and we love them because they loved us. We obey our Government, because it is a good Government, and has been ordained of God. We obey our church, because it has been a great blessing. We obey Jesus Christ because he first loved us, and gave himself a ransom for us. We obey God because he lovingly created us to his glory and to our eternal happiness. This is genuine, heart-felt obedience,—such as is appreciated by all right-thinking people; such as Jesus Christ recognized as true and acceptable service. It is the kind that he expects from all his loving children; the kind that should be taught and commended by the church of Jesus Christ, and should be expected of every member of his body. What we need, and what we want, in our teaching and in our exercising in church government, is less of the idea of force, and more of the spirit of love. This spirit of love we want to emphasize in our daily life, and should be expected of every member of his body, under our care, and, as a result, we will have more loving service, and more heartfelt obedience.

The Men and Boys' Movement.

JUST now parts of the country are being swept by a religious movement that proposes to enlist three million men and boys inside of two years. The purpose of the movement is to interest men and boys of every class in that which tends to make people better morally and religiously, and to organize a force against the saloon evil, the divorce evil, and impurity of every grade and order. Viewed from a moral standpoint, the influence of the movement, in some cities at least, seems to be almost irresistible. By earnest addresses, forcible appeals and enthusiastic demonstrations, men and boys are drawn into the movement by the thousands. Just how long the excitement will continue, can not be predicted, but while it lasts it will at least do some good. It will increase the ranks of clean and respectable men, and may lead up to something more permanent than a wave of enthusiasm. Sin is permanent and we need something equally permanent to meet and overthrow its forces. While the present movement does not pretend to sow all the seed of the kingdom, it will scatter abroad enough to bring about a marked improvement in society. If nothing else, it ought to impress the churches all over the land with the importance of more aggressive work. If the churches would do their duty as they should, there would be no occasion for such movements. As for the Brethren, their mission is to lead people to accept the whole Gospel, and whatever we do, whether before or after the movement reaches our locality, we should keep this one object in view.

Removing the Name.

A MINISTER writes us to remove his name from the Ministerial List, saying that he has not preached for some years, and that his call to the ministry was a mistake upon the part of the church. He has learned that he does not have the ability to preach, and prefers to do things for which he has some adaptation. While it is the privilege of any one, after a fair trial, to be relieved from the active work of the ministry, on the ground of a lack of adaptation for the work, still there is a correct way of going about it. The brother who feels that he can not possibly make a success of the ministry, "may state his reasons in writing to the elders at District Meeting." These elders will then take the matter under advisement, and if considered proper to act in the case, may appoint a committee to make all necessary investigations, and dispose of the request as wisdom dictates. It is within the realm of possibility for a church to err in calling a brother to the ministry, and when a thing of this kind happens, the mistake should be rectified through the elders at District Meeting. In the ministry the Master wants willing and efficient workers, and in the event of a possible mistake, all parties should exercise wisdom, patience and forbearance. In attempting to correct a presumable error of this character, there is sometimes danger of making still greater mistakes.

The Kind Not Wanted.

The Tri-County Press, Polo, Ill., highly commended the President of Mount Morris College for saying, in a school advertisement, that, as students, "whiskey and cigarette boys are not wanted." It has been found that the school can do very little for this class of boys, while, on the other hand, such boys make very undesirable pupils. It might be well for our schools to tell these boys that they will be welcomed when they cut out tobacco and whiskey. And, by the way, the whiskey-drinking men and boys are being turned down by the best railroads and the most prosperous business establishments in the country. Some of these enterprises have even cut out the tobacco users, it having been learned that the brains and nerves of those given to the use of tobacco and intoxicants are more or less affected. In the Church of the Brethren it has been decided that whiskey drinkers can not be tolerated upon the part of any of the members. The drinking of intoxicants, as a beverage, is made a test of fellowship. As for church officials, they are not permitted to use tobacco in any form. If a tobacco user chances to be called to the ministry, he is not installed until he promises to give up the use of the weed. The same principle applies to elders and deacons. In the course of a few years, most of the churches will probably decide that preachers who use tobacco are not wanted in the pulpit.

Signing the Saloon Petition.

A CORRESPONDENT can not understand how a member of the Church of the Brethren can consistently sign a petition in favor of granting a saloon license. In all probability the angels can not understand how a professed Christian can thus become a party to evil doings. If there is anything in the world that can be considered the devil's meetinghouse it is the saloon, and the man who signs a saloon petition is doing just that much to help the devil along with his work. There ought to be no question about the right or wrong of such an act. Any church should know that it is contrary to the teachings of the Scriptures for a believer to encourage evil, and it ought to be understood that when one signs a saloon petition he should be immediately called to account. The church can not afford to treat a matter of this kind with indifference. As a body we are opposed to the saloon interest from start to finish, and, instead of asking the authorities to license a saloon, we should do what we can to have the saloon put out of business. The man who thinks that what we are here saying tends to interfere with one's personal liberty, should bear in mind that those who have accepted Christ are not at liberty to encourage sin. One can not serve righteousness and sin at the same time. The devout man is always at liberty to do right, but is never at liberty to throw his influence on the side of evil.

The Civil Oath.

THERE are a few Christian bodies whose members refuse to take the civil oath, believing it to be a violation of the Savior's instructions as set forth in Matt. 5:34-37. James understood that Jesus forbids swearing, for he says: "But above all things, my brethren swear not, neither by heaven, neither by the earth, neither by any other oath: but let your yea be yea; and your nay be nay" (Jas. 5:12). If this means anything at all, it means that those who accept Christ and propose to keep his words should not swear under any circumstances. This includes the civil oath, as well as every other oath. In the different parts of the United States, provisions have been made for the religious people who can not conscientiously take the civil oath, and they are, when called on to give testimony, permitted to affirm. There is no lifting the hand, and swearing by anything. Among those refusing to take the oath are the Brethren, who carefully instruct their members to adjust themselves to the teachings of James, when called on to testify in court, or before any officer authorized to administer the civil oath. By thus affirming, our members not only comply with the letter and the spirit of the New Testament, but they also keep fully within the bounds of the law.

St. Louis, Mo.

FOR some reasons the Brethren have not succeeded in building up and maintaining a congregation in St. Louis. About seventy-five years ago there was a small body of members, several miles west of the city, and a number of services were held in their community. In the eighties Bro. John Metzger, while residing at Cerro Gordo, Ill., succeeded in working up a good interest in the city, and a meetinghouse was built. For a time the outlook for a strong church was decidedly encouraging, but after a few years the work lagged, the interest died out and the house had to be sold. In those days it was not customary to appropriate money for the support of a pastor, like we are now doing, else the mission might have been continued. We believe that another effort should be made to open up a mission, with the view of building up a strong church. We have several members living in the city, and quite a number of members' children. These, with others, might be interested in a movement of the sort. We now and then receive letters, making inquiry about the Brethren church in that place. St. Louis is too large a city, and too centrally located, to be without a Brethren church.

Without the Messenger.

ONE of our evangelists went to a small congregation in the West, to hold a series of meetings, and in visiting the members from house to house, he found but one home in which the GOSPEL MESSENGER was taken and read. He says that he felt lost all the while he was engaged in his meetings in that locality, and feels quite sure that if the MESSENGER had been read in every family, more good could have been accomplished. He not only noticed a lack of zeal among the members, but they knew little of what was going on in the Brotherhood. It occurs to us that matters of this sort ought to be looked into by the District evangelists, or by the elders assembled at District Meeting. When a church becomes unconcerned about her church literature, it simply means church decadence for that congregation. It means spiritual weakness and the loss of a number of members' children to the church,—to say nothing of the loss of others. These are times when church literature has something to do in keeping up the life and spirituality of the church and her different activities.

ELIZABETHTOWN COLLEGE NOTES.

The Annual Bible Term of Elizabethtown College begins Jan. 11, 1912, and continues ten days. Eld. Galen B. Royer, of Elgin, Ill., and Eld. J. Kurtz Miller, of Brooklyn, N. Y., are booked as the leading attractions. To be assisted by Eld. Jesse Ziegler, President of the Board of Trustees, Eld. S. H. Hertzler, Treasurer of the Board of Trustees, Bro. J. H. Keller, of York County, Sister Lydia Stauffer, of the Bible Department, and Prof. H. K. Ober, Vice-president of the College. Eld. Royer will preach evangelistic sermons each evening throughout the term.

The Fall Term is rapidly approaching its close. It will terminate on Thanksgiving Day. The enrollment has been excellent, and nearly all the departments are well represented in the student body. The College work has opened especially favorably, and six students are now pursuing the College Course. Although there has been a change of teachers in the Music Department, the new teachers are already crowded with work. This Course was introduced a year ago, is well patronized. The Bible Department has an increase in enrollment this year, having among its students two young ministers. Sister Stauffer, the Bible Teacher, is conducting a College Extension Bible Class in town, in addition to her classes at the school.

The library committee has arranged a good Lecture Course for the present school year.

Eld. Galen B. Royer, Secretary of the General Mission Board, visited the College on his return from Brooklyn, recently, after having been present at the sailing of some of our missionaries. Bro. Royer spent nearly a day at the school, and delivered a missionary address to the school and friends on Monday evening, Oct. 30.

"The Eleventh Anniversary of the Founding of Elizabethtown College" will be celebrated Nov. 13 with a program of exercises appropriate to the occasion.

THE MINISTERIAL MEETING OF NEBRASKA.

The meeting convened in the Octavia church, Oct. 3. Bro. James Gish, of Holmesville, made an efficient Moderator. The following plan was the principal theme for discussion: "Would a Ministerial Board of Control, covering the following and all other related points be practical or desirable?

(a) Congregations, desiring to call ministers from other congregations, must call through the Board.

(b) Ministers, considering calls from other congregations, must confer with said Board.

(c) Churches desiring a change in overseer, outside of their congregation, should confer with said Board, giving their reasons.

To summarize very briefly, the following were the principal arguments presented in favor of the plan:

1. A Board of Control could help open closed doors in congregations where the work is not progressing.

2. Much of the future progress of the church depends on a better distribution of the ministry.

3. The Board would be a strong protection to weak churches who have secured or developed an efficient minister.

4. Sometimes, under our present system, ministers leave needy fields without anyone to take their places.

5. It would place the Board back of the change, if one were made, and thus protect the minister, making the move, from unjust criticism.

6. Wise, conservative leaders could be placed in charge of churches which are drifting worldward.

7. Hundreds of churches are presided over by incompetent elders and their progress in God's Kingdom is materially hindered.

In my judgment the following about cover the principal objections which were presented in opposition to the plan:

1. Many obstacles are in the way which would make it very difficult successfully to operate the plan.

2. Such a plan, adopted by one District, might cause more ministers to leave than could be replaced by others moving in.

3. If adopted at all, it should be the plan of the General Brotherhood.

4. Local churches, fully dominated by the Holy Spirit, are better able to direct the securing of a minister or elder than any Board of Control.

It was decided that this meeting recommend to District Conference that a committee be appointed to take this plan under advisement, and report to District Conference of 1912.

The other topics on the program were ably discussed by a number of speakers. The meeting proved an inspiration to all present. Much credit is due Bro. D. G. Wine who planned the program. Bro. A. D. Sollenberger will arrange for our next meeting. Edgar Rothrock, Sec.

MOUNT MORRIS COLLEGE.

School opened with a good attendance. The class of students is perhaps as good as one could find in any college anywhere. We have nine ministers in the student body, all of whom feel not only the need of a Bible training but also of a good literary education. Since President Miller is back, he is emphasizing the fact that for our young men and women who go into the mission field,—especially in European countries,—a thorough literary preparation is absolutely necessary. Considering the fact that missionaries and ministers of other denominations in Europe are well educated, he considers it necessary for our young men and women to compete with them in any and every condition.

Bro. M. W. Emmert, Dean of the Bible Department, spent a few days in Nebraska, at the District Sunday-school Institute, and reports deep interest in the meeting. Our students who have had work under him, and are out in active mission and ministerial work, write very encouraging letters of the Bible training they have secured at Mount Morris College, and they always have a good word for Prof. Emmert.

The work in Agriculture, this year, has settled down to something very substantial. There are three regular classes along purely agricultural lines, one of which consists of a dozen or seven college boys who asked that they be allowed to do some work in this line, and secure college credit for the same. Through a number of the friends of the school, Prof. Keltner secured contributions that are helpful in installing new and better equipment in this department.

The several departments of the college report excellent work done by the students. Especially noteworthy is the fact that students find the work in the various departments all they could possibly expect.

The management is much gratified with the College Department, for in this and in the Bible School lies the hope of Mount Morris College. Only as we, as a church, give our boys and girls a college education in our own schools, will we grow educationally. Only as we grow educationally may we hope to grow numerically and spiritually.

The college is arranging to conduct a number of Bible Institutes during the Holiday week. Three day Institutes for Sunday-school and church workers are also to be given to churches that desire the help of the Bible School during the school year. The next term begins November 15. The outlook is very good. V. Grace Neher.

NEWS FROM WEST JOHNSTOWN CHURCH, PA.

Sept. 3 Prof. Amos H. Haines, of Juniata College, Huntingdon, Pa., preached an excellent sermon in the Roxbury house in the morning. In the evening he addressed the graduates (eighteen in number) of our first teacher-training class. The presenting of the diplomas was in the hands of our elder J. F. Dietz. Teacher-training classes are now being organized in all four of our churches, and many of our young and middle-aged brethren and sisters are availing themselves of the opportunity to acquire a better knowledge of the Bible and, at the same time, prepare themselves to do better teaching in the Sunday-school.

Sunday afternoon, Oct. 1, we met in official council, to prepare the business for the regular council meeting convened on the evening of Oct. 5. Much business of importance came before this meeting, all of which was disposed of with the best of feeling. Our deacons, on their visit, found nothing but peace among our large membership.

A committee of three brethren was appointed to look after the boarding and lodging of those who will come from a distance to the first Missionary, Bible and Sunday-school Institute of Western Pennsylvania, which convenes in our church Dec. 4 to 8.

The church decided to secure Bro. G. K. Walker to take charge of the work in Morrellville as soon as arrangements can be completed. Without a dissenting voice, our present pastor, J. H. Cassady, was retained for another year. It was also decided to call four brethren to the ministry in the near future. Vernon J. Dietz was elected clerk and Bro. J. E. Blough, treasurer and corresponding clerk for 1912.

Our pastor closed a two weeks' series of meetings in our Viewmont house Oct. 7. Considering the rainy nights, the attendance and interest were good, and the membership was strengthened.

Our semiannual love feast was held Oct. 8, and was a very spiritual feast. Practically the entire church was filled with communicants. Self-examination sermons were preached in all four of our churches at 10:30 A. M., prior to the feast. Brethren Hildebrand, Howe and Mills, of the Johnstown church, were present and assisted in the meeting. Bro. Howe officiated.

Oct. 15 we had excellent rally day services in Roxbury, the children performing the greater part of the program. The same evening Bro. Brown Miller gave us an interesting sermon.

While our pastor is away, in a series of meetings (as now), Bro. L. G. Shaffer fills his appointments. Our pastor preached a number of temperance sermons over Western Pennsylvania. Eld. J. F. Dietz also preached several. R. D. 5, Johnstown, Pa., Oct. 18. Jerome E. Blough.

SADIE J. MILLER'S PARTING WORDS.

Tuesday, Oct. 24, 9 A. M., we are here at Seattle, on our good ship, which is to take us across the sea, our first stop being Yokohama, Japan. I find other missionaries on this steamer, even at this late date, much to my surprise. It seems as though many are anxious to sail on the "Minnesota," a good ship, though there are others as good, I am sure.

While in this city I had my home with Bro. C. H. Maust's family, who have accommodated most of our outgoing missionaries. They certainly give one a welcome, and you can not but feel right at home with them. I am told that while the other missionaries were here last month, Bro. Maust's had sixty people at breakfast the last morning. To country people that would not be a great many, but in the city I think it quite a generous act, indeed. With a family of seven children, all of them age but two, only those who have had the experience can fully appreciate what it means for a mother to do all the work that Sister Maust does, and then be ready to help those who come to her assistance.

We, as missionaries, as well as all interested in the cause, owe this family as well as the other brethren and sisters of Seattle a vote of thanks for the many favors they did for us. This morning Bro. C. Fitz kindly assisted me with my heavy pieces of baggage. The members have surely done much to make us comfortable while in Seattle.

On my arrival at Seattle I found quite a stack of letters and papers sent by kind friends. I intend to read them after we leave this shore. They will afford us much pleasure, I am sure. Thanks to all the dear ones in the home land for their great help and encouragement which they have given us in the work we are doing in the foreign land. I shall be back to write to all, as I would gladly do, so let this serve, in part at least, as a thankoffering for those whom I have met during the year, and from whom I have received so many kind favors and encouraging words. Sadie J. Miller.

On Board the "Minnesota," Seattle, Wash., Oct. 24.

HEBRON SEMINARY, VIRGINIA.

The current session of Hebron Seminary opened with the best enrollment yet. October of 1911 shows an enrollment of more than 25 per cent above October of 1910.

Bro. W. A. Myers, son-in-law of Bro. D. H. Zigler, and President of our school, is measuring up well. Bro. E. E. Neff, another Bridgewater boy, son of Bro. I. M. Neff is making a good impression. The other teachers are doing good work.

We miss Brother and Sister J. F. Graybill very much, but are glad that they are being used of the Lord so well in Sweden, and that they remember us at Hebron so kindly.

I regret much to be out of school; but for the sake of health and by the doctor's advice, I am taking a course of wisdom. I am still to be in touch with the school in a general field way, but on account of taking Bro. W. A Myers' place, under our District Mission Board, it becomes necessary for me to change my address to Tresslians, Va.,—for a limited time. It is hoped that not long I can return to school work again,—at least to some extent. I would be delighted to work again in the class work of Hebron Seminary, if health were to justify it.

Like our dear Brethren Wieand, Neff, etc., I must take "an off" once in a while,—especially now.

The general help, already given to our school, is proving most fruitful. Oct. 8, Dr. W. B. Stoddard, of Washington, D. C., lectured against organic secrecy. Bro. P. B. Fitzwater also gave us an excellent discourse, recently, in our chapel.

Oct. 17 Brother and Sister J. M. Blough gave us charming and helpful talks on India. Oct. 18 Bro. Blough delivered an address at chapel service.

Oct. 24 and 25, Bro. Galen B. Royer will inspire and direct our people.

Brother and Sister I. S. Long are expected to be with us in the special ten-day Bible Term, which will open Jan. 12. I. N. H. Beahm.

Hebron Seminary, Nokesville, Va., Oct. 19.

A bad temper is like a pocketful of dynamite. It is likely to bump against some object and cause a fatal explosion any time. The Great Physician has a sure cure for this malady, and his terms are reasonable.

Notes From Our Correspondents

As cold water to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country

CALIFORNIA.

Lindsay.—Eld. Isaac S. Brubaker has recently located at this place also his son Alpheus and Bro. H. M. Stutzman. This increases our number to eighteen members at this time, with prospects for others to come. We now have preaching services every Sunday, just after Sunday-school. We have two ministers, Eld. J. S. Brubaker and Eld. Alpheus Brubaker. We are all rejoicing in being so richly blessed. Our mid-week cottage prayer meetings are progressing. Nearly all the members attend them. We extend an invitation to ministers and others, who are passing through the valley, to stop off and be with us at our services, and also to take a look at this part of California. Orange picking has begun, and soon several cars of oranges will be shipped daily. Any brethren will be cheerfully given.—Sadie Finch, Lindsay, Cal., Oct. 27.

Long Beach.—Our elder, pastor, Bro. J. H. Bell, is holding revival meetings at the Pomona church, he arranged for Bro. J. Z. Gilbert, of Los Angeles, to fill the appointments of Oct. 29. Bro. Gilbert dealt out the Bread of Life to appreciative audiences both morning and evening. We certainly enjoyed talking to his excellent discourses. Our church work at this place has taken on new life lately, both in attendance and interest, as Bro. Marple's efforts are making themselves felt. Our Sunday-school has increased very materially in number. We certainly have great reason to be encouraged in our work. Several good workers have recently located in our midst, but there is still room for others. We praise the Lord for his goodness to us.—J. M. Shively, 1219 East Second Street, Long Beach, Cal., Oct. 27.

Patterson.—Bro. Jess Overholtzer, of Princeton, Cal., came to us Oct. 9, to assist us in a series of meetings. He dealt out the Bread of Life for two weeks to a large audience each time. There were no accessions to the church, but several are counting the cost. We feel that we were built up in the faith. This is a new place, and the doctrine of the Brethren is new to many in this part. Bro. Arthur Eshleman, of Modesto, Cal., has arrived here last week. We appreciate their assistance very much, as we have no Sunday-school or preaching service. We have good land here, and the place will bear inspection. Those who wish to change location can find a good home here. Where they are needed in the Master's vineyard.—Mrs. Minnie Patterson, Cal., Oct. 26.

Reedley.—Our church met at 10 A. M., and after a sermon by Eld. Isaac Brubaker five precious souls (all Sunday-school scholars) were baptized in the evening. Bro. J. W. Deardorff gave us a brief but pointed sermon on "Self-examination," after which we repaired to the water. Brethren Morris Keller and M. P. Noll were elected, and they, with their wives, were duly installed. At 7 P. M. we met again for preaching. One hundred and forty members were surrounded the Lord's tables, ranging in age from ten to ninety-one years of age. Quite a number from various other congregations. Eld. Deardorff officiated. This was our first communion, as the sisters had not had time to prepare the cup. There seemed to be a greater solemnity than we ever experienced before. Sunday morning, Oct. 22, Bro. J. W. Stenger preached for us to a full house. Our Sunday-school is progressing nicely, under the superintendence of Bro. P. H. Smith. We have one church and two elders in two children in regular attendance.—Susie Michael, Reedley, Cal., Oct. 31.

COLORADO.

Haxtun.—Bro. J. C. Groff, of Wayne, Colo., began a series of meetings for us Oct. 15, continuing two weeks. The attendance was very good for the first week, but owing to the inclement weather, but before the meetings closed the attendance and interest was good. Bro. Groff gave us some very interesting sermons. All have been encouraged and built up in the work of the Lord. Two precious souls were buried with Christ in baptism on Sunday, Oct. 29, and one on Sunday, Oct. 29. Fifteen members surrounded the Lord's table.—Maude A. Kinzie, Haxtun, Colo., Nov. 3.

McClave.—Our church met in Council Oct. 7, with Eld. W. D. Hartman in charge. Considerable business was transacted, of. A call was made for funds to meet the church expenses for the coming year, and $161.50 was raised. Any one at or passing this way are invited to give us a call.—L. Cline, McClave, Colo., Oct. 28.

ILLINOIS.

Astoria.—Oct. 15 Bro. J. H. Neher, of Hudson, Ill., began our revival at the South Fulton house and closed Oct. 29. He preached in all eighteen inspiring sermons. Many good impressions were made. Nov. 4 we expect Bro. D. L. Mohler, from Missouri, to assist us in a series of meetings. Address Ray A. Rohrbaugh, R. D. 2, Box 13, Browning, Ill., Oct. 30.

Mount Carroll.—During last month we had two of our services, Brethren P. F. Eckerle, D. D. Culler, J. R. Young, O. T. Hutchison and Joseph Bolah. These brethren fed us richly with the Bread of Heaven. One has been restored to membership since our last report. Our attendance at the services is increasing. The outlook is bright.—Mrs. Lucinda Culler, Mount Carroll, Ill., Oct. 30.

Salem.—Bro. Otho Stutsman, of Mount Vernon, Ill., began a series of meetings Oct. 15, continuing until Oct. 27. Three young people were led to the good choice and buried. The meetings closed with a good attendance and the best of attention. Bro. Stutsman's many years of service in the field made very satisfactory to all who attended the meetings.—Jacob Hershberger, Salem, Ill., Oct. 31.

INDIANA

Bachelor Run.—Our series of meetings, held at the country house by Bro. Norris, of Landess, Ind., closed Nov. 1. Two husbands and their wives were baptized.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, Ind., Nov. 2.

Rock Creek.—We met in Council Oct. 25, prior to our love feast of Oct. 28. Eld. L. L. Teeter presided. One letter was granted. Our love feast was conducted by Eld. J. Z. Gilbert and was favorable. Visiting ministers present were Elders Levi Hatsinger, Jr., Eld. Teeter and Abram Bowman. Bro. Hollinger officiated. Bro. Teeter has been with us preaching Brethren's meeting on Sunday morning, and also preached an inspiring sermon Sunday evening.—E. E. Teeter, Ind., Nov. 2.

Camden.—Our love feast, held Oct. 21, was well attended, and a spiritual feast. The visiting ministers present were Brethren M. Peddy, I. E. Wike, D. M. Byerly, T. L. Hutchison, M. Byerly and John Rogers. Bro. Peddy officiated. On Sunday morning, instead of having Sunday-school, Bro. Wike gave a talk to the children, after which Bro. J. M. Byerly was ordained to the eldership. Brethren Wike and Garber conducted the installation service. We are planning to commence with us to conduct a series of meetings.—Eva L. Whitacre, R. D. 1, Portland, Ind., Oct. 24.

Goshen (West Side).—Bro. J. S. Zimmerman, of Waterloo, Iowa, labored with us for the past three weeks in a series of meetings. Seven were buried with Christ in baptism. He preached with much power and plainness. The meetings closed with a full house.—Mrs. Osie Brumbaugh, Goshen, Ind., Oct. 31.

Laporte.—Oct. 29 Brethren L. F. Kurtz and N. B. Heeter filled the appointment at Waterford. Bro. Heeter preached at the Rose Farm house in the evening. We have organized a teacher-training class, with Sister Agnes Merchant as teacher; also a home department of the Sunday-school, with Sister W. Rose Smith as superintendent. Eld. William Hess will hold a series of meetings here in the near future.—Rachel C. Merchant, R. D. 3, Box 126, Laporte, Ind., Nov. 30.

Maple Grove.—Eld. W. T. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., began a series of meetings at this place Oct. 5, continuing two weeks. The meetings were well attended, and the interest was good. Bro. Heckman preached the Word earnestly, and in addition used many home illustrations, thereby winning the love and respect of the people. Three were received into the church by baptism last January.—Mrs. Mirtle Winnie Peltier, Point, Ind., Oct. 28.

Marion.—We held our love feast Oct. 27. It was one of the most spiritual feasts ever enjoyed at this place. About 300 hundred surrounded the Lord's tables. Visiting ministers present were Brethren Jacob Hoover, J. H. B. Shoop, D. P. Kleppinger and J. L. Mahon. Bro. Moss officiated. The next morning, Oct. 28, Bro. W. H. Hoover, pastor, will receive good addresses, which were, indeed, a feast to the soul. At the close of the services Bro. Hoover will go to Mexico, Ind., to assist for some time, requested to be anointed. In the presence of a congregation of sympathizing friends, Bro. Hoover and S. B. Blough officiated at these services. Bro. Blough remained over Sunday and preached three inspiring sermons.—Bertha J. Bowser, Marion, Ind., Oct. 30.

Notice to the Churches of Southern Indiana.—Our District Bible and Missionary Sunday-school Workers' Institute will be held at Pollis church, 57 North Germania Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., Nov. 25 to 30. Bro. W. M. Howe, of Covington, Ky., will assist Sunday-school pedagogy, and the Book of Galatians. Sister Elizabeth Howe-Bruba, who has done considerable mission work in Chicago, Brooklyn, and Pennsylvania, will teach "Soul Winning" and kindred topics. Since the Sunday-school lessons of 1912 will be from the New Testament, Eld. J. H. Moore's book will be treated by W. Carl Rarick. All are urged to attend. Bring your Bible and notebook.—Mrs. Elizabeth Bruba, Ind., Nov. 1.—S. A. Hylton, Secretary of Institute Committee, 50 N. Germania Avenue, Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 30.

Pleasant Dale.—We held our love feast Oct. 28, it being an all-day meeting. Eld. D. M. Byerly, of North Manchester, Ind., officiated in the forenoon, and Bro. D. M. Byerly addressed us in the afternoon. Dinner was served in the basement of the church, and everybody had enough. Communion was not so large as it is sometimes, we had a good meeting. Bro. J. E. Ulery, of Bluffton, Ind., was with us in the love feast and officiated at the communion service. Bro. Ulery will be with us for some time, assisting in the work.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, using "The Acts of the Apostles" as a textbook. We hope that much good may be done through his efforts.—Lizzie Baumgartner, R. D. 3, Monroe, Ind., Oct. 30.

Turkey Creek.—Bro. C. S. Garber is assisting us in a series of meetings at this place. Two precious souls have been born into the kingdom, up to the present time. Many more are under the Holy Spirit's call. Bro. Byerly, of North Manchester, Ind., preached in the forenoon, and Bro. D. M. Byerly addressed us in the afternoon. Dinner was served in the basement of the church, and everybody had enough. Communion was not so large as it is sometimes, we had a good meeting. Bro. J. E. Ulery, of Bluffton, Ind., was with us in the love feast and officiated at the communion service. Bro. Ulery will be with us for some time, assisting in the work.—Mrs. Ida Hoffman, using "The Acts of the Apostles" as a textbook. We hope that much good may be done through his efforts.—Lizzie Baumgartner, R. D. 3, Monroe, Ind., Oct. 30.

We hope that much good may be done through his efforts.—Lizzie Baumgartner, R. D. 3, Monroe, Ind., Oct. 30.

Whitko church met in council Oct. 27. Our elder, Bro. A. G. Crosswhite, presided. The next evening we held our love feast, assisted by Bro. Wright, of Silver Lake. Officiating. A goodly number surrounded the Lord's table. A very visible power was felt during the feast. The sisters had an excellent sermon. Our series of meetings, to be conducted by Bro. Wright, will begin Nov. 4, and will last in November.—Lelah Wall, R. D. 30, Clarkshill, Ind., Oct. 29.

IOWA.

Des Moines Valley.—We held our love feast Oct. 7. The elder was present, and also a number of visitors from Wichita, Iowa. The church was left without any outside ministerial help. Bro. S. G. Lehman preached a sermon for us at Jefferson Mathis. The Brethren report a very spiritual feast. A number of visitors were present at the communion feast with them. Bro. W. D. Grove, of South English, Iowa, had been engaged to hold a series of meetings, and to be present at the love feast, but on account of the washing out of the street car strike in Des Moines, he could not get to the feast in time. Bro. Grove arrived Oct. 8, and commenced his meetings with power. His wife was with him to lead in the singing services. We did wonderful work in the way of revival meetings, and the members are much encouraged.—W. E. Wolf, Avalon, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Fairview.—We held our love feast Oct. 28, which was well attended. Bro. Peter Brower, of South English, Iowa, officiated and preached for us Sunday morning and evening. Three came out on the Lord's side and were baptized in the afternoon.—Mrs. Ella Hoffman, Fairview, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Fredericksburg.—Bro. Wm. Lichty, of Waterloo, Iowa, began a series of meetings in the Baptist church at this place Oct. 21. The attendance was fair, and one was born into the kingdom. We held our love feast Oct. 28, in the Brethren church.—Pearl Hoffman, Fredericksburg, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Indian Creek.—The new church of the Brethren, which was recently completed at this place, was dedicated. A good sermon was present at all three of the services held during the day. Eld. Noah Hutchison, of Ottumwa, Iowa, preached the dedicatory sermon, which was greatly enjoyed by all. The evening services were also conducted by Eld. Deardorff. The sermon at 2 P. M. was delivered by Eld. W. R. Deeter, of Adel, Iowa. The offering amounted to $563.60. The Brethren have built a splendid little church, in an ideal location, and they have every reason to feel pleased with what they have accomplished. The building is 30 by 50 feet, with a seating capacity of about every respect. A good furnace has been installed, and the room is lighted by gas. The church building is also splendidly provided, with a seating capacity of 225. The total cost of the property is $3,500, of this amount, except $600, was been raised. The indebtedness, however, was provided for in building committee, so that the church was dedicated free from incumbrance. Bro. John Robinson is elder in charge of church by Eld. Deardorff, are attended with intense interest. The church is among us, assisting in the song service.—Rebecca M. Enfield, Menlo, Iowa, Oct. 30.

Salem.—Our series of meetings, conducted by Brethren John Bowser and Ira Hoover, closed Sunday evening. Interest and attendance were good throughout the meeting. While there were no additions to the church, many were encouraged and others were near the kingdom. We held our council Oct. 25, owing to the pressing work of the series of meetings. Brethren Bowser, of Canton, Ill., while on his way to Carthage, Mo., to visit his daughter, was with us in the morning and preached for us. We appreciated his visit.—Etna M. Wray, Prescott, Iowa, Oct. 30.

South Keokuk.—Oct. 7 Bro. Geo. Burgin began a series of meetings at this place, and continued until Nov. 1. He held forth the Word most forcibly. As a direct result of the meetings eleven were received into the church by baptism. Oct. 21 we held our love feast, which was a spiritual occasion. Not many visiting members were present, but there was ample representation. Bro. D. F. Miller officiated.—D. F. Shelly, Ollie, Iowa, Nov. 2.

KANSAS.

Bury Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 21. We were pleased to have quite a number of members from adjoining churches with us. Visiting ministers present were Bro. Lefew, of Portis, Kans., Bro. Jarboe, of Quinter, Kans., Bro. Myers, of Lowell, Kans., and Bro. Stewart, of Belleville, Kans. Bro. Stewart officiated.—Emma J. Modlin, Burr Oak, Kans., Oct. 31.

Hutchinson.—We have commenced our meetinghouse on the corner of Eighth and Ford Streets. The concrete is all in. The house is to be 28x44, with a basement, and two class rooms added. The work will be pushed with all the speed we can command. The largest amount of the funds has already been raised for the house, and the work on the frame is finished. Please continue your prayers in behalf of this building.—A. B. Lady, secretary of Harper Building Committee, Kans., Oct. 28.

Parsons.—Bro. Chas. Yearout began a series of meetings here Oct. 8, laboring earnestly for two weeks. The members received much spiritual strength, as the Word was preached with power. Seven were added to the church by baptism. We held our love feast Oct. 21. On Sunday morning Bro. Yearout preached from the communion table, and communed at the church at noon. In the afternoon the Christian Workers' Society rendered a good program.—Cora Hall, Hall, Kans., Ave., Parsons, Kans., Oct. 28.

Washington Creek.—Bro. Ernest F. Sherfy came to us Oct. 8 and conducted a series of meetings for us, which closed Oct. 28. The interest and attendance were good. We feel very much encouraged over the work. Seven were received on the Lord's side and were baptized. One was reclaimed.—H. W. Behrens, Lone Star, Kans., Nov. 1.

MARYLAND.

Broadfording.—Our love feast, held Oct. 28 and 29, was largely attended by members present from adjoining congregations. Bro. Victor Long, of Hagerstown, Md., officiated. On Sunday morning, after Sunday-school, Bro. Cabel Long, of Boonsboro, Md., gave us a splendid sermon to a full house.—Nannie A. Martin, R. D. 1, Hagerstown, Md., Oct. 31.

Frederick.—We held our love feast Saturday evening, Oct. 28, at which time the report of the visiting brethren was given. Our love feast was a good one. Eld. Wm. Hess, at 2 P. M. Our elder was with us on this occasion, and urged us to be faithful in the coming work. Let us study the Bible from our country.—John W. Wolfe, 115 East Seventh Street, Frederick, Md., Oct. 30.

MICHIGAN.

Black River.—Our love feast was held Oct. 15. Our elder, Bro. S. M. Smith,was with us and officiated. It was a very spiritual feast. Many visiting members were present, all of our dear ones were absent. Two of our aged sisters were anointed prior to our love feast. Our love feast and Sunday-school work is moving along nicely.—Audie Fisher, R. D. 2, Bangor, Mich., Nov. 31.

Grand Rapids Mission.—Oct. 1 wife, son and I came to this city, to take charge of the work here, which has been in progress for nearly two years. The mission is a well-organized little band of workers, willing and ready to help to forward the kingdom of Christ. Oct. 22 the band of workers enjoyed a glorious meeting, having forty-three in the Sunday-school. Two members of Eld. Lee's family filled the house for preaching, after which an aged sister was restored. Another family has purchased a home, a few miles out of the city, moved in, and attended Sunday-school. Several members to our number, making in all, eighteen members living in and around the city. We have rented a hall in the business city with a population of 125,000, and many handsome buildings. While visiting in some of the homes we find that the great furniture strike, which our city has experienced this summer, has placed many in dire need of the necessities of life. It is claimed by the city rescue workers that already thousands are looking for help. What will it be when winter comes? Churches desiring to help us in the work here, such as carpet, heating, bedding, shoes, etc., may send same to the unders'gned, and we will see that they are properly distributed. Our Thanksgiving for Thanksgiving and Christmas will also be appreciated and cared for.—Mrs. Ella Hoffman, Fairview, Iowa, Oct. 30.—Mrs. L. Minaker, 302 Sutton Avenue, Grand Rapids, Mich., Oct. 30.

MINNESOTA.

Worthington.—The church at this place enjoyed another love feast Oct. 21. Eld. J. H. Moore officiated, of. declated. A number of visiting members were with us. Two deacons were set apart to serve in our services.—Minnie Methven Alonzo Standafer and Harm Rogers. They were duly installed. One letter of membership was received. Bro. Hood preached for us again on Sunday morning and evening to appreciative audiences.—Minnie Schechter, Worthington, Minn., Nov. 3.

MISSOURI.

Fairview.—Bro. S. R. Thompson came to our church and labored earnestly for two weeks, and came forward for baptism, and Christians were encouraged to press onward. We held our love feast Oct. 28, in our spacious house of worship. We will meet next Wednesday night for prayer meeting.—Angie Hylton, Jay, Mo., Oct. 31.

Mound church began a series of meetings Oct. 8, with Eld. W. T. Ackerman in charge, which closed Oct. 22. Filled each night with an interested and attentive crowd. One came forward and was baptized. Many good impressions were made. Brother are laboring in the vicinity, and hope that they may get decide for Christ. The meetings closed Oct. 23.—Bettie Ackerman, Mound, Mo., Oct. 31.

Nevada.—Our church met in council Nov. 2, at 7:30 P. M. Eld. Lester Hutchison presided. Considerable business was disposed of. We have learned that it takes very clche and careful work to have a church house in this city. Bro. Bright and I have many allurements in the city that are not in the country. The church solicitors' report was read. The amount received was $1,850, leaving a balance of $1,000 to be raised. Expected to raise by Jan. 1, 1912. We feel that the Lord has blessed us wonderfully. We have increased in the last year fifteen members, no minister, and a debt of $375 on our churchhouse. Now we have a membership of seventy-five members, and only $75 church debt.—Mary White Smith, 230 North Oak Street, Nevada, Mo., Nov. 3.

Osceola church met in council Oct. 14, with Eld. T. J. Simmons presiding. The visiting brethren reported all the members in a good working condition. Arrangements made for our love feast, Oct. 21. Bro. L. B. Tiry officiated. Other ministers present were Bro. J. C. Bright and A. Bridgewater. We had a very enjoyable meeting. We all felt that it was good to be in the house of the Lord. We commenced a 2 weeks's series of meetings prior to the feast. As a result of the meetings two children and one wife were baptized, and a good seed was sown, which, we trust, will bring forth fruit in the future.—Elizabeth Lyon, Lowry City, Mo., Oct. 31.

Shoal Creek.—We met in council Nov. 2, at 2 P. M. Angarbright presided. The church visit was reported, and the members were found to be in love and union. We decided to hold our love feast Nov. 24.—Virgie Angarbright, Fairview, Mo., Nov. 4.

Washington Creek.—We just closed a successful series of meetings at this place, with twelve conversions. We are now in the Rockingham congregation, to remain a few weeks. After the meetings we met in council and elected Bro. Bethany Bible School again. By the beginning of the winter term, Nov. 21, we expect to be in Chicago. We find a live church here, numbering about 100 communicants, with about thirty young members. Prospects are bright for good meetings. Ed. S. E. Shirky is the elder here.—E. F. Sherfy, Rockingham, Mo., Nov. 1.

MONTANA.

Medicine Lake.—We held our love feast Oct. 22. Bro. W. W. Keltner, of Williston, N. Dak., preached a sermon for us in the forenoon. A collection of $24.61 was taken for missions. At 2 P. M. an interesting children's program was rendered. At 7:30 we held a Christian Workers' Meeting, after which Bro. Keltner preached another sermon. He was accompanied by Sister Keltner. It was a busy day for this church.—Ezra Flory, Medicine Lake, Nov. 3.—And again only to say, The weather, at present, is a little cooler.—Katie E. Keller, Enterprise, Mont., Oct. 23.

NEBRASKA.

Enders.—We have just passed through a very sad experience in the loss of Bro. Fred A. Hall, who died of diabetes, Oct. 26, aged twenty-two years, three months and six days. He was active in the ministry in Lanark, Ill., for several years, and gave every promise of a fruitful career. The writer has been asked to preach for nearly every funeral, but this one was the first worker called to the ministry. He was a young man of exceptional qualities. His funeral was one of the largest ones we have ever had in this district schools dismissed for the occasion. The field is so large and so needy, and our prayer for workers has been so long and so fervent, that the church grieves deeply over what seems to us an unfortunate loss. Will the Lord of the harvest not hasten to relieve us? Will He not remember the depleted ranks of the frontier, and inspire the Lord of the harvest for more hands to send depleted ranks? No richer field, nor one more needy can be found anywhere. Many souls are growing anxious, and unpreached shelves are waiting for lack of reapers.—David G. Wine, Enders, Nebr., Nov. 1.

NORTH CAROLINA.

Brummett Creek.—We held our love feast Oct. 7. We had a pleasant and spiritual feast. Bro. P. D. Reed, of Limestone, Tenn., and Bro. Samuel Bowers, of Greeneville, Tenn., were with us. Bro. P. D. Reed officiated. Nearly ninety members surrounded the tables. Oct. 8 we had a short but very interesting sermon, delivered by Bro. S. Bowman,, to a large and attentive audience. Oct. 28 and 29 Bro. J. H. Moyers, of Illinois, and Bro. Samuel Bowman, of Jonesboro, Tenn., were with us. Bro. J. H. Moyers delivered a short but very interesting sermon, and a Bible Laid talk, to an audience of nearly four hundred. His efforts were highly appreciated by those present. We feel that the church at this place has been greatly strengthened.—Cassie Griffith, Relief, N. C., Oct. 30.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Berthold.—Our church met in special council Oct. 21, with full two-thirds present. As our elder is living in Jonesboro, Tenn., we elected Eld. D. T. Landis, of Minot, N. Dak., as overseer of this church for the coming year. Bro. Jesse Sarver, our former assistant agent; the writer, church clerk and correspondent for the following year. Five letters of membership were granted.—Minnie Bessie Stong, Box 212, Berthold, N. Dak., Oct. 31.

Cando.—We held our annual Harvest Meeting Oct. 15 at the Rock church. We had a very excellent time. Eld. J. D. Kesler preached the harvest sermon, and Bro. E. N. Huffman, of Bradenbaugh, N. Dak., spoke to the Sunday-school. The offerings amounted to more than $100. The harvest and threshing have been late this year, but we are pleased with the work moved along slowly, on account of so much cloudy and wet weather. We are behind the revival meetings on the ever-smiling Providence, and the season is closing with sunshine and increased happiness. Our weather is cool, the ground frozen and the sky is clear. We have had a spell of such weather about all of the year's crops will have been garnered into the bins.—M. F. Lichty, Zion, N. Dak., Oct. 30.

OHIO.

Cottage Grove.—Bro. Dorsey Hodgden, of Huntington, Ind., began a few meetings at this place Oct. 15, and is continuing each evening. The meetings closed Oct. 29, with a large crowd and the best of attention. As a result of the meetings five were added to the church.—Ethel Flinn, Cottage Grove, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Covington.—The weather being unfavorable, last Lord's Day, our workers were disappointed, as all had hoped for a pleasant day. However, we had but an attendance at Sunday-school, and the collection amounted to $28.39. The leaders encouraged all to look for a larger attendance next Lord's day.—Bro. Geo. W. Flory preached in the evening to a crowded house on the subject, "What Shall the End Be?" The subject on the previous Sunday night was, "The Incarnation." These Sunday-evening services are attracting large audiences, and good results are following. One came forward Sunday, and many more were deeply impressed by the truths so forcibly presented by the brethren.—Elizabeth Flory, Covington, Ohio, Nov. 4.

Deshler.—Our revival meetings, conducted by Bro. C. A. Wright, of Pontiac, Ohio, began Sept. 24 and closed Oct. 15. Our love feast was held Sept. 30. Bro. Wright labored faithfully with us, but few members are to be found. The attendance was good. There were two accessions to the church, one of them a Sunday-school scholar, and the other a member of a family.—Esther Dishong, Deshler, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Dickey Ridge.—T. S. Mohler is holding a tent in Bro. W. A. Wiley, of Ashland, Ohio, has been filling the pulpit at this place, preaching very able and inspiring sermons on Sunday day morning. Oct. 22, Bro. David R. McKee, of Smithville, Ohio, preached a splendid sermon for us. On Saturday evening, Nov. 4, Bro. H. C. Early, of Lima, Ohio, will fill the protracted meeting at this place. We will hold our love feast Nov. 12.—Mrs. Ida Helm, Ashland, Ohio, Nov. 4.

Donnels Creek.—An enjoyable love feast was held at the country house Oct. 28. About fifty members from other congregations were present. Visiting ministers present were Brethren J. F. Brubaker, E. S. Ikenberry, Aaron Cox, D. A. Crawford Peters, Isaac Beery and O. S. Yount. Bro. Brubaker officiated. Sister Isaac Beery, of Canton, Ohio, was with us. Good attendance in the afternoon, and Bro. Joseph Studebaker, of Flora, Ind., led the services in the evening. Bro. Aaron Cox, assisting Bro. Levi Minnich, of Greenville, Ohio, gave a talk to the children. A collection of $17.20 was taken for the mission at Springfield, Ohio, after which Bro. Filbrun addressed us. Bro. Blessing preached for us in the evening. We expect Bro. J. A. D. Cooper, of Peebles, Ohio, to conduct a few meetings for us, beginning Nov. 5. The singing class will be conducted by Sister Cox at the New Carlisle church, assisted with two evenings at the country house.—Elsie Winget, R. D. 1, Box 7, Springfield, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Green Spring.—Bro. A. S. Workman, of Loudonville, Ohio, came Oct. 9, to labor with us in a series of meetings, and gave us nineteen well-delivered sermons. One young man, a Sunday-school teacher, accepted Christ and was baptized. The meetings closed Oct. 25. Oct. 26 we had our love feast. We had with us our elder, Bro. S. H. Dickey, and Eld. G. S. Straubaugh. Thirty-nine partook of the sacred emblems. Bro. Straubaugh officiated. Eld. L. H. Dickey remained with us over Sunday and gave us an excellent sermon.—Mrs. J. H. Painter, Old Fort, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Kimmell.—Our churchhouse in the Sugar Creek congregation, Allen Co., Ohio, situated on the Western Ohio Traction Line, seven miles northeast of Lima, and three miles southwest of Pandora, Ohio, will be dedicated Nov. 19. Bro. H. C. Early, of Virginia, will preach the dedicatory sermon. There will be an all-day meeting on Saturday preceding, with a communion service in the evening.—I. W. Byerly, Lima, Ohio, Nov. 4.

Lower Stillwater.—Our lovefeast, held Oct. 28 and 29, was largely attended. Visiting ministers present were Brethren Jesse Smith, Jesse Brumbaugh, Alfred Kieplinger, Norman Conover and Russel Wenger. The services began at 2 P. M. Bro. Jesse Brumbaugh delivered an interesting sermon. Bro. John Smith officiated at the communion service. A number of visiting members helped to make the meeting enjoyable. On Sunday morning we held a children's meeting, after which Brethren Wenger and Conover gave us a talk. During the collection of $12.53 was taken for the benefit of the Orphanage at Greenville, Ohio. Since our last report one has been received by baptism. Last evening we closed a series of meetings held at the home of Sister Lightner, who has been confined to her bed for several months with rheumatism. Bro. Lacock's table.—Maude Etter, R. D. 1, Clayton, Ohio, Oct. 28.

Middle Creek.—Our love feast was held Oct. 7. About 225 surrounded the Lord's tables. Eld. J. O. Garst officiated. Other visiting brethren present were Brethren Jesse Delaney, Wm. Minnich, Moses Hollinger, Geo. Stump and Henry Eby. On Sunday we had a basket meeting at this place. Bro. Wine installed into the ministry, he having been called to this office Sept. 9. Eld. Wm. Minnich conducted the installation service, after which the children's meeting was conducted by Eld. J. O. Garst. A collection of $11.80 was taken for the Juniata Temperance Committee. On the evening of Oct. 8 our series of meetings began at the Castine house, continuing over Sunday-day. The meetings closed Oct. 22, with a large attendance and good interest. Bro. Helsey delivered a number of sermons very much appreciated by those present. Our dear brother labored earnestly for the salvation of souls. As a result of his efforts, and the prayers of God's people, five were added to the church by baptism.—Mrs. Manchester, West Manchester, Ohio, Oct. 30.

Toledo Mission.—Oct. 21 Bro. Bixler came to us, while on his way from Bryan, Ohio, where he held a series of meetings. He preached for us Sunday-day and Sunday night. Bro. Bixler, illustrated by a Bible chart. We enjoyed his presence and his sermons. The attendance was very good, and that all in attendance were blessed spiritually. We are still earnestly laboring for the salvation of souls, and would be glad to have a minister locate among us, to keep up the appointments regularly.—Mabel Kaser, 628 Leonard Street, Toledo, Ohio, Oct. 31.

Upper Stillwater.—Our church met in council Oct. 21, prior to our love feast. Our elder, Bro. Jesse Sarver, was present. The visiting brethren reported the members to be sound in the faith and working harmoniously. All reports from the church. One letter was received and three were granted. We elected a temperance committee, consisting of both brethren and sisters. We decided to secure Bro. Conover, of Southern Ohio, to conduct a singing class for us. Arrangements were made for our love feast, Oct. 28 and 29. Bro. Jesse Brumbaugh, Bro. Hollinger, I. J. Rosenberger, D. D. Wine, Geo. W. Flory and Lawrence Flory were present. Bro. Jesse Brumbaugh assisted by Bro. I. J. Rosenberger. We had a very spiritual feast, attended by a large number. Brethren Jesse Brumbaugh and Lawrence Kreider remained with us for the Sabbath services. Bro. Jesse Brumbaugh preached the harvest sermon to view lesson, after which he gave us an interesting sermon from Mark 16: 18. Bro. Kreider also gave a few brief remarks.—Ella Cable, Bradford, Ohio, Oct. 29.

OKLAHOMA.

Pleasant Plains church held a love feast Oct. 28. Thirty-eight members were present. Visiting brethren and sisters present were Brethren Isaac Miller, Joseph Glick and Christian Hoover, Sr., Miller officiated. Good attendance. Business and the incident weather, a good many could not be present.—Hulda Prentice, R. 3, Aline, Okla., Nov. 6.

OREGON.

Newberg.—We expect Bro. Andrew Hutchison to hold a two weeks' series of meetings here, beginning Nov. 13. The meeting will close a few days before Dec. 1.—Sarah A. Van Dyke, Newberg, Oregon, Oct. 26.

PENNSYLVANIA.

Albright church met in council Sept. 30, with Bro. James Brumbaugh presiding. The following evening Bro. Levi Hollinger, of Lower Stillwater, Ohio, came and began a series of meetings with us. The attendance at these meetings was good, and much interest was taken in the services by the members and congregation. We held our love feast Oct. 8. Bro. Holsinger officiated. The meetings closed Oct. 15, with a large crowd in attendance, considered spiritually by these meetings.—Scott Johnson, Roaring Spring, Pa., Nov. 1.

Dunnings Creek.—Our church has arranged to hold a series of meetings at the Point House, beginning Nov. 11, to be conducted by Bro. Wm. Beery, of Johnstown, Pa. We are to open in number, and the field is much in need of workers. Our Sunday-school is doing good work, and the Home Mission department is still growing. We hope to be able to place a Bible in every family in our district.—Mrs. Lizzie A. Miller, Wolfsburg, Pa., Oct. 29.

Elk Lick.—Our council convened in the afternoon of Oct. 21, with Bro. Kline presiding. Considerable business was transacted. Seven letters of membership were granted. In the evening we had a short but interesting meeting, after which Bro. G. E. Yoder, pastor of the Summit Mills congregation, Pa., delivered a very able sermon. Oct. 22 we had the same evening, the semiannual love feast was observed. About seventy-five members were present, and we had indeed a spiritual feast. Bro. Egan officiated.—Oliver Hollinger Egan, Elk Lick, Pa., Oct. 30.

Elk Lick (Second Brethren Church (Twenty-sixth and Lehigh Avenue.)—Oct. 26 we held our love feast. We had a very spiritual meeting. Eld. J. H. Brumbaugh, after a brief meeting, the wife of our pastor, Bro. Arthur J. Culler, was baptized. Our letter of membership was presented to the church.—Mrs. 3229 Fifth Street, Philadelphia, Pa., Oct. 31.

Greensburg.—Since our last report three dear souls have been added to our number by baptism, and three by letter. Our Sunday-school has grown nicely. A number of congregations in our district, organized in accordance with the privileges given by District Meeting, have been solicited for funds to build churchhouses, and the sum of $1,000 has been received are being used in the work now in progress. If the work progresses as it has the past summer, we will dedicate before the end of this year. We are thankful for the funds which are now in the treasury.—Bro. Wm. Beery's place of location will be announced in the Messenger columns later.—M. J. Brougher, 126 Washington Street, Greensburg, Pa., Nov. 4.

Harrisburg.—Oct. 29 we observed children's meeting, and, next day, had our love feast. Both occasions were well observed with several selections by the Mayer quartette, of Palmyra, Pa. These selections were rendered Sunday. Bro. Ober, our District Sunday-school Secretary, gave us an address. Our love feast was well attended and spiritually blessed. Quite a number of visiting brethren and sisters were with us. The following ministers were with us: Bro. S. Z. Witmer, of Elizabethtown, Pa., Bro. H. F. Lightner, of Gettysburg, Pa., Bro. C. L. Baker, of East Berlin, Pa., Bro. J. L. Weibley, of Dials, Pa., Brethren Jacob Miller and Ira M. Hart, of Manchanicsburg, Pa. Bro. C. L. Baker officiated. Our revival meetings will begin Dec. 3, in charge of Brethren Jesse Cassady, of Johnstown, Pa. Our missionary, Bertha Homer, is obliged to remain at home because of the illness and account of ill health. After recuperating she hopes to take a course at Bethany Bible School.—Etten Peterman, 402 Crescent Street, Harrisburg, Pa., Nov. 1.

Indian Creek.—Sept. 23 our congregation met in council, with Elders J. A. Buchtel and Jasper Hutchison in attendance. After the general business had been transacted, the members voted for two ministers and three deacons, which resulted in no election for a minister, but Brethren Eli Frantz, Wm. Barnes and Benj. Keefer were chosen as deacons. The same evening Bro. E. F. Nedrow, of Norristown, Pa., began a series of meetings, continuing until Oct. 7, when we closed with a love feast. We had good services, considering the inclement weather. One was baptized. On the evening of Oct. 1, following the examination service, the members were again asked to vote for two ministers, resulting in choosing Brethren Jacob Hunsberger and J. Lloyd Nedrow. Both have not yet been installed. On Sunday morning our Sunday-school took up a collection of $4 for the benefit of our missionary in Malta, Sister Lilian Ashman. She is supported by the Sunday-schools of Western Pennsylvania.—Irwin R. Fletcher, Jones Mills, Pa., Nov. 1.

Marsh Creek.—Bro. H. M. Stover, of Waynesboro, Pa., began a series of meetings in the Cedar Grove church, Oct. 15, and continued two weeks. We had a fairly good attendance. The members were encouraged to work and the gospel was preached with might. Bro. Stover and wife returned to their home in Waynesboro, Pa., Oct. 29. Bro. J. W. Longenecker, of Palmyra, Pa., expects to begin a series of meetings at the Falling Spring church, Nov. 5.—Mrs. Jennie M. Lightner, Gettysburg, Pa., Nov. 1.

Norristown.—We had a love feast on the evening of Dec. 19. Our elder, Bro. J. B. Shisler, presided. One letter was granted. We extended a call to Bro. E. F. Nedrow to labor with the Christian Workers' Meeting, for the coming year. Bro. E. F. Nedrow was elected as our church correspondent. Arrangements were made for holding our love feast Dec. 2. Much other business came before us and was disposed of.—Hattie M. Nedrow, 127 George Street, Norristown, Pa., Nov. 1.

Spring Run.—We had a two weeks' series of meetings, conducted by Bro. Jesse Ebersole, of Illinois, beginning Jan. 8. He preached strong gospel sermons, and the church is strengthened and built up. Seven were added since the last close of the meetings, Oct. 21, we held our love feast. It was a pleasant occasion. The house was crowded.—Lawrence Rubie, McVeytown, Pa., Nov. 1.

TENNESSEE.

Jonesboro.—Bro. D. M. Miller, of Mount Morris, Ill., gave us two lectures at this place. We had a fairly good attendance, and the congregations were very much enthused over the lectures. Bro. Miller is a veteran in the field of God and Palestine, explaining the conditions of the country, as they exist at the present time, very clearly to the understanding of both the Old and New Testament prophecies. His description of the country and its inhabitants will help one to a new strength and encouragement in our Christian life. Quite a number of people testified to the fact that Bro. Miller's lectures were the best they ever heard along that line. May the Lord bless and keep our brother, so that he may return to us and to many more.—Laurence Lyon, Jonesboro, Tenn., Nov. 4.

Pleasant Valley.—It was indeed a feast to our hungry souls to have Bro. D. L. Miller with us Oct. 28 and 29. He lectured at night and preached on Sunday day. On Sunday an audience spell-bound. When he remarked: "I am taking up too much time," the members of the church beg you to continue. And after services several persons said: "I could have listened until midnight and not have grown tired." We sincerely regret that his time was so limited.—Anna M. Diehl, Jonesboro, Tenn., Oct. 31.

VIRGINIA

Mill Creek.—Bro. D. K. Clapper, of Meyersdale, Pa., began a series of meetings at this place Oct. 7. The meetings continued three weeks. Bro. Clapper is a faithful worker for Christ. We held our love feast Oct. 22. Besides Bro. Clapper, there were with us Bro. Jesse Ebersole, Bro. Milton B. Royer and four members from the India Mission field.—Bro. M. M. Bingey, Bro. I. S. Long and Bro. J. H. Long. It was an impressive and spiritual feast. The day following the love feast, Bro. Ebersole started on for our mission for us.—Pearl M. Shaver, North River, Va., Oct. 31.

Sangerville.—Bro. I. W. Miller, of Singer Glen, Va., began a series of meetings in the Sangerville congregation, Augusta house, Oct. 15. The meetings continued each evening until Oct. 29, with large crowds and good interest, when the tent blewdown. The meetings closed with a crowded house. Good interest was manifested. Two were baptized. Christian Hirters were deeply impressed, and we hope that much good will yet result. We had a very profitable Sunday-school, which was considered at the same place, by the Sunday-school children and others. Prof. M. A. Good and Sister Sallie Holsinger, of Bridgewater College, rendered valuable service.—Annie M. Miller, R. D. 2, Bridgewater, Va., Oct. 31.

Shenandoah.—Bro. Wine in calling on Our Home Mission Board is to be the finance committee. Sister Edna Wilkinson was chosen membership clerk. The collection for the first Sunday in November is to be given for educational work in Bridgewater College. The next council to hold at Linville Creek, where the first of the year. The financial report was read and accepted; membership dues paid and unpaid were also read and accepted. We will have a Sunday-school Institute, giving Day, at 4 P. M.—Sister E. P. Steffey, R. CORRESPONDENCE

MY FIRST DISTRICT MEETING IN KANSAS.

On the evening of Oct. 14 it was my pleasure, in company with other brethren, to arrive in the city of Newton, Kans., to attend the District Meeting of Southwestern Kansas. This meeting consisted of preaching, Sunday-school, Christian Workers' Band, Ministerial, Educational and District Conference Meetings.

It is not my purpose to give a report of these meetings, but simply to refer to a few of the things that specially im pressed me.

The sermon on "Home" was of special importance and was an inspiration to every home maker present and, we trust, will be far-reaching in its benefits.

The union between our church and schools was emphasized, and a better feeling and more cooperation will be the inevitable result. The president of McPherson College gave us the following suggestive definition of education: "Meditation + Dedication = Education."

The mothers and daughters of this District have been holding an interesting series of these meetings, but the fathers and sons got no benefits, only where a wife, mother, daughter or sister attended and carried the inspirations home. At this meeting the brethren assembled together and organized a "Fathers' and Sons' Meeting."

The social side of the various gatherings was excellent. We were not specially rushed from one meeting to another, and thus we had time to form acquaintance with each other.

This was my first experience at a meeting of this kind in the State, and I was impressed with the excellent spirit that prevailed.

Bloom, Kans., Oct. 23.

MARTIN CREEK, ILLINOIS.

Bro. W. T. Heckman, of Cerro Gordo, Ill., began a series of meetings here Sept. 16, which continued until Oct. 1 with good interest, considering the inclemency of the weather a part of the time. One was baptized Sept. 17.

We held our love feast Sept. 30. Members from Mount Vernon, Big Creek and La Place were present with us. Our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, of Liberty, Ill., arrived Sept. 25 and remained with us until after the feast. Eld. S. S. Miller and wife, of La Place, Ill., and another minister, Bro. G. O. Stutsman, our missionary at Mount Vernon, arrived Sept. 28, and also attended our love feast. Oct. 1 was a very rainy day, and the audience was small but attentive. Eld. S. S. Miller preached at 2 and at 7 P. M.

Sept. 26 we met in council with our elder, Bro. J. W. Harshbarger, presiding. The report of the church visit was given, and preparations for the love feast were made. Our new elder in charge was selected for another year, as the regular business attended to. Two letters of membership were granted. Brethren A. B. Hollinger and S. S. Scrogum were elected as our delegates to District Meeting; Bro. J. J. Scrogum and Sister Lydia Leinard, alternates. Our Sunday-school was reorganized, to continue until April 1, 1912.

Our Christian Workers' Meetings, held each Sunday evening, and our song service, held each Tuesday evening, are moving along with as much interest as can be expected, and yet there is room for improvement.

We have just experienced a feast of good things, and we hope all are ready to be submissive and obedient to the teachings of the Bible, and willing to engage in every good work for the Master.

J. J. Scrogum.

LONG LAKE, MICHIGAN.

The work at this place is progressing very nicely. The attendance at our Sunday services is very good, except on stormy days; then the attendance drops to about thirty. We have very little opposition toward our work at this place, considering the denominations represented. Most of the church people are Catholics and Lutherans, but a few of our Sunday-school scholars come from homes of other denominations. The attendance at our Sunday-school is very regular, considering the kind of weather we have been having.

Oct. 15 a part of the members of our Sunday-school took a drive six and one-half miles south of this place to another schoolhouse, where our pastor has been requested to hold preaching service. Another denomination is holding a Sunday-school at this house. We arrived in time for their services, after which we all listened to a sermon by our minister. The attendance was very good. Forty-six persons were in attendance. Our brother preached the Word with power at this place, and we hope that some good will result from it.

This is the second time we have been called to hold services near this place. If some of our Brethren would come and live in this locality, it might be the means of starting a great work for the Master. Surely, this is one of God's blessed opportunities for some one to fulfill the command, "Go ye."

Last Sunday, our pastor being absent, Bro. Ryley, of Onekama, Mich., preached for us. He gave us a very inspiring sermon. There were not many in attendance, on account of the inclement weather, but those present enjoyed his sermon very much.

MOUNT MORRIS, ILLINOIS.

The inmates of the Old People's Home at this place, being equal as all normal Christians are, to participate in the ordinances of the Lord's house, were granted the privilege of engaging in another love feast Oct. 22. At this meeting thirty members, including the eighteen inmates of the Home, surrounded the Lord's tables, and engaged in a spiritual service together. Bro. William Buckley, a student in the college here, officiated, assisted by Eld. M. S. Newcomer and others.

It was quite an inspiration to us, as younger members, to come in contact with these dear, aged soldiers of the cross, and especially to when we realize what a joy it was to them again to observe the ordinances of God's church. The invitation was mutual, for these brethren and sisters, who are now past the active stage of life, were inspired when they realized that those younger in years are interested enough in them to join them in their services. Thus the meeting was a spiritual benefit and uplift to all present. The superintendent of the Home, Bro. Elmer Book, assisted by his wife, had made ample preparation for the feast, so the meeting progressed quietly, thus allowing the spiritual part of the services to predominate.

Since the last similar service, held here last spring, two of the inmates have passed to their reward, which fact was presented to us at this meeting, and this tended to increase the solemnity of the occasion, as it caused us to examine ourselves closely, to learn if we were prepared, should we be summoned home.

At the beginning of this quarter the writer took charge of the Sunday-school in the Home. Each Sunday we enjoy good, spiritual services together. We have learned that it is a blessing to the young to come in contact with the blessed influences of those who are older. Then, too, the aged members are comforted to know that in their declining days the younger members are still interested in their welfare. Will you not pray for the work at this place, for the workers, and especially for the inmates of the Home, who are now nearing the end of their earthly pilgrimage?

NORTHERN CALIFORNIA.

Eld. Edward Frantz, President of Lordsburg College, and another brother were permitted to attend the District Meeting of Northern California, including the Ministerial and Sunday-school Meetings of the Pacific Slope. We found a body of wide-awake, earnest, loyal members. It was very noticeable in all the different meetings that the missionary spirit has taken a deep hold on the hearts of our Brethren and Sisters in California. In the District Meeting questions of vital interest to themselves, as well as to the whole Brotherhood, were discussed in a Christian spirit and will do doubt result in greater unity and love.

We were made to feel welcome among our brethren, and enjoyed the meeting as a spiritual feast. Some telling work was done for Lordsburg College. Many expressed themselves in such a manner that we are encouraged to push the educational work of the church on the Pacific Coast harder and harder, believing that it is God's will that our young people shall have an opportunity of getting their intellectual as well as their spiritual training in an environment as free as possible from the sinful influences of the age in which we live. The meeting was held in the Empire church. This church is young in years, but her membership is old in experiences of this kind, and every one felt at home because of the hearty welcome given us.

On our return to the College a number of most splendid students from the Northern District gathered around us, anxious to learn of the progress of the work at home, and to receive the kindly greetings from parents and loved ones they had entrusted to our care.

When we think about it all, we are made to feel that life is worth living only when we make an effort to help somebody who needs our help, make life's burdens lighter, the path brighter and right living easier. May God bless our dear brethren and sisters of the Northern District of California, and help them to extend his kingdom to all parts of that goodly land.

W. F. England.

Lordsburg, Cal.

LANCASTER CITY, PENNSYLVANIA.

We held council meetings on the evenings of Oct. 11 and 13, owing to the large amount of regular business. Sister Elizabeth Miller, our city missionary, reported as follows: "During the quarter 195 homes were visited, also the Children's Home, St. Joseph's Hospitals, and the County Prison. We distributed eighty gallons and twenty-five pair of second-hand shoes and six pair of new shoes."

There was an exceedingly encouraging report from our new mission point. The church has erected a dwelling-house at 22 Coral St., this city, where a Sunday-school was opened on Sunday, July 30. Bro. Ira Miller is the superintendent. Sister Mary Myer has charge of the infant class, and Sister Price teaches the mothers' class. The attendance the first Sunday was 108, and the attendance last Sunday was seventy-six. The largest attendance has been 112; average attendance, eighty-four. The school is self-supporting, as far as supplies, etc., are concerned, and the scholars represent the increase our church is having in Sunday-school attendance.

A Bible class will be held there on Wednesday evenings, and preaching services will be conducted there, and at the Eden mission house, on alternate Sunday evenings. We have held services at Eden on every Sunday evening for some years, but now another denomination wants the room for biweekly Sunday services.

Oct. 15 we began a series of meetings, with Eld. Jesse Ziegler, of Royersford, Pa., as our evangelist. The inclemency of the weather has hindered the success of the meetings somewhat, but they are well attended by our members, and the preaching is much enjoyed.

Lichty, Sister Catharine, nee Miller, born in Summit township, Pa., Sept. 7, 1827, died at her home in Salisbury, Oct. 22, 1911, aged 84 years, 1 month and 15 days. Early in life she united with the Church of the Brethren, and spent many years of active service in the Master's vineyard. Until prevented by bodily infirmities, incident to old age, she took an active part in every phase of religious work. She was the mother of six children. Her husband, Bro. Samuel J. Lichty, died about four years ago. Death had no terrors for her. Her freedom were not in this world. She was waiting for the Lord to call her home. Services at her late residence by the writer, assisted by Bro. Jacob Hoff and Bro. G. E. Yoder.—Pa.

Lytle, Bro. David died very suddenly of heart trouble, in the bounds of the Bear Creek congregation, near Accident, Md., Sept. 24, 1911, aged 70 years, 5 months and 19 days. He was a consistent member of the Church of the Brethren for over thirty years. He was married to Sister Matilda Sisney. To this union were born seven children, two sons preceding the wife, one son and three daughters survive. Services by Eld. H. A. Brant and the writer, in the Methodist Protestant church home.—Text, Philip. 1: 21.—David Hochstetler, Accident, Md.

Miller, Sallie A., wife of Jacob Farrabaugh, died near Farnsle Cripe, born March 16, 1875, died Oct. 26, 1911, aged 36 years, 7 months and 4 days. She had four children, three of them died at birth. She was a member of the Church of the Brethren for twenty-two years, and ever faithful. She leaves a husband, Bro. D. J. Miller, two daughters, one brother and four brothers. Services by the writer. Text, Rev. 7: 13, 14.—I. L. Beckley, R. 2, Goshen, Ind.

Olinger, Bro. A. M., son of Jacob and Sarah Olinger, born in Scott, Va., July 15, 1846, died Aug. 21, 1911, aged 65 years, 1 months and 6 days. He was the oldest son of eleven children.—eight sons and three daughters. He was married to Mary E. Fudge, Sept. 3, 1868. To this union were born two sons. He united with the Church of the Brethren in the early nineties, and lived a consistent life until death. He is survived by his two sons, three brothers and three sisters.—Lelah Wall, Workshill, Ind.

Sears, Bro. John J., born in Macoupin County, Ill., July 9, 1833, died at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Vesta E. Hoffman, near Leon, Iowa, Oct. 22, 1911, aged 78 years, 3 months and 13 days. He was the third son of Daniel and Elizabeth (Martin) Sears, former residents of this county. In 1836 he came, in company with his parents to Jefferson County, Iowa, locating on a farm near Brella, where he grew to manhood. He was united in marriage to Mary Jane Phillips, of the same county, Nov. 16, 1852. In 1864 he, with his wife and only daughter, moved to Decatur County, and settled in Cedar township, where he resided for twenty-eight years. In 1892 they moved to Missouri, to High Point township, and again, in the spring of 1901, to Decatur township, where he resided until the death of his wife on March 31, 1909. Since that time he has lived with one of his children. He was the father of eight children, two of whom preceded him to the spirit world. Funeral services were all present at his death, except one who resided in Montana. Besides his children, he leaves one aged sister and one brother. He and his wife united with the Church of the Brethren about the year 1864, of which faith they were consistent members, labored until death. Services by Eld. Abraham Wolf, at the Franklin church, after which interment was made in the cemetery near by.—Mrs. L. L. Sears, Garden Grove, Iowa.

Shaver, Eld. S. A., born March 14, 1823, died near Maurertown, Va., Oct. 14, 1911, aged 82 years, 6 months and 30 days. He is survived by three sons, two brothers and two sisters. One daughter and one son preceded him in death. He entered life just fifty-five days. Bro. Shaver was elected to the ministry about fifty years ago. He was born in the bounds of the Woodstock congregation, Va., where he lived and died. He was at church the Sunday before his death. Services by Bro. J. Cramer, Miller, of Timberville, Va., and Bro. J. Kinge of Interment in the Valley Pike cemetery, near the church, where the services were held.—M. H. Cook, Mauertown, Va.

Spidle, Bro. David, born in Ashland, Ohio, Nov. 29, 1829, died at the home of his daughter in Mercer County, Mo., Aug. 28, 1911, aged 81 years, 10 months and 20 days. He was united in marriage to Margaret Palmer, of Ashland, Ohio, Dec. 4, 1851. To this union were born five sons and four daughters, one son of his sons preceded him. Four of his children were present at the time of his death. The two sons not able to be present. He moved to Mercer County, Mo., in 1855, where he has since resided. He united with the Church of the Brethren in the spring of 1859, and has ever since lived a consecrated life. He always went to church whenever he was able, and was a great Sunday-school worker. He always tried to do unto others as he would have them do unto him. While he had been ailing for some time, his sickness did not cause him to quit until two days before his death. He passed away peacefully. Services at the E. E. church by the writer, after which interment was made.—A. L. Sears, Garden Grove, Iowa.

Wagoner, Bro. Jacob, born in Rockingham County, Va., died of heart-failure in the bounds of the Rockingham congregation, Roy Co., Mo., Oct. 24, 1911, aged 65 years, 10 months and 2 days. He leaves a wife and six children. He came to Missouri in 1859, and was married to Eliza Bowman in 1866. He united with the Church of the Brethren, and lived a true Christian life. Services by the writer.—S. B. Shirky, Norborne, Mo.

Wagoner, Bro. Joseph H., died Sept. 13, 1911, at Oakley, Kan., at the home of his brother David, of Burr Oak, Kansas, aged 54 years, 6 months and 8 days. Bro. Wagoner was born in Clinton County, Indiana, and was never married. In 1869 he, with his parents, moved to Iowa, and from thence to Nebraska in 1873. In 1876 he united with the Church of the Brethren, and continued faithful. His final illness was of but few days' duration. Services by the writer, at the Union Center church, in Nebraska. Interment in the Wagoner cemetery near the church.—C. E. George, Burr Oak, Kans.

Wehrly, Sister Leah, nee Petry, daughter of Henry and Barbara Petry, and wife of Aaron Wehrly, born in York County, Pa., Dec. 3, 1824, died Oct. 9, 1911, aged 86 years, 10 months and 4 days. She came with her parents to this country in 1831, locating in Monroe township, near the place where she died. She was married to Aaron Wehrly in October, 1842. To them were born four sons and seven daughters, one son and two daughters preceded her in death. She and her husband united with the Church of the Brethren about sixty years in which faith she lived a devoted Christian life. Her husband was called away by death June 20, 1902. Since that time she has made her home with her son Emmanuel. She leaves two sons, with their families.—Mac Longenecker, West Manchester, Ohio.

White, Sister Sadie, nee Phillippi, born in Somerset County, Pa., April 15, 1877, died at her home in Morrill, Brown Co., Kans., Oct. 8, 1911, aged 34 years, 4 months and 23 days. Feb. 14, 1895, she was married to G. E. White. To this union seven children were born. Two of them preceded her to the spirit world. At the age of seventeen she united with the Church of the Brethren, and lived true to the faith till the Lord called her home. She leaves a husband, four sons and one daughter, also her parents, two brothers and two sisters. Services in the Navarre church by Bro. C. Shank, assisted by Bro. Benj. Forney. Interment in the Navarre cemetery.—P. M. Reed, Navarre, Kans.

LORDSBURG COLLEGE

The only school on the Pacific coast owned and controlled by the Church of the Brethren.

A school where Brethren's children may receive a Christian education in an environment favorable to the church and free from the snares and allurements of the city.

The Lordsburg congregation numbers over three hundred members. There are no saloons or resorts in the town. Health and climatic conditions are ideal.—and both the strong and weak are made stronger by escaping the rigors of the northern winters and living in southern sunshine.

Bible, academic, commercial, music, art and expression courses are offered. Expenses reasonable. Tuition in Bible department free to all.

MISSIONARIES WANTED

You don't have to go to India or China or Africa and endure privation and suffer hardship to be a missionary. You can do the best kind of missionary work right at home, and you need not have any preparation or previous training either. All you need to do is to use a little of your spare time and a little of your surplus cash.

One of the best missionaries to the home that we know of is the Gospel Messenger. It preaches several sermons each week to each and every person that reads it, besides containing interesting bits of news and timely articles on up-to-date subjects.

This paper does not have the circulation that its worth deserves; possibly the reason for this is that a good many people do not know of its value, and thus are not aware of the benefit they are missing.

OUR PROPOSITION IS THIS

We will offer the Gospel Messenger for only 50 cents a year if sent into homes where there are no members of the Church of the Brethren. This fact of course is to be mentioned when sending in your orders. The General Mission Board will pay the deficiency.

Why not take advantage of this special offer and BE A MISSIONARY? If each present subscriber would send in but ONE subscription we would double our list, and the good derived could not be estimated.

Will You Be a Missionary?

MORE AGENTS Wanted

We want an agent in each congregation to sell "Onesimus" and "The Life of Eld. R. H. Miller." These books are ready sellers and should be found in each home. Agents are sending in favorable reports concerning the sale of these. Is there an agent in your congregation? If not, write us, we can give you something interesting.

If you can't put in full time write anyway; you can make good wages during spare time.

Write us at once for terms and territory.

Notes from Our Correspondents.

church by baptism. A special council was held Oct. 24, at 7:30 P. M. A report of the visiting brethren was given. Our love feast was held on Saturday evening, about forty-five members communed, and all enjoyed a spiritual feast. Bro. Kieffaber, of Sunnyside, Wash., officiated, and also gave us an interesting and helpful talk on Sunday. Bro. L. A. Kipp, our elder, and wife, were also with us.—Amy N. Replogle, 702 East Yakima Avenue, North Yakima, Wash., Oct. 29.

Olympia.—Oct. 9 Bro. A. Hutchison came to us and remained until Oct. 22, preaching sixteen sermons for us. One sister was restored. Our aged brother set forth the doctrine of the Brethren very forcibly. Good impressions were made, and the best of interest prevailed during the meetings.—Mrs. Ida Wagner, Olympia, Wash., Oct. 25.

Seattle closed the year in council Oct. 14. Four letters of membership were granted. Sister Sadie Miller spent ten days in Seattle, but left before calling for India. She gave us three interesting and instructive lectures on the Holy Land.—Sadie Alice Dull, 514 North Eighty-third Street, Seattle, Wash., Oct. 28.

Wenatchee.—Our church met in council Oct. 14. Eld. A. B. Peters presided. Eld. J. J. Filbrun and Bro. C. E. Holmes, of East Wenatchee, were present to assist in the work.—Mrs. Levi Ulrich, Box 34, R. D. Bowman were advanced to the eldership. Bro. J. R. Peters was advanced to the second degree of the ministry. Brethren D. B. Steele and Homer Weidner were elected and installed into the church office. We rejoice to see these faithful brethren and sisters placed in positions of greater usefulness for the church. Since our last report our letter has been granted, and two were restored.—Minnie C. Gockley, Wenatchee, Wash., Oct. 31.

WISCONSIN.

Maple Grove.—Our church met in council Oct. 21. Bro. Harry Miller's wife was installed as a helper with her husband in the deacon's office. A communion was appointed to see about building needed sheds for teams. Two have been baptized since our last report.—Dorothy Arbogast, Stanley, Wis., Oct. 22.

NOTES NOT CLASSIFIED.

Ashland.—Oct. 28 we held our love feast. Bro. J. L. Teeter, of Williams, Oregon, officiated. Six ministers were present. About fifty members communed, and we had an enjoyable meeting. The weather was fair. On Sunday we met at 7 A. M. for worship and breakfast, and at 10 A. M. for Sunday-school, which was followed by a short lesson for the children given by Bro. L. B. Overholtzer, of Talent, Oregon, to an interesting number. We had preaching at 11 A. M., by Bro. J. L. Teeter. Dinner was served to all at the church, and at 2 P. M. we met for our semi-annual Sunday-school convention of Southern Oregon. Bro. L. B. Overholtzer was chosen Moderator; Bro. C. Lininger, Secretary; Bro. Clark Miller, Timekeeper; the writer, Secretary. Four topics were discussed in two hours after which the meeting closed and the members returned to their homes and other fields of labor.—Lizzie T. Detweiler, Ashland, Oregon, Oct. 30.

Elkhart City.—Oct. 15 Brethren Frank Kreider and H. W. Krieghbaum were with us at the morning services, and conducted their ordination service. Bro. Kreider, with his wife, was advanced to the eldership. Bro. Kindy, with his family, was moved to North Manchester, where they are taking school work. We were sorry to have them move away, but they are assured of our prayers and interest in them.—E. L. Heestand, Elkhart, Ind., Nov. 1.

Hancock.—Our church work is moving along as usual. Our members who have claims in South Dakota are busy, because of the drouth in that section, have been working here since July, have returned to their claims. They are about one year away, but because there is no other congregation within reach (though there are some isolated members) their membership here, this being their home. We hope to have them back again after they have proved up their claims. There are nine of them. They promised us to be present at our next summer. If any one of our ministers could give them some encouragement, he can find them on the farm, or at the postoffice, where mail addressed to Chas. Bolinott will reach them. The present railroad station is Sweetwater, S. D.—W. R. E., where they will meet you with auto, if notified. We are glad to say, The greatest need of this church, at present, is another minister and several good Sunday-school teachers. One will come and help us if there is a good place to buy a profitable farm, and be helpful in the Sunday-school at the same time.—Samuel Bowser, Hancock, Minn., Oct. 31.

Stoott Valley.—We enjoyed another love feast Oct. 4. A number of visitors were present. Our elder, Bro. C. A. Miller, officiated. He preached two excellent sermons for us on Sunday. We are looking forward to our series of meetings, which will begin Nov. 25, to be conducted by Bro. R. A. Yoder, of Sabetha, Kans.—Furnia Smith, Westphalia, Kans., Nov. 2.

Clovis.—Since our last report two have been received by baptism and one reclaimed. The members have been greatly hindered for some weeks, mostly on account of sickness and quarantine, but we are looking forward now to a good attendance and interest. Nov. 29 is the date selected for the beginning of our series of meetings, and Thanksgiving Day for our love feast.—Minnie B. Rhodes, Clovis, N. Mex., Oct. 31.

ANSWERS TO INQUIRIES ABOUT THE DEBATE.

1. Send no money for the book until notice is given in Gospel Messenger, stating price and to whom to send it.

2. Those who sent their orders to Bro. Stinebaugh, of Indiana, and Bro. Gray, of Texas, need not renew their orders. I have them.

3. The book will be gotten out just as soon as possible. It takes a little time to transcribe and print a debate.

4. We have orders enough to justify publishing, and still they come. However, if you want the book, BETTER ORDER NOW, as it is doubtful if a second edition will be published. A second edition of debates is rarely published.

5. Messenger agents, or others, may canvass for the book. I will name terms if you write me.

DISTRICT MEETING OF SOUTHEASTERN KANSAS.

The Christian Workers', Sunday-school, Ministerial and District Meetings of Southeastern Kansas were held in the Paint Creek church, October 24 to 26.

On Monday evening we had a sermon by Bro. J. F. Campbell, of Parsons, Kans.

On Tuesday the Temperance Meeting convened. Bro. O. H. Yereman, of Kansas City, gave us an inspiring address.

Bro. James M. Mohler, of Missouri, one of the members of the General Sunday-school Board of the Brotherhood, met with the Sunday-school workers of the District on Wednesday. He answered a number of questions concerning the Sunday-school, especially along the line of teacher-training classes. His counsel was much appreciated.

On Wednesday evening Eld. Chas. A. Miller gave us a splendid missionary sermon, which stirred up our minds along missionary lines. A collection of $40.04 was taken at the close of the sermon for missionary purposes.

On Thursday morning the District Meeting was opened by our retiring Moderator, Eld. S. E. Lantz. The twenty delegates then proceeded to ballot for officers to take charge of the meeting. Eld. John S. Clark was elected Moderator; Eld. Chas. A. Miller, Reading Clerk; Bro. F. E. Miller, Writing Clerk. In the report of the churches there were reported 1,000 members in the District. This is just the same as last year,—694. There are, at present, thirty-seven ministers in the District, and of these seventeen are elders. There were forty-one baptized during the year, and seven restored. Four papers came before the meeting for the ordination to the eldership—churches, Bro. D. P. Neher was reelected as secretary of the Mission Board. Bro. Chas. A. Miller, of Westphalia, was elected President of the Temperance Committee for three years, and Bro J. S. Clark, of Parsons, was appointed treasurer for two years, to fill a vacancy. Bro. J. F. Campbell will be our District evangelist next year. Eld. John S. Clark was chosen to represent the District on the Standing Committee of next Conference, with Eld. W. H. Leaman, alternate. The next District Meeting will be held in the Fredonia church, Fredonia, Kans.

GREAT EPOCHS of SACRED HISTORY AND THE SHADOWS THEY CAST
By James M. Gray

Popular Bible studies on the first twelve chapters of Genesis, showing the Premoral History on present and coming events. The book is composed of lectures, originally spoken to large audiences in New York, Chicago and Grand Rapids and previously in Glasgow and Edinburgh. Following are the subjects of the six lectures:

1. When the World Was Made.
2. When Sin Entered the World.
3. When the First City Was Built.
4. When the Flood Came and Swept Them All Away.
5. When the First World-Monarchy Began.
6. When the Anti-Christ Monarchy Shall Appear.

The content of the book is both historic and prophetic. Dr. Gray judges the future by the past. His conclusions are based upon a thorough study of the Bible History and its obvious lessons for future generations. The pernicious teachings of the destructive critics and the fallacies of Darwinian evolution are masterfully exposed. If you are a Bible reader you will appreciate this book; if you have not been interested in the Book of books, this will create a desire in your heart to read it.

Traits of Character
by
H. F. Kletzing, A. M. and
E. L. Kletzing, A. M.

The book is divided into four parts: Part 1. Traits of Character Illustrated; Part 2. Marked Manhood and Womanhood; Part 3. Marred Manhood and Womanhood; Part 4. Enlightening.

In Part 1, the truths intended to be taught on the printed page by figure or anecdote, are rendered doubly impressive by the apt illustrations appearing in connection therewith.

Part 2, in connection with their appealing, brief sketches of some of men and women who, by unusual greatness of character, have attained success by overcoming good use of high birth, wealth, good fortune, etc., or, in connection with adverse circumstances, stand out as beacon lights to those who follow them in life's pathway.

Part 3, in a similar way, shows how men and women of bright intellect and strong personality, but lacking in character, have marred their lives by yielding to temptation.

In Part 4, the truths are mostly illustrated in lighter vein, but none the less forcibly brought to the mind of the reader.

Character may be defined as that sum of qualities, which distinguishes one person from another. Some of these qualities, primarily, are doubtless hereditary, but all these qualities are susceptible of development and training. The influences which surround one's lives are character builders. Next to the influence of a living personage over the life of another is that of the books he reads.

The reader of this book will be sure to find it full of helpful material in the way of incident, biography and illustration.

The volume contains 363 pages neatly bound in cloth.

AROUND THE WORLD

Freeing Youthful Toilers.

Pennsylvania distinguished herself by a commendable legislative enactment during the recent session of her Legislature. This law positively prohibits the employment of boys under sixteen years of age at any work inside of coal mines. By this timely act more than twelve hundred boys are delivered from the drudgery and danger of the pit. They are given a chance for mental and moral development,—the gracious heritage vouchsafed by God to every child. Too long has industrial greed, aided and abetted by the parents, sacrificed precious young lives to the Moloch of commercial exploitation. Refreshing, indeed, is the awakening in Pennsylvania, which, we trust, will soon spread to other States, liberating downtrodden childhood.

Three Hotels that Refused the Bible.

During the recent distribution of Bibles to Boston's hostelries, three of the leading hotels refused to allow the Bible in any of their rooms. They did not assign a definite reason for their curt refusal,—the first incurred by the "Gideons" in their most commendable and far extended work of Bible distribution,—but the inference is that they did not deem the presence of the Bible congenial to the tastes of their aristocratic patrons. While it is doubtless true that many do not feel interested in Bible reading, and that others do not read it because they are condemned by its teachings, the great and solemn fact remains that all,—whether they so desire or not,—will one day have to face the Bible at the great judgment bar of God, to stand or to fall by its unerring counsels.

Not Saying but Doing.

That sometimes the best efforts of personal workers, with those who are out of Christ, fail to achieve the desired result, is a fact that is experienced at probably every recurring revival meeting. A recent writer in the "British Weekly" so emphatically touches upon this very point that we feel impressed to give a brief extract: "What the Lord requires is not that we should talk about him, but that we should exhibit him, and let him speak for himself. It is not what one says, but what one is, that tells. A Christ-like spirit is the most powerful instrument for the world's Redeemer, and the most effective commendation of the Gospel." In these days of great religious movements of nation-wide extent, one can not help but wish that there were more of the radiance of the personally-consecrated life that preaches its own sermon. "Let your light so shine," says Christ.

Dancing in the Public Schools.

Following the practice of other cities, the local school board of Niagara Falls, N. Y., recently ordered the teaching of dancing in the public schools. Mr. W. C. Prewitt, a minister of the Disciple church, at once lodged an effective protest. In his sermon, the Sunday following, he voiced his disapproval in no uncertain terms, declaring that " the action is emphatically wrong, and fraught with serious ill, and that, if the matter were submitted to the God-fearing parents, whose children are concerned, it would be found that the majority of them do not approve it." We mention this matter because there is great probability of other school boards endeavoring to introduce dancing into the curriculum of their respective schools, following the prevailing fad. If such should be the case in any Brethren community, we hope that our members will be found to "ring true" in an outspoken opposition.

Church Sustained by Court.

While a recourse to the civil courts in the settlement of any church difficulty is clearly out of harmony with all scriptural precedent, it is quite encouraging to note that the courts are not disposed to meddle with any specific church ruling, as long as there is no violation of law. In the long protracted and recent case of Manasseh Miller against the officers of the Amish church, to recover $26,000 damage, the judge of the court at Marysville, Ohio, instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for the defendants (the church). Mr. Miller claimed that a boycott, injurious to him in many ways, had been waged by his former brethren. The church plead that Mr. Miller had been unfaithful and therefore had been expelled from her fellowship. The judge promptly decided that no civil court has jurisdiction over church members in their duly authorized disciplinary rulings. Once more the wisdom of Paul's injunction in 1 Cor. 6: 1-8 is amply verified.

Chicago's Crusade Against Gambling.

At last the civic conscience of our western metropolis has become awakened to the alarming prevalence of gambling, and vigilant police officers are now doing a seemingly effective work. Contrary to previous practices, however, the ban against gambling extends to all places,—even the private residences,—where cards are played for any article of value. The edict has brought consternation to the fashionably-clad, diamond-decked ladies, who hitherto have freely indulged in the practice very much in the same way and manner as the most inveterate gambler. The application of the ordinance to all who are implicated, is just and right. Any law, to be really effective, must be applied without fear or favor.

The Marvel of the Present Century.

The report of the Isthmian Canal Commission, which has just returned from Panama, is a most convincing testimony to the skill of the chief engineer, George W. Goethals. Almost insurmountable difficulties have been overcome, and marvels of construction have been achieved, besides which the boasted works of the ancients sink into insignificance. The terminals are nearing completion and the great locks will soon be in place. The far-famed Culebra cut, ten miles in length, is rapidly being finished, and by the time designated by President Taft, the world's ocean traffic will traverse the new water way. It is to be hoped that this latest of man's great achievements may serve the peaceful purposes of man's real well-being, rather than the destructive agencies of naval warfare.

A Record of Shame.

According to official figures more beer is consumed in the United States than in any country in the world, and more distilled spirits than in any country except Russia. The quantity of beer per capita consumed in the United States, it is said, however, as great as in Belgium, England, Germany or Denmark, nor is the per capita consumption of distilled spirits as great as that of Denmark, Hungary, Austria, France, the Netherlands and Sweden. The total quantity of malt liquors consumed in the United States in 1910 was 1,851,000,000 gallons; the total amount of distilled spirits, 133,500,000 gallons. These figures are impressive enough to make one do some serious thinking. Were we able to lift the curtain and behold the vast amount of misery, crime and woe, in all its stern reality, we should get a new and most emphatic vision of man's greatest curse.

Oriental Missionary Zeal.

Despite the open and undisguised opposition to Christianity, at present being so plainly noticeable in the higher circles of Japanese society, there is a most noteworthy zeal and ardor being shown by Japanese Christians in the humbler walks of life. Not only do they display a most remarkable earnestness in going forth with the gospel message, but their skill in the work is also truly remarkable. The evangelistic campaign for the great cities of Tokyo and Yokohama is most systematically planned. Both cities are carefully divided into a great number of small sections, each of which is assigned definitely to individuals for house-to-house visitation, and distribution of Christian literature. The whole undertaking shows a marvelous grasp of the "Go ye" of the Master, and may well serve as a lesson of real effectiveness to the Christians of America.

The All-Penetrating Word.

While there are no Christian preachers in Afghanistan, Tibet, or Nepal, except the one or two souls who only occasionally manage to cross the boundary at the risk of their lives, some seeds are being dropped, now and then, that have proved the "savor of life unto life." In the lands referred to, no missionary is allowed to remain. They are "closed lands" in the strictest sense of the term, and yet if, at some future time, the gates are flung open,—as they are sure to be,—it will be found that the darkness is not a total one. Hundreds of Tibetans, every year, have the preaching of the Word taken away from their native land, and most of them take home with them Bibles for further study. At Rampore, on the borders of Tibet, only seventy miles from Simla, is a great wool mart, attended by many Tibetans. In the great bazaars these merchants are often seen listening to Christian preaching, and there is every reason to believe that some of the seed, thus sown, is falling on fruitful ground. Ultimately, Tibet, the stronghold of Buddhism, is sure to fall beneath the all-conquering power of the Gospel. "God's Word," we may rest assured, "will not return unto him void."

Maine Declared Victorious.

By the recent acceptance of corrections in the votes of four towns, the retention of constitutional prohibition in the grand old stronghold of temperance is finally and favorably settled. While this affords abundant cause for congratulation, let it not be forgotten that the narrow margin, by which the victory was gained, is most significant. It points not only to the manifest indifference of many temperance workers in failing to come to the rescue, but also to the still graver delinquency, on the part of State officials, in their failure to enforce the prohibitory statute, thus bringing it into undeserved contempt. There is no surer nor more effective way to cast reproach upon an otherwise good movement than to fail in its adequate enforcement. This is equally applicable to the requirements of the house of God. Many a promising organization has been seriously affected, and in some cases well nigh wrecked, because her avowed leaders failed to inspire due reverence for the commands and ordinances of the Lord.

Pernicious Influences.

A most convincing proof of the corrupting effect of the average moving picture show was afforded by a recent occurrence near Weyerhauser, Wis. Three boys, aged seven, nine and twelve years, respectively, had been regular attendants at a moving picture show in the near by town. One day there was a most realistic representation of a train robbers' railroad wreck, and at once the impressionable boys were fired with a desire to witness a like scene of their own construction. Proceeding to the railroad, they piled ties on a secluded section of the track, intending to wreck a Soo passenger train. Fortunately a freight train happened to arrive first and, moving but slowly, was able to stop in time to prevent serious damage. Questioned as to their act, the boys were free to admit their purpose, giving due credit to the moving pictures as the inciting cause. How many more instances of the pernicious influences exerted by these shows, will be required to impress parents with the real danger to their children?

Famine in Russia.

Gaunt and forbidding is the famine that once more is invading the domains of the Russian Czar. Last year with its good crops, has been succeeded by one of the "lean" years, to which Russia, unfortunately, is not a stranger. Already the districts in Eastern Russia and Siberia, which, by a strange irony, are usually known as the nation's "granary," are sorely stricken. The thousands of villagers, crowding into the cities, in the vain search for work, are a pathetic sight, indeed. At present, conditions are very much like those prevailing during that ever memorable famine of 1891-92, which aroused the sympathy of the entire civilized world, and during which our Brethren so nobly came to the rescue with most substantial donations. As on previous occasions, much more could be done in the practical relief of the sufferers, were the local village authorities disposed to report the actual conditions of need. As it is, local papers are prohibited from publishing the real facts of the famine. Unfortunately the problem is in no way solved by this attempt at concealing the awful truth. While humanity is always ready to respond to a cry of need, it must be given an intelligent grasp of the true situation.

Influencing Merchants Against Reform Efforts.
